But the other High Courts are of opinion that an acquittal under section 247 acts as a bar to further proceedings in the same way as an acquittal after trial on the merits—See Emp v. Dullu, 45 All. 58; Panchu v. Umar, 4 C W. N. 346, In re Guggilappu Paddya, 34 Mad 253 and the other cases cited above.

Fresh process for other offences including the previous one —Where a Magistrate issued process against and summoned the accused persons for one of several offences alleged against them, and acquitted them under this section for default of complainant s appearance, no fresh process could in view of section 403 (1) be issued against them in respect of all the offences alleged against them on the previous occasion, including the one in respect of which they were summoned and acquitted—Suresh v Banku, 2 C L J 622

799 Order of adjournment :—On default of the complainant's appearance the Magistrate has a discretion either to dismiss the complaint and acquit the accused or to adjourn the hearing or he can even proceed to examine the witnesses in the absence of the complainant Such a procedure is not illegal if the accused is not prejudiced—Sarafdi v K E, 24 C W N 199

The Magistrate cannot adjourn the hearing unless there are sufficient and proper grounds for doing so The fact that the accused has been guilty of contempt of the processes of the Court is no good reason for proceeding with the case—17 C W N clix But a Magistrate can adjourn the hearing for the purpose of allowing the accused time to secure the attendance of his witnesses—In re Dinno Roy, 16 W R 21

This section merely authorises the Magistrate to adjourn the case to enable the complainant to appear but it does not authorise him to dispense with the presence of the complainant, except when he is a public servant—Maula Baksh v Marshall, 27 Cr L J 1022 (Lah)

800. Death of complainant —It is open to doubt whether this section applies where the non appearance of the complainant is due to his death But if on the day fixed for hearing the son of the deceased complainant appears and asks the Magistrate to proceed with the case the Magistrate ought to proceed and should not acquit the accused under this section—Jiian v Domoo, 1 P L J 264, Madhu Chowdhury v Torab 18 C W N 1211 In re Mahomed Azam, 28 Bom L R 283 27 Cr L J 491 But see Purna Chandra v. Dengar 19 C W N 331

801 Revision —An acquittal under this section does not stand on any different footing from an acquittal ordered in any other circumstances and the High Court will not set aside an acquittal in revision except under very rare circumstances—Lakshminarasinham v Nalluri 52 M L J 173 28 Cr L J 270 A somewhat contrary view has been taken by the Oudh Court, under certain special circumstances in the case of Ram Nidh v Ram Saran, 26 O C 283 A I R 1924 Oudh 64 25 Cr L J 791

Where an order is passed by the Magistrate acquitting an accused under sec 247 the order can only be set aside by the High Court The Magistrate or his successor has no power to revive the proceedings by setting aside the order—Nityaranda v Rakhahari 38 C. L J 196, 24 Cr L J 716

248 If a complainant, at any time before a final order is passed in any case under this Chapter, satisfies the Magistrate that there are sufficient grounds for permitting him to withdraw his complaint, the Magistrate may permit him to withdraw the same and shall thereupon acquit the accused

Withdrawal of complaint

802 Scope of section —This section applies only to summons cases Withdrawal of complaint is permissible only in summons cases—Murray v Q L 21 Cal 103 Santhanaanna v Bhogappa 5 Mad 378 Q E v Liladhar Kutanlal 461 If the offence charged is a warrant case (and is non compoundable) the Magistrate must proceed with the inquiry or trial in spite of the withdrawal of the complaint if he finds the elements of the offence set forth in the complaint—In re Ganesh Narayan 13 Bom 600 Emp v Ranchhod 3, Bom 369 Maung Thi v U Po 5 Rang 136 28 Cr L J 649

This section is limited in its operation to cases instituted upon complaints in the strict sense If A gave information to the Police and the Magistrate took cognizance of the case upon the police report there was no complaint within the meaning of section 4 (h) and A could not be permitted to withdraw—Q E v Chenchayya 3 Mad 626

Section 537 of the Calcutta Municipal Act (Act III of 1923 B C) which authorises the Corporation to withdraw from legal proceedings must be read subject to the provisions of section 248 Cr P Code and must not be deemed as affecting or abrogating the provisions of this section The power of withdrawal given by section 537 of the Calcutta Municipal Act can be exercised only in accordance with the provisions of sec 248 Cr P Code which lays down that the complainant will be permitted to withdraw his complaint if he can satisfy the Magistrate that there are sufficient grounds for permitting him to withdraw his complaint It follows therefore that before a withdrawal can be permitted under section 537 of the Calcutta Municipal Act there must be sufficient grounds for the withdrawal to the satisfaction of the Magistrate—Sishir Kumar v Corporation of Calcutta 53 Cal 631 30 C W N 598 27 Cr L J 984

This section contemplates a withdrawal of the complaint as a whole Where a complaint against several accused persons is withdrawn as against one of them this amounts to a withdrawal of the whole complaint in respect of all the accused—Shyam Behari v Sagar Singh 1 P L T 32 The withdrawal of the case absolves not only the accused present but also all the accused—Imar Ali v Emp 2 P L T 584 22 Cr L J 673 Contra—Rohit Singh v Mahdum 9 O L J 54 23 Cr L J 271 and Anantia v Crown 5 Lah 239 (per Le Rossignol J) where it is held that the withdrawal against some does not amount to a withdrawal against all It should be noted that this latter view is in consonance with the provisions of section 345 (as now amended) under which the composition of an offence with one of the accused does not amount to a composition with all the accused

803. Withdrawal of complaint :—Withdrawal and Compromise —There is a well marked distinction between a withdrawal of a case under this section and a compromise under section 345 Compromise contemplates an arrangement between two parties, withdrawal has no such meaning A case is said to be compromised if it is withdrawn with the consent of the accused whereas a case is withdrawn under this section without the consent of the accused Therefore when a petition is filed by the complainant praying for striking off the case the Magistrate should satisfy himself under what section the petition is made If the case is not being compromised but is being withdrawn without the consent of the accused the petition is not a petition under section 345 but under this section, and the Magistrate may, in spite of the petition, proceed with the trial and convict the accused—Bayan Ali v K E, 20 C W N 1209 13 Cr L J 107 See also notes under sec 345

Who can withdraw —Only the complainant can withdraw the case In cases of contempt of the lawful authority of a public servant the complainant is the public servant whose authority has been resisted and not the person injured by such resistance and the former alone can withdraw —In re Muse Ali 2 Bom 653 Where a Municipal Secretary instituted a complaint, the Municipal Council was not competent to withdraw—Paramananda v Karunakara 27 M L J 617, 15 Cr L J 299

When to withdraw —The complainant can withdraw at any time before a final order is passed But these words do not refer to a time so early as when no process has been issued to the accused An order of acquittal passed on an application for withdrawal preferred before issue of process is unmeaning and of no avail—In re Muthusamoopan 36 Mad 315 14 Cr L J 559

Magistrate alone can permit withdrawal —This section does not empower a Police officer to entertain an application for withdrawal of a complaint The permission for withdrawal of a complaint is a judicial act and the Magistrate alone can do it, and the Police have no authority to interfere in such matters—Anonymous, Ratanlal 91

A petition for withdrawal of a case should be judicially determined by the Magistrate himself, and it is wholly improper for him to refer the matter to the Police for report, and then to act on the report in refusing or allowing withdrawal The Magistrate should not allow himself to be guided by what the Police thought about the matter—Azizur Rahman v Emp, 43 C L J 214 27 Cr L J 394

May permit —It is discretionary with the Magistrate to permit the complainant to withdraw The Magistrate can, in spite of the application for withdrawal proceed with the trial and convict the accused—Bayan Ali v K E, 20 C W N 1209 (Pat)

Revival of withdrawn complaint —Where a Deputy Magistrate allowed a complaint to be withdrawn and discharged the accused, the District

Magistrate could not revive the case against the accused—Q v Zuhoorul, 25 W R 64

But where the complaint was withdrawn because there was no sanction (the case being one in which a sanction was necessary), and the accused was discharged, the complainant was competent to lodge a fresh complaint after obtaining the necessary sanction—In re Samsuddin 22 Bom 711

249. In any case instituted otherwise than upon complaint a Presidency Magistrate, a Magistrate of the first class, or with the previous sanction of the District Magistrate, any other Magistrate, may for reasons to be recorded by him stop the proceedings at any stage without pronouncing any judgment either of acquittal or conviction, and may thereupon release the accused.

Power to stop proceeding when no complaint

804 Scope —This section deals only with summons cases instituted otherwise than upon complaints and is inapplicable to warrant cases Therefore an order by a Magistrate stopping a warrant case and releasing the accused under this section is illegal Where a Magistrate stops a warrant case and releases the accused purporting to act under sec 249 the case is still on the pending file of the Magistrate and can be re opened either by an application by the Crown or suo motu by the Magistrate but cannot be started de novo upon a private complaint the police case being already on the pending file of the Magistrate—Firangi v Durga 5 Pat 243 7 P L T 449 27 Cr L J 698

Where upon a report of the Police that one J had given false information to the Police against certain persons a Magistrate ordered the prosecution of J under section 18 I P C but subsequently upon receipt of another report in another case that the information given by J was true he ordered the summons issued for the attendance of J to be cancelled it was held that the Magistrate had full power to cancel the summons under this section—Nathu v Emp 1 P L T 28

An order under this section neither amounts to an acquittal nor to a discharge Since it does not amount to an acquittal (see Explanation to sec 403) it does not bar further proceedings in accordance with law—Achhru v Crown 1913 P R 9 And since it does not amount to an order of dismissal of complaint no order can be passed under sec 437 (now 436) directing further inquiry—Ibid

tion given to a police-officer or to a Magistrate, a person is accused before a Magistrate of any offence triable by a Magistrate, and the Magistrate by whom the case is heard discharges or acquits the accused and is satisfied that the accusation against him was frivolous or vexatious, the Magistrate may, in his discretion, by his order of discharge or acquittal, direct the person upon whose complaint or information the accusation was made to pay to the accused or each of the accused, where there are more than one, such compensation, not exceeding fifty rupees, as the Magistrate thinks fit:

Provided that, before making any such direction, the Magistrate shall—

(2A) The Magistrate may by the order directing payment of the compensation under sub section (2) further order that in default of payment the person ordered to pay such compensation shall suffer simple imprisonment for a period not exceeding thirty days

(2B) When any person is imprisoned under sub section (2A), the provisions of Sections 68 and 69 of the Indian Penal Code shall, so far as may be apply

(3) A complainant or informant who has been ordered under sub section (2) by a Magistrate of the second or third class to pay compensation or has been so ordered by any other Magistrate to pay compensation exceeding fifty rupees may appeal from the order in so far as the order relates to the payment of the compensation as if such complainant or informant had been convicted on a trial held by such Magistrate

(4) Where an order for payment of compensation to an accused person is made in a case which is subject to appeal under sub section (3), the compensation shall not be paid to him before the period allowed for the presentation of the appeal has elapsed, or if an appeal is presented, before the appeal has been decided, and where such order is made in a case which is not so subject to appeal, the compensation shall not be paid before the expiration of one month from the date of the order.

(5) At the time of awarding compensation in any subsequent civil suit relating to the same matter, the Court shall take into account any compensation paid or recovered under this section.	(Omitted).

Change :—The whole section has been redrafted by section 69 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923 The principal changes introduced are the following —

(1) The words "frivolous or vexatious" occurring in the old section have been substituted by the words "false and either frivolous or vexatious"

(2) Under the old law the complainant was forthwith ordered to pay the compensation under the present law the Magistrate will forthwith call upon him to show cause ' The procedure in awarding compensation has been more clearly laid down by directing that a Magistrate in his order of discharge or acquittal may call upon the complainant to show cause why he should not pay compensation, and that he shall then consider and record any cause shown and pass such orders as he sees fit * * * As the section is worded under the old law, the order to pay compensation is part of the order of discharge or acquittal, and the record and consideration of objections is to precede such order. The procedure now proposed is more logical '—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914) Moreover, the old law did not provide for the case where the complainant was absent at the time the judgment was delivered ; now, power has been given in such a case to summon him to appear and show cause—Report of the Joint Committee (1922)

(3) The limit of compensation has been increased from Rs 50 to Rs 100 unless the Magistrate is a Magistrate of the third class "We think that this increase is amply justified by the present day conditions We do not think that this increase will, having regard to the provisions of section 404, make orders under section 250 appealable where they are not so at present —Report of the Select Committee of 1916

(4) Under the old law, the Magistrate could order imprisonment only after failure to recover compensation, but he could not award imprisonment in default in the very order directing compensation ; under the new sub section (2A), the Magistrate has now been empowered to award such imprisonment in the order itself

(5) Sub-section (2) of the old section, which provided that compensation should be recoverable as if it were a fine has been omitted as it is provided for in sec 547 The proviso to sub-section (2) of the old section has now been re-enacted as sub-section (2A) with some alterations Sub-section (2B) is new

(6) Sub-section (2C) is new and the proviso to this sub-section is the same as the old sub section (3)

(7) An appeal shall now lie from the order of a first class Magistrate if he awards compensation exceeding fifty rupees See sub-section (3). Under the old law no appeal lay from the order of a 1st class Magistrate

(8) Sub-section (4) has been amended to specify the time for payment of compensation where the original case is non appealable "The amendment which we propose at the end of sub-section (4) is to provide for cases in which, though there cannot be an appeal the acquittal or discharge of the person to whom compensation has been awarded may be set aside in revision The period of one month which we have allowed should be ample to admit of an application being made to the superior Court"—Report of the Select Committee of 1916

805 Instituted upon complaint etc —The operation of this section is restricted to cases instituted by complaint as defined in the Code or upon information given to a Police Officer or to a Magistrate It is clear that it will not apply to a case instituted on a police report or on information given by a Police Officer—Ramjeuan v Durga Charan 21 Cal 979 It is inapplicable to the case of a complaint lodged by a Police Officer as such—Sheobaran v Nunmonia, 5 C W N 370, Ramjiwan v Durga, 21 Cal 979, Karam Ilah v Morrison, 1879 P R 16, Syed Bahadur v. Nur Mahomed, 7 C W N 206, Q E v Sahar Jan, 22 Bom 934

An Excise officer (e g, a Sub-Inspector of Excise and salt) is a Police officer only for the purpose of sec 190, and not for the purpose of sec 250, and therefore an information given to an Excise officer is not an "information given to a Police officer" within the meaning of section 250 If an informer gives an information to an Excise officer, and upon that information, the officer makes a report to the Magistrate and prosecutes a person for selling liquor without a license, and the prosecution turns out to be false and frivolous held that the case was not instituted upon 'information to a Police officer' (so as to make the informer liable to pay compensation) but was instituted upon 'complaint,' the report of the Excise officer to the Magistrate being treated as a complaint, and that being deemed to be the complainant, was liable to pay

Even if the report be not treated as a complaint it was information given to a Magistrate by the Excise officer and in that view also he was liable to pay compensation—Radhika Mohan v Hamid Ali 54 Cal 371 28 Cr L J 316

810 False and frivolous or vexatious —Under the old law if the charge was frivolous or vexatious this was sufficient to entitle the accused to compensation if the charge was false the accused was equally entitled to the compensation because a false charge was held to be a vexatious charge—Benimadhab v Kumud 30 Cal 123 (F B) Emp v Bai Ashi 5 Bom L R 128 Ponnammal 2 Weir 313 (314) Idikkan v Alagan 21 Mad 237 Emp v Bindeshri 26 All 512 In re Gopal 37 Bom 376 15 Bom L R 49 14 Cr L J 75 Crown v Ismail 1903 P R 18 Nga Myo v Nga Kyin 1914 U B R 3rd Qr 31 16 Cr L J 92 Under the present law the charge must be false besides being frivolous or vexatious The rulings in Ram Singh v Mathura 34 All 354 and Emp v Asha, 4 Bom L R 645 (where it was held that this section did not apply if the charge was false) are now overruled

In a Burma case it was held that it was sufficient to make the complainant liable to pay compensation if the charge was false even though it was neither frivolous nor vexatious—Shaik Dawood v Md Ibrahim 11 Bur L T 201 19 Cr L J 172 This is incorrect We do not think that the procedure of section 250 should be used in every false case unless the case is also either frivolous or vexatious In more serious cases it is desirable that the Magistrate should act under section 476 with a view to the institution of a prosecution —Report of the Joint Committee (1922) If a Magistrate orders the complainant to pay compensation to the accused on the ground that he has preferred a false complaint it practically amounts to convicting in a summary proceeding the complainant under section 211 I P Code without a proper trial which is altogether improper and open to serious objection—Parsi v Bendhi 28 Cal 251

The mere fact that a complaint is frivolous or vexatious does not necessarily mean that it must be false Compensation can be awarded only if the complaint is false and also frivolous or vexatious—Assanmal v Dilbar 19 S L R 66 26 Cr L J 1295

The word vexatious indicates an accusation merely for the purpose of annoyance—Benimadhab v Kumud 30 Cal 123 6 C W N 799 Parsi v Bendhi 28 Cal 251 An accusation cannot be said to be vexatious unless the main intention of the complainant be to cause annoyance to the person accused—Crown v Kouro 11 S L R 55 18 Cr L J 1005 The idea conveyed by the word vexatious is that the object of the person making the accusation should be primarily to harass the persons accused —Bakaji v Mukund Singh 21 Cr L J 226 (Nag) Bhan v Syed Chand 26 Cr L J 1033 (Nag) If a prosecution is found to be malicious i brought on account of enmity it is necessarily a vexatious one—Has

The word frivolous means trifling ' 'silly ' or without due foundation —Jaina v Santuk 21 Cr L J 41 (Nag) Whether the charge is frivolous or vexatious is a question of fact to be decided by the Magistrate investigating the complaint—Munisami Mudali 2 Weir 319 (320) But the knowledge and intention of the complainant must be looked into Compensation should not be granted to the accused where the complainant did not know that the complaint was false and it is clear that the intention of the complainant was not to vex or harass the accused—Crown v Kotoomal 11 S L R 55 18 Cr L J 1003

Where the complainant believed his case to be true at first but subsequently after enquiries found that his belief had been proved to be untrue it would be his duty frankly to tell the Court that he had made a mistake and if he omits to do so it would show unwarrantable malice on his part and he would be liable to pay compensation—Shaik Dawood v Md Ibrahim 11 Bur L T 201 19 Cr L J 172

Where a person was charged with theft, but he was proved to have committed the act in the assertion of a bona fide claim of right the accusation of theft is false within the scope of section 250 In law no distinction can be properly made between a false accusation as to the motive or intention which prompts a man in doing a certain act, and a false accusation as to his act—Ravishankar v Savatlal 28 Bom L R 89 27 Cr L J 443

811 'By his order —Under the old section the order awarding compensation had to be passed in the order of discharge or acquittal of the accused and was a part of the order of discharge or acquittal Under the present section the Magistrate is not bound to award compensation at the time of passing the order of discharge or acquittal the latter order should only contain an order calling on the complainant to show cause why he should not be ordered to pay compensation—Ichhru Mal v Emp 7 Lah 121 27 Cr L J 757

The order calling upon the complainant to show cause must be made in the same order by which the Magistrate acquits or discharges the accused Thus where the accused was discharged and in the order of discharge a conditional order for compensation was passed subject to the complainant showing cause and the order of compensation was made absolute on the very day or on a subsequent day to which the case was adjourned for the complainant to show cause, it was held that both the orders were passed in one proceeding and were not illegal—Ghulam v Khalil 36 All 13 Jairaj v Bansi 23 A L J 1051 27 Cr L J 35 Lala Mohan v Kunja Behari 18 C W N 702 Ghanimal v Crown 7 S L R 13 15 Cr L J 501 Jugal Kishore v Abdul 2 Cr L J 523 1905 A W N 214 Dharukalu v Muthusami 17 Cr L J 314 (1916) 2 M W N 137 Emp v Saudagar 1917 P R 31, In re Narudas 22 Bom L R 131 Emp v Punamchand 8 Bom L R 847 What is intended by the Legislature is that the order of discharge and the order directing compensation must be made in one continuous proceeding and not in two separate proceedings Therefore where the Magistrate at the time of discharging the

Where there were two accused and one of them was discharged and the case against the other was adjourned to a later date when he was acquitted and on the latter date the Magistrate required the complainant to show cause and then ordered him to pay compensation to each of the accused held that the procedure followed was illegal When the order of discharge was made against the first accused the case against him was at an end and in so far as payment of compensation to him was concerned the order to show cause should have been made along with the order of discharge The defect was not curable under section 537—Suresh v Abdul Jabbar, 29 C W N 127 26 Cr L J 449 But where several charges are brought against the same accused and he is at first discharged on one charge and is subsequently acquitted in respect of the other charges it is not illegal to pass an order of compensation at the time of the acquittal in respect of the latter charges In fact in such a case it is better for the Magistrate to take action under section 250 not at an intermediate stage of the trial but at the end—Ramkishanlal v Sakarlal 28 Bom L R 89 27 Cr L J 448

Notice to show cause —Under the old law there was a difference of opinion as to whether the Magistrate should issue a formal notice to the complainant to show cause why he should not be ordered to pay compensation In some cases it was held that since the proviso laid down that before making any direction for payment of compensation the Magistrate shall record and consider any objection which the complainant or informant may urge against the making of the direction it necessarily implied that the Magistrate should give the complainant an opportunity to show cause and raise any objection which he might urge—Q L v Manil, Ratanlal 725 In re Mahadu 24 Bom L R 805 Pandurang v Longman 3 Bom L R 777 Akloo v Nowbat 21 Cr L J 751 1 P L T 558 In re Appala narasayya 44 Mad 51 Lalit Mohan v Kunja Behari 18 C W N 707 Gulzari Lal v Ganga Rao 9 A L J 17 13 Cr L J 268 But it was held in a recent Allahabad case that the proviso only related to objections voluntarily urged that this section was not intended to multiply the proceeding, but to be applied in a summary manner and that in a small matter of the kind contemplated by this section it would be an unnecessary and burdensome procedure to issue a formal notice—Emp v Pancham 45 All 474 Under the present amendment the Magistrate must call upon the complainant to show cause if the complainant is present the Magistrate must call upon him directly if he is not present the Magistrate must direct the issue of a summons to show cause

It is imperative on the Magistrate to give the complainant an opportunity to show cause, and he cannot make the order absolute owing to the absence of the complainant—Ghafur v Lallu, 1891 A W N 63 Sakhi v Mahabir, 18 C W N 1277, Gulzari Lal v Ganga Ram 9 A L J 170 Under the present law, if the complainant is absent, summons to show cause must be issued to him If this is not done, the order of compensation must be set aside, and the Magistrate should be directed to summon the complainant and give him an opportunity of showing cause before passing the order—Kalka v Ranjit, 24 A L J 170, 27 Cr L J 128 If the complainant is present, he may be directed forthwith to show cause and in the absence of any special reason, he is not entitled as a matter of right to an adjournment to enable him to consult a pleader and to give a written reply—In re Ishwarlal, 28 Bom L R 98, 27 Cr L J 430

812 Who can be ordered to pay compensation—The Magistrate can pass an order under this section against the person upon whose complaint or information an accusation was made Therefore it is open to a Magistrate to direct the person upon whose information the proceedings were started, to pay compensation to the accused even though that person was a mere informer and not a real complainant—Fariduddin v Emp, 24 A L J 221, 27 Cr L J 702 Where a certain person J gave information to S to the effect that a certain constable had committed extortion intending that a complaint should be made on his behalf to a Magistrate, and the complaint was subsequently dismissed as frivolous and the accused was acquitted held that J was liable to give compensation to the accused Although the information was conveyed to the Magistrate through S, still as J gave the information with the intention that it should be conveyed to a Magistrate, then clearly J was the person upon 'whose information the accusation was made' within the meaning of sec 250 The mere fact that he utilized S for conveying the information was immaterial—Emp v Bahadur Singh 40 All 79 (81) 19 Cr L J 76 If on the other hand, he had merely in conversation told S about the case without any desire for or view to a prosecution or to the conveyance of the information to the Magistrate, then he would have been hardly liable for the intervention of S who took it upon himself to make a complaint to the Magistrate In this latter circumstance, it would be S who would be liable to pay compensation—Ibid In a Sind case where A gave information of an offence to the Police at the instigation of B and the accusation was found to be false it was held that B was not liable to pay compensation, because he did not himself give the information to the Police, although he was the instigator—Emp v Sumar 12 S L R 76 20 Cr L J 100, 48 I C 980 Where certain persons gave information as witnesses of an offence to a constable, and upon the constable's information to the Sub-Inspector a case was instituted which was afterwards found to be false held that those persons could not be ordered to pay compensation, because they were not the 'persons upon whose information the accusation was made' within the meaning of this section It was the Police constable upon whose information to the Sub-Inspector the case was instituted This section is a penal one and should be construed strictly There is no authority for introducing into it words which would extend the liability to pay compensation to individuals other than the actual complainant or person who gives the information on which the case is instituted—Wali Mahomed v Crown 13 S L R 166 21 Cr L J 49 54 I C 401 These two Sind cases appear to be in conflict with 40 All 79 cited above

An order under section 250 cannot be passed against the complainant, unless the complainant knew that his information was false. Where a false charge was lodged by the complainant on information supplied to him by another person but there was no suggestion of any collusion between the complainant and that person and there was no finding that the complainant knew that the information was false held that the complainant could not be ordered to pay compensation under this section The object of this section is that compensation should be recoverable from the person responsible for the false accusation—Crown v Kourowd 11 S L R 55, 18 Cr L J 1005

Police officers are not exempted from the liability to pay compensation for frivolous and vexatious complaints—Varasayya v Ramadasa 2 Weir 317 (318) Where a Municipal peon under sanction of the Municipality charged a certain person of an offence which was found to be false the order of the Magistrate directing the peon to pay compensation to the accused was held to be legal—Q E v Bhima Ratanlal 309 offence but was merely the instrument of his superior officer in making the complaint it was held that the complainant himself (and not his superior officer) must be ordered to pay compensation If he chose to make a complaint as to a matter of which he had no personal knowledge he must take the cons qu n e and look to his superiors to indemnify him if he acted under their orders—Varasayya v Ramadas 2 Weir 317 (318

Moreover a Magistrate should in his order awarding compensation state his reasons why he deems the complaint to be vexatious and should also state in his judgment the facts of the case with a criticism of the incidents involved in it—Imjad Ali v Ashruf Ali 10 C W N 544 When the accused are discharged the recording of the reasons for ordering compensation to be paid is almost a condition precedent to the proper exercise of that power the recording of reasons is in addition to the finding of the Magistrate that the accusation was either frivolous or vexatious policy of the Legislature in requiring that in such a case reasons be recorded obviously to afford an opportunity to an appellate tribunal consider the sufficiency of the reasons so recorded absence of such recording of reasons there is no proper comp

The complainant may show cause with reference to the evidence already recorded but he cannot adduce further evidence This section does not require that separate proceedings should be held and fresh evidence taken—Q E v Chirai Ali 1898 A W N 198 But where the Magistrate had discharged the accused in the main case after hearing only some of the witnesses produced by the complainant the Magistrate before awarding compensation ought to hear the remaining witnesses of the complainant—In re Appalanarasayya 44 Mad 51 Sya Kyaw v K E 3 Bur L J 26 25 Cr L J 1280 Though compensation can be awarded in exceptional cases before all the evidence for the complainant has been recorded still if there are witnesses present whom the complainant wishes to produce the Magistrate should examine them before passing his order awarding compensation—Dewa Singh v Emp 24 Cr L J 251 (Lah)

If there are more than one accused the Magistrate can pass an order directing Rs 100 to be paid to each accused Under this section all that is prohibited is that compensation to the accused or each or any other should not exceed Rs 100 in amount The section does not mean that if there are a number of accused persons the total amount awarded to all of them must not exceed the maximum specified in the section—Faruddin v Emp 24 A L J 221 27 Cr L J 702

817 Sub-section (2C) —This section does not bar civil or criminal proceedings The object of this section is not to punish the complainant but to award by a summary order some compensation to the person against whom a frivolous or vexatious complaint is brought leaving it to him to obtain further redress against the complainant by a regular civil suit or criminal prosecution—Beni Madhab v Kumud Kumar 39 Cal 123

Proceeding under section 476 —The Joint Committee (1922) observe In more serious cases it is desirable that the Magistrate should proceed under section 476 with a view to the institution of a prosecution

A Magistrate who passes an order of compensation under this section can subsequently make a complaint (under sec 476) to prosecute the complainant for preferring a false charge under sec 211 I P C—Adikkan v Alagan 21 Mad 237 Anonymous 2 Weir 311 In re Gopala 37 Bom 376 15 Bom L R 49 Allabux v Crown 10 S L R 162 Hafi Khan v Emp 26 Cr L J 527 (Oudh) Q v Roopun 15 W R 9 Similarly where the Magistrate makes a complaint for the prosecution of a complainant under section 211 I P C for bringing a false charge he is not precluded from passing an order under this section directing the complainant to pay compensation to the accused—Nanhe v Ghan Sav 1907 P W R 30 7 Cr L J 231 Mathra Das v Raja 1901 P R 18 Achar v Purushah 7 S L R 10 Contra—Bachi v Jagdan 26 Cal 181 Shib Nath v Sarat 22 Cal 586 But of course it is discretionary with the Magistrate t make a complaint under sec 476 for prosecution of the complainant well as to proceed under this section and the question whether the retion has been rightly exercised by the Magistrate depends upon the f the particular case If the false charge is of such a nature that a ution is necessary on the ground of public policy the Magistrate would exercise his discretion wrongly in awarding compensation instead of making a complaint under section 476 But if the charge is such that no prosecution is necessary then the exercise of his discretion in awarding compensation is proper—In re Fanni Peddi 27 Mad 59 See also Lalji Hari v Emp 0 Cr L J 2.6 (Pat) It should be noted that all these cases are cases relating to sanctioning prosecution (now abolished) under sec 195 but the principle of these cases applies also to the preferring of complaints under sec 476

818 Sub-section (3)—Appeal —Under the old law no appeal could lie against an order of compensation passed by a 1st class Magistrate —O F v Biri 1 Bom L R 350 In re Itimbar 7 Bom L R 998, under the present law an appeal is allowed from an order of such Magistrate if the compensation awarded exceeds rupees fifty

Whenever a complainant has been ordered to pay compensation exceeding rupees fifty he has a right of appeal whether the amount is awarded to one accused or is ordered to be distributed among a number o accused persons in sums not exceeding fifty rupees—Augustin v Dumirg Detello 49 Bom 440 26 Cr L J 480 26 Bom L R 1243 This clause does not limit the right of appeal to cases where the compensation awarded to each accused exceeds rupees fifty Where the total amount directed to be paid to several accused persons exceeds Rs 50 a right of appeal exists—Assanmal v Dilbar 19 S L R 66 26 Cr L J 1295 Sumaria v Emp 24 A L J 167 27 Cr L J 146 There is nothing in this section to show that an appeal will lie only where the compensation directed to be paid to each individual accused is more than Rs 50 A complainant who has been ordered to pay compensation exceeding Rs 50 has the right of appeal It is the total amount of compensation directed to be paid by the complainant which must form the basis of the decision whether an appeal lies or not—Sobhit v Emp 7 P L T 552 26 Cr L J 1504

Notice to accused —Though there is no express provision that notice should go to the accused still it is desirable that the accused should have notice of the appeal in order that he may have an opportunity of supporting the order passed in his favour—Emp v Palaniappa 29 Mad 187 Venkatarama v Krishna 38 Mad 1091 Ram Chand v Jesa Ram 25 Cr L J 209 (Lah) Momoon v Ibrahim 20 S L R 41 27 Cr L J 248 But absence of notice to the accused will not vitiate the appellate proceedings and will not make the appellate order liable to be set aside Nagi Reddi v Bapappa 33 Mad 89 Krishna v Narayana 41 M L J 17? 22 Cr L J 583

OF THE TRIAL OF WARRANT CASES BY MAGISTRATES

820 Change of procedure —If a warrant case is tried as a summons case the procedure is illegal and the conviction is liable to be set aside—Emp v Chinnappayan 29 Mad 372 If in such trial the accused is acquitted under sec 245 the order of acquittal will at best operate as an order of discharge under sec 253—Emp v Jadu 1886 A W N 260 Q E v Lalta 1888 A W N 96

The fact that a summons instead of a warrant has been issued in a warrant case does not justify the procedure to be as in a summons case—Nand Lal v Bhagirattv 10 W R 31

If a trial is commenced as a warrant case it must be ended as a warrant case and not as a summons case a sudden change of procedure in the midst of a trial is illegal Therefore where a complaint alleged the commission of certain offences which were triable as warrant cases and the processes issued to the accused as well as the commencement of the proceeding showed that the accused were being tried for those offences but the Magistrate after taking the evidence of some of the witnesses for the complainant recorded an order that the offences as disclosed were triable as summons cases and then he proceeded with the trial as in a summons case without framing a charge held that the procedure adopted by the Magistrate was highly illegal and the trial should be set aside—Ganga Saran v Emp 19 A L J 6 22 Cr L J 146

The question whether a case is triable as a summons case or as a warrant case is to be decided by reference to the complaint and the notices issued to the accused and also to the commencement of the case under certain sections of the Penal Code and not by reference to the particular sections under which the conviction takes place—Ganga Saran v Emp 19 A L J 6.

If two charges arising out of the same facts under the same circumstances are framed one of a summons case and another of a warrant case the procedure should be as laid down for a warrant case—Ras

v Lala Zamdi 11 Cal 91 In re Sobhanadri, 39 Mad 503, Raghavalu v Sirgaram 41 Mad 727

Procedure in warrant-cases

251. The following procedure shall be observed by Magistrates in the trial of warrant cases.

821. Procedure must be followed:—In trying warrant cases, the procedure of this chapter must be strictly followed. The Magistrate cannot follow a procedure which had grown up by usage in the course of years and which materially differs from that laid down in this chapter such a procedure is more than an irregularity and is not curable by section 537—Emp v Dosabhai, 17 Bom L R 490, 16 Cr L J 538. The Magistrate cannot follow an arbitrary procedure of his own. See Taba v Hirba 1883 P R 29. A Presidency Magistrate must follow the procedure laid down in this chapter, subject to the special provisions of sec 362 as to the mode of taking down the evidence—Q E v. Abdul, Ratanlal 539

Evidence for prosecution

252 (1) When the accused appears or is brought before a Magistrate, such Magistrate shall proceed to hear the complainant (if any) and take all such evidence as may be produced in support of the prosecution:

Provided that the Magistrate shall not be bound to hear any person as complainant in any case in which the complaint has been made by a Court.

(2) The Magistrate shall ascertain, from the complainant or otherwise, the names of any persons likely to be acquainted with the facts of the case and to be able to give evidence for the prosecution, and shall summon to give evidence before himself such of them as he thinks necessary.

Change:—The proviso has been newly added by section 70 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923. A similar change has been made in section 244, q v. This amendment follows clause (aa) of section 200

822. "Is brought before the Court":—It is immaterial if the accused is brought before the Court by illegal arrest. Where a subject of a Native State committing an offence in British territory fled to his own country, and the British Police, without the intervention of the State authorities, pursued him and arrested him in that State, it was held that his illegal arrest would not vitiate his subsequent trial and conviction in British India—Sobha v Emp, 1899 P R 6, Emp v Nga Po, 7 Bur. L R 66

'Hear the complainant'—Hearing a complainant within the meaning of this section does not involve his examination on oath, and a tri of a warrant case is not vitiated merely because it did not begin with an examination of the complainant by the Court—Puthen Veetil Kunhi v Emp, 42 M L J 108 23 Cr L J 203

823. Taking evidence for the prosecution :—As soon as the accused is brought before the Magistrate he has a right to have the evidence against him recorded at as early a period as possible and the fact that there is or may be a great body of evidence forthcoming against him is not a good ground for his detention for an inordinate period—Manikam v Q, 6 Mad 63

It is the duty of the prosecution to bring before the Court all the persons who are alleged or are known to have knowledge of the facts or are likely to give important information—Q E v Ram Sahai, 10 Cal 1070 Emp v Dhunni 8 Cal 121 Q E v Stanton, 14 All 521, Q E v Ban khandi, 15 All 6, Emp v Kaliprosanna 14 Cal 245 If such witnesses are not called without sufficient cause being shown, the Court may properly draw an inference adverse to the prosecution—Emp v Dhunni 8 Cal 121

The Magistrate is bound to examine every one of the witnesses called by the complainant—Q v Parasurama, 4 Mad 329, Begum Bibi v Ghulam, 1908 P W R 3, he cannot say beforehand whether the evidence of a certain witness will be material or not—Reg v Dava, Ratanlal 21 (22) He cannot refuse to examine any witnesses simply because their evidence will be a mere repetition of what has been already given by the other witnesses—Emp v Hematulla 3 Cal 389, Emp v Kashi, 2 All 447 But if the Magistrate considers the charge to be groundless, he can discharge the accused without examining all the witnesses (sec 253) —Naranna v Suresethi, (1911) M W N 149, 12 Cr L J 105, Dhanjibhai v Pvarji, Ratanlal 201

The witnesses must be examined orally Where the witnesses common to three cases were first examined in chief in only one case and their deposition was recorded by a typewriter in triplicate, one copy being made part of the record in each case, held that the procedure in the other two cases was illegal—Mazhar Ali v Emp, 50 Cal 223 (226)

An accused should be given if he so desires an opportunity to cross examine the prosecution witnesses even though a charge is not framed—Ashirbad v Maju 8 C W N 838 • But the prosecution is not bound to tender the witness for cross examination, the prosecution is not bound to do anything more than make a witness appear in Court, so that the accused may call him or not as he likes—Emp v Kaliprosanna 14 Cal 245 Moreover, the prosecution is not bound to put such of those as he does not examine into the witness box to be cross examined But he should not refuse to put into the box for cross examination a truthful witness merely because his evidence may be favourable to the defence —Q E v Durga, 16 All 84 (F B)

824. Summoning witnesses :—Sub-section (1) lays down that the Magistrate shall take all such evidence as may be produced in support of the prosecution This means that the complainant should first of all himself produce what evidence he can in support of the prosecution and the Magistrate shall proceed to hear it The Court is apparently not bound to issue process for such witnesses or to grant time for the production of such witnesses but if produced he must record their evidence Next when the complainant has done all he can without the assistance of the process of the Court it is then for the Magistrate to ascertain under sub section (2) from the complainant or otherwise the names of other persons likely or able to give evidence and he must summon such of those as he thinks necessary i e such of those as he thinks will be of value in assisting the prosecution case—Menon v Krishna Nayar 49 Mad 978 51 M L J 328 27 Cr L J 1123 The Magistrate has a discretion in summoning witnesses and he is not bound to summon every person named as a witness for the complainant—Chalem v Sukedad 23 W R 9 The Magistrate can use his discretion in selecting out of the list of witnesses those who seem to be necessary and those who seem to be unnecessary But the power is to be exercised with caution and the Magistrate must see that there be no miscarriage of justice by excluding an important witness—Sitab Singh v Dalganjan 12 A L J 15 14 Cr L J 682 The duty of seeing that all evidence essential to the prosecution case is before the Court is thrown upon the Magistrate himself So it is not open to a Magistrate to acquit on the ground that the prosecution has failed to produce a necessary witness—Emp v Maiku Lal 12 O L J 632 2 O W N 584 26 Cr L J 1266

The Magistrate cannot arbitrarily refuse to summon the witnesses named by the complainant it is his duty to assist and not to hamper the prosecution and for that purpose he must issue summons to persons of whom the complainant has informed him and who he considers are likely to give useful evidence The Magistrate is not bound to or expected to exercise this duty of ascertaining more than once and the proper time is when the evidence produced in support of the prosecution has been taken and that ordinarily includes the cross examination if any and re examination if any before the charge In order to ascertain the names of necessary witnesses the Magistrate should put questions to the complainant in proper form The question to be asked is not whether the complainant has any more witnesses whom he can produce without summons but whether he can inform the Court of any witnesses who will have to be brought by process—Menon v Krishna Nayar 49 Mad 978 51 M L J 328 27 Cr L J 1123

After the witnesses in support of the prosecution are heard it is the duty of the Magistrate to see that the prosecutor is not allowed to set the Court on to a roaming inquiry summoning persons in the hope that something might be elicited which may help his case The prosecutor must come with his case fully prepared and there is no section in the Code which authorises him to file a fresh list of prosecution witnesses—Sitab Singh v Dalganjan 12 A L J 15 14 Cr L J 682

Where witnesses do not obey the summons the prosecution has a right to call upon the Court to compel their attendance—Bhomar v Digambar 6 C W N 548

It is not proper for the Magistrate to issue a warrant in the first instance

it is only when the summons is disobeyed that serious measures may be taken—Kala Singh v K E, 1907 P W. R 22

Process fee —There is nothing in this Code which enables a Magistrate to demand from even the complainant the expenses to be incurred by his witnesses, though such a power is conferred by section 244 (3) in a summons case—Bridhichand v Lakhmichand, 8 N L R 65, 13 Cr L J 554 The dismissal of a complaint in a warrant case for non payment of process fee is illegal—Palanyagari Pilchinadu, 2 Weir 323

Inspection of documents —The accused is entitled to inspect all the documents produced by the complainant as evidence against the accused and filed as exhibits, and not merely to get certified copies thereof—In re Frencis, 1 Bom L R 433 But so long as the documents are not filed, but merely in the possession of the prosecution, the accused has no right to call for their production or to inspect the same, until after a charge has been framed—Tahilram v Pitambardas, 8 S L R 267 (cited under sec 257)

253. (1) If upon taking all the evidence referred to in Section 252, and making such [illegible] y) of the accused as the [illegible] finds that no case against [illegible] has been made out which, if unrebutted, would warrant his conviction, the Magistrate shall discharge him.

Discharge of accused

(2) N[illegible] a M[illegible] stag[illegible], if for reasons to be recorded by such Magistrate, he considers the charge to be groundless

825. Procedure :—The procedure prescribed by these sections should be strictly followed The Magistrate should first take the evidence of the complainant and his witnesses (sec 252) and if necessary examine the accused (sec 253) and then apply the law to the criminal acts to find whether there is prima facie evidence, then frame charges (section 254) and call upon the accused to plead thereto (sec 255) and enter upon his defence (sec 256)—Goonath v Troylocko 9 W R 15 If the Magistrate after examining the prosecution witnesses (sec 252), examined the accused and the witnesses for the defence (sec 256), without having drawn up a charge and then discharged the accused under sec 253 the procedure was contrary to law and the accused should be treated as acquitted under sec 258—Taba v Hirba, 1883 P. R 29 In Orilal v Kalu, 18 Cr L J 1006 (Bur) however where the Magistrate followed the same procedure as in the Punjab case it was held that although the procedure adopted was highly [illegible]gular and unwarranted still as the procedure was in substance that [illegible] down in this chapter the omission to frame a charge and record a [illegible] would not invalidate the order of discharge, and that section 535 [illegible] [illegible]ure the irregularity

Taking all the evidence etc —A Magistrate is not competent to discharge an accused person until the evidence of all the witnesses named for the prosecution has been taken—Q v Parasurama 4 Mad 329 In re Gangoo 7 C L R 389 Q v Japit 27 W R 25 Soodur v Ram Kumar 20 W R 67 Reg v Daya Ratanlal 71 Begam Bibi v Ghulam 1908 P W R 3 Although he has a discretion to summon or not every person named as a witness by the complainant—Chalem v Sukedad 23 W R 9 still he is not justified in discharging an accused person without examining all the witnesses who are present in Court—Rakhal v Monmotha 11 C W N lxxxiii If however upon examination of some of the witnesses the Magistrate considers the charge to be groundless he can discharge the accused under subsection (2) without examining the other witnesses—Va anna Chinna v Suresetti 9 M L T 302 12 Cr L J. 168

Where a case was transferred from a Bench of Magistrates who had already recorded some evidence to a Deputy Magistrate the latter is bound to examine the evidence already recorded and cannot discharge the accused without considering the evidence—Amodini v Darsan 38 Cal 828

826 Discharge —An order of discharge under this section does not amount to an acquittal and the Sessions Judge can under section 437 (now 436) have the accused put upon his trial in spite of the discharge —In re Soodan Mundle 5 W R 58 Q v Hurpershad 4 N W P 73 See sec 436

Orders which amount to discharge —Where a warrant case which cannot be compounded is compounded and the case dismissed such dismissal amounts only to a discharge—Reg v Devama 1 Bom 64 Q E v Motidas Ratanlal 391 When after the issue of process the Magistrate does not think it proper to proceed any further the termination of the proceedings amounts to an order of discharge—Moul Singh v Mahabir 4 C W N 247 Where no charge was drawn up and the accused was not called upon to plead or enter on his defence the release of the accused did not amount to an acquittal but to a discharge under this section —Q v Purna Chandra 4 B L R App 1

Order of discharge when improper —A Magistrate ought not to discharge the accused merely because he was illegally arrested e g where the Police arrested him without warrant in a non conizable case—Reg v Saygapa Ratanlal 73 So also a Magistrate ought not to discharge a person merely because he has no jurisdiction to try the case in such a case he ought to proceed under section 346—Munisami 2 Weir 323

A Magistrate cannot discharge or acquit the accused upon withdrawal of complaint in a non compoundable case Such a procedure is allowed in summons cases (sec 248) and not in warrant cases The Magistrate has to proceed with the inquiry in spite of the withdrawal of complaint—In re Ganesh 13 Bom 600 Emp v Ranchhod 37 Bom 369 A Magistrate cannot dismiss the complaint and discharge the accused under this section if the complainant is absent and the offence is a warrant case and a non compoundable one Such a dismissal amounts to an application to a warrant case of the procedure prescribed by sec 247 in respect of a summons case—Govinda v Dulal 10 Cal 67 Ram Coomar v Ramjit,

4 C W N 26 Alexander v Conners 20 C W N 698 Q E v Nanaji Ratanlal 524 Nilratan v Jogesh 1 C W N 57 But under section 259, as now amended the Magistrate can discharge the accused owing to the absence of the complainant if the offence is non cognizable even though it is non compoundable

An order of discharge can be made when according to the word of this section no case has been made out which if unrebutted would warrant the conviction of the accused but when there is a body of evidence which if believed would justify a conviction it is better to draw up a charge and dispose of the case finally than to discharge the accused—Radhi v Phulchand 1909 P W R 18 11 Cr L J 110

An order of discharge cannot be made after a charge has been framed such an order is erroneous and would amount to an acquittal under section 258—Crown v Nathu 1903 P R 14

827. Fresh proceedings —The dismissal of a complaint or the discharge of an accused person does not bar a fresh complaint being entertained or a fresh inquiry held into the case against the accused (and it is not necessary that the previous order of discharge must be set aside before fresh proceedings can be taken)—Q E v Bapuda Ratanlal 350 Q E v Dolegobind 28 Cal 211 Emp v Maheshwara 31 Mad 543 Hari Dass v Saritulla 15 Cal 608 (F B)

The power of revival of proceedings is vested in all Magistrates including the Magistrate who discharged the accused But Magistrates are bound to exercise due discretion to take that discharge into account and to avoid any such oppressive proceedings as may either expose them to punishment under section 219 or 220 I P C or to a civil action on the part of the accused—Q E v Bapuda Ratanlal 350 No rehearing should be made of a case which has been disposed of by an order of discharge by a Magistrate of co ordinate jurisdiction except where there has been a manifest error or miscarriage of justice—Emp v Chinna Kaliappa 29 Mad 126 (F B) An order of discharge passed under this section cannot be set aside and prosecution started afresh unless there are new materials before the Magistrate which were not before him formerly and unless upon those materials there is a probability of the conviction of the accused persons—Biso Ram v Emp 23 Cr L J 736 (Pat)

If an order of discharge is passed by a Presidency Magistrate the High Court can interfere under sec 439 of this Code (and not merely under sec 15 of the Charter Act) and direct a further inquiry—Manik Protap v Khan Mahomed 36 Cal 994 See this case and other cases cited in Note 682 under sec 203

Power of District Magistrate —Where an accused person has been discharged under this section the District Magistrate can himself hold a further inquiry or can direct such inquiry to be held by a Subordinate Magistrate (sec 436)—Parbhu Lal v Janki 18 Cr L J 706 (All), Q E v Chotu 9 All 52, Q E v Balasinnathambi 14 Mad 334 Narasimhaswami v Emp 32 Mad 220, Hari Singh v Danesh 20 W R 46 Ghiorati v Anis, 20 W R 47

828 Sub-section (2) —When a Magistrate is reasonably convinced on what has been already deposed that a criminal charge cannot be sustained he is relieved from the necessity of going on with the trial and can discharge the accused—Dhanjibhai v Pyarji Ratanlal 201 Narayana v Sreesetti 9 M L T 304 The Magistrate can discharge the accused even before the date fixed for hearing if upon the materials then before him he is satisfied that the offence could not have been committed —Watson v Metcalfe 25 Cr L J 696 (Pat) A Magistrate has power to discharge an accused under sub-sec (2) even if no witnesses are examined under sec 252—Kunj Behari v Emp 24 A L J 512 27 Cr L J 541 (542) The Magistrate can discharge but not acquit the accused—Q v Robert 6 W R 13

If the evidence recorded does not raise any presumption that the accused has committed any offence but merely leads to a doubt the proper course would be to discharge the accused and not to proceed to frame a charge—Mul Chand v K E 1906 P R 2

Recording reasons —The Legislature does not render the writing of reasons necessary when the Magistrate discharges the accused person after he has heard all the evidence for the prosecution It is only when he discharges under sub section (2) without hearing all the evidence that he is bound to record reasons But even in the former case the Magistrate should record his reasons having regard to the fact that the order is not final—Emp v Nabi Fakira 9 Bom L R 250

254 If, when such evidence and examination have been taken and made, or at any previous stage of the case, the Magistrate is of opinion that there is ground for presuming that the accused has committed an offence triable under this Chapter which such Magistrate is competent to try, and which in his opinion could be adequately punished by him, he shall frame in writing a charge against the accused

Charge to be framed when offence appears proved

'Evidence and examination' —It is not necessary for a Magistrate to examine more witnesses than are sufficient to convince him of the truth of the charge and with that view he can put questions to the accused The answers given to such questions will have a great effect upon the question as to the witnesses to be examined for the prosecution And if on questions put to the accused answers which leave no doubt as to the commission of the offence are elicited the Magistrate may frame a charge and call upon the accused to plead—Anonymous 3 M H C R App 2

829 Charge when to be framed —It is not necessary that the Magistrate should wait till the whole of the evidence for the prosecution has been taken Cf the words or at any previous stage the moment the stage is reached when there is ground for presuming that the accused person has committed an offence the examination of the accus should be taken up and the charg sheet drawn up and the remain n' witnesses for the prosecution should be examined—Mulua v Sheora 8 A L J 707 17 Cr L J 471 Under the Code of 188 the Magistrate could not frame a charge till the evidence for the prosecution was completed The words or at any previous stage of the case did not exist in that Code

Charge to be fram d when offence appears proved —It is only when the prosecution has proved all the facts necessary to constitute the offence charged against the accu ed that a charge should be framed If the evidence recorded does not lead to any presumption that the accused has committed any offence but merely raises a doubt the Magistrate should give the accu ed the b nefit of the doubt and discharge him under sec 253 and should not pro d to frame a charge—Mulchand v K E 1 06 P R 2

If other offe ice is proved —If on the evidence a Mag strate finds that an offence different from the one expressly charged against the accused has been committed he has power to frame a charge with regard to the other offence—Reg v Dhonda 5 B H C R 100 and need not dism ss the complaint with leave to the prosecution to institute a fresh and more compresensive complaint—Degumber v Kally Dass 8 W R 8 Thus where a charge of defamation had been framed against the accused and the complainant in her deposition further charged him with using crim nal force and thereupon the Magistrate tried him for both the offences acquitted him of the former offence and convicted him of using crim nal force it was held that the procedure was legal—K E v Louis 3 Bom L R 675 If when a case is being tried as a warrant case and a cha g is drawn up thereof it is intended to proceed against the accused for an offence triable only as a summons case that offence should form part of the charge—Hossein v Kalu 29 Cal 481

'Which such Magistrate is competent to try and adequately punish — Sec 254 is very restrictive for it provides that the Magistrate shall try an accused person only for an offence which in his opinion can be ad equately punished by him A Magistrate has to exercise his dis r t on in th matter of every complaint that is brought before him—Q E v Abdul Rahman 16 Bom 580 A Magistrate ought not to frame a charge under this section if he is of opinion that he can not adequately puni h the offence—Q E v. Fakira Ratanlal 499 K E v Nga Po 1905 U B R 33 If the Magistrate is of opinion that he cannot adequately pun sh the accused he can commit the case to the Sessions although the case may be exclusively triable by a Magistrate—Q E v Kavemulla 24 Cal 429 A commitment is bad in law unless the Magistrate is of opin on that the sentence which he can impose will not be adequate to meet the ends of justice—K E v Jagmohan 6 A L J 989 Q E v Kejamulla 24 Cal 429 Emp v Bindeshri 41 All 454 See note 695 under sec 207

Where it was within the competence of the Magistrate to pass an adequate sentence in the case but the Magistrate committed the case to the sessions on the ground that as he was a witness in the identification proceedings in the case he was disqualified from trying it (sec 556) K J

that the course adopted by the Magistrate was improper he should have moved the District Magistrate to transfer the case to some other Magistrate—Emp v Ram Jatan 21 A L J 420 25 Cr L J 665 A I R 1924 All 185

830 Charge —Content —A charge under this section should allege all that is necessary to constitute the offence charged and all that is requisite in order that the accused may have notice of the matter with which he is to be charged It should not allege positively anything of which the allegation in a positive form is not justified by the materials before the Court—Sant Singh v Emp 1889 P R 6

Effect of framing charge —Proceedings before a Magistrate in a warrant case under this chapter are only an inquiry until a charge is framed and on a charge being framed become a trial—Sri amulu v Nalan Krishna Rao 38 Mad 585

When a Magistrate frames a charge under this section he indicates thereby that a prima facie case exists against the accused and he cannot acquit the accused or dismiss the case without hearing the prosecution and the defence evidence he is bound to proceed with the case—Bellon v Parker 7 C W N 5 1

But the mere fact that a charge has been framed against the accused does not justify the view that the Magistrate is bound to convict the accused If after carefully considering all the evidence adduced in the case he comes to the conclusion that the guilt of the accused has not been satisfactorily established he is bound to acquit him under sec 258 although he may have framed a charge against him in the first instance—Damodar v Jujharsingh 6 Cr L J 1348 (Nag)

Omission to frame charge —It is imperative on the Magistrate to frame a charge and an omission to do so vitiates the trial—Md Rafique v K E 43 C L J 100 The Allahabad High Court holds that an omission to frame a charge according to this section would not invalidate an order of acquittal nor would render the acquittal equivalent to a discharge—Emp v Gurdu 3 All 129

255 (1) The charge shall then be read and explained to the accused, and he shall be asked whether he is guilty or has any defence to make

Plea

(2) If the accused pleads guilty, the Magistrate shall record the plea, and may in his discretion convict him thereon

831 Security cases —Sec 117 lays down that proceedings under sec 110 shall be conducted as nearly as possible in the manner of conducting trials of warrant cases except that no charge need be framed Therefore secs 254 and 255 apply to an enquiry under sec 117 except in so far as the framing of the charge and the reading of it to the accused is concerned in other words at any stage of the inquiry the Magistrate if he is prima facie satisfied that there is a case against accused, may ask him whether he pleads guilty or whether he has any defence to make—Tirlok v Emp, 25 A L J 749, 28 Cr L J 791

'Explained'—The charge must be read out and explained to the accused, and the record must show that the Magistrate has done so Where all that is found on the record is only a narrative by the Judge of what occurred and of the statements made by the prisoner, it cannot be inferred from the record that the charge has been explained to the accused as required by this section—Emp v Gopal Dhanuk 7 Cal 96 The charge should be so explained to the accused that the Magistrate is sure that the accused has understood the nature of it thoroughly and it is then that his plea should be received—Emp v Vaimbile, 5 Cal 8 6 If there are any aggravating circumstances of the offence, those circumstances should be set forth in the charge, so that the accused person may know what it is to which he pleads guilty and the full effect of such plea, or in case he pleads not guilty, he may know what material facts he is called upon to rebut—Reg v Mukta Ratanlal 55

Where the charge was not explained to the accused, the High Court set aside the conviction and ordered a new trial—Aiyavu v Q E, 9 Mad. 61

832. Plea—An admission which does not admit all the elements of a charge is not a plea of 'guilty' to a charge Therefore, where on a charge of murder the prisoner pleaded that he struck his wife with a dao but he did not intend to kill her, it was held that the acknowledgment could not be treated as a plea of guilty, since the intention to murder was denied—Q v Sonaulla 25 W R 23

Where certain facts are stated in the charge and also an offence punishable under a particular section, but the facts mentioned in the charge do not disclose an offence under the section quoted the plea of the accused cannot amount to an admission of guilt under that section. An accused person does not plead to a section of a criminal statute He pleads guilty or not guilty to the facts alleged in the charge and a plea of guilty amounts only to an admission that he occupied the position as stated in the charge and committed the acts therein specified but unless the facts averred in the charge amount in law to an offence under a particular section, a plea of guilty cannot amount to an admission of guilt under that section—Basant v Emp, 7 Lah 359 27 Cr L J 907

When an accused person does not formally plead guilty, the fact that he throws himself at the mercy of the Court should not prejudice him—Dy Leg Rem v Upendra 12 C W N 140

Plea of Pleader—Where the accused is present in Court his pleader cannot be called upon to plead under this section on behalf of his client and it is improper for a Magistrate to act upon such plea though made in the presence and hearing of the accused It would be more regular in form for the Magistrate to call upon the accused to say with his own lips whether he denies the truth of the complaint—Emp v Sursingh 6 Bom L R 861 1 Cr L J 939 But when the accused has been permitted under sec 205 to appear by a pleader, the latter may perform all acts which devolve upon the accused in the course of the trial, and he can plead guilty or not guilty under this section—Crown v Jamal 6 S L R 206 14 Cr L J 272 Dorab kah v Emp, 50 Bom 250 27 Cr L J 440

Record of plea —If the plea is not recorded the conviction is liable to be set aside—Emp v Gopal Dhanuk 7 Cal 96 The Court must record the actual words used a narrative of what occurred and of the statements made by the prisoners is not a proper record of the plea—Gopal Dhanuk 7 Cal 96 If the statement of the accused is in a foreign language the Magistrate need not record it in the language in which it is made but the record must be in the language in which it is interpreted—Emp v Lambilee 5 Cal 8 6

833 Conviction on plea —If after a charge is framed the accused pleads guilty the Magistrate can refuse to convict on the plea and can proceed to take further evidence—Emp v Rash Behari 25 C W N 212 In a warrant case although an accused can be convicted on his own plea of guilty still a conviction should not be made unless there is evidence on the record to support the conviction It is highly improper in a warrant case to convict an accused on his own admission alone without recording any evidence for the prosecution and without framing a formal charge—Emp v Chinnappayan 25 Mad 372

Again in order that a conviction on a plea of the accused may be sustained it is necessary that the accused should admit in his plea all the elements of the offence If he admits that he killed the deceased but he denies that he had any intention of killing her the Magistrate cannot convict him on such statement Such a confession does not amount to a plea of guilty—Q v Sonaullah 25 W R 23 If the accused pleads guilty to one offence the Judge cannot convict the accused for another offence e g if the accused pleads guilty to a charge of murder he can not be convicted for culpable homicide not amounting to murder—Q v Gobalur 13 W R 55 (56)

If the accused person admits some or all of the facts alleged by the prosecution but pleads not guilty the proper procedure for the Magistrate is to proceed to trial according to law and not to convict him on the admission without taking evidence—Emp v Somnbhai 9 Bom L R 1346 6 Cr L J 424

255A In a case when a previous conviction is charged under the provisions of Section 221, sub section (7), and the accused does not admit that he has been previously convicted as alleged in the charge, the Magistrate may after he has convicted the said accused under Section 255, sub section (2) or Section 258, take evidence in respect of the alleged previous conviction and shall record a finding thereon

Procedure in case of previous convictions

834 This new section has been added by section 71 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923

"We think that this addition is necessary after section 255, to provide for a case where previous conviction is also charged Definite provision is made for this in the case of trials before a Court of Session (see section 310), but it does not seem to have been provided for by the Code in the case of a Magistrate's trial "—Report of the Select Committee of 1916 "It was suggested to us that the new section 255A is unnecessary on the ground that though a procedure for the proof of previous convictions is necessary in a Sessions Court to prevent the jury or the assessors from being prejudiced by anything they may hear as to the accused s previous record, yet in warrant cases the same considerations do not apply On the whole, however we think the new section may serve a useful purpose and we have retained it "—Report of the Joint Committee of 1922

Prior to the enactment of this section it was held that in a trial before a Magistrate, it was not illegal to adduce evidence of a previous conviction before the accused was called upon for his defence, if such procedure did not prejudice the accused—Dehri Sonar v Emp, 50 Cal 367 In another case, however, the trial was set aside, because the accused was prejudiced by reason of the Magistrate allowing the proof of previous conviction to go in before the evidence for the defence was gone into—Golim Hossein v Emp, 10 C W N cxcv But these cases are no longer of any authority because the present section provides that the Magistrate can take evidence of previous conviction only after he has convicted the accused

256. (1) If the accused refuses to plead, or does not plead, or claims to be tried, he shall be required to state at the commencement of the next hearing of the case or, if the Magistrate for reasons to be recorded in writing so thinks fit, forthwith, whether he wishes to cross-examine any, and if so, which, of the witnesses for the prosecution whose evidence has been taken. If he says he does so wish, the witnesses named by him shall be recalled and, after cross-examination and re-examination (if any), they shall be discharged. The evidence of any remaining witnesses for the prosecution shall next be taken and after cross-examination and re-examination (if any) they also shall be discharged The accused shall then be called upon to enter upon his defence and produce his evidence

Defence.

(2) If the accused puts in any written statement, the Magistrate shall file it with the record.

Change :—The italicised words in subsection (2) have been added by section 72 of the Cr P Code Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923 The reasons have been thus stated by the Select Committee of 1916 —" It may happen that up to the time of a charge being framed the accused is not professionally represented, and it seems reasonable in such a case that he should be given time until the next hearing to engage a pleader and decide what witnesses he will cross examine

835 Scope of Section —This section does not apply to proceedings under sec 110 Though under section 117 the procedure prescribed for warrant cases is as nearly as possible to be followed in cases of security for good behaviour it does not follow that that gives a right to the accused person to further cross examine the prosecution witnesses on entering on his defence when he has once cross examined them—Chinta m*n v Emp* 35 Cal 243 *Ah*m*ad Buksh v Emp* 1916 P R 1 17 Cr L J 84 *B*i*a v Emp* 8 Lah 65 28 Cr L J 239 dissenting from Emp v Larsha 4 Bur L T 71 Cr L J 89 in which a contrary view has been taken

But the person proceeded against under sec 110 must be given one opportunity of cross examining the prosecution witnesses though he is not entitled to a second cross examination under sec 256 Where there was no reasonable opportunity given to such person at any stage of the proceeding to cross examine the witnesses he was certainly prejudiced and the order for security must be set aside Thus in a case under sec 110, if the Magistrate is prima facie satisfied that there is a case against the accused he may interrupt the proceedings for the purpose of asking the accused whether he pleads guilty or whether he has any defence to make If he decides to do that and the accused elects to defend the Magistrate shall then ask the accused whether he wishes to cross examine any of the prosecution witnesses and if he says he does so wish he must be given an opportunity of cross examining them If on the other hand the Magistrate desires to hear all the prosecution witnesses before asking the accused whether he wishes to plead guilty or to defend himself he is of course at liberty to do so But when the stage is reached of asking the accused whether he wishes to plead guilty or to defend the accused must be allowed an opportunity of cross examining any witnesses whom he desires to cross examine—Tirlok v Emp 25 A L J 749 28 Cr L J 792

This section does not apply to an inquiry into a Sessions case prior to commitment In such inquiry the accused has no right to cross examine the prosecution witnesses after the charge is framed—Baldeo v K E 19 O C 239 See notes under section 208

This section applies to summary trials (see sec 26) and therefore in the trial of a warrant case under the summary procedure the accused has the right to cross examine the prosecution witnesses after the evidence for the prosecution is closed—Titti Sahu v Emp 1 P L T 652 In re Raju Achari 51 M L J 68, 28 Cr L J 12

836 Cross-examination —Before frame of charge —Although the proper time to recall and cross examine the witnesses for the prosecution is after the charge is read over to him and before he is called upon to make his defence still this section does not prohibit such cross examination before the charge is framed—Q E v Sagal 21 Cal 642 An opportunity should be given to the accused if he so desires to cross-examine the prosecution witnesses even though the charge is not yet framed—Ashirbad v Manu 8 C W N 838

After frame of Charge —The fact that the accused has cross examined the witnesses for the prosecution before the charge is framed does not deprive him of the right given him by this section of recalling and cross examining those witnesses after the charge is framed—Zamuma v Ram Zahal, 27 Cal 370 Inder v Emp 37 Cal 236 Nilkanta v Q E 20 Cal 469 Q E v Sagal, 21 Cal 642 Nga Pya v Emp 14 Cr L J 388 6 Bur L T 67 Q E v Nasarvanji 2 Bom L R 542 Even when the prosecution witnesses were cross examined by the accused before frame of charge on the understanding that the accused would not require those witnesses to be recalled for further cross examination after the charge still the Magistrate cannot refuse the application of the accused to recall and cross examine those witnesses after the charge is framed—Kokil Ghose v Kasimuddi, 6 C W N 424 Where the witnesses for the prosecution were cross examined by the pleader for the accused before the frame of charge, and the pleader then stated that he no longer required their attendance but after the framing of the charge the pleader for the accused wanted to further cross examine the witnesses held that under sec 256 the accused was entitled to the same—Ramchandra v Emp, 5 Pat 110 7 P L T 304 27 Cr L J 490

837. According to the plain language of this section, the accused has a right to have the witnesses for the prosecution recalled and cross examined after frame of charge—Gopal Sheikh v Emp 7 C L J 240 Tallur Venkayya v Q, 4 Mad 130 Tilu Sahu v Emp, 1 P L T 632 Maharaj Singh v Emp 24 Cr L J 371, 1923 P W R 9 and it is not necessary for the accused to show that he has a reasonable ground for exercising the right of recalling and cross examining the prosecution witnesses He is, as a matter of right entitled to cross examine—Q v Amiruddin 21 W R 29, In re Nobin Chand 25 W R 32 and the Magistrate is not justified in refusing to recall the prosecution witnesses for cross examination specially when the accused had not cross examined any witnesses before frame of charge—Ramjad v K E 5 P L J 91 21 Cr L J 814 Where there are several accused each of the accused should be given an opportunity to cross examine A Magistrate cannot refuse to allow the further cross examination of the witnesses for the prosecution by one of the accused on the ground that they had been cross examined by another—Lala Ram v Emp 11 C W N cxl

The right referred to in this section is absolute and unqualified and is intended to apply only where the witnesses are still before the Court and before they have been discharged from further attendance Under sec 257 however there is a discretion vested in the Court to resummon the prosecution witnesses already examined, and where a witness has been allowed to depart under sec 256 on the representation of the accused that he is not required any further application to re cross examine him must be deemed to fall under sec 257—In re Lockley 43 Mad 411, 38 M L J 209 21 Cr L J 297

Magistrate's duty to ask —Under this section, it is the duty of the Magistrate after a charge has been framed to require the accused to state whether he desires to cross examine the prosecution witnesses already examined—Zamuna v Ram Zahal 27 Cal 370 Omission on the part of the Magistrate to ask the accused whether he wishes to recall any witnesses for cross-examination will invalidate the conviction and the case will be retried from the point of framing the charge—Moola v Crown 1914 P R 11, 16 Cr L J 146 Mahan Singh v Emp 24 Cr L J 371 A I R 1924 Lah. 215 Omission to so ask the accused and the rejection of the accused s application on the ground that it was too late would prejudice the accused in his trial—Q E v Henry Kaps 1902 A W N 5 In Murian Chetti v Emp, 16 Cr L J 5 (Mad) however it has been held that such omission is a mere irregularity and the conviction is not thereby vitiated If the case is tried summarily the omission on the part of the Magistrate to ask the accused whether he wishes to recall the witnesses for further cross-examination does not vitiate the trial—Umaji v Emp 28 Bom I R 95 27 Cr L J 131

Adjournment —A Magistrate cannot insist on the prosecution witnesses being cross-examined by the accused immediately whether they wish it or not—Tirlok v Emp 25 A L J 749 28 Cr L J 792 An accused against whom a charge was framed without any previous intimation when required by the Magistrate to state whether he wished to cross examine said that he had no question to put at present but that time should be granted him for engaging a pleader and for cross examining witnesses it was held that the application for adjournment was reasonable under the circumstances and ought to be granted—Arumugam v Emp (1911) 2 M W N 192 12 Cr L J 548 Where the charges are complicated and the accused are ignorant persons they should not be called upon to cross examine the witnesses immediately after the charge is framed but a reasonable time should be given to them to get proper legal advice and to engage a pleader before they are called upon to cross examine the prosecution witnesses—In re Rangasami 16 Cr L J 786 This is now made clear by the addition of the words at the commencement of the next hearing of the case The provision that the accused should be asked whether they wish to cross examine the prosecution witnesses on a date subsequent to that upon which they are called upon to plead to the charge is a new proposition deliberately introduced into the Code by the Amendment Act of 1923 and the only possible reason for the change is that the Legislature has intended to give the accused persons against whom charges are framed an interval of time to think out the lines of their defence before they are called upon to inform the Court how they intend to proceed Omission of this new procedure is an irregularity which vitiates the whole trial—Phuman v Emp 7 Lah L J 114 26 P L R 460 26 Cr L J 1158 The words inserted by the Amending Act of 1923 indicate the intention of the Legislature that sufficient time should be given to the accused to consider whether he wishes to cross examine any of the prosecution witnesses after the framing of the charge and it is only in special cases that the Magistrate can require him to state forthwith if he so wishes—Ram Chandra v K E, 5 Pat 110 27 Cr L J 499

Recording reasons —Where the accused is represented by a pleader from the outset he may generally be asked under this section if he wishes to cross examine forthwith, for the simple reason that the accused will not be prejudiced, and it is convenient to arrange a date for the subsequent attendance of the prosecution witnesses before they disperse If, however, he is asked forthwith, with a view to recalling the witnesses forthwith, fuller reasons will be required, because it is usually convenient for the accused to have an interval in which to study the deposition already on record, and discover material for cross examination of the witnesses If an accused is not represented by a pleader, reason must be shown for not postponing the question to the next hearing by which time he can have consulted a pleader Where the accused who was not represented by a pleader was required forthwith to state if he wished to cross-examine, and the Magistrate did not record his reasons, held that this was an illegality vitiating the trial, and not a mere irregularity curable by sec 537 —In re Raju Achari, 51 M L J 687, 28 Cr L J. 12 The Allahabad High Court, however, holds that the failure of the Magistrate to follow these provisions strictly amounts to no more than an irregularity in procedure, and where the irregularity does not result in a failure of justice, it does not affect the legality of the trial Thus, the witnesses for the prosecution were examined on the 10th May, and cross-examined on the same day and the accused also made their statementson the same day On that day the accused were not represented by counsel The Magistrate did not record any reasons for requiring the accused to cross examine the prosecution witnesses on the same day There was a subsequent hearing on 19th May, on which day the accused were represented by counsel, but no application was made on behalf of the accused to resummon the prosecution witness s Held that this showed that the accused had not been prejudiced by having being required by the Magistrate to cross examine the prosecution witnesses on the 10th May, consequently the trial was not illegal, although the Magistrate did not record reasons—Chhajju v Emp. 49 All 316 25 A L J 111, 28 Cr L J 229 The Lahore High Court is also of opinion that although this section (as amended in 1923) lays down that the Magistrate shall record his reasons for requiring the accused to state forthwith whether they wish to cross examine the prosecution witnesses, still the omission to record the reasons does not render the trial illegal if it has not caused any prejudice to the accused—Ghasiti v K E 6 Lah 551 27 Cr L J 408

If summons case tried as a warrant case —Where an inquiry commenced as a warrant case and the accused curtailed their cross-examination of prosecution witnesses under the impression that they would have a further opportunity of cross examining them, but no offence triable as a warrant case having been disclosed the Magistrate closed the case and convicted the accused as in a summons case it was held that it was the duty of the Magistrate to allow the accused an opportunity of completing the cross examination before proceeding with the case—In re Appanu, 16 Cr L J 250 (Mad)

plaint in respect of the summons case and on being requested by the accused to recall the prosecution witnesses for their further cross examination refused to do so it was held that the refusal was illegal and the accused must certainly have been prejudiced by the same The privilege conferred by this section is a substantial one and when denied it is for the prosecution to shew that there was no prejudice—In re Ralla'a idi Sobhanadri 39 Mad 503 16 Cr L J 510

838 Time of cross examination —If an accused person desires to recall and cross examine the witnesses for the prosecution the time at which he should express such desire is when the charge is read over to him—Faiz Ali v Koromdi 7 Cal 28 See also Note 837 supra The accused should cross examine the witnesses for the prosecution before he enters upon his defence But of course it is open to the Magistrate to allow cross examination at any subsequent stage before the case has been closed—Inder v Emp 37 Cal 236 The accused may after the charge has been drawn up and the witnesses for the defence have been examined recall and examine the witnesses for the prosecution—Venkayya v Q 4 Mad 130 See sec 257 But although it is in the discretion of the Magistrate to recall the witnesses at a subsequent stage of the case the accused has no right to insist upon the witnesses being recalled—Faiz Ali v Koromdi 7 Cal 28

Any remaining witnesses —The words any remaining witnesses do not refer only to those witnesses who have been named by the complainant under sec 252 (2) these words are wide enough to include any witness who according to the prosecution is able to support its case though he has not been summoned provided he is not sprung upon the defence all on a sudden and sufficient opportunity is given to the accused to prepare for the cross examination of such witness—Emp v Percy Burn 11 Bom L R 1153 10 Cr L J 530

839 Discharge of prosecution witnesses —A Magistrate ought not of his own motion to discharge the witnesses for the prosecution until the accused person has exercised or waived his right of cross examination—Q v Lall Mahomed 6 N W P 284 Q v Ram Kishan 25 W R 48 Witnesses for the prosecution should not be discharged until the Court has ascertained whether their cross examination after the charge will be desired—Bridhichand v Lakhmichand 8 N L R 63 13 Cr L J 554 Where it becomes necessary to adjourn the hearing the Magistrate should inquire of the accused if he desires to exercise his right of recalling the witnesses for the prosecution or consents to the discharge of all or any of them If the accused consents to their discharge he is not entitled to have them re summoned as a matter of right—Lall Mahomed 6 N W P 284 Emp v Baldeo 2 All 253 If the Magistrate did not so inquire and there was no sufficient proof that the accused consented to the discharge the accused would be entitled to have the witnesses whom he desires to cross examine re summoned—Lall Mahomed 6 N W P 284

840 Expenses —This section gives the accused an absolute right to recall witnesses for cross examination at the expense of the prosecution and it is not open to the Magistrate to order the accused to pay costs

841 Defence —After the cross examination is over, the accused should be called upon to enter upon his defence It is not a proper procedure to call upon the accused to enter upon his defence before he has cross examined the witnesses for the prosecution—Bridhichand v Lakhmichand 8 N L R 65 So also the practice of examining the witnesses for the prosecution after the defence is closed to bolster up the prosecution if it appeared that the evidence was prejudicial is highly deprecated—Radhamadhab v Emp 15 C W N 414

Adjournment for defence —According to the provisions of secs 256 and 257 the accused is entitled as a matter of right to ask for an adjournment after a charge has been framed against him to enable him to adduce evidence in support of his defence—Sk Emtaz Ali v Jagat 1 C W N 313 Where a trial is commenced as a warrant case it should be concluded by the procedure laid down in this chapter for warrant cases and the Magistrate acts illegally in concluding the trial as a summons case and convicting the accused without giving him an opportunity to have his witnesses produced by giving him the adjournment asked for—M ... Teli v Emp ... L T 482

842 Sub-section (2)—Written Statement —Where certain legal ... oners convicted under section 17 (1) of the Criminal Law Amendment Act XIV of 1908 for being members of an Association called the ... Volunteers Association which was declared by the Government to be an unlawful association under sec 15 (2) (b) of that Act, and were then called upon by the High Court to show cause why they should not be removed or suspended from practice under clause 8 of the Letters Patent, whereupon one of them proposed to file a written statement, held that the proceedings under clause 8 of the Letters Patent were not of a criminal nature, in the sense that the rules of procedure of a criminal trial such as the filing of a written statement under sec 256 (2) of the Criminal Procedure Code were not applicable to them and the respondent's written statement could not therefore be received—In re Abdul Rashid 4 Lah 271

A written statement filed by the accused cannot take the place of the examination of the accused which is imperative under sec 342 See notes under that section under heading Written statement

Process for compelling production of evidence at instance of accused

257. (1) If the accused, after he has entered upon his defence, applies to the Magistrate to issue any process for compelling the attendance of any witness for the purpose of examination or cross-examination, or the production of any document or other thing, the Magistrate shall issue such process unless he considers that such application should be refused on the ground that it is made for the purpose of vexation or delay or for defeating the ends of justice Such ground shall be recorded by him in writing

Provided that when the accused has cross examined or had the opportunity of cross examining any witness after the charge is framed, the attendance of such witness shall not be compelled under this section unless the Magistrate is satisfied that it is necessary for the purposes of justice.

The procedure of this section applies to summary trials and the accused is entitled to have processes issued for compelling the attendance of prosecution witnesses for cross examination when he is called upon to enter on his defence if they have not been cross examined before—Nepal v Emp, 22 Cr L J 271 (Cal)

843. Isssue of process :—The language of this section is imperative A Magistrate has no discretion to refuse to issue process to compel the attendance of any witness unless he considers that the application should be refused on the ground specified in this section—Emp v. Purushottam, 26 Bom 418 The Magistrate must summon every witne named in the list He cannot arbitrarily limit the number of witnesses to be examined—Purshottam 26 Bom 418 Thus where the accused put in a list of 72 witnesses and the Magistrate ordered him to choose 12 of them it was held that the Magistrate s order was arbitrary and illegal—Narayana v Emp 31 Mad 131

Once the Magistrate has issued summons he is bound to assist the accused in enforcing the attendance of the witnesses If the witnesses do not obey the summons the Magistrate cannot refuse to issue a second summons—Q. E v Dhanarjoy, 10 Cal 931 Gohar v Emp 1894 P R 28 Sohara v Emp 1922 P L R 5 22 Cr L J 501, Md Din v Emp 1922 P L R 6 22 Cr L J 497 Bhomar v Dirambar 6 C W N 518 Q E v Shankarkha Ratanlal 594 Emp v Ruknuddin 4 All 53 Mahammad Din v Emp 9 C W N cxxix Amrit Modal v Emp 1 P L T 490 It is the duty of the Court to see that the summonses or warrants are duly executed If the witnesses do not attend the accused can insist upon the Court to issue fa the process Where the witnesses cited by the accused failed to attend and it appeared that the summonses were not duly executed but the Magistrate proceeded to give judgment remarking that it was the business of the accused to take suitable steps for bringing his witnesses before the Court held that the conviction of the accused was illegal and must be set aside—Bijoy v Emp 19 A L J 915 When once a Court has issued a summons to a witness under this section, and the witness fails to appear it is not justified in dispensing with the evidence of the witness on the ground that at the most he would merely support the accused in his statement—Sohara v Emp 1922 P L R 5 Cr L J 501

844 Refusal to summon prosecution witnesses —An absolute right of cross-examination of the prosecution witnesses is not conferred by this section The Magistrate can refuse to allow the accused to recall such witnesses for cross-examination if he considers that it is made for the purpose of vexation or delay or for defeating the ends of justice But it lies upon the party who thinks himself aggrieved to show that the ends of justice have been frustrated in consequence of the refusal to recall the prosecution witnesses for cross examination—Nilkanta v Q E 20 Cal 469

Where the accused was given an opportunity under section 256 to cross examine the prosecution witnesses but he refused to do so leaving no option for the Magistrate but to close the case and after the case was closed the accused applied to cross examine the prosecution witnesses held that the accused s attitude was deliberately designed to harass the Court, and that the Magistrate would be justified in refusing the application—Iyasa Rao v K E 21 M L J 583 (F B) Where the witnesses for the prosecution were subjected to a very lengthy and strict cross-examination before the framing of charge the Magistrate was right in declining to re-summon those witnesses if he was of opinion that the application to re-summon the witnesses was made for vexation etc —Q E v Govind Ratanlal 930 Nilkanta v Q E 20 Cal 469 Ramsakal v Emp 26 Cr L J 1627 (Cal) but unless the Magistrate considers that the application to re-summon the witnesses is made for the purpose of vexation or delay the accused is entitled to have the prosecution witnesses summoned for cross examination —Mormohan v Brahim, 51 Cal 1034 (1047) 26 Cr L J 384 and the Magistrate cannot refuse to summon the witnesses merely on the ground that they were fully cross examined before—Sreenath v Emp 4 C W N 41 Madhu v Naurat 4 C W N 351

The proviso to sub-section (1) is to the effect that when an accused has cross examined or had the opportunity of cross examining any witness after the charge has been framed the attendance of such witness shall not be compelled under this section unless the Magistrate is satisfied that it is necessary for the ends of justice The mere fact that it might have been possible from a cross examination of the prosecution witnesses to have extracted from them something which might have been of advantage to the accused is not a sufficient ground to enable the Magistrate to recall those witnesses it must appear that there was to be obtained from the witnesses sought to be cross examined something which would have materially affected the result of the trial—Ajo Mian v K E 6 P L T 626 A I R 1925 Pat 696 27 Cr L J 353

The mere fact that the accused s lawyers had previously declined to cross examine such witnesses or the mere fact that such witnesses were not cross examined before does not compel a Court to summon them for to do so would be to render the proviso meaningless—Ibid

After he has entered upon his defence —It is only after the accused has entered upon his defence that the Magistrate can in his discretion refuse the application of the accused on the ground that it is made for the purpose of vexation or delay or for defeating the ends of justice—Zamiruddin v Ram 27 Cal 370

845 Examination of defence witnesses —A Magistrate cannot refuse to examine a defence witness who is present in Court if he is requested by the accused to do so—Emp v Nagar 4 Bom L R 461 Though it is competent for a Magistrate to decline to summon witnesses for the defence under this section it is not competent for him to refuse to examine the defence witnesses on the ground that their evidence is unnecessary—Emp v Narba appa 14 Bom L R 300 Where in a trial involving a capital charge the accused is denied his right to have his defence witnesses examined in Court it must be held that it has resulted in a failure of justice and the conviction ought to be set aside and a re trial ordered—Ayyavali v Emp 45 M L J 305 If a witness is unable to attend the Court owing to illness and he appears to be an important witness the Magistrate should ascertain whether it will be possible for that witness to attend the Court within a reasonable time and if not then his evidence should be taken on commission—Jamuna Singh v K E 3 Pat 591 (594) 25 Cr L J 1255 A I R 1925 Pat 55 A Magistrate cannot refuse to summon witnesses cited by the accused on the ground that they are implicated in the charge—Ram Sahie v Sunker 15 W R 7 or on the ground that the accused is unable or refuses to pay the costs of the witnesses—Debi Singh v Emp 24 Cr L J 831 (Pat) or on the ground that the Magistrate is of opinion that they will not be able to give any reliable evidence one way or the other (without giving any reason for holding such opinion)—Arumugam v Emp 12 Cr L J 548 (1911) 2 M W N 192 or on the ground that they are living at a great distance—Ayyaiah v Emp 45 M L J 305 24 Cr L J 840 The Magistrate cannot refuse process to a defence witness merely because he thinks that no useful purpose will be served by summoning that witness—Ganpat v Emp 24 Cr L J 686 (Lah) Where after a case on both sides having been closed the Magistrate summoned a witness to give evidence whereupon the accused prayed to have certain witnesses summoned to rebut the evidence of the Court witness held that the Magistrate was bound to summon such witnesses and could not refuse to do so on the ground that the accused had stated at the close of his case that he did not wish to examine any more witnesses—Dina Mahton v Sheo Dayal 6 Cal 714

If a Magistrate rejects the application for summoning the witnesses he should specify his reasons for such refusal If he fails to record the reasons the conviction and sentence will be set aside—Sreenath v Emp 4 C W N 241 Manmohan v Bankim 51 Cal 1044 (1047) In re Sat Narain 3 All 392 Q E v Ram Charan 1895 A W N 40 Debi Singh v Emp 24 Cr L J 831 (Pat) Abdul Jabbar v Emp 25 Cr L J 310 A I R 1925 Cal 80

It is a sufficient compliance with the requirements of this section if the Magistrate states facts which led him irresistibly to the conclusion that the application was for no other purpose than that of vexation or delay or defeating the ends of justice although he does not say expressly that the application was made for that purpose—Wahid Ali v Emp 11 C W N 789 Where a Magistrate rejects an application after recording on it too late this is a sufficient compliance with this section—Kudrat Ulla v Emp 30 Cal 781 13 Cr L J 218

846 Cross-examination —The accused in a warrant case has three opportunities of cross examining the prosecution witnesses once (under sec 252) before the charge is framed secondly under section 256 after the charge is framed and under section 257 the accused is given the third opportunity of cross examining the prosecution witnesses unless the Magistrate decides that the application for cross examination is vexatious—Ramyad v K E 5 P L J 94 21 Cr L J 814 Harisas v K E 45 Mad 449 (363)

Where on a refusal by the Magistrate to resummon the prosecution witnesses for cross examination the accused cited those witnesses on their own behalf as defence witnesses and then proceeded to cross examine them, but were disallowed by the Magistrate it was held that the mere fact that the accused had been compelled to treat the witnesses for the prosecution as their own witnesses did not change their character and that although the accused were compelled to obtain their attendance as witnesses for the defence they were really prosecution witnesses and summoned under sec 257 for the purpose of cross examination and the Magistrate was wrong in refusing to allow their cross examination—Sheo Pratab

Conviction

(2) Where in any case under this Chapter the Magistrate does not proceed in accordance with the provisions of Section 349 or Section 562, he shall, if he finds the accused guilty, pass sentence upon him according to law

Change —Sub section (2) has been amended by section 73 of the Cr P C Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 A similar amendment has been made in sec 245 (2) and sec 306 (2)

849 Acquittal —An order of acquittal can be recorded only after a charge has been drawn up and not before—Q v Japit 2 W R 25 Emp v Ranchhod 37 Bom 369 But an omission to prepare a charge does not invalidate an order of acquittal—Hanuman v Ahmad Ali 1881 A W N 142 If however a warrant case is tried as a summons case and no charge is framed the acquittal amounts to a discharge under section 253—Emp v Jadu 1886 A W N 260

After a charge is framed the Magistrate can pass no other order except that of acquittal or conviction He cannot pass an order of discharge Even if he discharges the accused the discharge would amount to an acquittal—Taba v Hirba 1883 P R 29 Sreeramah v Veerasalingam 35 Mad 585, Bishambar v Emp 1 O W N 705 So also an order of dismissal of complaint would amount to an acquittal—In re Jai Lal 5 C L R 359

Where a Magistrate passes an order of acquittal under this section the Sessions Judge cannot treat it as an order of discharge and direct a commitment of the accused under sec 436 (now 437)—Appara v Emp 43 Mad 330 21 Cr L J 91

An order of acquittal can be passed in a warrant case only when after the frame of a charge the Magistrate is of opinion that the evidence is insufficient to justify a conviction It is not competent to a Magistrate to enter an order of acquittal in a warrant case on a private complainant's offering to withdraw from the prosecution in a non compoundable case—Emp v Ranchhod 37 Bom 369 14 Cr L J 77 The acquittal must be based on the finding that the accused is not guilty the Magistrate cannot acquit the accused merely because the complainant is absent Where a charge has been framed against the accused and the latter have entered upon their defence and produced some defence witnesses they cannot be acquitted on account of the absence of the complainant—Ram Bakhsh v Jairam 27 O C 316 26 Cr L J 264 1 O W N 613 But where after a charge is framed the complainant is absent and it is obvious that the complainant has no desire to proceed with his complaint the Magistrate should acquit the accused and not merely discharge him—Emp v C ... 1 O W N 586 26 Cr L J 400 See also Note 852 under sec 250

850 Conviction —An accused must be convicted on the strength of the case made against him and not in consequence of his inability to put forward proof of his innocence—Reg v Jerkoo Ratanlal's Although a Magistrate has thought fit to frame a charge he is not bound convict the accused person merely because the latter does not produce any rebutting evidence If he feels reasonable doubt as to the guilt of the accused he is bound to acquit him—Q E v Charbasapa Ratanlal 854

It is not necessary that the conviction or acquittal should be by the same Magistrate who drew up the charge—Emp v Kudrutulla 3 Cal 495

Sentence —See notes under sec 245

Absence of complainant

259 When the proceedings have been instituted upon complaint, and upon any day fixed for the hearing of the case the complainant is absent, and the offence may be lawfully compounded or is not a cognizable offence, the Magistrate may in his discretion, notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, at any time before the charge has been framed, discharge the accused

Change —The italicised words have been added by section 74 of the Cr P C Amendment Act XVIII of 1923

Principle of section —The primary reason of passing the order of discharge is that the absence of the complainant raises a presumption that the complainant does not wish to proceed with the prosecution—Harun v Abdul 12 Cr L J 184 (Sind)

851 Scope of section —It is not in every warrant case that a Magistrate will be competent to pass an order of discharge on account of the absence of the complainant The warrant case must fall under this section—Gorinda v Dulall 10 Cal 67 that is the case must be instituted upon complaint and the offence must be compoundable without the leave of the Court or non cognizable

All warrant cases would be governed by this section and the fact that a summons instead of a warrant has been issued in the first instance will not exclude that case from the operation of this section and bring it under Chapter XX—Nund Lall v Bhagirutty 10 W R 31

*Under the old law if the case was not compoundable no order of dis*charge could be passed—Emp v Yankya 13 Bur L T 244 22 Cr L J 753 Ramphal v K E 17 O C 18 15 Cr L J 230 Under the present section however it is not always necessary that the offence must be compoundable If the offence is a non cognizable one an order of discharge may be passed

No withdrawal of complaint —This section applies only where the complainant is absent and does not provide for cases in which the complainant wants to withdraw the complaint No withdrawal of complaint is permitted in warrant cases If however in a warrant case the Magistrate considers that although the charge is not groundless there is little likelihood of the case being pursued to a successful termination, he can consult the District Magistrate who would if advisable, instruct the

Public Prosecutor under section 494 to withdraw the case—Maung Thin v U Po 5 Rang 136 28 Cr L J 649

The principle underlying the provisions dealing with non compoundable or cognizable warrant cases is that whether instituted on complaint or otherwise the final responsibility for the conduct of such cases rests with the State and that where there is reasonable ground for believing that an offence has been committed once the machinery of law has been set in motion the right of arresting its progress rests with the State alone An application for withdrawal of complaint by the complainant is not entertainable—Maung Thin v U P Po 5 Rang 136 28 Cr L J 640

852. Absence of complainant —If the complainant is absent the Court is not bound to wait till the end of the day in order to give the absent complainant an opportunity of appearing—Kullah v Pir 2 Mad 356 But a slight delay in attending the Court especially where on a day the Court sat earlier than usual would not be a proper ground of discharge—Q E v Dajila Ratanlal 988

The Magistrate can discharge under this section if no charge has been framed But if a charge has been framed and the complainant is absent it is not legal to discharge the accused without hearing the evidence for the defence The Magistrate ought to admit the accused to bail and enforce the attendance of the complainant—Q E v Nanaji Ratanlal 5 ; Q E v Mhalari Ratanlal 84, Once a charge has been framed it is the duty of the trial Court to proceed with the trial even in the absence of the complainant and to convict or acquit the accused on the merits—Narain v Mina Singh 27 Cr L J 312 (Lah) Nabi Baksh v Emp 25 Cr L J 87 (Lah) Where after a charge has been framed both parties are absent the proper procedure for the Magistrate is to get the accused arrested under a warrant and then decide whether he is guilty or not and not to discharge the accused and then direct the taking of proceedings under sec 514 for forfeiture of his bond—Emp v Godha 1 O W N 5

In a warrant case after the charge has been framed the position of the complainant is reduced to that of a witness and he cannot be asked to pay the costs of an adjournment necessitated by his absence—Nabi Baksh v Emp, 25 Cr L J 87 A I R 1924 Lah 617

853 Discharge —The proper order is one of discharge An order of striking off the case is not a proper order under this section—Kunji Lal v K E, 17 O C 18 If a summons case and a warrant case are tried together, the proper order is one of discharge and not one of acquittal—Raghavalu v Sugaram 41 Mad 727

The Magistrate has a discretion to discharge the accused But in exercising this discretion in discharging the accused he should see whether there is a prima facie case against the accused if there is such a case the Magistrate should convict if he discharges for the sole reason that the complainant is absent his order is illegal—Emp v Kura 1891 A W N 116 Harun v Abdul 12 Cr L J 181 (Sind) If the absence of the complainant is due to his death the Magistrate has a discretion in a proper case to allow the complaint to be continued by a proper and fit complainant

instead of discharging the accused—Mahomed Azam v Emp, 28 Bom. L R 288 A I R 1926 Bom 178

854 Fresh complaint —The discharge under this section does not amount to an acquittal and a Magistrate who has passed the order of discharge can re hear the case on fresh complaint—Chinnathambi v. Gnanaan, 28 Mad 310, Emp v Chinna Kaliappa, 29 Mad 126, Raghavelu v Singaram, 41 Mad 727 In re Rudra Gowd 18 M L J 561, Dwarka Nath v Beni Madhal 28 Cal 652 Mir Ahmad v Md Askari, 29 Cal 726 Balchand v Chandoomal 8 S L R 196 Asgar Ali v Akbar Ali, 26 Cr L J 1040 (Nag)

Further inquiry —A District Magistrate is competent under section 437 (now 436) to revive a case which has been dismissed by himself under this section and make it over to a subordinate Magistrate for trial—Bidhu v Mati Sheikh 28 Cal 102

A District Magistrate can order further inquiry if he thinks that the discharge was improper—Q E v Daula Ratanlal 988 Reg v Sidya, Ratanlal 76 Q E v Budhya Ratanlal 145 Harun v Abdul, 12 Cr L J 184 as for instance where the complainant was prevented from appearing owing to circumstances beyond his control (e g, by reason of floods) and the Magistrate discharged the accused—Harun v Abdul 12 Cr L J 184 He can order further inquiry even if no additional evidence is disclosed—*Q. CHAPTER XXII

OF SUMMARY TRIALS

855 Change of procedure from Chap. XX or XXI to Chap. XXII —There is no section of the Code which expressly sanctions a change of procedure from a trial under Chap XXI to one under Chap XXII but there is also no section which expressly prohibits such a change The change of procedure is certainly not contemplated or sanctioned by the Code, but the High Court will regard it as a mere irregularity, which will not vitiate a trial unless it has occasioned a failure of justice Thus, in a case the Magistrate commenced the trial of the accused under Chap XXI, but after framing the charge he continued the trial under Chap XXII It was held that this change of procedure was a mere irregularity and where there was no failure of justice the High Court would not interfere in revision—Adoo v Crown, 10 S L R 185

So also, where a complaint was made of an offence not triable sum-of justice, and the High Court refused to interfere—Q E v Rangasami 22 Mad 459 But in Gosta Behary v Baistam, 26 C W N 831, it was held that such a change of procedure in the midst of the trial was prejudicial to the accused, and that there should be a retrial

Power to try summarily.

260. (1) Notwithstanding anything contained in this Code,—

(a) the District Magistrate,

(b) any Magistrate of the first class specially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government, and

(c) any Bench of Magistrates invested with the powers of a Magistrate of the first class and specially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government, may, if he or they think fit, try in a summary way all or any of the following offences :—

(a) offences not punishable with death, transportation or imprisonment for a term exceeding six months ;

(b) offences relating to weights and measures under Sections 264, 265 and 266 of the Indian Penal Code ;

(c) hurt, under Section 323 of the same Code ;

(d) theft, under sections 379, 380 or 381 of the same Code, where the value of the property stolen does not exceed fifty rupees ;

(e) dishonest misappropriation of property under Section 403 of the same Code where the value of the property misappropriated does not exceed fifty rupees ;

(f) receiving or retaining stolen property under Section 411 of the same Code, where the value of such property does not exceed fifty rupees ;

(g) assisting in the concealment or disposal of stolen property, under Section 414 of the same Code, where the value of such property does not exceed fifty rupees ;

(h) mischief, under Section 427 of the same Code ,

(i) house trespass, under Section 448, and offences under Sections 451, 453, 454 456 and 457 of the same Code,

(j) insult with intent to provoke a breach of the peace, under Section 504, and criminal intimidation, under Section 506, of the same Code,

(k) abetment of any of the foregoing offences,

(l) an attempt to commit any of the foregoing offences when such attempt is an offence,

(m) offences under Section 20 of the Cattle Trespass Act 1871 [*]

Provided that no case in which a Magistrate exercises the special powers conferred by Section 34 shall be tried in a summary way

(2) When in the course of a summary trial it appears to the Magistrate or Bench that the case is one which is of a character which renders it undesirable that it should be tried summarily the Magistrate or Bench shall recall any witnesses who may have been examined and proceed to re hear the case in manner provided by this Code

856 Magistrates empowered —The District Magistrate of Bangalore has no power to tr European British subjects summarily under this section as his powers are confined to those conferred on him by the declarations of the G G in Council and the power to try European British subjects summarily under this section is not included in such powers—In re Jeremiah 39 Mad 942 16 Cr L J 773 Under the present law however all such restrictions have been removed

Where an Assistant Commissioner of a disctrict who was before his going to England on furlough authorised to exercise summary powers in a certain local area was on his return from furlough posted to another local area as a first class Magistrate it was held that he had no jurisdiction to exercise summary powers in the latter area—In re Tursooram 2 Cal 117 But see sec 40 as now amended

Presidency Magistrates —The provisions of this chapter do not apply to trials before Presidency Magistrates—Q E v Abdul Ratanlal 539

Responsibility of Magistrates —The responsibility thrown on Magistrates entrusted with summary powers is very great and the responsibility of those who have to entrust them with such powers is equally great Magistrates who are sufficiently alive to the responsibilit entrusted to them will take care that the procedure or the record is not made more summary than what the law has laid down—Q E v Mukund 21 All 189

857 Offences triable summarily —Whether an offence is to be tried summarily or not is to be determined by the facts stated in the complaint as well as the sworn testimony of the complainant—Fazlul v Emp 36 Cal 67 Chandra Mohan v K L 27 C W N 148 The Magistrate is competent to dispose of a case summarily where the facts reported disclose an offence triable summarily without reference to the particular charge pressed—In re Meua 6 N W P 254 Golap Pandey v Bodhan 16 Cal 715 Q E v Vallabh 1 Bom L R 683

Where a person is charged with a graver offence the Magistrate ought not to cut down the offence to a less serious one at his own will in order to give himself jurisdiction to try it summarily—Emarel v Muhammad 24 W R 48 Sheo Bhajan v Mosaut 27 Cal 983 Bishu Shaik v Sa n 29 Cal 409 Ramanund v Koylash 11 Cal 236 Chandra Mohan v K L 27 C W N 148 In re Chunder Seekor 1 C L R 434 Ghamman v Emp 1888 P R 5 Thus a charge of dacoity cannot be treated as one of unlawful assembly for the purpose of trying it summarily—Dwarkanath v Nalu Das 21 W R 89 see also Q E v Lakshman Ratanlal 670 Barkat Khan v Crown 1907 P L R 21 Sharma v Emp 6 Bur L T 137 14 Cr L J 462 So also no Magistrate is entitled to split up an offence into its component parts for the purpose of giving himself summary jurisdiction thereby depriving the prisoner of his right of appeal—Emp v Abdul Karim 4 Cal 18 Where the value of the property stolen exceeded Rs 50 the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to reduce it to Rs 50 in order to give himself jurisdiction to try it summarily—Q v Butleh Ah 2 W R 65

Where neither the complaint nor the evidence adduced in a case of criminal trespass (sec 457 I P Code, which is triable summarily) shows the actual offence which the accused intended to commit and the only finding which could be arrived at is that the accused intended to commit an offence punishable with imprisonment the conviction of the accused in a summary trial cannot be held to be illegal on the ground that the intention of the accused might have been to commit an offence which cannot be tried summarily—Madhab Chandra v Emp 53 Cal 738 27 Cr L J 193

Joint charge of summary and non summary offences —Where an accused person is charged with offences not triable summarily along with offences triable summarily the Magistrate cannot disregard the former offences and proceed to try the case summarily—Ramanand v Koylash 11 Cal 236 Ghamman v Emp, 1888 P R 5 Contra—Q E v Jiwan 10 All 55 where it has been held that the mere fact of the complainant charging the accused with summary offences along with non summary ones will not oust the summary jurisdiction of the Magistrate

Where the accused was charged with summary as well as non summary offences but the Magistrate tried the accused summarily for the offence triable summarily and ignored the non summary offence held that it would have been preferable had the Magistrate proceeded regularly and tried the accused upon both the charges but as there was no miscarriage of justice in the present case, a retrial need not be ordered—G— v Hamila 31 C W N 383

Summary trial of not summary offences—Effect.—Where a Magistrate deliberately disregards the offence complained of which is an offence not triable summarily and tried it summarily his proceedings are absolutely void under section 530 (g). The conviction and sentence will be set aside and a new trial under the regular procedure directed—Chandra Mohan v K E 27 C W N 148 Kailash v Joynuddi 5 C W N 252 Emp v Ram Narain 46 All 446

Property of value not exceeding fifty rupees.—Where a box containing fifty Rupees was stolen and the price of the box was annas eight the theft was of property exceeding Rs 50 in value (i e Rs 50 8 annas) and could not be tried summarily—Q v Bu leh Ali 22 W R 65. Since a tenant is entitled to the exclusive possession of the whole produce until it is divided under sec 71 of the Bengal Tenancy Act his complaint against the landlord for theft for having cut and carried away paddy worth Rs 88 of which the latter was entitled to one half cannot be summarily tried by a Magistrate as the value of the property in this case must be regarded as Rs 88 and not Rs 44 only—Shaikh Haboo v Sk Hariman 1 P L J 230 20 C W N 1212 17 Cr L J 473 theft of property valued at more than Rs 50—Bu leh Ali 22 W R 65 Dipchand v Emp 14 N L R 190 Sk Haboo v Sk Karimax 1 P L J 230 under clause (i) of this section an offence under section 457 I P C (house breaking by night in order to commit theft) is triable summarily but if the property stolen is worth more than Rs 50 a summary trial would be improper—Dipchand v Emp 14 N L R 190.

a summary offence combined with a charge of previous conviction—Anonymous 2 Weir 324

860 When summary trial undesirable or improper —A summary trial is undesirable in a case where a large number of correspondence has to be gone into and the case is by no means of a simple character—Dina Nath 35 All 173 or in a case in which from the nature of the dispute and the plea taken by the accused it is apparent that complicated questions of right and title and production of documentary evidence are involved—Bhim Bahadur v Emp 1 P L T 121 Parmeshwar v Emp 3 P L T 347 Maung Sheue v Emp 2 Bur L J 55 24 Cr L J 929 Emp v Tirthdas 6 S L R 170 13 Cr L J 771 A summary procedure is also undesirable where the accused is a deaf and dumb person—In re a deaf and dumb man 8 Bom L R 849 A summary trial is also improper where the Magistrate takes cognizance of the case from his own knowledge or suspicion and holds the trial on inadequate materials—Emp v Hamed 3 C W N cccxxx Kanhaiya Lal v K E 1905 P L R 31 It is also undesirable in offences of a very serious nature—Crown v Allahrakho 6 S L R 101 Dipchand v Emp 14 N L R 190 It is improper where the charge is a serious or complicated one and the trial goes on for a considerable time and a local inquiry has to be made or a large number of witnesses and accused persons are examined—Emp v Fastmji 23 Bom L R 984 Ghasita Mal v Crown 3 Lah L J 316 In re Isser Chunder 25 W R 65 Rahimtulla v Emp 19 S L R 136 26 Cr L J 1026

A summary trial is also improper in a case where the conviction of the accused may entail further serious consequences (e g dismissal from service) Thus where a Police officer of many years standing was charged with criminal intimidation with a view to prevent a person from giving evidence against certain grave offenders and was tried summarily and convicted held that the Magistrate did not exercise a sound discretion in trying the case summarily and depriving the accused of the privilege of an appeal—Subramanya Ayyar v Q 6 Mad 396 So also where a village Kulkarni is charged with offences under sections 176 and 202 I P C (intentional omission to give information of offences to a public servant) the Magistrate should not try the accused summarily in as much as cases under section 202 are complicated and the coviction of the accused may entail further serious consequences (dismissal from srvice)—Q E v Hari Gopal Ratanlal 778 Q E v Paman Ratanlal 784

261. The Local Government may confer, on any Bench of Magistrates invested with the powers of a Magistrate of the second or third class, power to try summarily all or any of the following offences —

Power to invest Bench of Magistrates invested with less power

(a) offences under the Indian Penal Code, Sections 277, 278, 279, 285, 286, 289 290, 292 293, 294, 323, 334, 336, 341, 352 426, 447 and 504 ,

(b) offences against Municipal Acts, and the conservancy clauses of Police Acts which are punishable only with fine or with imprisonment for a term not exceeding one month with or without fine,

(c) abetment of any of the foregoing offences ,

(d) an attempt to commit any of the foregoing offences, when such attempt is an offence

The italicised words at the end of clauses (a) and (b) have been added by section 75 of the Cr P C Amendment Act XVIII of 1923

A Bench of Magistrates cannot try summarily any other offence except those mentioned in sec 260 and this section—Q v Babheki 21 W R 12 Havaldar v Jagu Mian 9 Cal 96

262 (1) In trials under this Chapter, the procedure prescribed for summons cases shall be followed in summons cases, and the procedure prescribed for warrant cases shall be followed in warrant cases, except as hereinafter mentioned

Procedure for summons and warrant cases applicable

(2) No sentence of imprisonment for a term exceeding three months shall be passed in the case of any conviction under this Chapter

Limit of imprisonment

261. Procedure —The scanty procedure laid down in this Chapter should be strictly followed—Q v Johree 22 W R 28 Q E v Trug 15 Mad 83 Magistrates should take care that the procedure and record are not made more summary than what the law has laid down—Q E v Mukundi 21 All 189 Damodar v Emp, 3 P L T 499 Thus where the Magistrate without issuing process or making a record of the proceedings and without dismounting from the horse on which he was riding convicted and fined a man summarily for causing obstruction in a public way, it was held that the procedure adopted by the Magistrate was illegal—Q E v Frugadu 15 Mad 83

In a summary trial of a warrant case, the Magistrate must adopt the procedure laid down in Chapter XXI (except that he has not to frame a charge and is not bound to record the evidence of the witnesses) Therefore the provision of section 256 which gives the accused an absolute right of cross examination of the prosecution witnesses after they have been examined in chief must apply to a summary trial of warrant cases—Titu Sahu v Emp 1 P L T 652 21 Cr L J 630 The accused is entitled to have processes issued for compelling the attendance of the prosecution witnesses for cross examination—Nepal v Emp 2? Cr L J 271 (Cal)

In a summary trial of a warrant case though a charge need not be framed the accused person cannot be called dilatory if he delays to name his witnesses until he has heard the evidence for the prosecution and found that the Magistrate considers the evidence a substantial basis for charging him—Q E v Keru Ratanlal 768 In a warrant case tried summarily the Magistrate ought to grant an adjournment if desired by the accused, to enable him to summon the witnesses for the defence under sec 257, unless the Magistrate considers that the application is made for the purpose of vexation or delay—Ameer Batcha v K E ? L B R 20

In a summons case the Magistrate must not only state the charge to the accused, but explain it to him—Emp v Sain Kaig 1 Bur S R 591 the record must show that this has been done and the answer of the accused must be recorded as nearly as possible in the words used—Ibid

862. Sentence —In a summary case a sentence of imprisonment for more than three months can not be awarded, if an adequate sentence cannot be passed the case should not be tried summarily—P Ka v K E 4 L B R 338 9 Cr L J 23 The limit of three months applies only to a substantive sentence, a Magistrate is therefore competent to award a sentence of imprisonment in default of fine in addition to the three months imprisonment—Emp v Asgher Ali 6 All 61

Fine of any amount may be imposed there is no limit to the amount of fine awardable in a summary trial—Dina Nath v Emp 35 All 171

Solitary imprisonment can also be awarded as part of the sentence Section 262 does not interfere with the Court's powers under section ? I P C to order solitary confinement—Emp v Annu Khan 6 All 83

A Magistrate is competent to take security bond under sec 106 on conviction in a summary trial—Emp v Lachman 1886 A W N 1?? Meghu v K E 7 O C 338

The High Court in revision can enhance the sentence passed in a summary trial to two years ? the limit to which a Presidency Ma?

trate or a Magistrate of the first class can pass sentence—Bom H C Cr R 30 7 1883 See sub-section (3) of sec 439

Compensation :—Compensation may be awarded under section 250 to the accused in a trial held summarily—Q E v Basava 11 Mad 142

263 In cases where no appeal lies the Magistrate or Bench of Magistrates need not record the evidence of the witnesses or frame a formal charge; but he or they shall enter, in such form as the Local Government may direct the following particulars —

Record in cases where there is no appeal

(a) the serial number,

(b) the date of the commission of the offence;

(c) the date of the report or complaint;

(d) the name of the complainant (if any);

(e) the name parentage and residence of the accused,

(f) the offence complained of and the offence (if any) proved and in cases coming under clause (d) clause (e), clause (f) or clause (g) of sub-section (1) of Section 260, the value of the property in respect of which the offence has been committed;

(g) the plea of the accused and his examination (if any),

(h) the finding, and in the case of a conviction, a brief statement of the reasons therefor;

(i) the sentence or other final order; and

(j) the date on which the proceedings terminated.

863. Record —Although the object of a summary procedure is to shorten the course of trial it is nevertheless incumbent on the Magistrate to put on record sufficient evidence to justify his order—Aimuddi v Q. E 27 Cal 450, Kali Md v Emp 10 C W N 79, Q E v Gopal, Ratanlal 778 If the particulars required by this section are not clearly given in a judgment in a summary trial convicting the accused the judgment is defective and the conviction cannot stand—Ghulam v Emp, 23 Cr L. J 161.

The record should be written by the Magistrate himself, there is no provision enabling him to delegate this duty to a clerk—Subramanya Ayyar v Q, 6 Mad 396 The record should be made at the time of trial, and not afterwards The admission of the accused sh also be recorded at once—Q E v Erugadu, 15 Mad 83 "District trates should satisfy themselves from time to time by examina records of summary trials that the law regarding such trial observed and especially that Magistrates do not exceed their jurisdiction in this regard' —Cal G R & C O p 16

864. Evidence —In a summary trial of a non appealable case the Magistrate need not record the evidence of witnesses in writing—Emp v Shomeshar, 2 Cr L J 336 1905 A W N 143, Howard v Rustomji Ratanlal 334 But this does not mean that this section excuses a Magistrate from hearing the evidence of witnesses If the accused denies the charge, the complainant and his witnesses must be examined, and the case must be decided upon the effect of their evidence though the evidence need not be recorded—Jabbar v Tomiz, 39 Cal 931, 16 C W N 984

Notes of evidence —If, at the commencement of the trial the Magistrate is unable to determine whether the proper sentence to be passed should be an appealable one or not, he must make a memorandum of the substance of the evidence of each witness as his examination proceeds But if he can, at this stage, determine that the sentence will be in any event, non appealable, he need not record the evidence If however he actually does so, the notes of the evidence form part of the record of the case and cannot be destroyed by him Where the Magistrate had destroyed such record, the High Court in revision was unable to form an opinion on the propriety of the conviction and set it aside—Satish Chandra v Emp, 48 Cal 280, 32 C L J 451, 22 Cr L J 462, Atma Ram v Emp 49 All 131, 28 Cr L J 88 Lal Chand v Emp, 26 Cr L J 1454 (Nag) But the Oudh Chief Court is of opinion that in non appealable cases the Code does not require the Magistrate to place upon record the notes of the evidence and therefore where the Magistrate made notes of the evidence for his own use which he destroyed after the case was disposed of held that the Magistrate committed no irregularity The whole object of entrusting qualified Magistrates to try certain cases summarily will be defeated if they were to follow a procedure similar to the procedure required in cases which are not tried summarily—Bhawani v Emp, 3 O W N 946 28 Cr L J 76 In another case the Allahabad High Court has laid down that the destruction of the notes whether in appealable or non appealable cases does not amount to any illegality on the part of the Magistrate Under section 263 the Magistrate need not record any evidence and therefore need not keep any notes of the evidence under sec 264 the Magistrate has only to record the substance of the evidence The notes of evidence jotted down by the Magistrate to assist his recollection do not form part of the substance of the evidence In cases under secs 263 and 264 the Magistrate is perfectly free to take such notes as he pleases or if he prefers to take none at all and whether he takes them or whether he does not, whatever notes he makes are his private property which he can destroy if he pleases—Mantoo v Emp, 49 All 261, 25 A L J 140 28 Cr L J 97 (per Walsh J) (dissenting from 48 Cal 280) A distinction should be drawn between 'recording of evidence' and making a few notes of evidence If he records the evidence formally, he must keep it on record but if he jots down a few notes, possibly unintelligible to anybody but himself merely f r

purposes of reference those notes would not be a record of the evidence and need not a d should not be kept on the record even in appealable cases—Ibid (per Boys J) This case has been followed in Ismail v Emp 25 A L J 346 28 Cr L J 442 The Bombay and Madras High Courts and the Sind Court are also of opinion that the rough and in complete notes prepared by the Magistrate in a summary trial are out side the record and cannot and should not be transcribed and attached to the record—Emp v Chima lal 29 Bom L R 710 Nagoor Kanni v Sithu 52 M L J 32 28 Cr L J 138 Rahimtullah v Emp 19 S L R, 136 26 Cr L J 10 6

865 Frame of charge —This section exempts the Magistrate from framing a charge in cases in which no appeal lies—Natabar v K E 27 C W N 9 3 25 Cr L J 12 0 Although it is not necessary under this section to frame a charge still the accused must be called upon to answer to the particulars of the offence charged and the Magistrate must specify the offence complained of in such a way as to give the accused notice of what is charged against him—Jharu Sheikh v K F 16 C W N 696 13 Cr L J 24

866 Particulars of the offence —The record should show clearly the precise nature of the offence and should be complete in all parti culars—Emp v Madho 1882 A W N 59 The facts found by the Magistrate must show what offence has been committed by the accused —Lalit Mohan v Chunder Mohan 3 C W N 281 Mahtab v Emp 1887 P R 7 Sher Singh v Emp 1889 P R 5 Further the record however brief must show the necessary ingredients of the offence charged —Kuchi v K E 3 L B R 3 2 Cr L J 375

The offence charged the offence proved and the reasons for con viction must be recorded in such a manner as to enable the Revision Court to say aye or no from within the four corners of the record itself whether the offence charged is an offence in point of law whether the offence proved is an offence in point of law and whether the reasons for the conviction are good and sufficient—Kath Md v Emp 10 C W N 79 3 Cr L J 178

Under clause (f) the value of the property must be set forth The Magistrate ought to direct his mind to the question and satisfy himself that the property in r spect of which he was trying the accused was less than Rs 50 in value It is not enough that it is ascertainable from the records—Brij Nandan v Emp 6 P L T 114 A I R 1927 Pat 227

867 Examination and plea of accused —See clause (g) The plea of the accused must be recorded om ssion to record the plea will vitiate the conviction—Shib Chandra v Nanda Ram 9 C W N lxxvi

In all warrant cases there must be some examination of the accused as laid down in sec 342 Sec 263 does not give the Magistrate any discretion whether he will examine the accused or not The words if any in clause (g) are intended for summons cases and do not apply to warrant cases in the latter cases the examination is imperative—Mahomed Hossein v Emp 41 Cal 743 Parmeshwar v Emp 3 P L T 347 23 Cr L J 440 Even the plea of the accused cannot take the place of the examination of the accused and render it unnecessary—Parmeshwar 3 P L T 317 But the Sind and Nagpur Courts are of opinion that the examination of the accused is imperative in all summary trials whether of summons or of warrant cases The words "if any" in this section do not limit the obligation imposed on Courts by sec 342, or render it inapplicable to summary trials, but merely have reference to those cases in which owing to the admission or plea of accused (sec 243) or owing to the weakness of the evidence called in support of the prosecution (sec 245, 253) the accused can either be convicted on his own plea without the taking of evidence or acquitted on the evidence without the examination referred to in sec 342—Emp v Nabu, 20 S L R 34 (F B), 26 Cr L J 1554 Bhagwan v Emp 22 N L R 65, 27 Cr L J 632

The Magistrate is not required to record a full statement of this examination of the accused A brief note of the examination is sufficient—Bhawani v Emp 3 O W N 946 28 Cr L J 76

868. Finding —In summary trials it is very important that there should be clear findings on questions of fact, because it is only through such findings that the Court of Revision can form its own judgment with regard to the legality or otherwise of the proceedings of the trial Court—Emp v Jagmohan, 24 Cr L J 916 (Oudh)

869 Reasons for conviction —The Magistrate, in a summary trial must, in recording the reasons for the conviction state them in such a manner that the High Court may in revision judge whether there were sufficient materials before the Magistrate to justify the conviction—Emp v Muhammad Hanif, 1899 A W N 81, Emp v Mohan 1885 A W N 213, Lalit v Chunder, 3 C W N 281 Emp v Girwar 1883 A W N 114, Emp v Lachman, 1886 A W N 181, Jagan Nath v Emp, 16 O C. 357 Emp v Panjab, 6 Cal 579, Emp v Bhikia 13 C P L R 17, Me Da Lu v Crown 1 L B R 208, Damodar v Emp, 3 P L T 499; Janaki v Raghunath, 19 Cr L J 719 (Pat) Magistrate should set out so much of the reasons that have influenced them as to satisfy the accused that the Magistrate has considered each of the ingredients of the offence necessary in law for the conviction to which the Magistrate has proceeded—Q E v Mukurdi, 21 All 189, Brijbasi v K E, 10 A. L J 251, Ram Harakh v Crown, 9 S L R 89, and while this should be recorded with brevity, the brevity should not be so as to tend to obscurity—Q E v Mukurdi 21 All 189 Thus a judgment in a single line is not a judgment according to law—Jankey v Emp 22 Cr L J 431 (Pat)

Failure to record a brief statement of reasons is fatal, and the whole proceedings are illegal and liable to be set aside—Dina Nath v Jogendra, 6 C W N 40, Emp v Panjab Singh, 6 Cal 579, Q E v Shidgauda 18 Bom 97, In re Dervish, 46 Mad 253, Maqsud v Emp, 1 P L T 716; K E v Mianjan, 24 O C 293, Emp v Bhikia 13 C P L R 17 Even the defect could not be cured by the Magistrate (Presidency) subsequently submitting the reasons to the High Court when the record was called for under section 441—In re Dervish Hossain 46 Mad 253, K E v Hatadhar, 9 C. W N lxxi But if the record submitted under section

441 disclosed sufficient grounds for the Magistrate s decision the High Court condoned the irregularity if no failure of justice had occurred—Dervish 46 Mad 253 (256) The Bombay High Court holds that the omission to record reasons for conviction on the part of the Bench Magistrates is only an irregularity which can be cured by sec 537 where there is clear evidence justifying conviction It is an omission which does not occasion failure of justice—Emp v Namdeo 26 Bom L R 1236 See also In re Thurman 20 L W 330 25 Cr L J 1084

Record in appealable cases

264 (1) In every case tried summarily by a Magistrate or Bench in which an appeal lies, such Magistrate or Bench shall, before passing sentence, record a judgment embodying the substance of the evidence and also the particulars mentioned in section 263

(2) Such judgment shall be the only record in cases coming within this section

870 Record —The record of the trial must be made at the time of the trial and not subsequently prepared after the close of the trial from memory or from rough notes -Q E v Erugadi 15 Mad 83 The judgment which is the only record in appealable cases must be written by the Magistrate himself He cannot delegate that duty to a clerk nor can affix his signature to the record or judgment by a stamp—Subramanya v Q 6 Mad 396

Where a Magistrate passes an appealable sentence he cannot make his record in the manner prescribed by sec 263 but must record the evidence and frame a charge Whereas in non appealable cases it is stated in so many words in sec 263 that no charge need be framed but in sec 264 which deals with appealable cases there are no words to this effect this omission when coupled with sec 262 is tantamount to a clear direction that the ordinary procedure in warrant cases is to be followed and a formal charge is to be framed—Natabar v K E 27 C W N 923 But in a more recent case the same High Court has expressed the opinion that there is no provision requiring the framing of a charge in a summary trial whether in appealable or non appealable cases Sec 264 states what the record shall consist of viz a judgment embodying the substance of the evidence and the particulars set out in sec 263 and in sec 263 it is not necessary to frame a formal charge In any case the omission to frame a formal charge under sec 264 would be cured by sec 535—Madhab Chandra v Emp 53 Cal 738 27 Cr L J 1295 In Kallu v Emp 26 Cr L J 1334 (Oudh) and Emp v Salig Ram 7 Lah 303 27 Cr L J 639 it is laid down that even in appealable cases it is not necessary to frame a charge and a similar view has been taken in Q E v Karu Ratanlal 768 and Titi v Emp 1 P L T 652 21 Cr L J 630

871 Substance of evidence —The Magistrate is not to record the substance of every separate deposition but he ...

prepared by a member of the Bench and signed as aforesaid shall be the proper record

(4) If the Bench differ in opinion, any dissentient member may write a separate judgment

The record must be written by the Magistrate himself see 6 Mad 3[illegible] cited under sec [illegible]

CHAPTER XXIII.

OF TRIALS BEFORE HIGH COURTS AND COURTS OF SESSION

A — Preliminary.

266 In this Chapter, except in sections 276 and 307, and in Chapter XVIII, the expression "High Court" means a High Court of Judicature established under the Indian High Courts Act, 1861, or the Government of India Act, 1915, and includes the Chief Court of Oudh, the Courts of the Judicial Commissioners of the Central Provinces and Sind and such other Courts as the Governor-General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, declare to be High Courts for the purposes of this Chapter and of Chapter XVIII.

High Court defined

The words Chief Court of Oudh have been added by the Oudh Courts Act (XXXII of 1925) and the other italicised words in the middle of the section have been added by sec 12 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act XII of 1923 The words and of Ch XVIII' at the end of the section were accidentally omitted when the Act of 1898 was framed and have now been added by sec 76 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923)

The Judicial Commissioner (e g of Sind) is a High Court only for the purposes of Chapters 18 and 23 but not for the purpose of C (Appeal) A Judicial Commissioner holding a sessions trial on the O Side is to be deemed a Sessions Judge and not a High Court purpose of Ch 31, so that an appeal will lie from his decis Bench of the Judicial Commissioner s Court—Khudabux v Cr L J 562 A I R 1925 Sind 249

Trial before High Court to be by jury

267. All trials under this Chapter before a High Court shall be by jury; and notwithstanding anything herein contained, in all criminal cases transferred to a High Court under this Code or under the Letters Patent of any High Court established under the Indian High Courts Act, 1861, or the Government of India Act, 1915, the trial may, if the High Court so directs, be by jury.

Trials before Courts of Session to be by jury or with assessors

268. All trials before a Court of Session shall be either by jury, or with the aid of assessors

Trial, ordinarily with assessors —In the absence of any Notification under sec 269 a trial in the Court of Session must be with the aid of assessors—1888 P R 18

872. Trial by jury and trial with assessors :—Difference :— In a trial by jury, the jury is the real tribunal and is aided by the Judge and in certain matters directed by the Judge but in a trial with the aid of assessors, the Judge is the sole tribunal and Judge of law and fact, and the responsibility of the decision rests solely with him, though in the decision of the case he is expected to take into consideration the opinion of each assessor In a trial by jury, the jury form a tribunal or body with a foreman, and the verdict is the verdict of the body, and when there is no unanimity among the members of the body, the opinion of the majority prevails as the verdict of the body But in the case of a trial with the aid of assessors the assessors do not form a body but each acts and expresses his opinion individually and the Judge is to invite the opinion of each separately and record it—K E v Thirumalai, 24 Mad 523, Q E v Jadub Das 27 Cal 295, Emp v Shanker, 11 Bom L R 710, 13 Cr L J 677, Jaisukh v Emp, 43 All 125 19 A L J 1, Jairam v Emp, 20 N L R 129 25 Cr L J 459 In a trial held with the aid of assessors, the individual opinion of each assessor is taken but in a trial by jury, the individual opinions of the membrs of the jury are never intended to be disclosed—Pub Pro v Abdul Hamid, 36 Mad 585, 15 Cr L J 197 But the law makes no distinction as to the procedure between a trial by jury and a trial with the aid of assessors, except as to the summing up of the case in the former and the manner in which the verdict in the former and the opinions of the asesssors in the latter are respectively taken—Emp v Mansing, 33 Bom 423

Trial when begins —A trial by jury or with assessors begins only when the charge has been read and the accused claims to be tried—Q E v Silva, 15 Bom 514

Local Government may order trials before Court of Session to be by jury

269 (1) The Local Government may, * * by order in the official Gazette, direct that the trial of all offences, or of any particular class of offences before any Court of Session, shall be by jury in any district, and may, * * revoke or alter such order

(2) The Local Government, by like order, may also declare that in the case of any district in which the trial of any offence is to be by jury, the trial of such offence shall if the Judge on application made to him or of his own motion so directs be by jurors summoned from a special jury list and may revoke or alter such order.

(3) When the accused is charged at the same trial with several offences of which some are and some are not triable by jury he shall be tried by jury for such of those offences as are triable by jury, and by the Court of Session with the aid of the jurors as assessors, for such of them as are not triable by jury

The words with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council which occurred in the first line of sub section (1) have been omitted by the Devolution Act XXXVIII of 1920 The words ' with the like sanction occurring near the end of that sub section have been deleted by the Repealing and Amending Act X of 1927

873 'Class of offences —The classes of offences referred to in this section are not restricted to the classification found in the Penal Code e g offences against the State offences against public tranquillity etc or to the classification found in this Code e g, bailable offences cognizable offences etc Offences may be classified according to the persons who commit them or according to the person or property against whom or which they are committed or in regard to the particular occasion in connection with which they are committed—Q L v Ganapathi, 23 Mad 632

Where by a Notification the Government directed that in a particular district an offence under sec 436 I P C was to be tried by jury and not with the aid of assessors held that an offence under sec 436 read with sec 149 I P C should also be tried by jury and not with the aid of assessors because an offence under sec 436 149 I P C is not a different offence from an offence under sec 436 I P C —Ramsundar v Emp, 7 P L T 178

874 Trial of jury-case with assessors and vice versa :—If a jury case is tried with the aid of assessors and no objection is taken at the trial the trial will stand good by virtue of sec 536 (2)—Q E v Ganapathi 23 Mad 632

So also the trial by jury of a case properly triable with assessors is not invalid on that ground—Emp v Mohim Chunder, 3 Cal 765 And *unless the accused objects to such procedure before the verdict is d*livered, he cannot be allowed to object with regard to it subsequently in appeal—Emp v Mansingh 11 Bom L R 350, 33 Bom 423, Gu

Chand v Emp 27 Bom L R 1416 27 Cr L J 650 The accused were charged under sec 412 I P Code which was an offence triable by jury and were tried by jury The jury however brought in a verdict of guilty under sec 411 I P Code which was an offence triable with the aid of assessors It was contended that the jury was wrong in convicting the accused for an offence triable with assessors and that the trial ought to have been held with the jurors as assessors under sec 269 (3) Held that sec 269 (3) did not apply as no charge was framed for an offence under sec 411 I P Code The conviction of the accused under sec 411 I P C was not illegal vide sec 238 Cr P Code—Gulab Chand v Emp (supra) Where an assessor case is tried by jury the Judge cannot treat the verdict of the jury as the opinion of assessors so as to be able to concur with the opinion of the minority if he disagrees with the opinion of the majority If the Judge disagrees with the opinion of the majority he must submit the case to the High Court under sec 307—Surja v Q E 25 Cal 555

875 Joint trial of jury case and assessor-case —Under sub section (3) an accused may be tried simultaneously at one trial by the jury for offences triable by jury and by the Judge with the aid of the same jurors as assessors for offences triable with the aid of assessors—In re Senmmalai 2 L W 933 16 Cr L J 717 But in such a trial the Judge must always preserve a distinction between the two cases (the jury case and the assessor case) and must not treat the whole case as a jury case He must separately record the verdict of the jury in the jury case and must separately record the opinions of the jurors as assessors in the assessor case If he disagrees with the verdict of the jury he must not send the whole case to the High Court but must send only the jury case under sec 307 and pass judgment with reference to the assessor case under sec 309—Emp v Vyankatsingh 9 Bom L R 1057 Q E v Deru Ratanlal 600 In such case it is desirable that the Judge should explain clearly to the jurors and assessors the double capacity in which they were acting—Sitaga v Weir 334 If in the course of such trial it appears that only one offence was committed viz an offence triable with assessors and the Judge tries the case with the jury and disagrees with the verdict of the jury he cannot send the case to the High Court under sec 307 but should pass judgment under sec 309 because he must treat the case as one triable with the aid of assessors and he must treat the jurors as assessors—Q E v Anga Valayan 22 Mad 15

Again in such joint trial of two cases (a jury case and an assessor case) all persons who would serve as jurors in the jury case must serve as assessors in the assessor-case Where the Judge after taking the verdict of the jurors in the jury case took only the opinion of two of them in the assessor case it was held that the Judge s procedure was illegal he should have taken the opinion of all the jurors as assessors—Ramkrishna v Emp 26 Mad 598 Similarly where in such joint trial the Judge selected five gentlemen as jurors in the jury case and two of them only as assessors in the assessor case it was held that the Judge acted illegally he ought to have taken all the five jurors as assessors in the assessor-case—Pingai v K E, 21 M L J 520

876 Transfer of case from jury-district to non-jury-district and vice versa —The words trial shall be by jury in any district mean that the trial shall be by jury if the case is tried in the district in which the notification is in force they do not mean that the case shall be tried by jury even if it is transferred from a jury-district to a district where jury trial does not prevail The High Court has power under sec 526 to transfer a sessions case from a jury district to a non jury district and section 269 does not in anyway limit that power but in such a case the trial in the latter district will be with the aid of assessors—Emp v Jumo 10 S L R 154 18 Cr L J 51

Similarly the High Court has power to transfer a case from a non-jury district to a jury district under section 526 (d) on the ground of convenience of parties and the High Court cannot refuse to do so on the ground that by such a transfer the accused will get the benefit of a jury trial where previously he had none—Durga Charan v Emp, 8 C L J 59

Trial before Court of Session to be conducted by Public Prosecutor

270 In every trial before a Court of Session, the prosecution shall be conducted by a Public Prosecutor

877 The prosecution shall be conducted by the Public Prosecutor, if the complainant engages a counsel the Public Prosecutor may always avail himself of the services of such counsel and in doing so he does not deprive himself of the management of the case—In re Narayan 11 B H C R 102 An Advocate of the High Court may appear on behalf of the prosecution in the Court of Session and may conduct the prosecution without being specially empowered by the District Magistrate for that purpose—In re Gungadhur 23 W R 14 But it is highly undesirable that the prosecution should be conducted by Police Officers—Q E v Ram Chander 13 W R 18

The provisions of this section are merely directory and therefore the omission to appoint a Public Prosecutor is merely an irregularity curable by sec 537—Q E v Ismail 1887 P R 35

B —Commencement of Proceedings.

Commencement of trial

271 (1) When the Court is ready to commence the trial, the accused shall appear or be brought before it, and the charge shall be read out in Court and explained to him, and he shall be asked whether he is guilty of the offence charged, or claims to be tried

Plea of guilty

(2) If the accused pleads guilty, the plea shall be recorded, and he may be convicted thereon.

878. Charge shall be read and explained —Where the charge is merely read out to the accused but not explained, the conviction will be quashed, especially in a case of trial for murder—Aiyaru v Q E, 9 Mad 61, K E v Trimbaka, 3 Bom L R 489 The charge should be read out and so explained to the accused that the Court is sure that he has understood the nature of the charge thoroughly and it is then only that he should be called upon to plead—Emp v Vaimbilee, 5 Cal 826, Gurrapu, 2 Weir 336 Jinga, 2 Weir 339, and the Judge ought to satisfy himself by interrogation of the accused, if necessary, that he fully understands the responsibility which he assumes in making a plea of guilty—Kesho Singh v K E, 20 O C 136, 18 Cr L J 742

The charge sheet to which the accused is called upon to plead is a very important document It should be drawn up and considered with extreme care and caution, so that the accused may have no doubt whatever as to the offences to which he is called upon to answer, and the Judge of the Appellate Court also may have no doubt upon the matter Every addition and alteration made in the charge has to be read over and explained to the accused—Jagdeo v Emp, 18 A L J 442, 21 Cr L J 410, 56 I C 58

Record of charge —On the record of a trial in a Court of Session there should be the charge, which under sec 271 has been read over and explained to the accused, and when this is not so, the record should contain an explanation of its absence The fact that this is an omission covered by sec 537 is not a sufficient answer—Jagdeo v Emp, 18 A L J 442

879 Plea —If there are two heads of a charge (e g if the accused is charged with the offence of culpable homicide or in the alternative with the offence of grievous hurt) the accused should not be called upon to plead in the alternative but to each of the heads of the charge separately Where in such a case he pleaded guilty to the second charge only (grievous hurt) and the Judge convicted him on that plea the conviction was set aside—Q E v Lakshman, Ratanlal 327

The accused must plead guilty or not guilty by his own mouth, and not through his counsel or pleader—Obhoy, 15 W R 42, Emp v Sursingh, 6 Bom L R 861, 1 Cr L J 939 Admission by a pleader, especially by a pleader engaged by the Court for the accused and not by the accused himself, is not binding on him—Q E v Sangaya, 2 Bom L R 751

After the accused has claimed to be tried any confessional statement made by him should be laid before the jury, such an admission should not be taken as a plea of guilty upon which a Judge may record a finding without taking the verdict of the jury—Anonymous, 2 Weir 334, Emp v Bai Nani 7 Bom L R 731

880. What is a sufficient plea —The accused must distinctly and unequivocally admit the guilt, otherwise it is not sufficient Where the accused instead of pleading guilty made a long rambling statement

more or less admitting the guilt it would be much safer if the Judge recorded a formal plea of 'not guilty' and proceeded to try the accused in the ordinary way—De kiv Imp 5 A L J 157 The plea must distinctly admit every fact necessary to constitute the offence Thus where the accused merely admitted that he beat his wife and she died but he did not say whether he had any intention of causing such bodily injury as was likely to cause death it was held that this was not a sufficient plea of guilty to a charge of culpable homicide because the intention was absent—Gurrapu 2 Weir 336 Emp v Chiria 8 Bom L R 240 Q v Sonaoolah 25 W R 23 If the prisoner pleads guilty but goes on to say that he did not commit the offence with which he is charged this is tantamount to a denial of the guilt and does not amount to a plea of guilty—Q v Mitan 11 W R 53 Where the prisoner admitted that he had accompanied the dacoits for some distance but returned back almost immediately and had nothing to do with the dacoity afterwards committed, it was held that such a statement did not amount to a plea of guilty—Q v Greedhari 7 W R 39 Where the plea of guilty is accompanied by qualifying statements, such a plea is not properly speaking a plea of guilty Thus where the accused said that he killed his wife but that he did so under grave provocations (e g in consequence of discovering her in an act of adultery) such a statement was not a plea of guilty to murder—Nearo v Q L 11 Cal 410 So also where the prisoner admitted the guilt but said that he had committed the offence under the influence of certain persons mentioned it was held that the plea was not one of guilty—Emp v Sardar 1886 A W N 66 Where the prisoner pleaded guilty but stated further that he committed the offence because he was subject to epileptic fits it was held that this was not a plea of guilty on which the accused could be properly convicted—Q v Mhatarya Ratanlal 698 Where the prisoner admitted that he killed his wife but stated that he was not in his right mind at the time it was held that this was not a plea of guilty—Q v Chett Ram 5 N W P 110

Partial plea of guilty —Where the accused is charged with having made two contradictory statements and he pleads guilty to one charge that does not show that he pleads not guilty in respect of the other charge It may be that both statements may be false In such a case the prisoner ought not to be allowed to elect which statement he shall admit to be false—Q v Gaub 8 W R (Cr Let) 6

Plea of not guilty —The accused can plead guilty under sec 271 or he can claim to be tried under sec 272 or he can refuse to plead which is taken to be the same as claiming to be tried The plea of not guilty is not recognized by this Code—Emp v Nirmal Kanta 41 Cal 1072 A plea of not guilty amounts to a claim to be tried

Record of plea —If the accused pleads guilty the plea should be recorded Where no such plea appears on the record the conviction is bad and must be set aside—Emp v Gopal 7 Cal 96 5 A L J 157

If the statement is made by the accused in a foreign language it is not necessary that the plea must be recorded in the words of that lang

Plea of guilty

(2) If the accused pleads guilty, the plea shall be recorded, and he may be convicted thereon

878 Charge shall be read and explained —Where the charge is merely read out to the accused but not explained the conviction will be quashed especially in a case of trial for murder—Atyaru v Q E 9 Mad 61 K E v Trimbaka 3 Bom L R 489 The charge should be read out and so explained to the accused that the Court is sure that he has under stood the nature of the charge thoroughly and it is then only that he should be called upon to plead—Emp v Vaimbilee 5 Cal 826 Gurrapu 2 Weir 336 Jinga 2 Weir 339 and the Judge ought to satisfy himself by inter rogation of the accused if necessary that he fully understands the respon sibility which he assumes in making a plea of guilty—Kesho Singh v K E 20 O C 136 18 Cr L J 742

The charge sheet to which the accused is called upon to plead is a very important document It should be drawn up and considered with extreme care and caution so that the accused may have no doubt what ever as to the offences to which he is called upon to answer and the Judge of the Appellate Court also may have no doubt upon the matter Every addition and alteration made in the charge has to be read over and explained to the accused—Jagdeo v Emp 18 A L J 442 21 Cr L J 410 56 I C 58

Record of charge —On the record of a trial in a Court of Session there should be the charge which under sec 271 has been read over and explained to the accused and when this is not so the record should contain an explanation of its absence The fact that this is an omission covered by sec 537 is not a sufficient answer—Jagdeo v Emp 18 A L J 442

guilty to a charge of culpable homicide not amounting to murder on grave and sudden provocation the Judge ought not to convict him for the latter offence, but should proceed to try him for the former offence—Q E v Malkari, Ratanlal 410

A plea of guilty should not be accepted in capital offences—Pala Singh v K E 1905 P R 54 Emp v Jarmia 19 Bom L R 356 In a case of murder it has long been the practice of the Court not to accept the plea of guilty for murder is a mixed question of fact and law Unless the Court is perfectly satisfied that the accused knew exactly what was implied by his plea of guilty the case should be tried, especially where the accused is an illiterate person—Dalli v Emp, 20 A L J 326 23 Cr L J 281 Sukha v Emp 20 A L J 669 In capital cases where there is doubt whether the persons who pleaded guilty to the charge of murder fully understood the meaning and effect of such plea the Judge should proceed with the trial and take evidence—Q E v Bhadu 10 All 119 A person may plead that he hit somebody who thereby died without necessarily admitting that he committed murder, for murder under the I P C requires a certain intention or a certain knowledge In such cases it is advisable not to convict solely upon the plea of the accused but to proceed to trial—Emp v Chinta 8 Bom L R 240 The Nagpur Court holds that it is not illegal to convict in a murder case on a plea of guilty and in each case the circumstances must be examined to see whether the plea of guilty is one which should have been acted on Where the accused is represented by a pleader and a trial is not claimed and the accused's answer amounts to a plea of guilty it is quite legal to convict him on that plea—Mantoo v Emp 24 Cr L J 570 (Nag)

882 Charge for one offence, conviction on plea for another —It is illegal to convict a person of an offence upon his own plea when there is no formal charge in respect of that offence Thus where an accused person was charged with the offence of murder and the charge was not proved but the Court convicted her of the offence of concealment of birth which it considered was admitted by her in her examination by the Court it was held that such conviction was illegal A charge of concealment of birth should have been framed and the accused tried thereon—Q E v Sarel Ratanlal 386

Postponement of conviction —Where an accused person pleads guilty, the Court should record his confession and forthwith convict him thereon If there are other persons being tried with him for the same offence, the Court should not postpone his conviction merely for the purpose of allowing the statements he may have made to be considered against the co accused It is against the spirit of the law to postpone his conviction so that he may technically be said to be tried jointly for the same offence with the other co accused, and any statement in the nature of a confession he may make may be used against them—Emp v Kheraj, 30 All 540, Surjan v K E, 12 A L J 1239 16 Cr L J 103, Sukdeb v K E 13 C W N 552 After a plea of guilty, a trial may be continued when it is thought necessary to ascertain the part taken by the accused in order to assess the punishment, but it is unfair to defer the conviction of the accused solely with the view of having his confession considered against his co accused who have pleaded not guilty—Q E v Paltua, 23 All 53

Trial ends, if plea accepted —If the Court accepts the plea of guilty and convicts the accused, his trial is at an end and he may be called as a witness against or for any person who has been accused along with him —Q E v Chinna, 23 Mad 151 Where in a joint trial of several persons, one of the accused pleads guilty, his statement affecting himself and the other accused is not entitled to be considered under sec 30 of the Evidence Act, for the statement following the plea of guilty ceases to be the statement of a person jointly 'tried,' because the trial ends, so far as he is concerned, with his plea—Q E v Lakhshmayya, 22 Mad 491, Kanhaiya v Crown, 1911 P R 15, Q E v Khandia, 15 Bom 66, Q E v Pahuji, 19 Bom 195 Vankatasami v Q, 7 Mad 102, Emp v Asootosh, 4 Cal 483 Munki v Amir, 2 C W N 749 Q E v Pirbhu, 17 All 524 Q E v Nirmal, 22 All 445, Q E. v Kallu, 7 All 160

C—Choosing a Jury

Number of jury

274 (1) In trials before the High Court the jury shall consist of nine persons

(2) In trials by jury before the Court of Session the jury shall consist of such uneven number, not being less than five or more than nine as the Local Government, by order applicable to any particular district or to any particular class of offences in that district, may direct

Provided that where any accused person is charged with an offence punishable with death, the jury shall consist of not less than seven persons and, if practicable, of nine persons

The word five has been substituted for three and the proviso has been added by sec 13 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act XII of 1923

In the Sessions Court the number should be any uneven number from five to nine which the Local Government may select Thus five should be substituted for three in section 274 as the minimum number of jury in a Sessions Court In murder cases before the Sessions Court we are of opinion that the number of jury should if practicable be nine —Report of the Racial Distinctions Committee Para 25

Jury for trial of European and Indian British subjects and others

275 (1) In a trial by jury before the High Court or Court of Session of a person who has been found under the provisions of this Code to be an European or Indian British subject, a majority of the jury shall, if such person before the first juror is called and accepted so requires consist, in the case of an European British subject of persons who are Europeans or Americans and, in the case of an Indian British subject of Indians

(2) In any such trial by jury of a person who has been found under the provisions of this Code to b an

European (other than an European British subject) or an American, a majority of the jury shall, if practicable and if such European or American before the first juror is called and accepted so requires consist of persons who are Europeans or Americans

This section has been redrafted by section 14 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act XII of 1923 Prior to the amendment it stood as follows —

In a trial by jury before the Court of Session of a person not being an European or an American a majority of the jury shall if he so desires consist of persons who are neither Europeans nor Americans

The reason of the amendment has been thus stated — The most difficult question for the Committee to decide is that of trial by the jury of European British subjects This is the point on which non official European opinion is most emphatic namely that it is essential that a mixed jury should remain both in the High Court and in the Sessions Court in all cases which are to be tried by jury under our proposals subject however to certain provisions and safeguards namely —The same law as to the composition of the jury shall apply to Indians as to Europeans that is to say the majority of the jury if an Indian accused so desires shall consist of persons who are not Europeans or Americans This is already the law in Sessions Court and section 275 should be so amended as to make it apply to the High Courts — Report of the Racial Distinctions Committee Para 25

885 This section must be read as controlled by the provisions of section 528B That section lays down that if a person does not claim to be dealt with as an Indian subject before the committing Magistrate he shall not assert the claim at any subsequent stage of the case It follows therefore that if an Indian subject does not claim to be dealt with as such before the committing Presidency Magistrate he will not be entitled to claim before the High Court to be tried by a jury the majority of which must be Indians according to the provisions of section 275—Emperor v Harendra 51 Cal 980 (991) 29 C W N 384 26 Cr L J 385 The same result will happen if the claim to be dealt with as an Indian subject is made before the Presidency Magistrate but is rejected by him—Ibid (at p 990)

Jurors to be chosen by lot

276 The jurors shall be chosen by lot from the persons summoned to act as such, in such manner as the High Court may from time to time by rule direct first pending the issue under this section of rules for any Court, the practice now prevailing in such Court in respect to the choosing of jurors shall be followed,

Provided that—

Existing practice maintained

secondly, in case of a deficiency of persons summoned the number of jurors required may, with the leave of the Court, be chosen from such other persons as may be present,

Persons not summoned when eligible thirdly, in a trial before any High Court in the town which is the usual place of sitting of such High Court

Trial before special jurors

(a) if the accused person is charged with having committed an offence punishable with death, or

(b) if in any other case a Judge of the High Court so directs the jurors shall be chosen from the special jury list hereinafter prescribed, and

fourthly, in any district for which the Local Government has declared that the trial of certain offences may be by special jury, the jurors shall in any case in which the Judge so directs, be chosen from the special jury list prescribed in Section 325

Change —In the third proviso the words in a trial sitting of such High Court have been substituted for the words in the presidency towns by sec 77 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 The object of this amendment is to include those High Courts which are not situated in Presidency Towns e g the High Courts at Allahabad Lahore Patna Rangoon Similar amendments have been made in sections 315 and 316

886 'Chosen by lot' —The object of the Legislature in choosing a jury by lot is to render impossible any intentional selection of jurors to try a particular case and the accused is entitled to a strict observance of the provisions contained in this section and sec 279 Irregularities in choosing the jury by lot affect the constitution of the Court and cannot be cured by sec 537—Brojendra v K E 7 C W N 188 Bradshaw v Emp 33 All 385 12 Cr L J 46 In Emp v Jhubboo 8 Cal 739 and 1917 M W N 1 however where the Judge himself selected the jurors instead of choosing them by lot it was held that such a procedure was merely irregular and the verdict would not be interfered with if no pre judice was caused to the accused and no objection was taken by him to such a procedure at the trial But this view has been disapproved of in 7 C W N 188

The persons who are to be chosen by lot ought to be selected from the entire number of persons summoned to act as jurors and the selection ought to be made from one box—Reg v Vithaldas 1 Bom 462

In order to nominate a jury for the trial of any prisoner or other person to be tried by a jury a Sessions Judge shall cause to be put together in one box cards or pieces of paper containing the names of all the persons summoned to attend except such of the said persons as shall have been excused by the Sessions Judge from serving on that day in consequence of their having served as jurors on the previous day or for any other cause Such cards or pieces of paper shall be as nearly as may be of equal size and shall bear the name of one person summoned to attend The Sessions Judge shall then in open Court, draw or cause to be drawn out of the said box one after another as many of the said cards or pieces of paper as may represent the number of jurors required to try the case and if any of the jurors whose names shall be so drawn shall not appear or if any be objected to and the objection be allowed then such further number shall be drawn as may be necessary to complete the number of jurors required for the case —Cal G R & C O p 19

Second proviso —The second proviso provides that in case of a deficiency of persons summoned the number of the jurors required may with the leave of the Court be chosen from such other persons as may be present If the Judge is unable to obtain a panel in the manner provided by the second proviso his duty is to postpone the trial and to summon jurors under the provisions of section 326 (2)—Brojendra v K E 7 C W N 188

The second proviso distinctly lays down that in case of deficiency of persons summoned other persons must be added to fill up the deficiency When out of 12 jurors summoned in a case only five attended and those five persons were empanelled as jurors and the Court proceeded to hear and decide the case held that the provisions of sec 276 were not complied with and the trial was vitiated The proper course for the Judge to follow was to choose some other persons who were present as jurors to add their names to those of the jurors who attended and from the whole body to choose the necessary quorum by lot to act as the jury in the case—Bholanath v Emp 44 C L J 511 28 Cr L J 194 Poson Ali v K E 31 C W N 1102 (1107) Emp v Bradshaw 33 All 385 The word required in the second proviso does not mean required to constitute the quorum for a jury but it means required to make up the minimum number of jurors summoned under section 326 to attend —Roson K E (supra)

But a contrary view has been taken in two other Calcutta cases Thus in a case triable by a special jury on the day fixed for trial out of 14 of the jurors summoned only three appeared Subsequently gentlemen who happened to be in the precincts of the Court were call as jurors, and the case was tried by them. Held that the procedure was not illegal. It is not necessary that the deficient jurors should be chosen by lot or from among persons who are on the jury list. The words "the jurors shall be chosen by lot" occurring in the first part of sec. 276 are not applicable to the second proviso—Govt. of Bengal v. Mucki Khan 29 C. W. N. 652, 26 Cr. L. J. 810. In another case, where of the persons summoned to act as jurors only five persons appeared and those five persons were appointed jurors, it was held that the procedure followed was not illegal and the trial was not vitiated. The provision of choosing jurors by lot is applicable only when the persons summoned to act as jurors are present in such number as to make it possible to choose them by lot, but when such number is not present, the Judge is to take the help of the persons present in Court to form the jury. The words "deficiency" and "number of jurors required" in the second proviso mean deficiency in the number of jurors required to make up the jury and not to make up a sufficient number for the purpose of selection by lot—Rakamal v. K. E., 31 C. W. N. 711 (715) (following Mucki Khan, 29 C. W. N. 652 and dissenting from Bholanath, 44 C. L. J. 541).

277. (1) As each juror is chosen, his name shall be called aloud, and, upon his appearance, the accused shall be asked if he objects to be tried by such juror.

Names of jurors to be called.

(2) Objection may then be taken to such juror by the accused or by the prosecutor, and the grounds of objection shall be stated:

Objection to jurors.

Provided that, in the High Court, objections without grounds stated shall be allowed to the number of eight on behalf of the Crown and eight on behalf of the person or all the persons charged.

Objection without grounds stated.

Where the Judge, instead of hearing and deciding objections, proceeded to exempt some of the persons present merely on their own representations, the procedure was irregular and the irregularity could not be cured by sec. 537—Brojendra v. K. E., 27 C. W. N. 185.

278. Any objection taken to a juror on any of the following grounds, if made out to the satisfaction of the Court, shall be allowed:—

Grounds of objection.

(a) some presumed or actual partiality in the juror;

(b) some personal grounds, such as alienage, deficiency in the qualification required by any law or rule having the force of law for the time being in force, or being under the age of twenty one or above the age of sixty years

(c) his having by habit or religious vows relinquished all care of worldly affairs,

(d) his holding any office in or under the Court,

(e) his executing any duties of police or being entrusted with police duties

(f) his having been convicted of any offence which in the opinion of the Court renders him unfit to serve on the jury

(g) his inability to understand the language in which the evidence is given or when such evidence is interpreted the language in which it is interpreted,

(h) any other circumstance which in the opinion of the Court renders him improper as a juror

887 Clause (d) —The fact that a per on s a clerk in the office of he Mag trate of the d tri t is n t fl nt t l sq lify him from sitting s a juror—Emp v Rocha 7 Cal 4

279 (1) Every objection taken to a juror shall be decided by the Court and such decision shall be recorded and be final

Decision of objection

(2) If the objection is allowed the place of such juror shall be supplied by any other juror attending in obedience to a summons and chosen in manner provided by Section 276 or if there is no such other juror present then by any other person present in the Court whose name is on the list of jurors or whom the Court considers a proper person to serve on the jury

Supply of place of juror against whom objection allowed

Provided that no objection to such juror or other person is taken under Section 278 and allowed

887A Under sub sect on (1) the trial Judge has a wide discretion in he matter of accepting or overruling objections to jurors and his deci on is final—Govt of Bengal v Mi cl 29 C W N 652 26 Cr L J 819

It is provided in the clause ( ) that the place of a juror may be taken y any other person present in Court whose name is on the l st of juro or whom the Court considers a proper person to serve on the jury This shows that the legislature contemplated the possibility of a person not in the jury list being chosen to serve on the jury in the case of emergency —Govt of Bengal v Muchu Khan (supra) Under clause (2) the Court may allow some non summoned persons present in Court to serve in the jury where by reason of challenges or other causes such as some of them being excused no summoned jury is left to take the place of the last challenged juror In such an eventuality some other person present in Court may be empanelled But this is to take place only in the exceptional conditions stated and in emergent circumstances—Roson Ali v K E 31 C W N 1102 (1107)

280 (1) When the jurors have been chosen, they shall appoint one of their number to be foreman

Foreman of jury

(2) The foreman shall preside in the debates of the jury deliver the verdict of the jury, and ask any information from the Court that is required by the jury or any of the jurors

(3) If a majority of the jury do not, within such time as the Judge thinks reasonable, agree in the appointment of a foreman, he shall be appointed by the Court

281 When the foreman has been appointed, the jurors shall be sworn under the Indian Oaths Act, 1873

Swearing of jurors

282 (1) If, in the course of a trial by jury, at any time before the return of the verdict any juror, from any sufficient cause is prevented from attending throughout the trial, or if any juror absents himself and it is not practicable to enforce his attendance, or if it appears that any juror is unable to understand the language in which the evidence is given or when such evidence is interpreted the language in which it is interpreted, a new juror shall be added, or the jury shall be discharged and a new jury chosen

Procedure when juror ceases to attend, etc

(2) In each of such cases the trial shall commence anew

888 Unable to understand language —Where a juror was deaf and blind he was held to be unable to understand the language of the trial and was discharged and the case was tried de novo—Q E v Virasami 19 Mad 375

Absence of witness —The Judge can discharge the jury owing to the absence of a juror but he cannot do so owing to the absence of a witness—In re P ta uams 4 Bom L R 030

Trial fall c mmence anew—Where a juror was discharged and replaced by another and the trial was not commenced anew but the Judge called the witnesses who had been examined read out their statements to them which they admitted to be correct and the trial proceeded it was held that there was no valid trial—K E v Narain 36 All 481 15 Cr L J 538

But the trial which becomes null and void owing to the incompetence of a juror under this section is not null and void for all purposes Thus if a witness has given false evidence during such trial he can be prosecuted under sec 193 I P C The nullity of the trial will not affect the liability of the witness for prosecution for perjury—Q E v Virasami 19 Mad 375

889 Discharge of jury for misconduct —After the close of the prosecution case and before the counsel for the accused called his witnesses the foreman of the jury informed the Court that they had arrived at an unanimous verdict (which was unfavourable to the prisoner) and did not desire to hear anything more The Court remarked that the conduct of the jury in arriving at a verdict unfavourable to the prisoner before they had heard the evidence which the accused wished to call for was unfair to the accused and against all principles of justice The counsel for the accused thereupon pressed for the discharge of the jury for such misconduct and for empanelling a fresh jury But the Standing Counsel remarked that the case was not covered by sec 282 or sec 283 (which were the only sections relating to discharge of the jury during the trial) and the jury could not therefore be discharged but under instructions from the Advocate General he entered a nolle prosequi—Emperor v Oli Muhammad 7 C W N xxxi The point was therefore left undecided in that case but in a recent case of the same High Court the question arose again and it has been decided that although section 282 or section 283 of the Criminal Procedure Code does not provide for the discharge of the jury for improper conduct during the trial (as for instance where some of the jury were seen one day associating with the man who was looking after the case for the accused) nor is it specifically provided by any other section of the Code still the Sessions Judge has an inherent power to discharge the jury for misconduct But such power is not to be exercised lightly nor until the Judge has satisfied himself by such form of inquiry as in the circumstances he can adopt that reasonable grounds for exercising such a power exist—Rahim Sheikh v Emp, 50 Cal 872 In England also the Judge has the power to discharge the jury for improper conduct e g where one of the jurors had left the box without leave—Reg v Ward (1867) 10 Cox C C 573

The discharge of the jury for misconduct is not equivalent to a verdict of acquittal but the prisoner can be remanded for a fresh trial and a new jury should be empanelled—Reg v Davison (1860) 8 Cox C C 360 Rahim Sheikh v Emp 50 Cal 872 If the jury have ducted themselves they may be discharged and a new trial dire

a new jury, but no such action can be taken unless the misconduct has been established by what is regarded as evidence in the eye of the law—Mamfru v Emp, 51 Cal 418 (430, 431)

Discharge of jury in case of sickness of prisoner

283. The Judge may also discharge the jury whenever the prisoner becomes incapable of remaining at the bar.

D.—Choosing Assessors.

Assessors how chosen

284. When the trial is to be held with the aid of assessors, not less than three and, if practicable, four shall be chosen from the persons summoned to act as such.

Change—The italicised words have been substituted for the words "two or more" by section 15 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act XII of 1923. "We add the further recommendation that in all cases triable with the aid of assessors there shall be, if possible, four, and in any case, not less than three assessors"—Report of the Racial Distinctions Committee Para 26

890. Choosing assessors—The choice of jurors is by lot, but the choice of assessors is entirely with the Judge, who in the exercise of this power should pay every consideration to any reasonable objection raised, although the law does not, as in the case of jurors, provide objections being taken to an assessor In the selection of assessors, regard must be had to the nature of the case, to the person tried, and to the public feeling excited They ought not to be pleaders nor young men fresh from the College and devoid of experience They ought to be persons of independent conditions in life, men of judgment and experience—Q v Ram Dutt 23 W R 35

Though there is no express provision for objecting to the selection of an assessor, still there is no reason why an objection of presumed or actual partiality should not be allowed, particularly when it is urged at the time of selection of the assessor The opinions of assessors are of great value both to the Judge who tries the case and to the Superior Courts It is therefore necessary as an elementary principle that they should be above suspicion The relationship of landlord and tenant or of master and servant creates an incapacity in a person to sit as an assessor in a case An objection to an assessor that he is a tenant of the person interested in the prosecution is a valid objection—Shudhan v Emp, 3 P L T 32

From the persons summoned—The assessors must be chosen from the persons summoned to act as such The Judge is not competent to select any one to act as an assessor who has not been summoned under section 326 or 327 Where out of several persons summoned the Judge selected only one, and he selected two other persons at random from the persons present in Court it was held that the trial was bad as it was practically conducted with one assessor only—Q E v Badri 1894 A W N 207 Man Singh v Emp, 35 All 570 Balak Singh v K E 3 P L J 141 Where in the absence of assessors duly summoned the Judge appointed the Nazir of the Court to act as an assessor the trial was held to be illegal as the Nazir was not duly summoned, and in choosing assessors there is no provision corresponding to the second proviso to sec 276 (in choosing jurors)—Khub Singh v K E 13 O C 337, 11 Cr L J 724 But where a person was summoned to serve as an assessor on a particular date in a particular case and he failed to appear in Court on that date but appeared on a subsequent day when another trial had to commence and he was selected to act as an assessor in that trial his selection would not be improper—Chulla v Emp 17 Cr L J 17 (All)

Number of assessors —Under this section as new amended there must be at least three assessors A trial held with less than the required number of assessors is null and void and the illegality cannot be cured by section 537—Jairam v Emp 20 N L R 129 25 Cr L J 459 Pragi v Emp 11 O L J 245 Ram Narain v Emp 27 O C 213 26 Cr L J 359 A trial commencing with the aid of one assessor is not a legal trial and sec 537 cannot cure the defect—K E v Jairam 25 Bom 694 Q E v Sitia 15 Bom 514 If there were two assessors (which was the required number prior to the present amendment) but one of them was deaf and blind there was properly speaking only one assessor and the trial was invalid—Q E v Balu Lal 1 All 106 Anonymous 2 Weir 340

This section lays down that the number of assessors should be not less than three and if practicable four Where four assessors are not chosen it is right that the Court should give reasons in the order sheet to explain the impracticability of choosing four But the trial with three assessors without the record of these reasons is not irregular but is still according to law—Jamal v Emp 7 P L T 14 26 Cr L J 713

Trial without assessors —The trial will be invalid if a portion of the trial which consists in the taking of additional evidence takes place after the discharge of the assessors—Q E v Ram Lal 15 All 136

Procedure when assessor is unable to attend

(2) If all the assessors are prevented from attending or absent themselves the proceedings shall be stayed and a new trial shall be held with the aid of fresh assessors

All the witnesses sent up by the committing Magistrate must be examined and the Sessions Judge is not competent to pick and choose among them It is the duty of the Court to examine all such witnesses to produce at the trial witnesses who have been examined before the committing Magistrate, when there is reason to believe that the evidence of such witnesses is not true, but it would be proper for the comm

Magistrate to send up those witnesses to the Sessions Judge so that the credit due to them may be determined by the Judge himself—Ramasami 2 Weir 378 (379) In Q E v Stanton 14 All 521 however it has been held that the prosecution is not bound to examine a witness examined before the committing Magistrate except when the committing Magistrate has stated in his order of commitment that he has been influenced by that particular witness in ordering the committal No further duty is imposed on the prosecution than that of having in attendance every witness examined before the committing Magistrate so that the witness may be cross examined or not by the defence counsel as he chooses

Where there is no ground for disbelieving the witnesses all the witnesses must be examined and the trial cannot be stopped and no final opinion as to the falsehood or insufficiency of the prosecution evidence ought to be arrived at until all the witnesses have been examined Thus where after the examination of some of the witnesses the Judge asked the jury whether they wished to hear any more evidence and they stated that they did not believe the evidence and wished to stop the case and the Judge recorded a verdict of acquittal it was held that the procedure was wrong All the remaining witnesses ought to have been examined before any verdict was recorded—Q E v Ramalingam 20 Mad 445

If some of the prosecution witnesses examined before the committing Magistrate are not examined before the Sessions Judge by the Public Prosecutor still the accused is entitled to have them put into the box for cross examination—Nagendra v K E 27 C W N 820 When the Public Prosecutor does not call a witness examined before the committing Magistrate on the ground that he will not speak the truth he should explain to the Court that this is the reason, and should tender him for cross examination In the absence of any such explanation or other reasonable grounds apparent on the face of the proceedings inferences unfavourable to the prosecution will be drawn from the non production of the witness—Q E v Tulla 7 All 904

The witnesses must be orally examined in Court before the jury it would be a faulty procedure to dispense with their examination and to read over to the jury the recorded statement of the evidence given by them at a previous hearing of the case If such a procedure is adopted the jury would have no opportunity of gauzing the value of the testimony of each individual witness by his general demeanour A witness may show a suspicious hesitancy in answering certain questions put by the counsel for the prosecution or he may show an equally suspicious excess of zeal Both Judge and jury are undoubtedly influenced to a considerable extent by the manner in which a witness gives his evidence in chief and moreover the demeanour of a witness during the examination in chief may be of the greatest help to the counsel for the defence in his cross-examination All these advantages would be lost if a mere record of the evidence is read over, instead of examining the witness—Lyme v Crown 4 Lah 382 (at p 386) And so in an English case Sir John Coleridge has made the following remarks on the impropriety of reading

over at the retrial of a case the Judge's note of evidence given by the witnesses at the previous trial instead of examining them fully —' Those of their Lordships who have been used, on motions for new trials to hear the Judge's note of the evidence read probably know well by experience how difficult it is to sustain the attention or collect the value of particular parts when that evidence is long But this is not all The most careful note must often fail to convey the evidence fully in some of its most important elements those for which the open and oral examination of the witness in the presence of the prisoner Judge and jury is so justly prized It cannot give the look or manner of the witness his hesitation his doubts his variations of language his confidence or precipitancy his calmness or consideration it cannot give the manner of the prisoner, when that has been important upon the statement of anything of particular moment It is in short the dead body of the evidence without its spirit which is supplied when given openly and orally by the ear and eye of those who receive it —Attorney General v Bertrand (1867) 36 L J P C C 51 (57) L R 1 P C 520 (535)

Where a Judge is succeeded by another and the latter decides to hold the trial de novo he must examine the witnesses orally again If the witnesses depositions in the previous trial are merely exhibited in the second trial without actually examining them de novo the procedure is illegal even the fact that the accused consented to such a course in order to save cross-examination will not cure the illegality—Umar Hatee v. K E 46 Mad 117

The evidence must be taken in the presence of the accused It is an irregular procedure to examine witnesses in the absence of the accused and then to read over to the accused the evidence recorded in his absence the accused being allowed to cross examine the witnesses Such a procedure prejudices the accused in his cross examination and defence—Emp v Ram Piari 5 C P L R 33

The prosecution must give positive evidence of the guilt of the accused and cannot depend upon the weakness of his adversary's case The Court is concerned not so much with the truth or otherwise of the theory suggested by the accused as with the case for the prosecution The proof of the case against the prisoners must depend for its support not upon the absence or weakness of explanation on their part but upon the positive and affirmative evidence of their guilt that is given by the Crown—Mamfru v Emp 51 Cal 418 (425 426)

Witnesses not examined before the committing Magistrate —The prosecution cannot demand as of right that any witness not examined in the preliminary inquiry should be called and examined at the trial But the Court if it considers necessary may call and examine him—Q E v Hayfield 14 All 212 But the mere fact that a witness has not been examined before a committing Magistrate is no ground for refusing to take the evidence of such witness There is nothing in the Code which restricts the examination at the trial only to the witnesses examined before the committing Magistrate But the prosecutor should as a matter of justice and fairness to the accused state in his opening address the name of such witness—Q E v Khan Md 1889 P R 1

894 Cross-examination —As a rule the cross-examination of a witness should take place after his examination in chief and cannot be postponed There is no provision of law which authorises the Judge to allow all the prosecution witnesses to be examined at once and to permit the cross examination to be reserved to a subsequent date—Gothurn Venkatappa Weir 381 But though the accused is not entitled to such postponement as of right still there is no reason why the Sessions Judge should refuse an application for such postponement where the application was a reasonable one under the circumstances of the case—Sadasiv v Emp 41 Cal 299 15 Cr L J 596

A Sessions Judge is not justified in stopping the cross examination and turning the witness out of Court because he is of opinion that the witness is not speaking the truth and no reliance can be placed on the deposition of a witness whose cross examination has been thus stopped—Meharban v Q E 1900 A W N 149

Cross examination of a witness not examined in chief —The ordinary practice in properly constituted Courts is that where a witness for the prosecution is not examined by the Crown he is placed in the witness box in order that the defence may have an opportunity of cross examining him—Emp v Grish Chunder 5 Cal 614 Emp v Mavsang 11 Bom L R 1162 10 Cr L J 538 Q E v Stanton 14 All 521 Emp v Kali prosonna 14 Cal 245 But there is no provision in the Code analogous to English practice entitling the prisoner as a matter of right to have a witness for the prosecution who is not called put into the box for cross examination and the disallowing of it is no error in law—Reg v Fatte chand 5 B H C R 85 Emp v Kaliprosonna 14 Cal 245 Q E v Stanton 14 All 521

Committing Magistrate —The phrase committing Magistrate in Secs 287 and 288 is merely a compendious way of referring to the Magistrate or Magistrates who held the preliminary inquiry on which the committal was made Where a subordinate Magistrate inquired into a case and discharged the accused and the District Magistrate acting under sec 436 (now 437) committed the accused for trial the examination recorded by the subordinate Magistrate would be the examination recorded by the committing Magistrate within the meaning of this section—Sessions Judge v Malirea 31 Mad 40

In a case in which there was a fight between the villagers of two neighbouring villages and there was a complaint of offences under secs 148 324 and 326 I P C the prosecution witnesses spoke to the fight alleged and also indentified the assailants before the committing Magistrate In the Sessions Court the witnesses gave a general account of the fight but as regards the identification of the particular assailants each witness professed his inability to make any such identification The Sessions Judge found that in order to save one another the members of each party had agreed not to identify their assailants in the Sessions Court and that the witnesses retracted that portion of their evidence before the committing Magistrate in pursuance of a concerned conspiracy to defeat the ends of justice The Sessions Judge accordingly relied upon the statements made before the committing Magistrate under sec 288 Cr P Code and believing those statements in preference to the statements made before the Sessions Court convicted the accused Held that under this section the Sessions Judge was in the circumstances of the case perfectly justif-

A Sessions Judge does not show a proper discretion in allowing a statement made before the committing Magistrate by a witness to be used as evidence under this section when the witness repudiates it at the Sessions and attributes it to improper influence in the course of the investigation and when the circumstances are such that the Judge cannot rely on it—K E v Bhut Nath 7 C W N 345 Where a witness who in the Sessions trial resiles from his deposition given before the Magistrate states that the latter deposition was made under the influence of the Police the Judge should exercise a proper discretion in making some inquiry by examining the Inspector of Police regarding the restraint and pressure put upon the witness before admitting such statement as evidence—Bajrangi v Emp 4 C W N 49

899 "Subject to the provisions of the Evidence Act' —It is difficult to understand exactly what the amendment of the section intended to effect but there were certain difficulties felt by the Courts with regard to how far the evidence taken before a Magistrate should be relied upon But these words should not be interpreted to mean that evidence duly taken before a Magistrate can only be utilized at a trial in a case where the Evidence Act specifically authorises its use Such a construction is erroneous because there are only certain sections in the Evidence Act (secs 32 33 145 155 157) which can in any way be regarded as even remotely dealing with this subject but none have any direct bearing There is indeed in the Evidence Act nothing at all which permits or specifically provides for the use of evidence taken before a Magistrate as evidence at a trial Nor should those words be construed to mean that sec 288 can be utilized in all cases except those in which the Evidence Act directly prohibits such use because there is no such prohibition in the Evidence Act at all What is really meant by the amendment is that evidence duly taken before a Magistrate can be used for all purposes in a trial Court so long as the evidence is evidence within the meaning of the Evidence Act or in other words Magisterial depositions can be utilized in a trial Court as of evidential value only if the matter contained therein is according to the rules of evidence laid down in the Evidence Act of evidential value For instance if mere hearsay evidence was contained in a Magisterial deposition it would not simply because it was so contained be capable of being utilized by a Sessions Judge as of evidential value at the trial The amendment may also probably mean that the evidence taken before a Magistrate can only be used at the trial subject to the procedure laid down in the Evidence Act—K E v Jehal Teli 3 Pat 781 (788 790) 6 P L T 53 26 Cr L J 270 Bahadur v Emp 19 S L R 71 26 Cr L J 1063

The words for all purposes subject to the provisions of the Evidence Act' do not mean that the evidence given before the committing Magistrate can be used in the Court of Session only for the purpose of corroboration and contradiction in accordance with sections 155 and 157 of the Evidence Act Such evidence may be acted upon by the Sessions

Court precisely as if that evidence has been deposed to before the Sessions Judge The words merely mean that the law of evidence enacted in the Evidence Act must be complied with For instance evidence which had been wrongly admitted by the committing Magistrate in violation of the provisions of the Evidence Act cannot be transferred to the file of the Sessions Judge and used at the trial The amendment is obviously introduced for the purpose of removing any doubts as to the right of the Court to treat the evidence given before the committing Magistrate as substantive evidence in the trial when such evidence has in the discretion of the trial Court been properly brought on that Court's record—Nur Zaman v Crown 6 Lah 190 2 P L R 361 Cr L J 1745 Abdul Gani v Emp 53 Cal 181 42 C L J 205 6 Cr L J 1577 Emp v Basappa 27 Bom L R 113 6 Cr L J 705

900 Practice and procedure —The counsel for the prisoner is not entitled to refer to the deposition for the purpose of contradicting the witness without having drawn the attention of the witness to the alleged contradiction in his deposition and without having given him an opportunity of explaining it—Emp v Zawar 31 Cal 142 Lachmi Lal v K E 3 P L T 398 Before a Judge can use as evidence the deposition given before the Magistrate he is bound to let his intention or the possibility that he may do so be known to the accused and the prosecution in order to afford the accused and the prosecution an opportunity for testing such statement by cross examination or otherwise dealing with such statement as part of the case which may be taken into consideration by the Judge Otherwise it is impossible for the prosecution or the defence to deal with the matters which may influence the Judge's mind in coming to a decision—Emp v Behari 1886 A W N 256

It is improper for the Judge trying a case to take a witness's deposition bodily from the committing Magistrate's record and to treat it as evidence before the Court itself—Q E v Dai Sahai 7 All 862 Q E v Jeochi 21 All 111 The Judge is bound to put to the witnesses whom he proposes to contradict by their previous statements the whole or such portion of their depositions as he intends to rely upon so as to afford them an opportunity of explaining their meaning or denying that they had made any such statements and so forth—Q E v Dai Sahai 7 All 862

When a counsel or pleader cross examines a witness with reference to a previous deposition the parts thereof to which the cross examination is directed should be set out in the Judge's minute of the proceedings the depositions must also be numbered and translated in the minute of the proceedings—Q E v Govardhan Ratanlal 343

Power of High Court —Where in an appeal the High Court was of opinion that the statements made before the committing Magistrate by certain witnesses who were also examined before the Sessions Judge should have been brought upon the record by the exercise of the powers conferred by section 288 it directed the Sessions Judge to take proceedings for the purpose after giving notice to the accused persons that it was proposed to use those statements against them—Naema v Emp 19 A L J 947

289. (1) When the examination of the witnesses for the prosecution and the examination (if any) of the accused are concluded, the accused shall be asked whether he means to adduce evidence.

Procedure after examination of witnesses for prosecution.

(2) If he says that he does not, the prosecutor may sum up his case ; and if the Court considers that there is no evidence that the accused committed the offence, it may then, in a case tried with the aid of assessors, record a finding, or in a case tried by a jury, direct the jury to return a verdict, of not guilty.

(3) If the accused, or any one of several accused, says that he means to adduce evidence and the Court considers that there is no evidence that the accused committed the offence, the Court may then, in a case tried with the aid of assessors record a finding or in a case tried by a jury, direct the jury to return a verdict, of not guilty.

(4) If the accused, or any one of several accused, says that he means to adduce evidence, and the Court considers that there is evidence that he committed the offence, or if, on his saying that he does not mean to adduce evidence, the prosecutor sums up his case and the Court considers that there is evidence that the accused committed the offence, the Court shall call on the accused to enter on his defence.

901. Examination of the accused —The words "if any" in this section show that although under sec 342 it is imperative on the Judge to examine the accused, still the examination may be dispensed with in some cases, e g where the accused has admitted his guilt and had been examined by the committing Magistrate—Khudiram Bose v Emp, 9 C L J. 55, 3 I C 625

Sum up —The prosecution has a right to sum up under subsection (2) when all the accused say that they do not mean to adduce evidence—Q E v Sadanand, 18 Bom 364

902. 'No evidence' —Sub section (2) or (3) applies only where there is no evidence, and would not cover cases where the Court considers that the charge is itself improper—Dwarka Lal v Mahadeo, 12 All 551

When there is no evidence, the jury should be directed to find a verdict of not guilty, and it is wrong to leave it to the jury to say whether the accused is guilty or not guilty—Q v Greedhary, 7 W R 39 When there is no evidence which can, if believed, amount to proof, the case should not be put to the jury at all, as a verdict of guilty, if the jury returns such a verdict, cannot under such circumstances be sustained—Q v Ruttin Das, 16 W R 19

The words 'no evidence' do not mean "no satisfactory trustworthy or conclusive evidence" If the Court is satisfied that there is not upon the record any evidence which, even if it were perfectly true, would amount to legal proof of the offence charged against the accused, then the Court has power, without consulting the assessors, to record a finding of not guilty but the Sessions Judge has no such power merely because he considers the evidence untrustworthy, or unsatisfactory or inconclusive It is not the intention of the Legislature that the assessors or the jury should give their opinion or verdict in those cases only where the Judge is inclined to believe the evidence for the prosecution—10 All 414, Q E v Vairam, 16 Bom 414 A Court can acquit the accused under sec 289 only in a case in which there is no evidence that the accused committed the offence So, if there is any direct evidence which if, believed, would establish the offence the accused must be called upon to enter upon his defence, and the trial should be completely gone through even though the Sessions Judge himself did not believe the evidence—Pub Pro v Nalli Goundan, 2 Weir 382 The case can be withdrawn from the jury only on the ground that there is no evidence at all, and not on the ground that the Judge disbelieved the evidence for the prosecution on the strength of the medical evidence—Hurro Shaha 16 W R 20

The accused must be acquitted under this section if there is no evidence on the prosecution side and he cannot be convicted on the evidence given against him by the witness called by the co accused in his defence—In re Raghova 5 M L T 75 10 Cr L J 68

When a judgment of acquittal is recorded under this section, the opinions of the assessors need not be recorded—Reg v Parvati 7 B. H C R 82

Finding of 'not proven" —The Code does not provide for a finding of "not proven' The proper course is to record a finding of ' not guilty" —Korada Gummanna, 2 Weir 381

903. Defence :—A criminal case ought not to be adjudged on mere probabilities The burden of proof is always on the Crown and not to any extent on the accused , and unless the evidence is of such a nature as to enable the Court to judge rather than conjecture, the accused should not be called upon to make his defence—Q E v Ganesh, Ratanlal 772, Q E v Narayan, Ratanlal 779

It is not a mere formality, but an essential part of the criminal trial, to call upon the accused to enter on his defence , and omission to do so is not a mere irregularity curable by Sec 537—Q E v Imam Ali, 23 Cal 252 In Premgir v Emp, 16 A L J 41, however, the omission to call upon the accused to enter on his defence was held to be a mere irregularity cured by Sec 537, unless the accused was prejudiced thereby

The accused shall be called upon to adduce evidence after the prosecution witnesses are examined, for it is only when sufficient evidence, been produced that he can be called on to enter upon his defence It is extremely irregular to examine the defence witnesses before the close of the prosecution evidence but the conviction will not be set aside if this irregularity has not prejudiced the accused—In re Turibulloh, 4 C L R 338

If the accused has not his witnesses present the Judge may postpone the case—In re Kali Prosonno, 23 W R 58

Defence

290. The accused or his pleader may then open his case, stating the facts or law on which he intends to rely, and making such comments as he thinks necessary on the evidence for the prosecution. He may then examine his witnesses (if any) and after their cross-examination and re-examination (if any) may sum up his case.

904. Examination of defence witnesses :—The accused is at liberty to meet the case in any way he likes He can, as to the whole or any part of the case against him, rely on the witnesses for the prosecution, or may call fresh evidence himself No adverse inference will be drawn against him, if he does not produce or examine any witnesses—Emp v Dhunno, 8 Cal 121 Hurry Churn v Emp, 10 Cal 140, Ashraf Ali v K E, 21 C W N 1152 (per Huda J) But where a prima facie case of circumstances making out or tending to support the charge against the accused is established, and he withholds evidence in disproof or explanation available to him and not accessible to the prosecution, an inference unfavourable to the accused may legitimately be drawn—Ashrof Ali v K E, 21 C W N 1152 (per Teunon J)

When the accused are being tried separately, each would be a competent witness at the trial of the other—Emp. v Durant 23 Bom 213, Q E v Mona Puna, 16 Bom 661

The burden lies on the prosecution to prove beyond all reasonable doubt that the offence was committed by the accused If the prosecution cannot prove the guilt of the accused beyond all doubt, the accused is under no obligation to explain how the offence was committed or who committed the offence or by what means—Q. E v Jethmal, Ratanlal 686 When there is no prima facie evidence sufficient to convict the accused, he is not under any obligation to explain to the Court his movements at the time of the offence—Q E v Bepin, 10 Cal 970

The record is not complete unless it shows the nature of the defence set up If the accused makes any statement, it must be recorded If he makes no statement or refuses to answer when called upon to enter upon his defence, a note should be made accordingly, and when there is nothing to show the nature of the defence, a note of the address to the Court (if any) should be recorded—In re Gopal Hajjana, 15 W R 16

905. Cross-examination :—An accused person must be allowed to cross-examine the witnesses called by another co-accused for his defence, if the case of the latter is adverse to that of the former—Ram Chand v Hanif, 21 Cal. 401 But the accused cannot cross examine his own

witness Thus where a prosecution witness was examined before the committing Magistrate but was not called in the Sessions Court and thereupon the counsel for the defence examined him he would be treated as a witness for the defence and the defence counsel was not entitled to cross examine him unless it appeared that the witness was suppressing the truth or was lying or refusing to give information—Q E v Zawar Husen 20 All 155

Right of accused as to examination and summoning of witnesses

291 The accused shall be allowed to examine any witness not previously named by him, if such witness is in attendance, but he shall not, except as provided in Sections 211 and 231, be entitled of right to have any witness summoned, other than the witnesses named in the list delivered to the Magistrate by whom he was committed for trial

906 Summoning witnesses —The accused is entitled as a matter of right to secure the attendance of all witnesses named in the list delivered to the Magistrate—Q v Bhoolun 2 W R 6 Q v Abdool 3 W R 36 Q v Islam 15 W R 34 Q v Prosunno 23 W R 56 and a conviction without summoning and examining the defence witnesses is liable to be set aside—Q v Mookun 10 W R 22 Faizuddin v K E 47 Cal 758

If some of the witnesses whose names have been entered in the list given to the committing Magistrate (under sec 211) fail to appear in the Sessions Court the Judge ought to summon them and he cannot refuse to do so on the ground that the application for summons has been made at a late stage of the trial (i e at a time when the examination of the other defence witnesses has been ended and the case is ready for arguments)—Faizuddin v K E 47 Cal 758 24 C W N 527 21 Cr L J 842

The accused person cannot however require the Sessions Judge as of right to summon and examine witnesses other than those named in the list—Q v Boidinath 3 W R 29 And the Judge s refusal to grant an adjournment to summon a witness not named in the list is not illegal—Nazir Singh v Emp 7 Lah L J 428 26 P L R 767 But the Sessions Judge has an inherent power if he thinks proper to exercise it to summon those witnesses—In re Rata of Kantli 8 All 668

A Sessions Judge should not refuse to enforce the attendance of certain witnesses for the defence on the ground that there is ample evidence on the record about the matter it is for the accused person and not for the Judge to say what amount of evidence it would be proper to place before the jury in order to establish the case for the defence—Brojendra v K E 7 C W N 188

Prosecutor s right of reply

292 The prosecutor shall entitled to reply,

(a) if the accused or any of the accused adduces any oral evidence;

(b) with the permission of the Court, on a point of law; or

(c) with the permission of the Court, when any document which does not need to be proved is produced by any accused person after he enters on his defence:

Provided that in the case referred to in clause (c) the reply shall, unless the Court otherwise permits, be restricted to comment on the document so produced.

Change —This section has been redrafted by section 79 of the Cr P C Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923 Prior to this amendment, the section stood as follows —

"292 If the accused or any of the accused adduces any evidence, the prosecutor shall be entitled to reply"

Clauses (a) and (b) have been drafted by the Joint Committee (1922) and clause (c) has been added during the debate in the Assembly on the motion of Mr Srinivasa Rao See the Legislative Assembly Debates, February 7, 1923, page 2011

907. Object and scope of section :—The object of the law in this section is to let each side have an opportunity of commenting on the evidence of the other, and not to give an additional advantage to the prosecution Therefore, where the defence counsel first said that he meant to adduce evidence, but afterwards informed the Court that he did not mean to call evidence, the Judge should not allow the right of reply—Hurry Churn v Emp, 10 Cal 140. This section makes the right of reply dependent upon the fact of evidence having been actually adduced—Emp, v Bhaskar, 30 Bom 421, Emp v Abdul Ali, 11 Bom L R 177, 9 Cr L J 284. Under the Code of 1882, the prosecutor had a right of reply if the accused 'stated that he meant to adduce evidence," whether he did or did not actually adduce evidence

908. What amounts to adducing evidence :—The putting in of the depositions of certain prosecution witnesses made before the committing Magistrate and of the statements of the accused made under sec 162 to a Police constable, forming part of the record sent up by the Magistrate, cannot be said to be adducing evidence by the accused within the meaning of this section. The tender of them as evidence by the accused is merely an application to the Judge for the exercise of the discretion vested in him by sec. 288—Emp v Stewart, 31 Cal 1050

The prosecution shall be entitled to reply if the documentary evidence for the defence is adduced after the case for the prosecution is closed—Emp v Sreenath, 43 Cal 426, 17 Cr L J. 423 See clause (c) of the section Therefore, where during the cross examination of the prosecution witnesses and before entering upon defence, the accused puts in some documentary evidence it does not give a right of reply to the Crown because so long as the case is in the hands of the prosecution the putting in of documents cannot be said to take the prosecution by surprise and this is the correct test for determining whether the prosecution should have the right of reply—Emp v Timol 10 C W N cclxvii Emp v Kaliprosorra 14 Cal 245 Q E v Solomon 17 Cal 930 Emp v Sreenath 43 Cal 426 Q v Greesh 10 Cal 1024 Q E v Krishnaji 14 Bom 436 K E v Birch 7 L B R 84 15 Cr L J 741 Contra—Q E v Hayfield 14 All 212 Q E v Venkatapathi 11 Mad 339 Q E v Moss 16 All 88 Emp v Bhaskar 30 Bom 421 K E v Manuel 4 L B R 5 and Crown v Bhuro 1 S L R 91 where it has been held that the prosecution is entitled to a right of reply even if any documentary evidence is put in by the defence before the close of the evidence for the prosecution (e g if any document is produced by the defence during the cross-examination of prosecution witnesses) This view is no longer correct by reason of clause (c) newly added in the section

If while the case for the prosecution is going on the defence in his cross-examination utilises a witness for the prosecution to his own advantage or puts in a lot of documentary matter through such witness it cannot deprive him of his right to the last word because it does not amount to adducing evidence for the defence—Emp v Abdul Ali 11 Bom L R 177 9 Cr L J 284

909 Reply —Reply means reply generally to the whole case Even if one of the accused calls witnesses and the others do not the prosecution is entitled to reply not merely on the evidence adduced by one of the accused but generally on the whole case It is not the intention of this section that the prosecution is to sum up as to such of the accused as do not call evidence and to reply only on the evidence adduced by the others—Q E v Sadanand 18 Bom 364

View by jury or assessors

293 (1) Whenever the Court thinks that the jury or assessors should view the place in which the offence charged is alleged to have been committed, or any other place in which any other transaction material to the trial is alleged to have occurred, the Court shall make an order to that effect, and the jury or assessors shall be conducted in a body, under the care of an officer of the Court, to such place which shall be shown to them by a person appointed by the Court

(2) Such officer shall not, except with the permission of the Court, suffer any other person to speak to, or hold any communication with, any of the jury or assessors, and unless the Court otherwise directs, they shall, when the view is finished, be immediately conducted back into Court.

This section speaks of the view of the locus in quo by jurors and assessors, whereas section 539B relates to the view of the place by Judges and Magistrates

Examination of witness, not permitted :—The assessors can only view the scene of the alleged offence, and cannot examine any witnesses on the spot, because by sub-section (2) the officer conducting the jurors or assessors to the spot cannot suffer any other person to speak to them —Q. v Chutterdharee, 5 W R 59

294. If a juror or assessor is personally acquainted with any relevant fact, it is his duty to inform the Judge that such is the case. whereupon he may be sworn, examined, cross-examined and re-examined in the same manner as any other witness.

When juror or assessor may be examined.

295. If a trial is adjourned, the jury or assessors shall attend at the adjourned sitting and at every subsequent sitting, until the conclusion of the trial.

Jury or assessors to attend at adjourned sitting.

910. When trial should be adjourned.—A Judge is bound to adjourn a case in which a witness summoned for the defence is absent, especially if he is a material witness and the case cannot be satisfactorily decided in his absence—Q v Ishan, 15 W R 34, Q. v Rajnarain, 18 W. R 20, In re Kali Prosonna, 23 W R 58 But under such circumstances the Judge will not be justified in discharging the jury in the midst of a trial and adjourn the case to the next Sessions—In re Putaswamy, 4 Bom L. R. 939.

296. The High Court may, from time to time, make rules as to keeping the jury together during a trial before such Court lasting for more than one day; and subject to such rules the presiding Judge may order whether and in what manner the jurors shall be kept together under the charge of an officer of the Court, or whether they shall be allowed to return to their respective homes.

Locking up jury.

In every case involving the punishment of death or of transportation for life in which the trial lasts for more than one day, the jury should be kept together during the trial by the Sheriff or Deputy Sheriff or such other officer as the presiding Judge may appoint for that purpose, and in every other case in which the trial shall last for more than one day, it shall be in the discretion of the presiding Judge whether the jury shall be kept together in manner aforesaid or shall be allowed to return to their respective homes—Bombay Gazette, 1875, Part 1, p 653

F—Conclusion of Trial in Cases tried by Jury

297. In cases tried by jury, when the case for the defence and the prosecutor's reply (if any) are concluded, the Court shall proceed to charge the jury, summing up the evidence for the prosecution and defence and laying down the law by which the jury are to be guided

Charge to jury

911 "When the case are concluded"—This section specially enacts that the Judge shall only charge the jury when the case for the defence and the prosecutor's reply are concluded i e after all the evidence has been taken on both sides and the counsel of both parties have finished addressing the jury A Judge who charges the jury and take verdict as regard some only of the accused and afterwards hears arguments and takes verdict as regards the remaining accused will be acting irregularly and contrary to the provision of this section—Abdool Hameed 36 Mad 585 15 Cr L J 197 After the witnesses for the prosecution and a certain number of witnesses for the defence had been examined the foreman of the jury asked if the defence could not cut down the number of witnesses they had summoned the defence there upon agreed to dispense with all further witnesses save one The Judge taking the foreman's intervention as an indication that the jury had decided to acquit proceeded to charge the jury upon the case as it stood The jury however found the accused guilty whereupon the Judge ordered the remaining witnesses for the defence to be examined and after this was done he again addressed the jury and then the jury again gave their verdict Held that the procedure was entirely illegal because all the evidence on both sides must be concluded before the case could be submitted to the jury Both the verdicts were therefore null and void—Lyne v Crown 4 Lah 38

Where the Judge required the jury to give a finding on one of two questions of fact constituting the proof in the case before he concluded his charge with reference to the other question of fact held that the procedure was irregular if not illegal and was certainly calculated to embarass the jury in arriving at a proper verdict as to the character of the offence if any proved—Badara Kunhi 2 Weir 499 (500)

912 Charge to jury—The form and contents of a charge vary with the circumstances of individual cases with the nature of the evidence the Judge is to deal with and the mode in which the case for the prosecution and the case for the defence are conducted Generally speaking it is usual to begin a charge by setting out the offence or offences which the prisoner is charged with having committed and explaining the law relating to those offences Then the case for the prosecution and the case for the defence may be referred to and such comments made on the evidence adduced by the other side as the Sessions Judge may think it desirable or useful to make to the jury Care should be taken to place the defences set up fairly before the jury and to ensure that the jury appreciate the issue or issues which they have to try The charge should include the usual warning as to the duty of the jury to the prosecution on the one hand and to the prisoner on the other—Afiruddi v K F 23 C W N 833

In addressing the jury the Judge should endeavour to speak in a manner simple and direct The charge must not be involved nor should the language be extravagant—Harendra v Emp 11 Cr L J 538 (Cal) He should not use expressions assuming the guilt of the accused nor should he use slang and colloquial phrases and the interrogative method in charging the jury—Amiruddin v K E 45 Cal 557 22 C W N 213 In charging the jury it is the duty of the Judge to give a narrative and history of the case to the jury and to place the evidence and facts in a clear manner before them so as to enable them to grasp the details and come to a right decision—Emp v Mitra 6 Bom L R 31

If a charge is to be delivered in Bengali and the Sessions Judge is not sufficiently acquainted with that language to prepare the charge in Bengali it is open to him to obtain such assistance as he requires from the officers of his Court But it is not desirable that he should resort to the services of the Public Prosecutor for this purpose—Afiruddi v K E 23 C W N 833 20 Cr L J 661

913 Summing up of evidence —The object of a summing up is to enable the Judge to place before the jury the facts and circumstances of the case both for and against the prosecution so as to help them in arriving at a right decision upon the points which arise for their consideration—Khijiruddin v Emp, 53 Cal 372 42 C L J 504 27 Cr L J 266 Where the provisions of this section are neglected and the Judge does not sum up at all the conviction will be set aside and a new trial ordered—Q v Shamshere 9 W R 51 Q E v Imam Ali 23 Cal 252 The summing up contemplated by this section cannot mean any statement of the evidence which a Judge may in his caprice think proper to make to the jury but a proper summing up containing a full and distinct statement of the evidence on both sides with such advice as to the legal bearing of the evidence and the weight which properly attaches to the several parts of it as a sound judicial discretion would suggest The Judge in a proper summing up must formulate and specify simple issues for consideration and collate the evidence pro and con bearing upon the issues in order to assist the jury to arrive at the correct decision thereon Merely summarising the evidence examination in chief cross examination and re examination of the different witnesses who have deposed at the trial and putting before the jury all that has been said by the witnesses or by the lawyers appearing on the two sides and huddling together important facts as well as trivial points without any attempt at discrimination is not a proper summing up Such a summing up instead of aiding the jury only confuses them—Jessarat v Emp 29 C W N 526 26 Cr L J 1009 A I R 1925 Cal 729 A Judge should explain to the jury the issues of facts which the jury has to determine upon the charge on which the accused is being tried and having made the jury understand

these issues the more convenient way of summing up the case is to present the jury, as materially and impartially as he can a summary of the evidence and the consideration and inferences to be drawn from the evidence and as they appear both on the negative and the affirmative sides of the case—Enayet Hussain v Emp 49 All 209 28 Cr L J 15 It is the duty of the Judge to state to the jury what are the principal points in the evidence and how they bear for or against the prisoner in short to render the jury every assistance in his power towards coming to the right conclusion—Q v Bolakee 6 W R 72 The jurors ordinarily are not men who are used to weighing the evidence and it is therefore necessary that all help should be given to them in the light of the observations made by the learned Judges in the decided cases—Abdul Gani v K E 53 Cal 181 42 C L J 205 He should state the evidence pro and con with a running commentary as to its agreement and disagreement with the other facts of the case—Q v Gurga Bishen 1 W R 25 Q v Chunder Kumar 25 W R 54 Where a fair and proper statement of the evidence has not been placed before the jury the High Court will set aside the conviction—Emp v Nakul 13 C W N 754 Where the Judge did not sum up the evidence at all but simply charged the jury with these words— It is for you to say from the evidence you have heard whether you consider the accused guilty or not it was held that the charge was wholly insufficient and a retrial was ordered in the case—Emp v Badal 1902 A W N 201 Where the Judge did not sum up the evidence to the jury but only treated it generally and called it a very poor evidence which standing alone amounted to nothing it was held that the charge to the jury was defective—Q E v Gargia 23 Bom 316 But it is not necessary for the Judge in his charge to the jury to go into the minutest details in the evidence—Samaruddin v Emp 10 Cal 367 13 Cr L J 821 It is impossible for the Judge to state every item of the evidence or to draw the attention of the jury to every fact which has been deposed but he can without difficulty give a summary of the leading points of the evidence and the considerations and inference to be drawn from it on the one side or on the other—Enayet Hussain v Emp 49 All 209 28 Cr L J 15

In summing up the case the Judge must place before the jury all facts of prime importance in favour of the accused—Emp v Mira 6 Bom L R 31 He is entitled to have regard to the elaboration and skill with which the rival contentions have been placed before the jury by the advocates on both sides but he cannot omit any matters of prime importance especially if they favour the accused merely because they have been elaborately discussed by the Advocate—Emp v Malgowda 27 Bom 644 Emp v Munkwasayo 3 S L R 102 11 Cr L J 13 Emp v Fakira 40 Bom 220 So also he cannot omit to draw the attention of the jury to what appears to be a possible answer to the charge against the accused notwithstanding that it has escaped the counsel of the accused —K E v Upendra 19 C W N 653 (F B) 16 Cr L J 561 This section makes it imperative on a Sessions Judge to place in his summing up to the jury evidence both for the prosecution and the defence The fact that the pleaders for the accused thought it unnecessary to place much reliance upon the defence of the accused would not absolve the Sessions Judge from his duty of placing before the jury all the facts in favour of the accused—In re Saigan 17 Cr L J 19 (Mad) Omission to put the material facts or to put the defence to the jury is sufficient to cause the High Court to quash the conviction if this Court comes to the conclusion that the verdict of the jury was affected thereby—K E v Barendra 28 C W N 170 (199) R v Hill (1911) 7 Cr App Rep 26 R v Wilson (1913) 9 Cr App Rep 124 R v Smith (1920) 84 J P 67 But where the Judge made a reference to the statement made by the accused the mere omission to draw the attention of the jury to the defence of the accused is not a misdirection and does not vitiate the trial—K E v Barendra Kumar Ghose 28 C W N 170 38 C L J 411 (Sankaritola Postmaster Murder Case)

If there are material discrepancies in the evidence the Judge should point out to the jury where those discrepancies are Merely telling the jury that there are discrepancies without telling them anything about those discrepancies is a misdirection—Enayet Husain v Emp 49 All 209 28 Cr L J 15

The Judge must always be careful that he does not usurp the functions of the advocate and that the evidence of the case is presented to the jury in as dispassionate and impartial a manner as is expected of the presiding officer He ought not to express any opinion on the reliability of the evidence for the prosecution or the defence—K E v Tanbullah 25 C W N 682, 23 Cr L J 244

In cases of very serious offences and where the evidence is merely circumstantial the evidence should be read over in extenso to the jury (and not merely summed up)—Reg v Fateh Chand 5 B H C R 85 Where the trial has been a prolonged one the Judge ought to read over to the jury in extenso the important testimonies in the trial—Q E v Fakira Ratanlal 850 But an omission to read out the material portions of the evidence is not in itself sufficient for the reversal of the verdict of the jury In each case it must be a question whether such omission was such as to mislead the jury and the Appellate Court will not interfere unless it has prejudiced the accused—Emp v Appunna 5 Bom L R 207

The law does not expressly require a Judge to formulate at the conclusion of the delivery of his charge specific questions for the jurors reply Such a practice is however helpful in deciding the legal effect of the Judge's finding, but the formulation of such questions requires great care and the queries should be confined within the narrowest possible compass—Ripan Singh v K E, 4 Pat 626 27 Cr L J 49 A I R 1925 Pat 797

914. "Laying down the law" —It is the duty of the Judge to give a direction upon the law to the jury so far as to make them understand the law as bearing upon the facts and to enable them to decide the point at issue—Emp v Jhubboo 8 Cal 739 Thus where in a trial for murder grave and sudden provocation causing loss of power of self control is suggested for the defence it is the duty of the Judge to explain the distinction between murder and culpable homicide and the jury as judges of facts have to decide the issue as to sudden provocation—Q E v Dadubhai Ratanlal 766 In a charge of rioting the jury must be told that a rioting can only take place when there is an unlawful assembly consisting of at least five men with one of the common objects mentioned in the I P C and it is essentially necessary to mention what an unlawful assembly is The jury are not experts in law—Abdul Sheik v Emp 17 Cr L J 97 (Cal) Mere reference to the sections of the I P C defining offences (Abbas v Q E 25 Cal 736) or mere reading out to the jury the sections of the I P C does not amount to a sufficient explanation of the law—Sri Prosad v Emp 4 C W N 193 Nor should the Judge merely give a copy of the Penal Code to the jury to read and interpret it for themselves but he must explain the law to them and tell them in a kind of popular language of what offence they are to convict the accused—Jaspath v Q E 14 Cal 164 Wilson 30 C W N 693 27 Cr L J 926 It is the duty of the Judge to explain to the jury the law applicable to the case and it is the duty of the jury to accept the law as laid down by the Judge without any extraneous aid If the jury is unable to understand the law fully and clearly it is the duty of the Judge to explain it to them afresh but in doing so he cannot place before them the Indian Penal Code or any legal treatise for the purpose of finding out the law If he does so he fails in his duty—Wilson (supra) It is necessary for a Judge to read the very words of the section itself to the jury if he purports to give them what the provisions of law are and then if necessary to explain what is the meaning of the section Where the only direction as to what constitutes murder was contained in one sentence murder is the intentional killing of another human being with malice or forethought held that though it was a comprehensive way of describing what the meaning of murder was it was not the way in which the Court ought to charge the jury in this country It is usual to refer to the sections which relate to culpable homicide and to direct the jury as to what is culpable homicide and in what circumstances culpable homicide amounts to murder—Emp v Durga Charan 26 C W N 1002 A Judge should adhere to the words of the particular section of the Penal Code he has to deal with and not substitute phraseology of his own—Emp v Nakul 13 C W N 754 11 Cr L J 9 Moreover it is the duty of the Judge to call the attention of the jury to the different elements constituting the offence and to deal with the evidence by which it is proposed to make the accused liable—Taju Pramanik v Q E 25 Cal 711 Kasimuddin v Emp 47 Cal 795 21 Cr L J 694 Mari Valayan v Emp 30 Mad 44 It is also the duty of the Judge to explain the law as regards abetment—Hemanta Kumar v Emp 47 Cal 46 21 Cr L J 775 In complicated cases the Judge should in his charge to the jury not only explain the law but should draw their attention to the evidence in the case and explain how they shall apply the law to the particular facts of the case—Rupan Singh v K E 4 Pat 626 27 Cr L J 49

to the jury The responsibility of laying down the law for the guidance of the jury rests entirely with the Judge and the verdict given by the jury in the absence of any such direction on the law by which they should be guided cannot be accepted as a valid verdict in the case—Mangan Das v. Emp. 29 Cal 379 Ramprasad v Emp 26 Cr L J 1090 (Nag) The Judge s charge is not only for the purpose of stating the law and explaining it to the jury but also of helping them to find facts He has to advise the jury as to the logical bearing of the evidence admitted upon the matters to be found by them He ought to do that to limit the chances of error of the jury—Afiruddi v K E 23 C W N 833 20 Cr L J 661

But in explaining the law upon a particular offence the Judge ought not to discourse in all branches and departments of the crime especially in a case of complicated offence as murder or culpable homicide To do so is to confuse the jury and possibly to direct their deliberations into channels that have nothing to do with the case—K E v Upendra 19 C W N 653 The Judge should lay down the law only in so far as it has a bearing on the evidence adduced in the particular case to simplify the issue fairly and properly before the Court to keep the jury within proper limits and not to perplex their minds with considerations that are outside the legitimate scope of the inquiry—K E v Upendra 19 C W N 653 (F B) 16 Cr L J 561 All unnecessary discussions and arguments should be avoided by the Judge and the summing up should be strictly confined to the evidence adduced and the mode of application of the law to such evidence—Q v Nobokisto 8 W R 87 No rulings or authorities should be cited by the Judge in his charge to the jury nor should they be asked to differentiate or form any opinion whatever on any authorities Such a procedure confuses the minds of the jury and constitutes a misdirection—Meher Sardar v K E 16 C W N 46 In practice it is not desirable to refer to and read from several law Reports as it may have the effect of confusing the minds of lay men But in explaining the dividing line of murder and culpable homicide not amounting to murder the Judge frequently read in their charges a passage from some well known judgment (e g the judgment of Melville J in 1 Bom 342) as accurately illustrating the distinction In so doing the Judges act properly and do not commit any misdirection—Emp v Nga Tin Gyi 4 Rang 488 28 Cr L J 213

915 Misdirection to jury —Examples —(1) Omission to give the jury a sufficient explanation of the law so as to enable them to decide the point at issue is a misdirection—Emp v Jhubboo 8 Cal 739 Biru v Q E 25 Cal 561 Suganigadu 2 Weir 500 In re Pala esa Te an 12 Cr L J 140 9 M L T 345 Abbas v Q E 25 Cal 736 Thus where in a dacoity case the Judge stated to the jury Dacoity is committed when any number of persons not less than five conjointly commit robbery but did not explain to the jury what was necessary to constitute the offence of robbery it was an omission to lay down the law and amounted to a misdirection—Mari Valayan v Emp 30 Mad 41 Nawab Ali v K E 11 O L J 315 25 Cr L J 1129 So also omission to explain to the jury the difference between murder and culpable homi cide or to tell them under what view of the facts the accused ought to be convicted of murder or culpable homicide or to be acquitted, is a misdirection—Hla Gyi v K E 3 L B R 73 Where the act of the accused was so imminently dangerous that it must in all probability cause death and thus came within the definition of murder (punishable under sec 302 I P C) and the Judge himself described the act to the jury as imminently dangerous but said that the offence was punishable under section 304 I P C (culpable homicide not amounting to murder) held that there was a misdirection in not explaining to the jury as to how the act which he himself described as imminently dangerous was rendered punishable under section 304 I P C—Muhammad Yunus v Emp 50 Cal 318 (324) In a case of criminal breach of trust the Judge should tell the jury that the test they are to apply is whether the circumstances relied upon by the accused showed an intention of causing wrongful gain or wrongful loss and the Judge should also explain the meaning of these terms Omission to do so amounts to a misdirection—Browne v K E 7 Bur L T 20 It is a misdirection not to adequately explain to the jury the law in regard to abetment—Hemanta Kumar v Emp, 47 Cal 46 or in regard to onus of proof—Abdul Gohur v K E 26 C W N 972

(2) Failure to call the attention of the jury to the different elements constituting the offence is a misdirection—Taju Pramanik v K E 25 Cal 711 Thus where in a case of murder the Judge simply asked the jury to find whether the prisoner inflicted the injuries on the deceased it was held to be a misdirection the jury ought to have been asked to find as to the intention of the accused to cause death or the knowledge that he was likely to cause death—Q E v Balya 1 Bom L R 784 Natabar v Emp 35 Cal 531 Similarly where in case under secs 474 and 475 I P C the Judge told the jury that the only issue which they had to decide was whether the forged documents were in the possession of the accused ignoring altogether the question of knowledge combined with intention which is so absolutely requisite to justify a conviction under sec 474 I P C it was held that the Judge had misdirected the jury—Q E v Abaji 16 Bom 165 Where in a case of retaining stolen property the Judge directed the jury to decide whether the property was stolen and whether it was retained by the accused without asking them to decide whether the accused knew or had reason to believe the property to be stolen it was held that this amounted to a misdirection—Q E v Balya 15 Bom 369 So also in a case of receiving property stolen in the commission of a dacoity (section 412 I P C) the Judge directed the jury to the effect that if they found that the properties were properly identified as having been the properties stolen at the time of the dacoity and were found in the accused's possession they were bound to presume the accused's guilt but the jury were not properly directed that it was their duty to weigh all the circumstances of the case and consider the accused's explanation and then decide whether or not they should make such a presumption held that this was a serious misdirection—Satya Charan v Emp, 52 Cal 223 26 Cr L J 1155

(3) Failure to point out to the jury as to the relevancy or otherwise of a confession made under inducement and merely telling the jury that if the confession was true it was enough to warrant the conviction of the accused is a misdirection—Thandraya v Emp 26 Mad 38 See notes under sec 298

(4) Omission to explain to the jury the attitude to be taken towards a retracted confession as evidence against a co accused is a misdirection —Hemanta v Emp 47 Cal 46 Where the Sessions Judge directed the jury that the retracted confession of a co accused is practically of no value against any body but the confessor but asked the jury to take into consideration the confession while considering the cases of the other two co accused individually held that this was a misdirection as it was likely to prejudice the jury and lead them to give some weight to such statements when they should have disregarded them altogether—In re Ibrahim 42 C L J 496 26 Cr L J 1146 A I R 1926 Cal 374

It is a misdirection to tell the jury that the retracted confessions are not to be held true unless they are corroborated by independent reliable evidence because there is no rule of law that a retracted confession must be supported by independent reliable evidence corroborating it in material particulars—Q E v Ga gia 23 Bom 316 (Contra—Q E v Mahabir 18 All 78 Cholakel v Weir 507 Karreli Venkatasami v Weir 509 and Sokhai 2 Weir 509 where it has been held that if a confession is subsequently retracted and it is not corroborated by independent evidence the Judge should point out to the jury that it is not safe to rely on the retracted confession unless it is corroborated by independent reliable evidence and an omission to point this out to the jury amounts to a misdirection) It is also a misdirection to the jury to tell them to leave out of consideration the retracted confessions of the accused—Papakka 8 M L T 372 8 I C 573 The question to be put to the jury regarding such confessions is not whether they are corroborated by independent evidence but whether having regard to the circumstances under which they were made and retracted and all the circumstances connected with them it was more probable that the original confessions or the statements retracting them were true An omission on the part of the Judge to put this question to the jury amounts to a misdirection—Q E v Raman 21 Mad 83

Where the Sessions Judge at first dealt with the confession of an accused and pointed out in clear and unambiguous language that the confession having been retracted could only be used as evidence against that accused alone and that it should not be taken into consideration as against any of the other accused and then he proceeded to refer to the evidence of an approver and warned the jury to see whether the evidence of the approver was corroborated by the evidence of independent and reliable witnesses but the Sessions Judge did not repeat the same remark when dealing the individual cases of the accused held that there was no misdirection Having once given a fair summary of the evidence it was not to be expected that he would go on repeating what he had already said in a previous part of the charge when he was dealing with the cases of the individual accused—Ayub Mandal v Emp 54 Cal 539 28 Cr L J 689

(5) A Sessions Judge should caution the jury not to accept the accomplice's evidence unless it is corroborated in material particulars Omission to state this amounts to a misdirection—Surya Kanta v K E, 24 C W N 119 Q E v Arumuga 12 Mad 196 But a recent Calcutta case lays down that an uncorroborated evidence of an accomplice is admissible in law although it has long been the practice for the Judge to warn the jury of the danger of convicting a prisoner on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice Therefore it is not a misdirection to tell the jury that a conviction upon the evidence of the approver alone will not be illegal—Emp v Jamalli 51 Cal 160 (163) following the judgment of Lord Reading C J in R v Baskerville [1916] 2 K B 658 (663) See also Ledu Molla v Emp 52 Cal 595 42 C L J 501 26 Cr L J 1037

(6) An omission to arrange the facts deposed by witnesses is a misdirection—Q v Ramgopal 10 W R 7 omission to point out to the jury that there was an absence of evidence material to the case for the prosecution is a misdirection—Ganga Govind v Q 23 W R 21

(7) Where there are several accused persons and the case as against all of them does not stand on the same footing and their defences are different omission by the Judge to ask the jury to consider the case as against each of the accused individually is a serious misdirection—Khairuddin v Emp 53 Cal 37 42 C L J 504 27 Cr L J 166

(8) When a charge to the jury placed prominently before them all the circumstances that went against the accused and did not call their attention to any of those that were in favour of the accused it was held that there was a misdirection sufficient to vitiate the trial—Rahamat Ali v Emp 4 C W N 196 Emp v Fakira 40 Bom [illegible]0 Abdul Gafur v Emp 21 Cr L J 670 (Cal) Sugaligadu 2 Weir 500 (501) Mammat Ali v Emp 44 C L J 233 Omission to make the jury acquainted with the nature of the case for the prosecution and the nature of the case for the defence is a misdirection—Afruddi v K E 23 C W N 833 20 Cr L J 661 But the fact that every point in favour of the accused has not been put to the jury does not amount to a misdirection The charge must be judged as a whole and one must see whether judging it as a whole the case for the two sides has been fairly put so that the jury can understand what they have to decide and can come to a right conclusion It is not necessary for the Sessions Judge to repeat everything that has been said by the pleader for the defence in his speech But he should draw the attention of the jury to the more essential items and the strongest argument that has been advanced for the defence A mere reference to the argument of the pleader is insufficient—Haricharan v Emp 34 C L J 512 Abdul Salim v Emp 49 Cal 573 The fact that the address of the defence counsel to the jury is a lengthy one does not excuse the Judge from pointing out important points of the defence argument to the jury—Peary v Emp 20 C W N 436 (F B) A verdict obtained fr[illegible] the jury without placing before them an important piece of evidence [illegible] favour of the defence whatever may have been its real worth ca[illegible]

(9) A Judge s direction to the jury to consider the proof of previous conviction as evidence giving rise to an inference regarding the character of the prisoner amounts to a misdirection—Roshun v Emp 5 Cal 768 See section 310 So also the omission on the part of the Judge to warn the jury not to take the previous conviction into consideration when deciding on the guilt of the accused amounts to a misdirection—Hari Charan v Emp 27 Cr L J 398 (Cal)

(10) Omission to tell the jury that if they entertain any reasonable doubt about the guilt of the accused the accused is entitled to the benefit of the doubt and should be acquitted is a serious misdirection—Panchi Das v Emp 34 Cal 698 Sugaligadu 2 Weir 500 (501)

(11) Where the Judge stated in his charge to the jury that there was a mass of oral evidence on behalf of the prosecution as well as for the defence but that the jury might neglect it all it was held that this was a misdirection because it is the duty of the jury to give their verdict upon considering the whole of the evidence—Emp v Mira 6 Bom L R 31

(12) Omission to invite the jury to consider carefully what each of the accused said in his statement with reference to the charges framed against him is a misdirection—Hemat lal v Emp 47 Cal 46

(13) The Sessions Judge is guilty of misdirection where he has failed to draw pointed attention to the fact that the jury have to rely upon the testimony of an absent witness and where evidence which ought not to have been allowed to be given has been improperly admitted under sec 33 of the Evidence Act—Annati Muthriyai v Emp 39 Mad 449 16 Cr L J 294

(14) In a case of theft the failure on the part of the Judge to call attention to the whole of the evidence telling against the accused and especially his observation as to the case resting wholly on the identification of certain jewels with which the evidence went to show that the accused had dealt constitutes a misdirection—Govt Pleader Appellant 2 Weir 488 (489)

(15) Where in a case of theft the evidence against the accused was the possession of stolen property 5 years after the occurrence it was held that the Judge had misdirected the jury by saying On this evidence notwithstanding that it is nearly 5 years since the crime occurred you will decide whether you are satisfied with the prisoner s explanation for his possession of the stolen property The proper course would be to tell them to consider whether after 5 years it was reasonable to require the prisoner to prove how he came by the goods or whether his story not being in itself improbable ought not to be accepted—Rithanithil 2 Weir 489

(16) A direction to the jury that they should convict the prisoner if they believed that he had shown the stolen property to the Police is a misdirection, because the mere fact that a person knew where the stolen property was and showed it to the police is not equivalent to possession of stolen property—Muppidi Krishnamurthi 2 Weir 493

(17) Where a Judge directed the jury to acquit one of the prisoners on the ground that the witnesses who identified him had deposed falsely, it was held that the Sessions Judge ought to have made it clear to the jury that if they disbelieved the witnesses on whose testimony the case hinged in regard to any of the prisoners that was a circumstance to be carefully weighed by them in estimating the credibility of the testimony so far as it affected the other accused His omission to do so amounted to a misdirection—Boga Vasanthagadu 2 Weir 501

(18) Omission to point out to the jury the discrepancies in the evidence of the principal witnesses for the prosecution constitutes a misdirection —Tenaram v K E 33 C L J 180 22 Cr L J 475 Emp v Durga Charan 26 C W N 1002 23 Cr L J 567 Merely telling the jury that there are material discrepancies in the evidence without pointing out to them what those discrepancies are amounts to a misdirection—Enayet Husain v Emp 49 All 209 28 Cr L J 15

(19) Where a number of persons who could have given important information were not examined as witnesses for the Crown the Judge should direct the jury to draw an inference adverse to the prosecution His omission to do so amounts to a misdirection—Md Yunus v Emp, 50 Cal 318 (326) Tenaram v K L 33 C L J 180 22 Cr L J 475

(20) Failure on the part of the Court to put clearly before the jury the law relating to the right of private defence arising on the admitted and proved facts and to direct their attention to find as to whether the accused was and if so how far justified in preventing injury to him self in attacking his opponent is a serious misdirection vitiating the trial—Aseruddin v Emp 53 Cal 980 28 Cr L J 273 Where the accused raised the plea of private defence and the case for the prosecution was that there was no right of private defence at all the Judge should simply tell the jury that the question they had to decide was whether or not the right of private defence came into existence and not how far it ex tended or whether it was exceeded Moreover in dealing with the law as to the right of private defence there are several important points the omission of which would amount to a serious misdirection Thus in a murder case in which the right of private defence is set up, the Judge in explaining section 100 I P C which contains a list of six heads of offences should point out those heads which would and those which would not apply to the case they were trying otherwise the jury would naturally disregard those to which their attention was not specially directed by the Judge Moreover in explaining the law as to private defence the Judge should also explain to the jury the provisions of section 101 I P C. in a case where there is a charge of culpable homicide not amounting to murder as well as the minor charge of causing grievous hurt The omission on the part of the Judge to explain these points amounts to a misdirection—Muhammad Yunus v Emp, 50 Cal 318 (325 326) On a charge under section 304 I P C where the defence of the accused that the deceased came into his house for robbery at midnight and

the accused inflicted wounds on him which proved fatal, the Judge should expound the law to the jury not only with reference to the right of private defence of person but also with reference to the right of private defence of property, and should direct the jury to consider whether the accused had not used more force than was necessary for preventing the deceased from running away with the stolen property Omission to so charge the jury amounts to a misdirection—Baseruddi v Emp, 28 C W N 585, 39 C L J 525

(21) The Judge is entitled to tell the jury that when a prisoner is charged with causing hurt to another, the burden of proving that it was done in the exercise of the right of private defence lies on the prisoner—Afiruddi v K E 23 C W N 833, 20 Cr L J 661 But when the accused has examined witnesses to prove the defence (e g, the right of private defence) set up by him it is no longer necessary for the Judge to refer to the law relating to burden of proof (because the accused has discharged that burden), the Judge should simply ask the jury to decide the question of fact on the evidence before them If in such a case the Judge refers to the provisions of section 105 of the Evidence Act, it would mislead the jury and lead them to think that the defence set up by the accused would require a higher standard of proof This is clearly a misdirection—Md Yunus v Emp, 50 Cal 318 (325)

(22) It is a misdirection to suggest to the jury that in capital cases stronger evidence of a higher degree of certainty is required than in other criminal cases—Leg Rem v Lali Mohan, 49 Cal 167

(23) Omission to warn the jury to pay no attention to the previous proceedings amounts to a misdirection—Mir Mouz v K E, 31 C L J 305.

(24) Where one of the witnesses for the prosecution is himself suspected of being implicated in the offence, the jury should be directed not to accept his evidence without the most careful scrutiny Omission to give such a direction amounts to a serious misdirection—Satya Charan v Emp, 52 Cal 223 26 Cr L J 1155

(25) The question as to whether the accused was under 12 years of age and incapable of understanding the nature of his act is one for the jury to decide, notwithstanding no proof may have been adduced on the point, and if the Judge attempts to exclude the consideration of the question from the jury by saying that they should leave that question out of account altogether, the Judge is in error and his summing up on this point amounts to a misdirection—Emp v Ali Raza 28 O C 69 26 Cr L J 310.

(26) Where the witnesses who had made certain statements before the committing Magistrate retracted those statements at the trial, the Sessions Judge ought to tell the jury that the witnesses should be looked upon with suspicion and that their evidence should be regarded with great caution, and the Judge ought to ask the jury to decide for themselves as to which of the two versions is correct If instead of doing so the Judge expresses his opinion with a certain degree of assertion to the effect that the statements made before the committing Magistrate are true and that the depositions given before him are false his charge to the jury is vitiated by misdirection—Abdul Gani v K E 53 Cal 181 42 C L J 205 26 Cr L J 1577

(27) Where a Judge repeatedly tells the jury that if they are morally convinced of the guilt of the accused their verdict should be that of guilty it amounts to a misdirection The jury has to return a verdict of guilty not upon their moral belief of a case but upon the legal proof of the facts constituting the offence—Enayet v Emp 49 All 209 28 Cr L J 15

(28) It is a misdirection not to explain to the jury the difference between a crime and a civil wrong (e g the distinction between a civil and a criminal trespass)—K E v Madan Mandal 41 Cal 662 15 Cr L J 155

916. Effect of misdirection —A misdirection does not justify a reversal of the verdict of the jury unless the misdirection has in fact occasioned a failure of justice—Legal Remembrancer v Shyam Sundar 26 C W N 558 Unless the misdirection is material the conviction will not be disturbed in appeal—In re Mullimayandi 45 M L J 845 Wafadar v K E 21 Cal 955 The High Court will not set aside a verdict where it is not erroneous in spite of the misdirection—Emp v Naimaddi 22 C W N 572 Wafadar v K E 21 Cal 955 See Note 1151

917 Non-direction —Mere non direction is not necessarily misdirection those who allege misdirection must show that something wrong was said or that something was said which would make wrong that which was left to be understood—Fhiath v K E 1 P L J 317 17 Cr L J 353 Ibrath v N W Ry Co (1886) L R 11 A C 247 R v Stodder (1909) 25 T L R 712 K E v Barendra 28 C W N 170 (199) Emp v Fateh Chand 44 Cal 477 In a charge of unlawful assembly the omission to explain clearly to the jury the alleged common object of the unlawful assembly is not a misdirection but a mere non direction which will not justify the verdict being set aside if the prisoner was not prejudiced thereby—Rahamat Ali v Emp 4 C W N 196 Abdul Sheik v Emp 17 Cr L J 92 (Cal) Failure to point out to the jury the weakness of the evidence against the accused and the possibility of the offence having been committed by another is not a positive misdirection but merely a non direction—Q v Chootee 5 W R 13 Omission to call the attention of the jury to the evidence of defence witnesses whom the High Court considered to be untrustworthy is a mere non direction and not a misdirection—Emp v Rochia 7 Cal 42 Omission to enter into details concerning the identification of stolen articles is not a mis direction —Q v Madhul Mal 1 W R 22

Duty of Judge

298 (1) In such cases it is the duty of the Judge—

(a) to decide all questions of law arising in the course of the trial, and especially all questions as to the relevancy of facts which it is proposed to prove and the admissibility of evidence or the propriety of questions asked by or on behalf of the parties; and in his discretion, to prevent the production of inadmissible evidence, whether it is or is not objected to by the parties;

(b) to decide upon the meaning and construction of all documents given in evidence at the trial;

(c) to decide upon all matters of fact which it may be necessary to prove in order to enable evidence of particular matters to be given;

(d) to decide whether any question which arises is for himself or for the jury, and upon this point his decision shall bind the jurors.

(2) The Judge may, if he thinks proper, in the course of his summing up, express to the jury his opinion upon any question of fact, or upon any question of mixed law and fact, relevant to the proceeding.

Illustrations

(a) It is proposed to prove a statement made by a person not being a witness in the case on the ground that circumstances are proved which render evidence of such statement admissible

It is for the Judge, and not for the jury to decide whether the existence of those circumstances has been proved

(b) It is proposed to give secondary evidence of a document the original of which is alleged to have been lost or destroyed

It is the duty of the Judge to decide whether the original has been lost or destroyed

918. Question of Law :—In a charge under section 376 I P C the question whether, when the complainant had consented to the act the offence within the meaning of sec 375 I P C has been committed is one of law for the Judge to decide under this section and not a question for the jury—Q E v Madhavrao 19 Bom 735 The question as to whether a communication is privileged or not is one of law for the Judge to decide, and he should not leave it to the jury to find whether it is so or not—Q v Chunder Kant 10 W R 14

Direction of the Judge —What a Judge says to the jury upon a point of law is a binding direction upon the jury—Q v Nimchand 20 W R 41 They are not entitled to resort to a commentary on the law during their consultation about the verdict They should take the law from the Judge—Emp v Bhadmia 6 Bom L R 258 If the jury return a verdict according to the direction of the Judge the High Court will not interfere with the verdict unless it is manifestly erroneous—Q E v Jacquiet 11 Cal 85

919 Admissibility of evidence —The Judge has to advise the jury as to the logical bearing of the evidence admitted upon the matters to be found by them—Afiruddi v K E 23 C W N 833 This section expressly lays down that one of the duties of a Judge in a trial held with the jury is to prevent the production of inadmissible evidence whether it is or is not objected to by the parties If that is so the fact that the accused puts forward some particular ground for holding that the evidence is inadmissible would not relieve the Judge of his duty to look into all the circumstances in order to judge whether it is admissible or not—Emp v Panch Kauri 52 Cal 67 29 C W N 300 26 Cr L J 782 It is for the Judge to decide whether the evidence adduced before him is admissible or not the credibility of the evidence is to be left to the jury—Abbas v Q E 25 Cal 736 Imiruddin v K E 45 Cal 557 22 C W N 213 19 Cr L J 303 Thus the question as to which documents or evidence the jury are to receive is for the Judge to decide and the question as to what they are to believe is for the jury—Q E v Lal singh Ratanlal 452 It is a misdirection for the Judge to say that he sees no reason to disbelieve a particular witness He ought to leave the question of believing or disbelieving to the jury—Kali Singh v K E 7 C L J 246 The Judge is not entitled to say in a general manner that there is nothing in the evidence to support or even to lend a semblance of support to the contentions of the accused—K E v Taribulla 25 C W N 682

In case of accomplice evidence the Judge should caution the jury not to accept the approver s evidence unless it is corroborated Omission to say so will amount to a misdirection—Q E v Arumuga 12 Mad 196 Surya Kanta v K E 24 C W N 119 The failure to tell the jury explicitly that the statement of one prisoner against another should not be considered in weighing the evidence against that other is such a grave irregularity as to vitiate the trial even though the Judge in summing up considered separately the evidence against each of the accused without referring at all to the statement referred to—R g v Sheik Miya 6 B H C R 10 But see Emp v Jamaldi 51 Cal 100 cited under Note 915 (5) ante

Confessions —It is for the Judge to decide whether the statements or confessions made to the Magistrate and how much of the confessions made to the police are admissible leaving it to the jury to decide amounts to a misdirection—Amiruddin v K E 45 Cal 557 Omission to mention to the jury that a confession made by the accused to the police officer is inadmissible in evidence is a misdirection—Someshwar v Emp, 3 P L T 101 The Judge must decide whether the confessions are voluntarily made or not It is not for the jury to decide But once the confessions are admitted in evidence it is for the jury to determine the weight to be attached to them and the truth or otherwise of those confessions—Emp

v Kesari, 11 Bom L R 332 But the Judge should charge the jury that the mere confessions of prisoners tried simultaneously with the accused for the same offence which are in a very qualified manner made operative as evidence by section 30 of the Evidence Act, ought to be valued merely as accomplice's testimony, and to be treated as evidence of a peculiarly infirm and defective character requiring specially careful scrutiny before it can be safely relied on—Q v Ramdoyal, 21 W R 47 Where a Judge admitted in evidence a confession made before a Police Officer and directed the jury that the confession could and should be used not merely against the maker but also against his co accused it was a misdirection—Amiruddin v K E, 45 Cal 557

As regards retracted confessions see Note 915 no (4) under sec 297

920. Inadmissible evidence —It is the duty of the Judge to see that evidence which is not admissible in itself should not be allowed to go in, to the prejudice of the accused—Abbas v Q E, 25 Cal 736 Where a document, which is not per se admissible, is admitted by the Court, and the accused having sufficient opportunity at the trial omits to take any objection, he cannot afterwards in appeal impeach the verdict of the jury on the ground that the document had been admitted without formal proof But it is competent to the High Court to consider whether after excluding the evidence wrongly admitted, the rest of the evidence is sufficient to sustain the verdict—Ram Bhagwan v Emp, 19 Cr L J 886 (Pat) Where during the trial before a jury the Public Prosecutor read an alleged confession of the accused which not being recorded according to law was inadmissible in evidence, held that the irregularity of allowing it to be read might have influenced the minds of the jury, however carefully the Judge might have endeavoured to remove any impression caused thereby, and that the accused was entitled to a retrial—Damodar v Emp, 3 P L T 52, 23 Cr. L J 141

Meaning and construction of document —The Judge must explain to the jury the legal construction to be put upon a document and its legal effect and bearing—Q v Setul 3 W R 69 If there appears to be a palpable blot or alteration on the face of a document, the Judge has every right to draw the attention of the jury to it—Q v Kissoree 17 W R. 58.

921. Clause (c) —It is the duty of the Judge to decide upon all matters which it may be necessary to prove in order to enable evidence of particular matters to be given Thus if it is proposed to give secondary evidence of a document the original of which is alleged to have been lost or destroyed, it is the duty of the Judge to decide whether the original has been lost or destroyed—Q E v Lalsingh, Ratanlal 452 Where the accused made one confession before the committing Magistrate and another confession before the Court of Session, retracting the previous confession, and alleged that he was beaten by the Police and the previous confession was caused by inducement offered by the Police, it was held that the Judge ought to decide whether the first confession was induced by illegal promise and whether that inducement still existed or had been effectually dispelled when the Magistrate recorded the confession —Q E v Ripya Ratanlal 745

922 Expression of opinion by Judge —Though it is open to a Judge to express his opinion to the jury on any matter of fact still the Judge ought to refrain from expressing any decided opinion on matters of fact in unmistakable terms because the decision of the questions of fact is left entirely for the jury—Bharut Chunder 1 W R 2 Q v Gunga 1 W R 25, Rahamat Ali v Emp 4 C W N 196 The Judge in his charge to the jury ought not to express his own opinion in terms too dogmatic and unqualified even though he informs them that they are not bound by any opinion of his—Ofel Molla v K E 18 C W N 180 15 Cr L J 147 Topandas v Emp 25 Cr L J 761 (Sind) The Judge should be careful to express his opinion in such a way as not in any way to interfere with the duties of the jury to finally decide according to their own view of the facts—Faaruddin v K E 42 C L J 111 26 Cr L J 1553 The Judge should not impress his own opinion indelibly on the mind of the jury and thus give them no option but to arrive at a decision which he himself arrived at—Khijiruddin v Emp 53 Cal 372 42 C L J 504 27 Cr L J 766 Naibulla v Emp 43 C L J 488 27 Cr L J 1038 He should present the facts in their natural aspect and ought to leave the jury to decide the facts for themselves and he must not suggest farfetched explanations of points that tell in favour of or against either party—Kizhakedath Unniram 2 Weir 386 In re Subbu Tevan 14 M L T 442 14 Cr L J 628 If he expresses any opinion he should also add that it is his own opinion which is not binding on the jury and that the jury is at liberty to draw their own conclusions—Laxumana 2 Weir 385 (386) Q E v Bepin 10 Cal 970 Topandas v Emp 25 Cr L J 761 (Sind) Panchu Das v Emp 34 Cal 698 Natabar v Emp 35 Cal 531

Duty of jury 299 It is the duty of the jury—

(a) to decide which view of the facts is true and then to return the verdict which under such view ought according to the direction of the Judge, to be returned,

(b) to determine the meaning of all technical terms (other than terms of law) and words used in an unusual sense which it may be necessary to determine whether such words occur in documents or not,

(c) to decide all questions which according to law are to be deemed questions of fact,

(d) to decide whether general indefinite expressions do or do not apply to particular cases, unless such expressions refer to legal procedure or unless their meaning is ascertained by law, in either of which cases it is the duty of the Judge to decide their meaning.

Illustrations

(a) A is tried for the murder of B

It is the duty of the Judge to explain to the jury the distinction between murder and culpable homicide, and to tell them under what view of the facts A ought to be convicted of murder, or of culpable homicide or to be acquitted

It is the duty of the jury to decide which view of the facts is true and to return a verdict in accordance with the direction of the Judge, whether that direction is right or wrong and whether they do or do not agree with it

(b) The question is whether a person entertained a reasonable belief on a particular point—whether work was done with reasonable skill or due diligence

Each of these is a question for the jury

923. View of facts —It means the whole view of facts alleged against the accused—the view taken by the prosecution which leads to the conclusion of his guilt, or the view which is set up on his behalf and which would make him innocent—Q v Md Humayun, 21 W R 72 In an offence under section 193 I P C it is enough for the jury to find that the two contradictory statements are proved to their satisfaction and they need not find which of the two statements is false—Md Humayun 21 W R 72

924. Questions of fact —It is the duty of the jury and not of the Judge to decide all questions of fact Where in the summing up the Judge left no question of fact for the jury to decide but decided all himself, and said expressly that in his opinion it was proved that the accused had committed murder, and the only thing he left to the jury was to say which of the exceptions to section 300 I P C applied if the jury held that the offence did not amount to murder, it was held that such a summing up was not in accordance with law and a new trial should be ordered—Q v Shamsher 9 W R 51 But although the jury are the sole Judges of facts still it is the duty of the Judge to help the jury to find facts He has to advise the jury as to the logical bearing of the evidence admitted upon the matters to be found by them—Afroddi v K E, 25 C W N 833 20 Cr L J 661

The following are instances of questions of facts —(1) The question of intent in a case of kidnapping—K E v Hughes, 14 All 25, (2) the question as to whether there was free consent, in a case under sec 366 I P C—Q v Gopaul 1 W R 21 (3) the question whether a fact was or was not proved, or what fact was proved—Sadhu Sheikh v. Emp 4 C W N 576 (4) the question as to the identity of thumb impressions on two or more documents for the purpose of ascertaining whether the thumb impressions are of one and the same person—Pucha Mandal v Emp 1 C L J 385 (5) the question whether possession of the stolen property was recent enough to warrant a conviction for the substantive offence of dacoity—Guz ala Hanuma n v Emp 26 Mad 467

Illustration (a) —Although Illustration (a) lays down that in a charge of murder the Judge should explain to the jury the distinction between murder and culpable homicide still where in a trial for murder a verdict for culpable homicide not amounting to murder could not be properly come to under any aspect of the case before the Court the Judge is not called upon to explain to the jury the distinction between murder and culpable homicide not amounting to murder —Nga Mya v K E 8 I B R 306 (F B)

300 In cases tried by jury, after the Judge has finished his charge, the jury may retire to consider their verdict

Retirement to consider

Except with the leave of the Court no person other than a juror shall speak to, or hold any communication with, any member of such jury

925 After a charge is made to the jury the jury should not be allowed to disperse but should at once retire to consider the verdict Where after the charge they were allowed to go home and come back some hours later and then they considered their verdict held that the trial was vitiated—Sarima i v Emp 6 P L T 552 26 Cr L J 861

This section which is explicit in its terms should be strictly observed and it is highly undesirable that a jury in any case should have any communication with any body (even the Judge) who is not a juryman upon the subject matter of the trial It is also highly undesirable that a Police constable should be stationed anywhere or in any position in which he can hear the deliberations of the jurymen or that anybody should be in a position where it is possible for him to know the form the deliberations of the jury took or what view any particular juror expressed about the matter—Banamali 44 Cal 723 21 C W N 167 18 Cr L J 311 Where it was proved that after the charge to the jury had been delivered a person other than a juror spoke to or held communication with a member of the jury without the leave of the Court it was held that that was sufficient to upset the verdict and it was not necessary to consider whether the irregularity had in fact prejudiced the accused—Ba nmadhub v K E 46 Cal 207 22 C W N 740 19 Cr L J 737 But where during an adjournment of the Court before the Judge s charge was finished one of the jurors was seen conversing with strangers but it did not appear that the conversation was about the case it was held that this was not a sufficient ground for interfering with the verdict of the jury—In re Pilla Subba 10 L W 379

After the conclusion of the evidence and after the conclusion of the address of the Public Prosecutor and before the defence had been heard in full and before the Sessions Judge had summed up the case to the jury one of the jurors in a room occupied by the clerks of the pleaders, in answer to some questions put to him, intimated that in his opinion the accused was guilty of the charge against him and the Sessions Judge although informed of the fact, proceeded with the trial, and took the verdict of the jury, held that the verdict must be set aside and there should be a fresh trial before a fresh jury—Emp v Nanu Ali 25 C. W. N. 240. After the jury had retired to consider their verdict in a criminal case they saw the Judge in his chamber and asked him for a direction on a point of law. The Judge and the jury then went into the Court room and the jury in the presence of the pleaders put certain questions to the Judge, and the answers thereto were recorded. Held that the mere fact that a question was put by the jury to the Judge not in open Court but in chamber did not vitiate the trial, but was at best an irregularity—Bilaschandra v Emp., 27 C. W. N. 656 (659).

301. When the jury have considered their verdict the foreman shall inform the Judge what is their verdict, or what is the verdict of a majority.

Delivery of verdict.

926. Verdict.—It is a dangerous thing for a Court to rely upon anything except the verdict of the jury or to listen to the deliberations of the jury or to the statements of individual jurymen made to this or that person after they had performed their duty and delivered the verdict—Banamali 44 Cal. 723 21 C. W. N. 167.

The law does not prescribe any specific form in which the verdict is to be returned. The jury may return their verdict in any form they think fit—Q v Hurry Prosad 14 W. R. 59.

The jury can return a verdict for a lesser offence ignoring the graver charge if the evidence before them does not warrant a verdict for the latter—Q v Saloo Sheikh 3 W. R. 41. And the jury may do so even though the accused was not charged with the lesser offence—Pamtalai v Emp., 26 Mad. 243. Thus, the jury can return a verdict for abetment or attempt though the prisoner was charged with the substantive offence only—S. P. Ghosh v Emp. 8 Bur. L. T. 217, 16 Cr. L. J. 675. Subrai v K. E. 13 O. C. 295, 11 Cr. L. J. 630. Where the charge against the accused was under sec. 149 read alternatively with sec. 325 I. P. C. (i.e. being members of an unlawful assembly and causing grievous hurt by implication) a verdict of guilty of the offence under sec. 325 alone, although it did not form the subject of a separate charge was legally sustainable—Govt. v Makalli 5 Cal. 871. When a person is charged with several offences arising out of a single act or series of acts the word 'verdict' means the entire verdict on all the charges and is not confined to a verdict on a particular charge—Krishna Dhan v Q. E., 22 Cal. 377. Where there are several accused the jury have to give their verdict on the facts against each man severally, and even when several prisoners are jointly tried the jury can convict one and acquit the others—Jamiruddi v K E 16 C W N 909 13 Cr L J 715

By verdict should be understood the collective opinion of the jury as a body arrived at after mutual consultation and ascertained and announced by the foreman In case of disagreement among the jury the individual opinions of the members are never intended to be disclosed—Public Prosecutor v Abdul Hamid 36 Mad 585 If a Judge records the individual opinions of the jurors by name the procedure is opposed to the fundamental principle of the scheme of trial by jury—Jagannath v Emp, 12 O L J 643 2 O W N 534 26 Cr L J 1346 Where it was alleged that the verdict of the jury was arrived at by casting lots whereupon the Judge held an inquiry and examined the individual jurors held that the statements of the jurors as to what happened in the jury room and as to the mode in which the verdict was arrived at were inadmissible—Emp v Harkumar 40 Cal 693 17 C W N 787 14 Cr L J 392

Where after the delivery of the verdict the jury wants to say something more it is undesirable to stop the jury at such stage of the proceedings for it may happen that before the verdict is recorded the foreman may make some observations in respect of that verdict which may show the Judge that the jury have not properly understood the case It would then be the duty of the Judge not to record the verdict but to recharge the jury so as to lay the case properly before them—Narayan v Emp 30 Cal 485 Where the jury were apparently not able to follow the summing up of the Judge as regards the law bearing on the charges it is the duty of the Judge when the foreman told him of it to explain it to them again—In re Palavesa Tevan 1911 M W N 190 12 Cr L J 140 There can be no valid verdict if the jury have not rightly understood the nature of the offence in question—Q v Sistiram 1 W R 1

302 If the jury are not unanimous, the Judge may require them to retire for further consideration After such a period as the Judge considers reasonable, the jury may deliver their verdict, although they are not unanimous

Procedure where jury differ

927 Application of section —Under this section the Sessions Judge can ask the jury if they are not unanimous to retire for further consideration before the delivery of verdict but cannot do so after its actual delivery—Kya Nyun v K E 7 L B R 140 15 Cr L J 678 Pub Pro v Abdul Hamid 36 Mad 585

But if the verdict is not clear the Judge may require them after delivery of verdict to consider it even though they be unanimous since a verdict which is ambiguous or not clear cannot be received—Q v Uokoor, 1 W R 50

928 If the jury are not unanimous —A jury may be required to retire for further consideration only when their verdict is not unanimous An unanimous verdict of the jury unless it is contrary to law, must be received by the Judge—Govt v Mahaddi 5 Cal 871 Q

v. Jowhir, 7 W. R. 22; Hia Gyi v. K. E., 3 L. B. R. 75. If the jury is unanimous and there is no ambiguity in the verdict, the Judge cannot require them to reconsider their verdict—Q. E. v. Malhari, 10 Bom. 735; Q. E. v. Deep, 20 Bom. 215. If the Sessions Judge disagrees with the unanimous verdict of the jury, the only course open to him is to act under sec. 307—Emp. v. Kendia, 28 Bom. 412.

When the jury are not unanimous it is open to the Judge to require them to retire for further consideration, giving at the same time further directions on matters of law—Emp. v. Bhimu, 6 Bom. L. R. 258. But the Judge is not bound to summon a fresh jury—Q. v. G. paul, 1 W. R. 41.

Verdict to be given on each charge. Judge may question jury.

303. (1) Unless otherwise ordered by the Court, the jury shall return a verdict on all the charges on which the accused is tried, and the Judge may ask them such questions as are necessary to ascertain what their verdict is.

Questions and answers to be recorded.

(2) Such questions and the answers to them shall be recorded.

929. Verdict on all the charges.—The Judge ought to call upon the jury to return a verdict on each one of the heads of the charges. If the trial is for murder of two persons and the jury return a verdict of guilty, the Sessions Judge should ascertain whether the verdict relates to the killing of one or the other or both—Q. E. v. Bishu Ratanlal 746; Krishna Dhan v. Q. E., 22 Cal. 377.

Where there are more than one accused as well as several charges it would be a convenient course if the officer of the Court were to take a verdict of the jury upon each charge separately. Thus in a case the accused were charged under sections 147, 148, 304, [illegible] and [illegible] I. P. C., and the Sessions Judge asked the jury the comprehensive question: "I shall want you to give me a verdict in respect of the offences under sections 147, 148, 304, [illegible] and 325 I. P. C. for each of the accused" and the jury returned an unanimous verdict [illegible]. They gave a verdict only as regards sections 147 and 148 and expressed no opinion as regards the other charges, and the Sessions Judge had to question the jury again on the other charges. The High Court held the procedure to be faulty and directed that in such a case the officer of the Court should at first put the question to the jury: "What is your verdict with regard to each of the accused as regards the charge under section 147 I. P. C.?" He would then get a clear answer upon this charge. Then he would ask: "What is your verdict with regard to each of the accused as regards the charge under section 148?" He would get a definite answer to that question. Then he would proceed in the same way and ask "What is your verdict with regard to each of the accused as regards the charge under section [illegible] [illegible]" [illegible] be no difficulty in getting a complete verdict from the jury—Eran Khan v Emp 50 Cal 658 (663)

If a Judge charges the jury and takes verdict as regards some only of the accused and afterwards hears arguments and takes verdict as regards the remaining accused he acts irregularly and contrary to the provisions of this Code—Pub Pro v Abdul Hamid 36 Mad 585

930 Questioning the jury —The Judge is entitled to question the jury as to their verdict only where it is ambiguous or incomplete so that it is necessary to ascertain what the verdict really is—Abdul Hamid 36 Mad 585 Emp v Abdul Hamid 3· Cal 759 Q E v Dada 15 Bom 452 Wafadar v Q E 21 Cal 955 Q E v Devji 20 Bom 215 Q v Sustiram 1 W R 1 If the verdict of the jury is incomplete or is not free from ambiguity the Judge is wrong in accepting such verdict without questioning the jury as to what their verdict really is Thus where the jury returned a verdict of guilty but not voluntarily under a charge of voluntarily causing grievous hurt and the Judge accepted the verdict to be one of guilty and convicted the accused it was held that the verdict was really one of not guilty and the Judge was wrong without further questioning the jury in treating it is a verdict of guilty —Emp v Khudiram 12 C W N 530 see also K E v Chidghan 7 C W N 135 So also where in a case there were several accused and several charges under sections 147 148 304 325 and 326 I P C and the jury returned a verdict of guilty under sec 147 against some of the accused and under section 148 against the rest but gave no verdict on the other charges Held that the verdict of the jury was incomplete and it was necessary for the Sessions Judge to put further questions to the jury to ascertain what their verdict was as regards the charges under sections 304 325 and 326 I P C —Eran Khan v Emp 50 Cal 658 Ram Prasad v Emp 26 Cr L J 1090 (Nag) If the verdict of the jury is confused and unintelligible it is the duty of the Judge to obtain from them a proper and correct verdict before accepting the verdict given—Wilson 30 C W N 693 27 Cr L J 926 Thus at the conclusion of a trial the jury returned a verdict of culpable homicide not amounting to murder The Judge questioned them as to which part of sec 304 I P C their verdict came under Their answers revealed the fact that they did not at all understand the law whereupon the Judge again explained the law The jury again retired considered their verdict and brought in a unanimous verdict of murder Held that the first verdict being incomplete and the result of a misunderstanding of the law the Judge was bound to explain the law to them the second verdict was the legal verdict and one acceptable by the Judge—Emp v Nga Tin Gyi 4 Rang 488 28 Cr L J 213 In a case of rioting if the verdict of the jury leaves it uncertain what the common object of the assembly is the Judge ought to ask the jury questions under this section to ascertain the common object he does not do so the verdict is bad in law—Wafadar v Q E, 955 Where in a case under sec 408 I P C the jury returned guilty but were not definite as to the amount embezzled approximate amount which was a fraction of the amount

where the Judge was inclined to think that a much larger amount than that mentioned by the jury had been misappropriated, held that in a case like this, the Judge was entitled to ask the jury such questions as were necessary to ascertain what their verdict was—Khirode v K E, 29 C W N 54, 40 C L J 555 26 Cr L J 532 Where the verdict is general and complete and free from ambiguity, the Judge is not competent to put questions to the jury, but must accept it without question—Emp v Dhunum, 9 Cal 53, Q E v Desai, Ratanlal 442, Q E v Dada, 15 Bom 452 Emp v Kondiba, 28 Bom 412, Emp v Chirkua 2 A L J 475, In re Ram Naicker, 22 M L J 355, Edon v Emp, 21 Cr L J 829 (Cal), Bilas Chundra v K E, 27 C W N 626 (628)

When the jury have delivered a verdict the Judge cannot ask them to reconsider their verdict The Judge is only entitled to question the jury to ascertain what their verdict really is—Abdul Hamid, 36 Mad 585, Lyme v Crown, 4 Lah 382, Kya Nyun v K E, 7 L B R 140, 15 Cr L J 678 If he disagrees with their verdict, he should proceed under section 307, but he cannot ask them to reconsider their verdict—Kya Nyun 7 L B R 140.

Object of questions —This section never contemplates that on ascertaining that the jury are not unanimous, the Judge should make minute inquiries to learn the nature of the majority and its opinion, so that he would have the opportunity of accepting or refusing that opinion as a verdict according as it coincides with his own opinion or not Whatever may have been the individual opinion of the Judge, if he went so far as to ask the Jury what was the exact majority, and what was the opinion of the majority, the Judge ought to receive that verdict without hesitation —Hurry Churn v Emp, 10 Cal 140

Asking reasons for verdict —This section enables the Judge to ask only such questions as are necessary to ascertain what the verdict is Questions put to the jury, demanding their reasons for the verdict (i e, reasons for convicting or acquitting the accused) specially, if the verdict is unanimous, exceed the limits of questioning which the law contemplates in this section—Emp v Bhadmia, 6 Bom L R 258, Emp v Dhunum, 9 Cal 53, In re Subbia Thevan, 43 Mad 744, In re Ram Naicker, 22 M L J 355, Arunachella v Emp 13 Cr L J 586 (Mad)

But a reference under section 307 does not become invalid by reason of the Sessions Judge having asked the jury questions as to the reason of their verdict—In re Subbia Thevan, 43 Mad 744 39 M L J 65, 21 Cr L J 466 On the other hand he should ask reasons under certain circumstances See Note 937 under section 307

Questions and answers to be recorded —The questions put to and the answers given by the jury must be recorded in their exact words it is not enough if their substance only is recorded—Emp v Jhubboo 8 Cal 739.

Amending verdict.

amend the verdict, and it shall stand as ultimately amended.

931. "By accident or mistake." :—This section contemplates cases where the verdict delivered is not in accordance with what was intended to be delivered by the jury, such mistake being the result of an accident only But where the jury commits a mistake in understanding the law and such mistake results in an erroneous verdict, it cannot be amended by the jury under this section but can be corrected only by the Judge disagreeing with the jury and referring the case under sec 307 to the High Court—Emp v Kondiba, 28 Bom 412 So also, where the jurors being misled by the notes of the foreman as to some of the evidence, delivered an erroneous verdict, such a verdict could not be said to have been delivered by accident or mistake and could not be amended by the jury under this section—In re Ram Naicker, 22 M L J 355, 13 Cr L J 285

After the witnesses for the prosecution and certain witnesses for the defence were examined the Judge addressed the jury and asked them to give their verdict The jury gave a verdict of guilty, thereupon the Judge proceeded with the examination of the remaining witnesses for the defence and after it was done, he again summoned up the case to the jury and asked them to reconsider their verdict in the light of additional evidence The jury again returned a verdict of guilty and the Judge passed sentence on the accused Held that the first verdict was illegal because the Judge had charged the jury before the examination of the defence witnesses was finished (sec 297), and the second verdict was illegal, because section 304 empowers the jury only to amend a wrong verdict delivered by accident or mistake but does not empower them to reconsider a verdict in the light of additional evidence As soon as the first verdict was delivered (even though it was illegal) the jury became functus officio and they had no power to deliver a fresh verdict on further evidence taken The procedure was wholly illegal, the conviction and sentence must be set aside and a new trial held—Lyme v Crown, 4 Lah 382

Where the verdict of the jury is clear and there is no accident or mistake in delivering it, it is a proper verdict and cannot be amended under this section and a second verdict delivered by the jury after being questioned by the Judge cannot be allowed to stand as an amendment—Q E v Chunilal, Ratanlal 982, Q E v Madhavrao, 19 Bom 735

"Before or immediately after it is recorded" —The power of amending a verdict provided by this section must be exercised before or immediately after it is recorded, and cannot be exercised after the jurors have dispersed In a trial by jury the foreman announced the verdict of 'not guilty' as the unanimous verdict of the jury, and the verdict was recorded and the prisoner acquitted From information received some days afterwards the Judge was led to believe that the jurors were not agreed as regards the verdict, the Judge summoned the foreman and examined him on oath, he deposed that the verdict given as the unanimous verdict was really the verdict of a majority, and was given as the verdict owing to a misunderstanding that the opinion of the majority binding upon all jurors It was held that the Court had no jurisdiction, in consequence of the foreman's subsequent statement, to set aside the verdict and the order of acquittal—Emp v Brian Carter, 1913 P R 6 (F. B), 13 Cr L J 815

Verdict in High Court when to prevail.

305. (1) When in a case tried before a High Court the jury are unanimous in their opinion, or when as many as six are of one opinion and the Judge agrees with them, the Judge shall give judgment in accordance with such opinion.

(2) When in any such case the jury are satisfied that they will not be unanimous, but six of them are of one opinion, the foreman shall so inform the judge.

Discharge of jury in other cases

(3) If the Judge disagrees with the majority, he shall at once discharge the jury.

Under subsection (3), if the jury are divided in the proportion of six to three, the Judge should ascertain the verdict of the majority before discharging the jury Where six of the jury agreed to a verdict, and the presiding Judge, without ascertaining what their verdict was, discharged the jury and ordered a retrial, and the retrial came before another Judge and another jury, it was held that the previous Judge having improperly discharged the jury without ascertaining what their verdict was and whether he agreed or disagreed with the verdict of the majority, the previous Judge had the legal seisin of the case and no other Judge could try it—Emp v Jatindra, 8 C W N xlviii

For the purposes of this section, the Judge of the Judicial Commissioner's Court sitting in Session is a High Court (see sec 266) and not a Court of Session, consequently, he has no power to disagree with the unanimous verdict of the jury and to refer the case to the High Court under sec 307—K L v Mithoo, 25 Cr L J 428, A I R 1925 Sind 34

Verdict in Court of Session when to prevail.

306. (1) When in a case tried before the Court of Session the Judge does not think it necessary to express disagreement with the verdict of the jurors or of a majority of the jurors, he shall give judgment accordingly.

(2) If the accused is acquitted, the Judge shall record judgment of acquittal If the accused is convicted, the Judge shall, unless he proceeds in accordance with the provisions of Section 562, pass sentence on him according to law.

The italicised words have been added by section 80 of the Cr P C Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 The amendment is merely verbal and is the same as that made in sections 245 (2) and 258 (2)

932 When the verdict of the jury has been delivered the Sessions Judge is bound to say and record whether he agrees with the verdict or not—Q v Chand Bagdee 7 W R 6 Q v Bahar Ali 15 W R 46 It is not competent to a Sessions Judge after the jury has returned their verdict and gone away and in the absence of the accused to examine some witnesses and then to act on the evidence in determining whether or not he should differ from the jury—Emp v Nagappa 7 Bom L R 979 If he agrees with and accepts the verdict of the jury (or of the majority) he is bound to deliver judgment according to the verdict once he agrees with the verdict he cannot afterwards reconsider it or disagree with it and refer the matter to the High Court—Q E v Mojahur 4 C W N 683

Acquittal —As soon as the judgment of acquittal is pronounced the prisoner is entitled to be discharged from custody (if there is no other charge pending against him) and his further detention is illegal It is for the jail authorities in whose custody the prisoner was to satisfy themselves of the result of the trial and no formal warrant of release by the Court to the jail authorities is necessary—Anonymous 5 M H C R App 2

Sentence —If the verdict of the jury is one of guilty it is the duty of the Judge to pass an adequate sentence for the offence for which the jury have convicted the prisoner and the fact that the Judge has differed from the jury cannot be a ground for passing a light sentence In so doing he usurps the functions of the jury—Nabber 3 W R (Cr Let) 16 He can if he likes release the accused on taking bond under section 562

Procedure when Sessions Judge disagrees with verdict

307 (1) If in any such case the Judge disagrees with the verdict of the jurors, or of a majority of the jurors, on all or any of the charges on which any accused person has been tried, and is clearly of opinion that it is necessary for the ends of justice to submit the case in respect of such accused person to the High Court, he shall submit the case accordingly, recording the grounds of his opinion, and, when the verdict is one of acquittal, stating the offence which he considers to ha been committed, and in such case, if the accused is further charged under the provisions of Section 310, shall proceed to try him on such charge, as if such verdict has been one of conviction.

(2) Whenever the Judge submits a case under this section, he shall not record judgment of acquittal or of conviction on any of the charges on which such accused has been tried, but he may either remand such accused to custody or admit him to bail.

(3) In dealing with the case so submitted the High Court may exercise any of the powers which it may exercise on an appeal, and subject thereto it shall, after considering the entire evidence and after giving due weight to the opinions of the Sessions Judge and the jury, acquit or convict such accused of any offence of which the jury could have convicted him upon the charge framed and placed before it; and if it convicts him, may pass such sentence as might have been passed by the Court of Session.

Change —This section has been amended by sec 81 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923 The main changes are the following —first, in sub-section (1) the words "any accused person" have been substituted for the words 'the accused," and the words 'in respect of such accused person' have been added, in sub-section (2) and (3) the words 'such accused' have been substituted for the words 'the accused' The reasons are thus stated 'This amendment prescribes that when a Judge accepts the verdict of the jury in respect of some of the accused, but not of others, he need only refer the case of the latter to the High Court"—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914)

Secondly, the italicised words at the end of sub-section (1) have also been newly added "We think, however, that a further amendment is required in section 307, to provide for the case of a person who is also charged with a previous conviction under section 310 It seems obvious that if the Judge disagrees with the verdict of the jury on the principal charge, and submits the case to the High Court, it is desirable that the record should be complete We propose therefore to insert at the end of section 307 (1) a provision for the trial of the further charge under section 310"—Report of the Select Committee of 1916 Under the old law, it was held that if a case was referred to the High Court under sec. 307, there was no conviction or acquittal in the Court of Session It was the High Court which could convict or acquit the accused, and it was only after such conviction by the High Court that the accused could be asked under section 310 to plead to a previous conviction—Emp v Kandaswamy, 30 Mad 134 Under the present amendment, provision is made for trial as to the charge of previous conviction, in the Sessions Court itself.

933. Scope of section —Assessor case tried with jury —Where the Sessions Judge tried the accused with jury for an offence triable by jury, and with the jurors as assessors for an offence triable with assessors, and differing from them in their verdict and opinion referred both matters to the High Court, it was held that as to the matter triable with assessors, the Judge should not have included it in the reference but should have disposed of it according to law—Emp v Kalidas, 8 Bom L R 599 Emp v Vyankatsing, 9 Bom L R 1057 Q E v Devu, Ratanlal 600, In re Kambala Narayana, 36 M L J 452 But if the Judge tries the assessor case with the aid of the jurors and not as assessors, and disagrees with their verdict (not opinion), he can refer the case to the High Court—Q E v Jeyram, 23 Bom 696, Surya v Q E, 25 Cal 555

Who can refer —The reference under this section must be made by the Judge who held the trial and heard the evidence and not by the officer who succeeds him as Judge—Emp v Dil Mahomed, 2 C L J 48 But see section 559

High Court —Since the High Court in this section does not include a Judicial Commissioner s Court (see section 266), a Judge of the Judicial Commissioner s Court of Sind sitting in Sessions has no power to refer a case under this section to the J C Court in its High Court jurisdiction —K E. v Mithoo, 25 Cr L J 428, A I R 1925 Sind, 34.

934. Disagreement —The Judge can refer the case to the High Court if he disagrees with the verdict of the jury If he once accepts the verdict he cannot subsequently reconsider it, and disagreeing with the verdict refer the case to the High Court—Q E v Mojahur 4 C W N 683 The disagreement may be on questions of law as well as of fact. That is the Session Judge may submit to the High Court a case in which he disagrees with the jury on their finding of facts as well as a case in which he consider that the jury have not followed his directions as to the law—Q v Koonjo, 20 W. R 1

It is not in every case of doubt nor in every case in which the Judge entertains a view different from that of the jury, that a reference can be made under this section, but the verdict of the jury must be manifestly wrong before such reference can be made—Emp v Swarnamoyee, 41 Cal 621 Where the jury misunderstands the law as explained by the Judge and delivers a wrong verdict, the Judge should refer the case to the High Court under this section, and not ask the jury to reconsider their verdict—Emp v Kondiba, 28 Bom 412

Where the Judge in his direction to the jury himself expressed the opinion that the prosecution evidence was open to hostile criticism, and the jury regarding the evidence with suspicion delivered a verdict of not guilty, the Judge was not justified in referring the case to the High Court, because there could not be said to have been a disagreement bet- the Judge and the jury, but rather agreement—K E v. Cl C W N 135.

A reference should not be made where the disagreement between the Judge and the jury is merely on a technical point of law Thus where the Judge considered the offence to be under sec 366 I P C but left to the jury to decide whether the offence was under sec 363 or sec 366 I P C and the jury found that the offence was under sec 363 I P C held that there was only a technical difference between the two sections and the Judge should in view of his own summing up have accepted the verdict of the jury and should not have made a reference to the High Court—Emp v Ali Raza 28 O C 69 26 Cr L J 310

A reference can be made to the High Court only on the ground of disagreement between the Judge and the jury and on no other grounds Where the jury returned a verdict of not guilty the mere fact that in a similar case upon similar evidence the High Court had convicted some other persons is no ground for referring the case to the High Court—Emp v Irya Doddappa 6 Bom L R 599

935 "Necessary for the ends of justice" —This section requires as an essential condition of the reference that the Judge must disagree with the verdict of the jurors or a majority of them on all or any of the charges and that the Judge should be clearly of opinion that it is necessary for the ends of justice to submit the case to the High Court—Emp v Irya Doddappa 6 Bom L R 599 This section leaves the referring of a case to the High Court entirely to the discretion of the Judge for it is only where he disagrees with the verdict of the jury so completely that he considers it necessary for the ends of justice to submit the case to the High Court that he should do so This discretion should however always be exercised when the Judge thinks that the verdict is not supported by evidence It is the only way in which the miscarriage of justice by a perverse verdict of a jury can be remedied by the High Court—Q E v Guruvadh 13 Mad 343 Saroda Charan v Emp 41 C L J 320 26 Cr L J 1006 When the Judge points out to the jury the weak links in the prosecution and they do not consider them it is proper for the Judge to refer the case to the High Court because such a reference is really necessary for the ends of justice—Emp v Abdul Rahaman 9 C L J 432

A reference should be made under this section when the Judge is clearly of opinion that such a reference is necessary for the ends of justice —Surya Kurmi v Q E 25 Cal 555 that is when the disagreement between the Judge and the jury is such a complete dissent as to lead the Judge to consider it necessary for the ends of justice to submit the case to the High Court—Imp v Bhawani 2 Bom 5 5 Q E v Devji 20 Bom 215 The mere fact that the Sessions Judge does not agree with the unanimous verdict of the jury does not make it obligatory on the Sessions Judge to make a reference to the High Court Section 307 clearly gives to the Sessions Judge a discretion in the matter and it is only when he is clearly of opinion that it is necessary for the ends of justice to submit the case to the High Court that he shall so submit it If he is not clearly of that opinion his failure to submit the case is not a subject for interference by the High Court—Eran Khan v Emp 50 Cal 658 Where a Sessions Judge made a reference on the ground that the question involved was a matter of importance but he did not state that it was necessary for the ends of justice to submit the case to the High Court or that he dis agreed with the verdict of the jury the High Court sent back the case directing the Judge to make a proper reference should he think it necessary for the ends of justice to do so—Rajeshwar v Emp 9 C W N lxvi

It is no longer the law that before making a reference the Judge must be satisfied that the verdict is perverse It is sufficient that he should be clearly of opinion that a reference is necessary for the ends of justice—Ismail v Emp 23 C W N 747 Saroda Charan v Emp 41 C L J 320 26 Cr L J 1006

936 Submit the case —Whether whole case should be referred — It is not intended that when the Sessions Judge is not prepared to accept the verdict of the jury in its entirety but is prepared to accept it as re gards some of the accused the whole case is to be referred to the High Court Where the Judge agrees with the jury in respect of a particular accused the Judge ought to convict or acquit him as the case may be and it is only with reference to those accused in respect of whom he de clines to accept the verdict of the jury that he should make the reference —Emp v Babur Ali 42 Cal 789 19 C W N 584 16 Cr L J 371 This is now expressly made clear by the present amendment But where the disagreement between the Judge and the jury is as to some of the charges it is necessary that the whole case should be referred When the accused was tried on several charges and the Sessions Judge accepted the verdict of the jury as to some and disagreed as to the other charges and referred the case to the High Court only as to these latter it was held that by this limited form of reference the High Court was precluded from considering the entire evidence on record and that the Sessions Judge should have referred the whole case leaving it to the High Court to consider the whole of the evidence that was placed before the jury—K E v Ananda Charan 21 C W N 435

Recording the grounds of his opinion —In referring the case under this section the Sessions Judge should state what material portions of the evidence he believes to be true and his reasons for arriving at his con clusions so as to enable the High Court to appreciate them and to give due weight to them—K E v Punit 3 P L T 413 Emp v Dyamanaik 6 Bom L R 5 9 Where the Judge merely said that the verdict was against the weight of evidence and expressed no other opinion in his reference it was held that he ought to have set out on what portions of the evidence or on what facts the accused should have been convicted—K E v Bhut Nath 7 C W N 345 So also where the Sessions Judge merely stated in his reference that the verdict of the jury was erroneous and inconsistent and could not be accepted and that if the evidence had been believed all the accused should have been found guilty held that the reference was not a proper reference as it did not state the grounds of his opinion The reference should be so complete and self contained that it ought not to be necessary to refer to the order sheet—K E v Tarbulla 25 C W N 68 23 Cr L J 244 He should state with some fulness his view of the evi dence and the credibility of the more important witnesses because

High Court has to attach more or less weight to the opinion of the Judge who saw and heard the witnesses—Emp v Chander Krishna, 10 Bom L R 173

Reflections on jurors.—The reference of the Sessions Judge should not contain any extra-judicial observations e g any reflections on the conduct of the jurors which are not supported by any material on the record The 'opinion' of the Sessions Judge is his opinion on the merits of the case and does not include his speculations as to the conduct of jurors Such an imputation is not fair to the jurors—Emp v Dhananjoy, 51 Cal 347 (350, 351), 38 C L J 384, Mamfru v Emp, 51 Cal 418 (430), 38 C L J 397 It would be most unfortunate if persons of respectability called upon to discharge the responsible duty of jurors were exposed to the risk of aspersions upon their conduct If the Judge disagrees with the verdict of the jury, it is open to him to do so and to refer the case to the High Court if he is clearly of opinion that such a course is necessary for the ends of justice, but this does not require that he should make reflections upon the conduct of the jurors which are not supported by evidence on the record Such an imputation is unfair to the jurors unfair to the Judge himself, unfair to the accused and unfair to the High Court also—Mamfru v Emp, 51 Cal 418 (429, 431), 38 C L J 397

Recording evidence —The Judge should state in his reference the evidence for the prosecution and for the defence, the facts which in his opinion are proved upon the evidence recorded in the case, and the conclusions to which these facts led him—Emp v Irya 6 Bom L R 599

'Stating the offence' —In case of an acquittal by the jury the Sessions Judge should state in his reference what offence the accused has in his opinion committed and on what grounds he differs from the jury—Emp v. Chander Krishna, 10 Bom L R 173, Emp v Sahal Roy, 3 Cal 623, K E v Taribulla, 25 C W N 682, 23 Cr L J 244

If Judge refuses to refer —Where a jury convicted the accused against the opinion and advice of the Sessions Judge, and the latter declined to refer the case to the High Court under this section, it was held on appeal by the accused that the High Court had no power to interfere however wrong or absurd the verdict might have been, in as much as there was no misdirection by the Sessions Judge, and as there was evidence against the accused which was open to the jury to believe—Q E v Chinna 14 Mad 36, In re Kaiyan, 4 M L T 483, 9 Cr L J 93

Notice to accused —Where the Judge differed from the verdict of the jury and made a reference under this section the High Court before proceeding with the case, gave notice to the accused as in appeal to bring forward any objections to the Sessions Judge's recommendations—Q v Oottum 19 W R 38

clusion (i e verdict) of the jury and not the reasons on which that conclusion is based And the circumstance that no such reason has been ascertained does not warrant the High Court to decline to go into the evidence and arrive at its own judgment as to the guilt or innocence of the accused—Emp v Chellan 79 Mad 91 But the Judge should do well to take the reasons of the jury for the view taken by them especially when there is some inconsistency in their verdict—Emp v Annada 36 Cal 629 Emp v Bhullo 6 P L J 264 23 Cr L J 11 Even where the jury are unanimous in their verdict the Judge should ask for specific findings on the particular facts on which he himself relies This would enable the High Court to understand the particular grounds on which the jury proceeded and it will then only be necessary to consider the propriety of those grounds—Pamanna 2 Weir 388 (389) Emp v Kankaya 22 N L R 42 27 Cr L J 773 Where in a trial by jury the case depends entirely on circumstantial evidence and the jurors are divided in opinion the Judge ought if he intends to make a reference to the High Court under this section to ascertain from the jurors the reasons for their opinion—Emp v Zohra 1 P L T 657 55 I C 294 K E v Punit 3 P L T 413

which has been accepted by the Judge with regard to some of the accused —Emp v Akbar 51 Cal 271 (277) If the High Court is to interfere in every case of doubt or in every case in which the evidence would have warranted a different verdict then the real trial by jury would be at an end and the verdict of the jury would have no more weight than the opinions of assessors—Q v Sham Bagdi 20 W R 73

The High Court will not exercise its vast discretionary powers vested under this section in setting aside the unanimous verdict of a jury unless it is perverse or patently wrong or may have been induced by an error of the Judge—Emp v Dhunum 9 Cal 53 Reg v Khanderav 1 Bom 10 (13) Emp v Panna Lal 46 All 265 (267) 22 A L J 162 Q E v McCarthy 9 All 420 In re Hurru Narain 2 C L R 518 Q E v Mama 10 Bom 497 Q E v Dada 15 Bom 452 Q E v Devji 20 Bom 215 Emp v Walker 26 Bom L R 610 26 Cr L J 211 Emp v Nritya Gopal 38 C L J 1 Q E v Jacquiet 11 Cal 85 Ashgar v K E 22 C W N 811 Emp v Sagarmal 28 C W N 947 40 C L J 135 Emp v Hara Mohan 54 Cal 708 The High Court has to give due weight to the opinion of the Sessions Judge and to the opinion (verdict) of the jury The measure of the relative weight to be attached to these two factors cannot be crystallised into an inflexible formula The answer must depend upon the circumstances of each case But the trend of judicial opinion has been in favour of preference of the unanimous verdict of the jury If the verdict is not unanimous the weight to be attached to it is necessarily diminished but if the verdict is unanimous the High Court should not interfere with it unless it is clearly wrong or perverse or unreasonable —Emp v Dhananjoy 51 Cal 347 (353) Emp v Jamaldi 51 Cal 160 (165) 28 C W N 536 25 Cr L J 1000 Emp v Kankonja 22 N L R 42 27 Cr L J 773 Emp v Madan Mandal 41 Cal 662 Although the High Court has very full powers under Section 307 to reopen all matters in connection with the verdict of the jury it does not follow that the High Court should feel justified in using those powers to the full. If the verdict of the jury is unanimous and is neither perverse nor clearly and manifestly wrong the High Court should not re open the matter ab initio and proceed to try it de novo For if the case is re opened ab initio it is difficult to see what useful function is performed by a jury—Emp v Panna Lal 46 All 265 (267) 22 A L J 162 25 Cr L J 981 The High Court will not interfere on a reference under this section unless that court is of opinion that the verdict of the jury could not be supported by the evidence on the record—Emp v Gobind Singh 5 Pat 573 27 Cr L J 1308 The High Court will not interfere upon any mere preponderance of evidence unless it is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the verdict is so distinctly against the evidence that it may be termed a perverse verdict —Pamanna 2 Weir 388 (389) Asgar v K E 22 C W N 811 20 Cr L J 20 Emp v Mofizel 29 C W N 842 26 Cr L J 1298 or unless it were established that the jury were wholly miscarried in their conclusion upon the case—Q v Ram Churn 20 W R 33 or unless the guilt of the accused is proved beyond reasonable doubt—Emp v Chanso 22 C W N 1028 20 Cr L J 223 The High Court will not disturb the unanimous verdict of acquittal in a case where there is a substantial gap in the chain of evidence—K E v Sukka Beua 38 C L J 155 On a reference to the High Court to set aside a unanimous verdict of conviction the High Court will interfere where the prosecution has not adequately proved its case and where the facts are suspicious and will give the benefit of doubt to the accused—Emp v Yakub 30 C W N 859 27 Cr L J 1311 In dealing with an unanimous verdict of acquittal the High Court will have to consider whether the jury were entirely unreasonable in giving the benefit of doubt to the accused and whether it was impossible for the jury to arrive at any other reasonable conclusion than that the guilt of the accused had not been brought home to them—Emp v Golam Kadir 28 C W N 876 25 Cr L J 1284

Where in a criminal trial the jury found the accused not guilty and on being asked by the Judge to give reasons for their verdict they said that they gave the benefit of doubt and could give no other reason held that from the mere fact that the jury were unable to give their reasons beyond saying that they gave the accused the benefit of doubt it could not be said that the jury had no adequate reasons for returning a verdict of not guilty and that the verdict was wrong and the High Court would not interfere with the verdict Even trained intellects often find it difficult to formulate and put before the Court the reasons for an opinion which they hold or which they wish to propound—Emp v Nishi Kanta 41 C L J 35 26 Cr L J 805 A I R 1925 Cal 525

939 Power of High Court —In case of a reference under this section the High Court is to give due weight not only to the opinion of the jury but to that of the Judge as well—Emp v Neamatulla 17 C W N 1077 Emp v Bhullo 23 Cr L J 11 6 P L J 264 K E v Punit 3 P L T 413 Manindra v K E 41 Cal 754 Emp v Lyall 29 Cal 128 Q E v Iswari 15 Cal 269 But although the High Court is bound in dealing with a reference under this section to give due weight to the opinions of the Judge and the jury still it is not bound in any way by these opinions and the question whether the decision in the case is to be for acquittal or for conviction is entirely open to the High Court and left open to it to decide after consideration of the evidence and the opinions of the Judge and the jury—In re Nanni Kudumban 45 M L J 406 25 Cr L J 145 Emp v Sri Narain 11 C W N 715 Q E v Dada 15 Bom 452 Emp v Ananda 36 Cal 629 Emp v Abdul Rahaman 9 C L J 432 When once a reference is made to the High Courts the language of the Code does not justify any undue preference being given to the opinion of the jury over that of the Judge The High Court has to weigh both the opinions and consider the entire evidence on the record just as it would consider in any other criminal matter coming before it for decision—K E v Ramcharan 27 O C 29 11 O L J 210 25 Cr L J 785 The whole case is open to the High Court when hearing a reference and in dealing with the reference the High Court exercises all the powers which it exercises on appeal—Emp v Shanker Balkrishna 47 Bom 31 (32)

and the jury are agreed—K E v Madan Mandal 41 Cal 662, 15 Cr L J 155 So also the High Court cannot consider any question on which the Judge had accepted the verdict of the jury, although he did not agree with them—Emp v Praful'a, 51 Cal 41 Although the High Court can consider the entire evidence still it should not ignore the verdict of the jury on a question of fact Unless there is an astounding reason for it, the verdict of the jury on a question of fact will not be set aside The mere fact that another view of the evidence might be taken is not enough—K E v Purit Chair, 3 P L T 413

Power to convict for offence not charged —Ordinarily the High Court cannot convict the accused for any offence with which he was not charged —K. E v Madan Mandal 41 Cal. 662 But the combined effect of this section read with section 238 is that the High Court may, in dealing with a case coming before it under this section, convict an accused for a minor offence, although he was not charged with such offence —K E v. Sitanath, 22 Cal 1006 And a Sessions Judge accepting the jury's finding on the graver charges can make a reference to the High Court with the object of having some of the accused convicted on minor charges—Emp v Hari, 37 C L J 34 But where in a case of offence under sec 147 I P C the common object assumed in the charge as framed to support the case has not been sustained the High Court on a reference under sec 307 of this Code cannot invent another common object in order to support the conviction—Emp v Akbar 51 Cal 271 (275)

939A. No appeal from High Court :—A High Court in dealing with a reference under this section is not acting in the exercise of its original criminal jurisdiction but only as a Court of reference in a criminal matter—In re Horace Lyall, 29 Cal 286, and therefore no appeal lies from its own judgment passed under this section—Q E v Adeppa, Ratanlal 691

Trial when ends .—When a case is referred to under this section, the trial cannot be deemed to be concluded until the High Court either convicts or acquits the prisoner—Q E v McCarthy, 9 All 420

G—Re trial of Accused after Discharge of Jury

308. Whenever the jury is discharged, the accused shall be detained in custody or on bail (as the case may be), and shall be tried by another jury, unless the Judge considers that he should not be re-tried, in which case the Judge shall make an entry to that effect on the charge, and such entry shall operate as an acquittal

Re-trial of accused after discharge of jury

940 If a jury is discharged in the course of a trial for misconduct, the Judge should hold a fresh trial before another jury newly empanelled —Rahim Sheikh v Emp 50 Cal 872 (cited under sec 282)

This section does not affect the construction of sec 403 An accused who is re tried under this section is not 'tried again within the meaning of sec 403 but is being tried on the original indictment and on his original plea of not guilty Sec 403 therefore does not bar the retrial held under this section—Emp v Nirmal 41 Cal 1072

H.—Conclusion of Trial in Cases tried with Assessors

Delivery of opinions of assessors

309. (1) When in a case tried with the aid of assessors, the case for the defence and the prosecutor's reply (if any) are concluded, the Court may sum up the evidence for the prosecution and defence and shall then require each of the assessors to state his opinion orally on all the charges on which the accused has been tried, and shall record such opinion, and for that purpose may ask the assessors such questions as are necessary to ascertain what their opinions are All such questions and the answers to them shall be recorded

Judgment

(2) The Judge shall then give judgment, but in doing so shall not be bound to conform to the opinions of the assessors

(3) If the accused is convicted, the Judge shall, unless he proceeds in accordance with the provisions of Section 562, pass sentence on him according to law

Change —This section has been amended by section 82 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 The following changes have been made —(a) The italicised words have been newly added in sub section (1) This amendment assimilates the procedure by which assessors give their opinion to that adopted for ascertaining the verdict of the jury namely by question and answer —Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914) (b) The italicised words have been added in sub-section (3) This amendment is merely verbal and is the same as that made in sec 306 (2)

941. Summing up —The object of summing up the evidence is to enable the Sessions Judge in long and intricate cases to place the evidence in an intelligible form so as to assist the assessors in arriving at a reasonable conclusion and not to give the Judge an opportunity of expressing his opinion in emphatic terms on every single matter put in evidence—Sadulla Hawladar v Emp 9 Cal 875 In summing up the evidence to the assessors the Judge should not as he may do in charging the jury express any opinion upon any question of facts arising in the case—K E v Tirumal 24 Mad 523 Dewan Singh v Q E 22 Cal

805 He should not obtrude on the assessors his own opinion on the worthlessness or otherwise of the evidence because the assessors might become embarrassed in coming to an independent opinion of their own in the face of the very decided opinion expressed by him—Sadulla v Emp 9 Cal 875 But a discussion and statement of points by a Judge with the assessors with the object of getting the best assistance for the proper adjudication of the case are not improper as the real object of appointing assessors is to assist the Court—Q v Ameeruddeen 15 W R 25 In a case of rioting where the dispute arises over the possession of a piece of land and the Crown admits the possession of the accused and the accused themselves urge the plea of private defence it is the duty of the Sessions Judge to explain to the assessors the legal aspect of the plea put forward by the accused and to direct their attention to it by putting specific questions to them on the point—Sunder Baksh v Emp 3 P L J 633 19 Cr L J 983

Record of summing up —The Sessions Judge should not ask the pleader for the prosecution to record his summing up to the assessors If the Judge himself is incapable of recording the heads of the summing up he should avail himself of the services of some Court Officer or direct it to be done by some independent person—Sadulla v Emp 9 Cal 875

942 Opinions of assessors —A trial is altogether bad if the assessors are not asked and are apparently not allowed to give their opinions in the case—Nazimuddi v Emp 40 Cal 163 13 Cr L J 497 If a Sessions Judge decides a case without inviting the opinions of the assessors he virtually holds the trial without the aid of assessors and his finding or sentence will be without jurisdiction—Q v Matam Mal 22 W R 34 K E v Tirumal 24 Mad 523 (535) Even if he considers the evidence untrusworthy or unsatisfactory or inconsistent he is bound to consult the opinions of the assessors otherwise he acts without jurisdiction—Kassa Mal v Munna Lal 10 All 414 Where in a Sessions trial the accused first pleaded not guilty but in the course of her examination after the completion of the prosecution evidence she pleaded guilty and thereupon the Judge without taking the opinions of the assessors found her guilty and sentenced her held that it was the duty of the Judge to proceed with the trial as provided by this section and hear the defence and then take the opinions of the assessors—Emp v Bai Nan 7 Bom L R 731 Where a trial was held for two offences one with jury and the other with the jurors as assessors and with regard to the latter offence the Judge convicted the accused without taking the opinions of the jurors as assessors the conviction was held to be bad—Siaga 2 Weir 334

The opinions of the assessors should be recorded separately It is not in the Court s opinion sufficient that this record should contain a mere verdict of guilty or not guilty or proven or not proven, what the Court requires is not only the result arrived at by each assessor sitting on a Sessions trial but if possible the reason by which each assessor arrived at the result—that is the grounds of his opinion While avoiding prolixity a Sessions Judge should be careful to be intelligible and precise in recording such opinions —Cal G R & C O p 26

The opinions of all the assessors should be taken Where the Judge took the opinions of two only of the assessors the trial was illegal and not merely irregular—Rama Krishna v Emp 26 Mad 598 The opinion of each assessor is to be recorded in his own words—Fatu Santal v K E 6 P L J 147 Each assessor should be required to state his opinion individually The Judge should not receive the joint opinion of all the assessors delivered through one of them—Sadulla v Emp 9 Cal 875 Hassan Khan v Emp 1887 P R 41

Where the accused is being tried on several charges the assessors should be required to give their opinions on each of the charges—Q v Matam 22 W R 34 This is now made clear by the present amendment

The assessors are to give their opinions orally and not in writing, or in the form of a judgment—Lalit v Emp 39 Cal 119 13 Cr L J. 433

Consultation between assessors —There is no provision in this Code authorizing a Judge to allow or forbidding him to allow consultation between the assessors aiding him in trying a case Though a Judge may allow one assessor to consult his co assessors before giving his opinion yet a refusal to allow such a course does not amount to any irregularity and the Judge is entitled to have before him each assessor s individual and independent opinion—In re Senmmalai 2 L W 933 16 Cr L J 717

Grounds of opinion —It is very desirable that the assessors should be invited and encouraged by Judges to state briefly the grounds of their opinions as well as the result—Q E v Mahadu 2 Bom L R 3-2 Q E v Fakira 2 Bom L R 323 Assessors are appointed to aid the Judge in the trial and to give their opinions When the opinion formed by the Judge differs from the opinions formed by the assessors he should always ascertain the grounds of the assessor s opinions—Q v Minnat 3 W R 6 Q v Bushmo 3 W R 21 Guraditta v Crown 1905 P R 48 3 Cr L J 132

When opinion may be dispensed with —When there is absolutely no evidence to show that the offence has been committed by the accused the Judge can abstain from taking the opinions of the assessors—Anonymous 2 Weir 388 391 See sec 289 But the Judge cannot do so simply because he considers the evidence unsatisfactory or untrustworthy—Kassa Mal v Munna Lal 10 All 414 When the case is withdrawn by the Public Prosecutor with the consent of the Court an acquittal should be recorded without taking the opinions of the assessors or whatever may be their opinions—Q E v Chenbasapa Ratanlal 307

Reconsidering opinion —After once summing up the case to the assessors and after taking their opinions the Judge has no power to re open the matter and press upon the attention of the assessors a part of the accused s confession in order to induce them to change their —Emp v Tika Ram 1886 A W N 22 assessors have been taken, the trial is at an end, except for the purpose of giving judgment The Judge has no legal authority to reopen a trial or recall witnesses, and cause fresh evidence to be summoned, and take a second and third opinion from the assessors—Hasan v Emp, 1888 P R 29 Q E v Ram Lal, 15 All 136 Where, after the assessors had given their opinions and had been discharged the Judge sitting alone took some further evidence in the case before writing judgment, the trial was held to be illegal and was set aside—Jaisukh v Emp, 43 All 25, 22 Cr L J 127 It is the Judge together with the assessors that constitutes the Court, and not the Judge sitting alone, and all evidence must be recorded by the Judge in the presence of the assessors —Ibid In a trial for murder in which the soundness of the accused's mind was at issue, the Judge, after taking the opinions of the assessors reserved judgment and had a private interview with the Civil Surgeon as to the state of mind of the accused It was held that the procedure was extremely illegal Instead of discussing with the Civil Surgeon out of Court, the Judge ought to have examined him as a witness in the presence of the assessors, and the accused ought to have been given an opportunity of cross examining him—Q E v. Jia Lal, 1889 A W N 181.

943. Questions to assessors —Prior to the present amendment, the section did not expressly authorise the Judge to put any questions to the assessors but it was laid down in some cases that if there was anything obscure in their opinions it was open to the Judge to put to them such questions as were necessary to elucidate or supplement their opinions—Nazimuddi v Emp, 40 Cal 163, Ramesh Chandra v Emp, 41 Cal 350 This is now expressly provided by the present section as amended But the questions can be asked only after the delivery of the opinion and not before, and for no other purpose except to clear up any obscurity in the verdict The Judge cannot put questions to the assessors by way of cross examination—Nazimuddi, 40 Cal 163, Ramesh Chandra 41 Cal 350

944. Judgment —In passing judgment the Judge is not bound to conform to the opinions of the assessors Although the assessors no doubt assist the judge and regard must be paid to their opinions,—K E. v Tirumal 24 Mad 523 still it is the Judge who has to decide the case on the facts as well as the law, and he is not bound by the assessors opinions—Emp v Shanker, 14 Bom L R 710 But the Judge cannot convict the accused for an offence in respect of which the opinions of the assessors were not taken Thus, the accused was charged with and tried for abetment of murder The opinion of the assessors was that he was not guilty of the offence charged The Sessions Judge accepted the opinion, but convicted the accused of causing evidence of murder to disappear under sec 201 I P C Held that it was imperative on the Judge to have taken the opinion of the assessors on the charge relating to sec 201 I P C The conviction and sentence must be set aside—Emp v Appayya, 25 Bom L R 1318

not merely upon the views of the committing Magistrate—Dewan Singh v Q E 22 Cal 805

The judgment must be recorded But failure to record judgment does not invalidate the trial but is only an irregularity curable by sec 537—Sam Pasumadi 2 Weir 392

The judgment must contain all the particulars specified in sec 367 even though the trial is held with the aid of jurors as assessors A reference to the heads of the charges to the jury is not sufficient—Q E v Datta Ratanlal 476

It is neither convenient nor commendable for the Sessions Judge to embody his summing up to the assessors in his judgment But his doing so does not make the judgment illegal or vitiate it so as to render it invalid—Khudiram v Emp 9 C L J 55 3 I C 625

The judgment must be recorded by the Judge who held the trial Where after the assessors had given their opinions the Judge left the district without recording his judgment and his successor, after considering the evidence recorded at the trial convicted and sentenced the accused, the conviction was set aside and a retrial ordered—Q v Ramdoyal 21 W R 47

Cancellation of trial —The accused were committed to the Sessions on a certain charge At the commencement of the trial two more charges were added The trial then proceeded up to the point where the assessors opinions were taken The Judge reserved judgment but in writing it he was of opinion that one of the charges was improperly added and he therefore cancelled the trial and held a fresh trial It was held that the second trial was invalid because the trial Judge had no authority to cancel or set aside the trial which had been originally held and the assessors opinions having been recorded he had no option but to give his judgment in accordance with this section—Emp v Nathu 17 Bom L R 1074

I —Procedure in Case of Previous Conviction

Procedure in case of previous conviction

310 In the case of a trial by a jury or with the aid of assessors, when the accused is charged with an offence and further charged that he is by reason of a previous conviction liable to enhanced punishment or to [illegible] offence, [illegible] sions of

(a) Such further charge shall not be read out in Cou[illegible] and the accused shall not be asked to p[illegible] thereto, nor shall the same be referred to the prosecution, or any evidence adduced thereon, unless and until—

(i) he has been convicted of the subsequent offence, or

(ii) the jury have delivered their verdict, or the opinions of the assessors have been recorded, on the charge of the subsequent offence

(b) In the case of a trial held with the aid of assessors, the Court may, in its discretion, proceed or refrain from proceeding with the trial of the accused on the charge of the previous conviction.

Change:—This section has been redrafted by sec 83 of Cr P C Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923 The old section stood as follows —

310 In the case of a trial by jury or with the aid of assessors, where the accused is charged with an offence committed after previous conviction for any offence, the procedure laid down in sections 271, 286, 305, 306 and 309 shall be modified as follows

(a) The part of the charge stating the previous conviction shall not be read out in Court, nor shall the accused be asked whether he has been previously convicted as alleged in the charge, unless and until he has either pleaded guilty to, or been convicted of, the subsequent offence:

(b) If he pleads guilty to, or is convicted of, the subsequent offence, he shall then be asked whether he has been previously convicted as alleged in the charge:

(c) If he answers that he has been so previously convicted, the Judge may proceed to pass sentence on him accordingly, but, if he denies that he has been so previously convicted, or refuses to or does not, answer such question, the jury or the Court and the assessors (as the case may be) shall then hear evidence concerning such previous conviction, and in such case (where the trial is by jury), it shall not be necessary to swear the jurors again"

It should be noted that clause (b) of the present section is entirely new This clause has been added in order to avoid the inconvenience which may at present arise in cases tried by assessors whose opinion is not binding on the Judge Under the amendment, in any trial held with the aid of assessors, the Court is given a discretion to proceed or refrain from proceeding with the trial of the accused on the charge of the previous conviction—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914).

945. Scope and object of section —This section applies to to trials before a Court of Sessions and not to trials before a Magistrate—Dehri Sonar v Emp 50 Cal 367 The law as to the taking of evidence of previous conviction in a trial before a Magistrate has been enacted in the new section 255A.

The object of this section in prohibiting the proof of previous conviction to be put in until the accused is convicted is to prevent the accused from being prejudiced at the trial—Maung E Gyi v Emp, 1 Rang 520 Therefore where in the course of a trial a witness was allowed to say that he had heard that the accused was an old offender, the verdict was set aside because the improper statement of the witness might have influenced the verdict of the jury—Q E v Jhingiri 1890 A W N 12 Where the charge in regard to the previous convictions and the portion of the statement of the accused before the committing Magistrate admitting such previous convictions were read to the assessors before the conclusion of the trial for the substantive offence the trial was vitiated—Teka Ahir v King Emp 5 P L J 706 A Judge s direction to the jury to consider proof of previous conviction as evidence regarding the character of the prisoner amounts to a misdirection—Roshun v Emp 5 Cal 768 But where no failure of justice was caused i e where the accused was not prejudiced (e g in a prima facie case of theft) the High Court refused to interfere in a case in which the accused was called upon to plead simultaneously to a charge of theft and previous conviction—Bepin Behari v Emp 13 C L R 110

946 Previous conviction —The previous conviction referred to in this section must be a conviction within British India A conviction outside British India (e g in Berar) does not fall within the purview of this section and cannot be taken into account for the purpose of affecting the punishment on a second conviction in British India But it is not absolutely improper however to take such conviction into consideration —Emp v Lalsingh 7 C P L R 24

The charge alleging the previous conviction need not show the amount of the former punishment—Anonymous 4 M H C R App 11

When previous conviction can be proved —It is most essential that the rules laid down in this section should be followed with precision and regularity and close attention—Q E v Jhinguri 1890 A W N 12 and proof of previous conviction should be put in only after the trial is concluded—Q v Shiboo 3 W R 38 Emp v Sukha 1886 A W N 47 The jury ought to be informed that the accused is charged with previous conviction only after their verdict is taken and never before—Chundi Perugadu 2 Weir 393 And the record should invariably show that no reference to previous conviction has been made until the subsequent offence has been found proved against the accused—Kristo Behari v Emp 12 C L R 555

How to prove —If the accused admits that he had been previously convicted the Judge is justified under this section in passing sentence upon such admission—Yasin v K E 28 Cal 689 In re Subramanian, 1916 M W N 327 especially when the Magistrate passes a sentence which is legal even without proof of the previous conviction—Subramanian 1916 M W N 327 17 Cr L J 288 But if he does not plead to the charge of previous conviction it cannot be proved by an extract from the record previous conviction without proof of identity—Chundi Perugadu, 2

393, Tuki Mahomed v Kisto Nath, 15 W R. 53 See also notes under section 511

311. Notwithstanding anything in the last foregoing section, evidence of the previous conviction may be given at the trial for the subsequent offence, if the fact of the previous conviction is relevant under the provisions of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872.

When evidence of previous conviction may be given

In a trial of offences under secs 395 and 402 I P C, the evidence of previous conviction is not permissible under sec 54 of the Evidence Act, no evidence having been previously offered of the accused's good character Nor does sec 6 or 14 of the Evidence Act justify the admission of such evidence—Teka Ahir v *K. Number of special jurors	312. The High Court may prescribe the number of persons whose names shall be entered at any one time in the special jurors' list, provided that no definite number of Europeans or of Americans or of Indians shall be so prescribed, Number of special jurors

This section has been redrafted by sec 18 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, XII of 1923 The reason of this amendment is thus stated · "The High Court special jury list should in our opinion be revised and it should no longer be limited to 200 Europeans and 200 non Europeans. It should include all who are qualified, to whatever nationality they may belong This revision will probably increase the proportion of non Europeans in the list This proposal involves the amendment of section 312 of the Code"—Report of the Racial Distinctions Committee, Para 25

313. (1) The Clerk of the Crown shall, before the first day of April in each year, and subject to such rules as the High Court from time to time prescribes, prepare—

Lists of common and special jurors

(a) a list of all persons liable to serve as common jurors; and

(b) a list of persons liable to serve as special jurors only

(2) Regard shall be had, in the preparation of the latter list, to the property, character and education of the persons whose names are entered therein

(3) No person shall be entitled to have his name entered in the special jurors' list merely because he may have been entered in the special jurors' list for a previous year

(4) The Governor General in Council or the Local [illegible] ment from serving as a juror

(5) The Clerk of the Crown shall, subject to such rules as aforesaid, have full discretion to prepare the said list as seems to him to be proper, and there shall be no appeal from or review of his decision

Discretion of officer preparing lists

(3) If, during the continuance of any sessions, it appears that the number of persons so summoned is not sufficient, such number as may be necessary of other persons liable to serve as aforesaid shall be summoned for such sessions.

The words "in the town......High Court" have been substituted for the words "in each Presidency town." A similar amendment has been made in sec. 316 and in the third proviso of section 276.

Summoning jurors outside the presidency-town.

316. Whenever a High Court has given notice of its intention to hold sittings at any place outside the town which is the usual place of sitting of such High Court for the exercise of its original criminal jurisdiction, the Court of Session at such place shall, subject to any direction which may be given by the High Court, summon a sufficient number of jurors from its own list, in the manner hereinafter prescribed for summoning jurors to the Court of Session.

The italicised words have been substituted for the words "Presidency town." Similar amendment occurs in secs. 276 and 315.

Military jurors.

317. (1) In addition to the persons so summoned as jurors, the said Court of Session shall, if it thinks needful, after communication with the commanding officer, cause to be summoned such number of commissioned and non-commissioned officers in Her Majesty's Army or Air Force resident within ten miles of its place of sitting as the Court considers to be necessary to make up the juries required for the trial of persons charged with offences before the High Court as aforesaid.

(2) All officers so summoned shall be liable to serve on such juries notwithstanding anything contained in this Code; but no such officer shall be summoned whom his Commanding Officer desires to have excused on the ground of urgent official duty, or for any other special official reason

In sub-section (1) the words or Air Force have been added and in sub-section (2) the word official has been substituted for military by the Repealing and Amending Act (X of 1927)

318 Any person summoned under Section 315, Section 316, or Section 317, who, without lawful excuse, fails to attend as required by the summons, or who, having attended, departs without having obtained the permission of the Judge, or fails to attend after an adjournment of the Court after being ordered to attend, shall be deemed guilty of a contempt and be liable, by order of the Judge, to such fine as he thinks fit, and in default of payment of such fine, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months in the civil jail until the fine is paid

Preparation of list of special jurors

325 In the case of any district for which the Local Government has declared that the trial of certain offences shall, if the Judge so direct, be by special jury, the Sessions Judge and the Collector of such district or other officer as aforesaid shall prepare in addition to the revised list hereinbefore prescribed a special list containing the names of such jurors as are borne on the revised list and are, in the opinion of such Sessions Judge and Collector or other officer as aforesaid, by reason of their possessing superior qualifications in respect of property, character or education, fit persons to serve as special jurors : Provided always that the inclusion of the name of any person in such special list shall not involve the removal of his name from the revised list nor relieve him of his liability to serve as an ordinary juror in cases not tried by special jury.

326 (1) The Sessions Judge shall ordinarily, seven days at least before the day which he may from time to time fix for holding the sessions, send a letter to the District Magistrate requesting him to summon as many persons named in the said revised list or the said special list as seem to the Sessions Judge to be needed for trials by jury and trials with the aid of assessors at the said sessions, the number to be summoned not being less than double the number required for any such trial, and including, where any accused person is an European or an American, as many Europeans or Americans as may be required for the purpose of choosing jurors or assessors for the trial.

District Magistrate to summon jurors and assessors

(2) The names of the persons to be summoned shall be drawn by lot in open Court, excluding those who have served within six months, unless the number cannot be made up without them, and the names so drawn shall be specified in the said letter

(3) Where the accused requires and is entitled to be tried under the provisions of Section 275, there shall be chosen by lot, in the manner prescribed by or under Section 276, from the whole number of persons returned the jurors who are to constitute the jury until a jury containing the proper number of Europeans or Europeans and Americans or of Indians as the case may be, has been obtained.

Provided that, in any case in which the proper number of Europeans or Americans cannot otherwise be obtained, the Court may, in its discretion for the purpose of constituting the jury, summon any person excluded from the list on the ground of his being exempted under Section 320.

(4) Where under the proviso to sub-section (3) the Court proposes to summon as a juror any person in His Majesty's Army, the provisions of Section 317 shall apply in like manner as they apply for the purpose of the summoning of military jurors for a trial under Section 316.

Power of Advocate-General to stay prosecution

333. At any stage of any trial before a High Court under this Code, before the return of the verdict, the Advocate General may, if he thinks fit, inform the Court on behalf of Her Majesty that he will not further prosecute the defendant upon the charge, and thereupon all proceedings on such charge against the defendant shall be stayed, and he shall be discharged of and from the same. But such discharge shall not amount to an acquittal unless the presiding Judge otherwise directs

949 Nolle prosequi —After the trial had commenced and the evidence partly gone into, the Judge retired from the case under sec 556 as he was a share holder of the prosecuting Bank and the case was adjourned without the jury being discharged The Chief Justice purporting to act under Cl 13 of the Charter Act appointed another Judge to preside at the trial of the accused In answer to a question by the Judge the Standing Counsel intimated that he intended proceeding with the trial from the point where it had been left whereupon it was contended on behalf of the accused that the presiding Judge could not proceed with the trial as the previous Judge and the jury empannelled before him had still the seisin of the case The Advocate General thereupon in order to get rid of the many difficulties arising out of the case entered a nolle prosequi and the accused was discharged—Emp v Khagendra, 2 C W N 181. In a trial before the High Court Sessions, the jury were divided in the proportion of six to three But the Judge, without ascertaining what the verdict of the majority was, discharged the jury and ordered a retrial The retrial came before another Judge and another jury, and it was contended on behalf of the accused that as the previous Judge had discharged the jury without ascertaining what their verdict was and whether he agreed or disagreed with the verdict of the majority, the discharge of the jury was illegal and the previous Judge had still the seisin of the case, and no other Judge could try it As the question was of some difficulty, the Advocate General entered a nolle prosequi and the Judge discharged the accused —Emp v Jatindra, 8 C W N xlviii In another Calcutta case the jury in the first trial returned an unanimous verdict of not guilty on the main charge of murder, and were divided in the proportion of 5 to 4 on other counts In the second trial on the remaining counts (ordered under S 308 Cr P C) the jury returned a verdict of not guilty by a majority of seven to two The Judge disagreed with the verdict The accused was brought up again before the learned Judge to be dealt with according to law The Advocate General thereupon appeared and entered a nolle prosequi—Emp v Nirmal Kanta Roy 41 Cal 1072

After the close of the case for the prosecution and just as the counsel for the defence was going to call his witnesses the foreman of the jury suddenly informed the Court that they had come to a unanimous verdict as to the guilt of the accused and did not desire to hear anything more Upon this the Counsel for accused said that it was a misbehaviour on the part of the jury to give a verdict without hearing the evidence for the defence he therefore asked the Court to discharge the jury and to empanel a fresh jury But the Advocate General entered a nolle prosequi —Emp v Olu Muhammad 7 C W N xxxi

Discharge—Acquittal —In Emp v Jatindra 8 C W N xlviii the Judge ordered that the discharge amounted to an acquittal but in Emp v Nirmal 41 Cal 1072 and Emp v Olu Md 7 C W N xxxi the Judge simply discharged the accused but did not acquit him

An order of discharge under this section is no bar to fresh proceedings being taken before a competent Magistrate upon complaint or upon a Police report or under section 190 (c) of this Code In spite of an order of discharge passed under section 333 the accused may be sent up for trial upon the same charges and the order of discharge does not require to be set aside for initiation of fresh proceedings on the same charges—Emp v Sheikh Idoo, 40 Cal 71 But in a recent case the same High Court has been of opinion that an order of discharge passed on a nolle prosequi entered under this section puts an end to the indictment on which the prisoner is brought before the Court and he cannot be subsequently proceeded against on the same charge—Emp v Jitendra Nath 52 Cal 590 26 Cr L J 1397, A I R 1925 Cal 902 It is curious that no reference was made in this case to the earlier case of 40 Cal 71

the view of obtaining the evidence of any person supposed to have been directly or indirectly concerned in, or privy to, the offence under inquiry, tender a pardon to such person on condition of his making a full and true disclosure of the whole of the circumstances within his knowledge relative to such offence, and to every other person concerned whether as principal or abettor, in the commission thereof

seven years, or any offence under any of the following Sections of the Indian Penal Code namely Ss 216*A*, 369, 401, 435 and 477*A*, the District Magistrate, a Presidency Magistrate, a Sub divisional Magistrate or any Magistrate of the first class may at any stage of the investigation or inquiry into, or the trial of, the offence, with a view to obtaining the evidence of any person supposed to have been directly or indirectly concerned in or privy to the offence, tender a pardon to such person on condition of his making a full and true disclosure of the whole circumstances within his knowledge relative to the offence and to every other person concerned, whether as principal or abettor in the commission thereof

Provided that where the offence is under inquiry or trial no Magistrate of the first class other than the District Magistrate shall exercise the power hereby conferred unless he is the Magistrate making the inquiry or holding the trial and, where the offence is under investigation, no such Magistrate shall exerc

the said power unless he is a Magistrate having jurisdiction in a place where the offence might be inquired into or tried and the sanction of the District Magistrate has been obtained to the exercise thereof

(4) Every Magistrate other than a Presidency Magistrate, who tenders a pardon under this section, shall record his reasons for so doing, and when any Magistrate has made such tender and examined the person to whom it has been made he shall not try the case himself, although the offence which the accused appears to have committed may be triable by such Magistrate

(1A) Every Magistrate  who tenders a pardon under subsection (1) shall record his reason for so doing, and shall, on application made by the accused, furnish him with a copy of such record

Provided that the accused shall pay for the same unless the Magistrate for some special reason thinks fit to furnish it free of cost

(2) Every person accepting a tender under this section shall be examined as a witness in the case

(2) Every person accepting a tender under this section shall be examined as a witness in the Court of the Magistrate taking cognizance of the offence and in the subsequent trial, if any

(2A) In every case where a person has accepted a tender of pardon and has been examined under subsection (2), the Magistrate before whom the proceedings are pending shall, if he is satisfied that there are reasonable grounds for believing that the accused is guilty of an offence, commit him for trial to the Court of Session or High Court as the case may be.

(3) Such person, if not on bail, shall be detained in custody until the termination of the trial by the Court of Session or High Court, as the case may be.	(3) Such person unless he is already on bail shall be detained in custody until the termination of the trial. **

Change :—This section has been amended by section 86 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923) The principal changes introduced are the following —

(a) The old section was restricted to offences triable by the High Court or the Court of Session, the new section includes several other offences

(b) A change has been made as regards the Magistrates who can tender pardon "The Magistrates who should be allowed to tender a pardon should, in our opinion, be Magistrates of the first class who are inquiring into the offence and any District Magistrate Presidency Magistrate, Sub divisional Magistrate or with the sanction of the District Magistrate, a Magistrate of the first class having jurisdiction in any place where the offence might be inquired into or tried"—Report of the Joint Committee (1922)

(c) The power to tender a pardon should be exercisable during an investigation as well as after a magisterial inquiry has begun —Ibid

(d) Sub-section (4) of the section has been omitted The first part of that sub section has now been re enacted as sub-section (1A) and the latter part has been omitted as unnecessary in view of the new subsection (2A) See the Report of the Select Committee of 1916

950. Offences :—The old section applied only to offences triable exclusively by the Court of Session—Reg v Remedios, 3 B H C R 59 Subramanya Aiyar, 25 Mad 61 (66), Q E v Dala, 10 Bom 190, Mahandu v Emp, 1 Lah 102, Sheobhajan v Emp, 2 P L T 125, Sardara v Emp, 22 Cr L J 676 (Lah) These cases are now rendered obsolete by reason of the change made in this section

But where several offences are being inquired together, the fact that some of the offences do not fall under this section will not debar the Magistrate from granting pardon in respect of the offences which fall under it All that this Section requires is that the offence in respect of which pardon is tendered must be an offence described herein—Harumal v Crown, 16 Cr L J. 632, 9 S L R 43, Balmokund v Crown, 1915 P R 17, 16 Cr L J 354, Ismail v Emp, 26 Cr L J 1045 (Nag)

The words 'triable exclusively by the Court of Session" mean an offence shown in the second schedule as so triable A charge under

395 I P C does not cease to be an offence triable exclusively by a Court of Session merely because the charge is triable by and in fact has been tried by a District Magistrate under section 30 of this Code—Bhallu v Emp, 1897 P R 3 So also a valid pardon once having been validly given is not affected by the fact that after the pardon the Sessions Judge at the trial altered the charges from those framed by the Magistrate to some other offences—Ko romal v Crown 5 Cr L J 1037, 19 S L R 183

951 Pardon —When can be te dered —Under the old section a pardon could be tendered only in an inquiry (see the words 'offence under inquiry) but not during an investigation—Emp v Motilal Hiralal 46 Bom 61, 22 Cr L J 778 But the Lahore High Court held that the word inquiry in the section included everything done by the Magistrate whether the case was challanned or not, and therefore pardon could be tendered where the offence was only under investigation by the police—Sher Muhammad v Crown 3 Lah 431 Bhallu v Emp 1897 P. R 3 This was also the view in Sind—Crown v Aidal 5 S L R 174 13 Cr L J 33 This conflict of opinion has now been removed by the present amendment and under the present section it can be tendered at any stage of the investigation as well

All that this section requires is that there should be an investigation in progress regarding the offence If at the date of the pardon proceedings were going on against the accused for an offence mentioned in this section the pardon is perfectly legal and the approver is a competent witness against the accused—Ismail Panju v Emp 26 Cr L J 1115 (Nag) A pardon may be tendered to a person even after a charge has been framed against him—Ma gu v Emp 22 Cr L J 255 (Lah) A pardon can be tendered to an approver during the course of an inquiry even though the principal offender has absconded and the trial cannot therefore proceed In such a case the approver s statement will be recorded under section 512—I re Dagdu 46 Bom 120 22 Cr L J 6 0 This section does not require that a trial or an inquiry should be in progress at the time the pardon is tendered Therefore a pardon is not illegal by reason of the fact that at the time when the Magistrate had granted par on he had adjourned the case under section 5 6 (8) Although the Magistrate had postponed the investigation or enquiry he did not become functus officio he had not ceased to be the Magistrate who would be or was investigating or inquiring into the offence The Magistrate was the only Magistrate who at that time had jurisdiction to inquire into the case—Bal Chand v Emp 49 All 181 27 Cr L J 1369 74 A L J 1050

Who can grant pardon —See notes under Change above Where the offence is under investigation the Magistrate (other than the District Magistrate) tendering pardon must have jurisdiction over the offence A Magistrate of one district cannot tender pardon to a person implicated in an offence committed in another district and inquired into in the latter district The pardon so tendered is illegal and cannot be validated by the operation of Sec 5 9—Q E v Chidda 20 All 40

pardon only with the sanction of the District Magistrate This sanction should be a written sanction, but an oral sanction though irregular, would be valid—Sultan Khan v K E, 5 A L J 691, 8 Cr L J 415

A Deputy Commissioner trying a case triable exclusively by the Sessions Court, under the powers conferred by section 30 can offer a conditional pardon to an accused under this section—Pabon Singh v Emp, 10 C W N 847

Power of Local Government —The Local Government has no power to offer a conditional pardon to an accused for the purpose of giving evidence against the other accused under this section—Paban Singh 10 C W N 847 Banu Singh v Emp 33 Cal 1353 (A new provision regarding conditional pardon has been inserted in section 401, sub-sec 5A) But the Local Government as an executive authority has power to refrain from prosecution independently of this section—Emp v Har Prosad, 45 All 226 (229) 21 A L J 42 This section is addressed to certain Courts of justice and has nothing to do with the powers or discretion of an executive authority such as the Local Government in the matter of instituting or refraining from instituting any prosecution The Local Government can grant pardon even though the case is not triable exclusively by the Court of Session or High Court It can examine an accomplice as a witness even though no formal tender of pardon has been granted to him Thus where the Government of C P having before it the case of a Subordinate Judge who was suspected of receiving bribes issued a notification to the effect that no prosecution would be instituted by the Government against any person who would come forward with evidence that he had paid or offered bribe to the accused (Sub Judge) and in consequence of the notification two men came forward and gave evidence against the Sub-Judge held that the evidence of the two persons as witnesses was admissible on the principle of sub-section (?) of this section although no pardon was formally tendered to them under section 337 and although the offence (sec 161 I P C) was not triable exclusively by a Court of Session or High Court—Emp v Har Prosad 45 All 226 21 A L J 42

To whom pardon can be tendered —Pardon can be tendered to any person who is supposed to be directly or indirectly concerned in or privy to the offence The word supposed must be taken as intended to exclude merely the case of a man who has actually been convicted of the crime and not the case of a man who though admitted to be a party to the crime is unconvicted therefore where pardon was tendered to a person who pleaded guilty but was not convicted it was held that the pardon was properly granted and that his evidence was admissible—Q E v Kallu 7 All 160 Q E v Bhagya Ratanlal 750

It is not necessary that the person to whom a pardon is tendered should himself be charged with an offence triable exclusively by the Court of Session it is not even necessary that he should be an accused in the case all that is required by this section is that he should be supposed to have been directly or indirectly concerned in or privy to such with which another person is charged—Kashim v Emp, 24 Cr L J.. 6 N L J 144.

Pardon cannot be tendered to a person whose complicity in the crime is not admitted by himself such a person cannot be considered to be an approver and his evidence cannot be taken as that of an approver—Sant Ram v Emp 24 Cr L J 799

Condition of pardon —The only condition on which pardon can be tendered to an accused is the one specified in this section, By the tender of pardon there should be no temptation offered to deviate from the truth A tender of pardon on condition that the approver should testify to having been present at the scene of the offence and to have personal knowledge of the circumstances under which the offence was committed is illegal—Q E v Yakub Ratanlal 612

952. Effect of Pardon —A person who has been granted pardon under this section and who has fulfilled the conditions of pardon must be released, and cannot be re arrested in respect of the same offence or for any offence inseparably connected with it Thus in a dacoity case an accused was tendered pardon under this section He made a full statement implicating himself and others pointed out the place where he had a carbine and ammunition concealed gave them up to the Police and in all respect complied with the conditions of the pardon At the close of the case he was released He was then re arrested and tried under section 20 of the Arms Act in respect of the possession of the carbine and ammunition which he had given up to the Police Held that the possession of carbine and ammunition being an offence in connection with the matter of the dacoity, and inseparable from his guilt as a dacoit his prosecution for such an offence after he had fulfilled his condition of pardon in the dacoity case, was improper and must be set aside—Shiam Sundar v Emp 19 A L J 717 22 Cr L J 699 63 I C 827

A pardon tendered to a person in respect of one offence is no bar to his trial and conviction for an entirely different offence—Emp v Sardara 46 All 236 (240) 22 A L J 85 25 Cr L J 956 But it will bar his trial and conviction in respect of offences which are so closely connected with the offence in respect of which the pardon was tendered that they may be said to be covered by the terms of the pardon—Q E v Ganga Charan 11 All 79 Thus where the approver who was granted pardon in connection with a case of forgery made a full and true disclosure of the circumstances of the crime and in so doing he also related the details of some other earlier offences (e g money order fraud) committed by him self and the other accused which were not relevant to the inquiry but he made those disclosures under the belief that those earlier offences also fell within the scope of the inquiry and he was not warned by the Magistrate against making those irrelevant statements held that the approver should be given the benefit of doubt there might be as to his understanding of the pardon, and that the pardon granted in the forgery case should exclude him from prosecution for the other offences (e g money order fraud)—Nilmadhab v Emp 5 Pat 171, 27 Cr L J 957

953 Sub-section (1A)—Recording reasons —Although sub-section (1A) requires the Magistrate, who tenders pardon to record his reasons for so doing still the recording of the reasons is not a condition precedent to the tender of pardon and its acceptance by the approver and the pardon cannot be set aside merely because the reasons are not recorded—Emp v Shama Charan 13 Cr L J 588 (All) When the facts which led up to the tender of pardon appear on the record the omission to state the reasons is not an illegality which vitiates the proceedings —Emp v Annada 36 Cal 629 Crown v Haryam 5 Lah L J 408 nor even can it be a ground for excluding the approver s evidence as inadmissible—Dy Leg Rem v Banu Singh 5 C L J 224

954 Sub-section (2) —Approver as witness —According to sub-section (2) the approver shall be examined as a witness in the case The expression in the case (see the old section) includes the preliminary inquiry, and does not refer to the trial alone—Q E v Ramasuami 24 Mad 321 Local Govt v Mulli 11 N I R 59 16 Cr L J 417 This is now made clear by the present amendment of this sub-section

If the approver when examined as a witness in the committing Magistrate s Court did not comply with the conditions of pardon it was not necessary that he should be examined as a witness before the Court of Session—Crown v Ardal 5 S L R 174 13 Cr L J 33 It is not compulsory to examine the approver in the Sessions Court if he has shown by his evidence in the Magistrate s Court that he is an untrustworthy witness—Sashi v Emp 42 Cal 856 19 C W N 293 16 Cr L J 65 Where an approver when examined in the preliminary inquiry keeps back material evidence within his knowledge the Magistrate can withdraw the pardon and the prosecution is not bound to put him forward as a witness in the sessions trial—Q E v Ramasuami 24 Mad 321 A person who has not satisfied the conditions of pardon at the commitment need not be examined at the trial in the Sessions Court the evidence given by him before the committing Magistrate can be used as evidence in proceedings taken against him—Nga Po v K E 7 Cr L J 245 (Bur) Siba v K E 1905 P R 41 See notes under Sec 339

An approver cannot be examined as a witness unless and until he has been discharged by a written order a mere promise of immunity from prosecution given by the Local Government does not amount to an order of discharge Unless he is formally discharged he does not cease to be an accused person and cannot be examined as a witness and he does not cease to be an accused person by reason of the mere fact that the police did not send him up for trial—Mahandu v Crown 1 Lah 107 (dissenting from Sardar v Emp 1904 P R 21)

A pardon was tendered to and accepted by an accused in the committing Magistrate s Court but by some mistake his name was not removed from the category of the accused and at the opening of the trial before the Sessions Court he was placed on the dock along with the other accused and his plea was taken by the Sessions Judge The mistake was soon found out and the Sessions Judge directed that he should be removed from the dock He was then removed from the dock and evidence in the trial Held that it was merely due to mistake that approver was placed on the dock and that the mistake having been

955 Accused illegally pardoned —It is illegal for a Magistrate to convert an accused into a witness (approver) except when a pardon has been lawfully granted under section 337—Reg v Harmanta 1 Bom 610 Therefore where a Magistrate tenders pardon to one of the accused persons in a case not exclusively triable by the Court of Session and examines him as a witness the statement made by that accused is irrelevant and inadmissible even as confession of a co accused—Emp v Ashgar 2 All 260 Contra—Subramania Ayyar v K E 25 Mad 61 (68) in which it was held that although the tender of pardon was illegal he was competent to give evidence as a witness

It has been pointed out in this Madras case (25 Mad 61 at pp 68 69) that the question as to whether an approver who has been illegally pardoned can be a competent witness depends upon the further question whether the approver had pleaded guilty or not If he had not pleaded guilty and had neither been acquitted nor discharged nor convicted he cannot be examined as a witness against the other accused This was the ratio decidendi of the decision in 1 Bom 610 and 2 All 260 But when the approver had pleaded guilty (as in 25 Mad 61) no issue remained to be tried as between him and the Crown he could not be said to be tried jointly with the other accused he was not in charge of the jury his incompetency to give evidence had been removed and an oath could be lawfully administered to him

956 Conviction based on approver's evidence —Though a conviction is not illegal merely because it proceeds on the uncorroborated testimony of an approver (section 133 Evidence Act) Q E v Kallu 7 All 160 In re Elahi Baksh 5 W R 80 Raj v Ramasami 1 Mad 394 yet it has now become the universal practice not to convict on the testimony of an accomplice unless it is corroborated in material particulars—Q E v Kallu 7 All 160 Ramaswami v Emp 27 Mad 271 Q E v Krishnabhat 10 Bom 319 Emp v Shrinivas 7 Bom L R 969 3 Cr L J 33 Q E v Maganlal 14 Bom 115 Yasin v K E 28 Cal 689 Shabrah v Crown 1919 P R 20 Madan v Emp 4 P L T 381 24 Cr L J 723 The evidence of an approver should not be believed without material corroboration and in order to see whether there is such a corroboration it is the duty of the Court to scrutinize and marshall out very carefully the proof relating thereto Where this duty has not been properly performed by the lower Court the High Court will interfere in revision and set aside the conviction—Mania v Emp 1911 P W R 3 12 Cr L J 35 The Judge in his charge to the jury should take care to point out that although a conviction based on the uncorroborated testimony of the approver is not illegal yet it is not the practice of the Court so to convict and should state also that the evidence of the approver was given on conditional pardon—Q v Dikari 10 W R 17 Jamiruddi v Emp 29 Cal 782 Surya Kanta v K E 24 C W N 119 (F B) But when the Judge had warned the jury of the danger of convicting the accused on the uncorroborated testimony of the approver and the jury notwithstanding the Judge's remarks convicted the accused it was held that the conviction was valid in law and could not be questioned by the High Court—Q v Mohima 15 W R 37

As to the amount of corroboration necessary no hard and fast rule can be laid down it depends upon the nature of the crime on the extent of the complicity of the accused and the nature of the corroborative facts—Kamala v Sital 28 Cal 339 Des Nandan v Emp 33 Cal 649 K E v Malhar 26 Bom 193 Ramaswami v Emp 27 Mad 271 It is sufficient if the approver's evidence is corroborated in some of the leading circumstances of the story so that the Court may be able to presume that he had told the truth as to the rest—Q v Kalla Chand 11 W R 21 The evidence of the approver should be corroborated not only as to the circumstances of the case but also as to the identity of the prisoner—Reg v Imam 3 B H C R 57 Reg v Buddhu 1 Bom 475 Q E v Krishnabhat 10 Bom 319 and also in material particulars in respect to that person having committed the offence—Q v Sadhu 21 W R 69 Siar Koma v K E 18 C W N 550 15 Cr L J 438 Kashiram v Emp 24 Cr L J 566 (Nag) The corroboration should be such as to support that portion of the approver's testimony which makes out that the prisoner was present at the scene of the offence and participated in the acts of commission—Q v Mohesh 19 W R 16 See section 133 and Ill (b) to section 114 Evidence Act

957. Sub-section (2A)—Magistrate cannot try the case —Sub-section (2A) lays down that the Magistrate tendering the pardon must commit the case to the Sessions and is not competent to try it himself Thus where in a case of robbery the Magistrate grants a conditional pardon to an approver and is satisfied that there is a prima facie case he has no jurisdiction to dispose of the case himself but is bound under the provision of this clause to commit the case to the sessions—Ngakin v Emp 4 Bur L J 11 26 Cr L J 829 The Magistrate before whom the suspected person is brought face to face and who attempts to induce him by promise of pardon to make a full and true disclosure assumes to a certain extent the function of a police officer and identifies himself with the prosecution and it is doubtless on that reason that it is considered proper to disqualify him from trying the case—Q E v Batera 1898 P R 3 A Deputy Commissioner trying a case under the special powers conferred by section 30 does so as a Magistrate and if he tenders pardon to one of the accused he cannot try the case himself—Piban Singh v Emp 10 C W N 847 Kishar v Emp 25 Cr L J 1341 (Nag)

This sub-section debars only the Magistrate tendering the pardon from trying the case but a District Magistrate sanctioning the tender of pardon to an approver is not precluded from trying the case—Akbar v Crown 1919 P R 30

Examined —In Q E v Batera 1898 P R 3 it was held that the examination referred to in the old sub section (4) referred to an examination made by the pardon tendering Magistrate on the tender of the pardon and directly resulting from it and not the examination made by any other Magistrate in the course of the trial But the examination referred

955 Accused illegally pardoned —It is illegal for a Magistrate to convert an accused into a witness (approver) except when a pardon has been lawfully granted under section 337—Reg v Hanmanta 1 Bom 610 Therefore where a Magistrate tenders pardon to one of the accused persons in a case not exclusively triable by the Court of Session and examines him as a witness the statement made by that accused is irrelevant and inadmissible even as confession of a co accused—Emp v Ashgar 2 All 260 Contra—Subramania Ayyar v K E 25 Mad 61 (68) in which it was held that although the tender of pardon was illegal he was competent to give evidence as a witness

It has been pointed out in this Madras case (25 Mad 61 at pp 68 69) that the question as to whether an approver who has been illegally pardoned can be a competent witness depends upon the further question whether the approver had pleaded guilty or not If he had not pleaded guilty and had neither been acquitted nor discharged nor convicted he cannot be examined as a witness against the other accused This was the ratio decidendi of the decision in 1 Bom 610 and 2 All 260 But when the approver had pleaded guilty (as in 25 Mad 61) no issue remained to be tried as between him and the Crown he could not be said to be tried jointly with the other accused he was not in charge of the jury his incompetency to give evidence had been removed and an oath could be lawfully administered to him

956 Conviction based on approver's evidence —Though a conviction is not illegal merely because it proceeds on the uncorroborated testimony of an approver (section 133 Evidence Act) Q E v Kallu 7 All 160 In re Elahi Baksh 5 W R 80 Raj v Ramasami 1 Mad 394 yet it has now become the universal practice not to convict on the testimony of an accomplice unless it is corroborated in material particulars—Q E v Kallu 7 All 160 Ramaswami v Emp 27 Mad 271 Q E v Krishnabhai 10 Bom 319 Emp v Srinivas 7 Bom L R 969 3 Cr L J 33 Q E v Maganlal 14 Bom 115 Yasin v K E 28 Cal 689 Shabrah v Crown 1919 P R 20 Madan v Emp 4 P L T 381 24 Cr L J 723 The evidence of an approver should not be believed without material corroboration and in order to see whether there is such a corroboration it is the duty of the Court to scrutinize and marshall out very carefully the proof relating thereto Where this duty has not been properly performed by the lower Court the High Court will interfere in revision and set aside the conviction—Manna v Emp 1911 P W R 3 12 Cr L J 35 The Judge in his charge to the jury should take care to point out that although a conviction based on the uncorroborated testimony of the approver is not illegal yet it is not the practice of the Court so to convict and should state also that the evidence of the approver was given on conditional pardon—Q v Bikant 10 W R 17 Jamiruddi v Emp 29 Cal 782 Surja Kanta v K E, 24 C W N 119 (F B) But when the Judge had warned the jury of the danger of convicting the accused on the uncorroborated testimony of the approver and the jury notwithstanding

As to the amount of corroboration necessary no hard and fast rule can be laid down it depends upon the nature of the crime on the extent of the complicity of the accused and the nature of the corroborative facts—Kamala v Sital 28 Cal 339 Des Nandan v Emp 33 Cal 649 K E v Malhar 26 Bom 193 Ramaswami v Emp 27 Mad 271 It is sufficient if the approver's evidence is corroborated in some of the leading circumstances of the story so that the Court may be able to presume that he had told the truth as to the rest—Q v Kalla Chand 11 W R 21 The evidence of the approver should be corroborated not only as to the circumstances of the case but also as to the identity of the prisoner—Reg v Imam 3 B H C R 57 Reg v Buddhu 1 Bom 475 Q E v Krishnabhat 10 Bom 319 and also in material particulars in respect to that person having committed the offence—Q v Sadhu 21 W R 69 Siar Nomar v K E 18 C W N 550 15 Cr L J 438 Kashiram v Emp 24 Cr L J 566 (Nag) The corroboration should be such as to support that portion of the approver's testimony which makes out that the prisoner was present at the scene of the offence and participated in the acts of commission—Q v Mohesh 19 W R 16 See section 133 and Ill (b) to section 114 Evidence Act

957. Sub-section (2A)—Magistrate cannot try the case —Sub-section (2A) lays down that the Magistrate tendering the pardon must commit the case to the Sessions and is not competent to try it himself Thus where in a case of robbery the Magistrate grants a conditional pardon to an approver and is satisfied that there is a prima facie case he has no jurisdiction to dispose of the case himself but is bound under the provision of this clause to commit the case to the sessions—Ngakin v Emp 4 Bur L J 11 26 Cr L J 8 9 The Magistrate before whom the suspected person is brought face to face and who attempts to induce him by promise of pardon to make a full and true disclosure assumes to a certain extent the function of a police officer and identifies himself with the prosecution and it is doubtless on that reason that it is considered proper to disqualify him from trying the case—Q E v Batera 1898 P R 3 A Deputy Commissioner trying a case under the special powers conferred by section 30 does so as a Magistrate and if he tenders pardon to one of the accused he cannot try the case himself—Paban Singh v Emp 10 C W N 847 Kishar v Emp 25 Cr L J 1341 (Nag)

This sub-section debars only the Magistrate tendering the pardon from trying the case but a District Magistrate sanctioning the tender of pardon to an approver is not precluded from trying the case—Akbar v Crown 1919 P R 30

Examined —In Q E v Batera 1898 P R 3 it was held that the examination referred to in the old sub section (4) referred to an examination made by the pardon tendering Magistrate on the tender of the pardon and directly resulting from it and not the examination made by other Magistrate in the course of the trial But the examination

to in the new sub section (2A) is the examination made under sub-section (2) which speaks of an examination made in the Court of the Magistrate taking cognizance of the offence as well as the examination in the subsequent trial if any

958 Sub-section (3) :—The approver shall be unless he is on bail, detained until the termination of the trial—Mg Po v K E 8 L B R 357, 17 Cr L J 391, and nothing can be done against an approver who has not complied with the conditions on which the tender of pardon was made to him, until after the case in the Court of Session has been finished, then his trial should be commenced de novo—Q E v Bhan 23 Bom 493 Emp v Pawan, 13 C P L R 123 See notes under sec 339

The meaning of this sub-section is that the approver shall not be set at large until the judicial proceedings pending against the accused person are finished It is immaterial for the purpose of this sub-section whether the proceedings are finished by a Magisterial order of discharge (under section 209) before trial, or by a Judge s order of acquittal after trial In the case of the Magisterial discharge, the sub-section will be satisfied if the approver is detained in custody or is on bail until the order of discharge is made—Emp v Intya 37 Bom 146 13 Cr L J 842

Power to direct tender of pardon

338. At any time after commitment, but before judgment is passed the Court to which the commitment is made may, with the view of obtaining on the trial the evidence of any person supposed to have been directly or indirectly concerned in, or privy to, any such offence, tender, or order the committing Magistrate or the District Magistrate to tender, a pardon on the same condition to such person

959 Who can tender pardon —After the commitment of the case to the Sessions either the Court of Session can itself tender pardon or it can direct the Committing Magistrate or the District Magistrate to tender pardon The Local Government cannot tender a pardon under this or the previous section but it can withdraw the prosecution under sec 494 —Banu Singh v Emp, 33 Cal 1353 Paban v Emp 10 C W N 817

The Sessions Court can direct only the committing Magistrate or the District Magistrate to tender pardon but it cannot direct a Police Officer to do so—In re Fakir Mahomed 6 W R (Cr Let) 5

To whom pardon can be tendered —Pardon can be tendered under this section to an accused There is no ground for the suggestion that the words 'any person in this section do not include a person accused before the Sessions Judge—Harumal v Crown, 9 S L R 43 16 Cr L J 632 A pardon can be tendered to an accused person provided he is unconvicted The words ' supposed offence in this section exclude those who have been actually convicted, but a tender of pardon to a person who has pleaded guilty but has not been convicted is not prohibited by this section and the evidence of such person examined as a witness is admissible—Q E v Kalli 7 All 160 Q E v Bhagya Ratanlal 750

When pardon may be tendered —Pardon can be tendered at any time after commitment and before judgment is pronounced but it is extremely improper though not illegal to grant pardon at a late stage of the trial after the close of the prosecution and the defence and after the opinion of the assessors has been given though judgment has not yet been pronounced—Emp v Hulia 1884 A W N 147

339 (1) Where a pardon has been tendered under S 337 or S 338 and any person who has accepted such tender has, either by wilfully concealing anything essential or by giving false evidence, not complied with the condition on which the tender was made, he may be tried for the offence in respect of which the pardon was so tendered or for any other offence of which he appears to have been guilty in connection with the same matter	339 (1) Where a pardon has been tendered under S 337 or S 338, and the Public Prosecutor certifies that in his opinion any person who has accepted such tender has, either by wilfully concealing anything essential or by giving false evidence, not complied with the condition on which the tender was made, such person may be tried for the offence in respect of which the pardon was so tendered, or for any other offence of which he appears to have been guilty in connection with the same matter
Commitment of person to whom pardon has been tendered	Commitment of person to whom pardon has been tendered
	Provided that such person shall not be tried jointly with any of the other accused, and that he shall be entitled to plead at such trial that he has complied with the conditions upon which such tender was made, in which case it shall be for the prosecution to prove that such conditions have not been complied with

(2) The statement made by a person who has accepted a tender of pardon may be given in evidence against him when the pardon has been forfeited under this section.	(2) The statement made by a person who has accepted a tender of pardon may be given in evidence against him at such trial.
(3) No prosecution for the offence of giving false evidence in respect of such statement shall be entertained without the sanction of the High Court	(3) No prosecution for the offence of giving false evidence in respect of such statement shall be entertained without the sanction of the High Court.

Change :—The italicised words and the proviso have been added by sec 87 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act (XVIII of 1923)

960 Certificate of Public Prosecutor —"We would make a certificate by the Public Prosecutor as the basis of the prosecution of a person who has accepted a tender of pardon"—Report of the Joint Committee (1922) Under the old law, it was the trying Court which had the authority to determine whether the pardon had been forfeited so as to necessitate the trial of the approver—Emp v Mariama, 1889 P. R 6; K E v. Kadu, 1904 P R 31, Sashi v Emp, 42 Cal 856, Emp v Kachri, 7 N L R 65 Under the present law, no such determination by the trying Court is necessary, but the certificate of the Public Prosecutor is sufficient

The certificate of the Public Prosecutor is an essential requisite under this section, and the absence of the certificate vitiates the trial of the approver—Ali v Crown, 5 Lah 379 (381), 26 Cr L J 237 The certificate of the Public Prosecutor is the sole basis of the prosecution of an approver, and therefore an approver cannot be prosecuted merely at the instance of a suggestion by the presiding Judge that he should be so dealt with—Emp v Maria Basappa 26 Bom L R 1240, 26 Cr L J 469 Where there was no certificate of the Public Prosecutor at the time of the commitment of the approver to the Sessions, but the certificate was subsequently filed in the Court of the Sessions Judge after he noticed the absence of the certificate and before the trial proceeded held that the proceedings before the committing Magistrate were merely irregular and not invalid, and the trial was in order, as the provisions of sec 339 as regards the requirement of the certificate were complied with before the trial began and especially as no objection had been taken either before the committing Magistrate or before the Sessions Court even after the point was brought prominently to notice—Nga Ba Gyi v Emp 3 Rang 55 4 Bur L J 23 27 Cr L J 254

961 Forfeiture of pardon —The approver will be said to have broken the conditions of pardon if he wilfully conceals anything essential or gives false evidence—Maung Po v K E 8 L B R 357 Emp v Kothia 30 Bom 611 If after acepting the tender of pardon the approver refuses to make any statement saying that he knows nothing his pardon will be revoked and he will be committed for trial—Emp v Budhan, 29 All 24 The prosecution may proceed against the approver if he breaks the condition of his pardon by giving a false evidence under section 512 of the Code (in a case where the principal offender has absconded)—In re Dagdu 46 Bom 120 22 Cr L J 6 0 But the absconding of the approver before the conclusion of cross examination does not amount to a wilful concealment of facts—Maung Po v K E 8 L B R 357 17 Cr L J 391

It is a matter of great importance that strictest faith should be kept with the approver and his mere failure to secure the conviction of his accomplices does not justify the withdrawal of pardon—Q E v Habibulla 1895 P R 15 But the approver will forfeit his pardon if he screens one of the offenders although he helps to secure the conviction of the other offenders—Suraj Bhan v Crown 1918 P R 24 19 Cr L J 9 6 An approver should be allowed to go free if he makes a fair full and true disclosure of all the circumstances within his knowledge relative to the commission of the crime When the approver made such a full disclosure and the whole of the evidence showed that the crimes were in all probability exactly as he said they were and there was no ground for supposing that he had concealed the name of any person concerned in the crime or had concealed the part which he himself took in the crime it was held that he had complied with the conditions of the pardon and the fact that there was slight inconsistencies upon immaterial points with a previous statement made by him would not justify a forfeiture of pardon—Srinop v Emp 12 C L R 2.6 An approver who makes a full and true disclosure of facts both before the committing Magistrate and the Sessions Court but in the cross examination resiles from the statement made by him in his examination in chief sufficiently fulfils the conditions of his pardon and his pardon cannot be forfeited—Emp v Kothia 30 Bom 611 Any trifling discrepancies elicited in cross examination do not justify the forfeiture of pardon—Kanwar Singh v Emp 190 P R 34 But where the approver gave true evidence regarding the offence before the committing Magistrate but resiled from that evidence before the Sessions Judge held that he must be deemed to have forfeited his pardon—Local Government v Mulli 11 N L R 59 16 Cr L J 417

No withdrawal of pardon necessary —The word forfeited has been substituted in the 1898 Code for the word withdrawn occurring in the 1882 Code Under the present Code no formal withdrawal of a and no formal declaration that the pardon has been forfeited are

sary—Sashi v K E 42 Cal 856 Emp v Saber 40 Cal 756 Khialv Emp 39 All 305 Killan v Emp 3 Mad 173 Emp v Kothia 30 Bom 611 Suraj Bhan v Crown 1918 P R 24 To Gale v K E 7 L B R 1 Emp v Kachri 7 N L R 65 the forfeiture is incurred ipso facto by the act of the approver—Emp v Abani Bhushan 37 Cal 845 The substitution of the word forfeited for withdrawn indicates that a pardon cannot be withdrawn but can only be forfeited on the ground of the breach of the conditions Under the present law the question is whether the accused has forfeited his pardon by some act of his own and not whether the Magistrate has validly withdrawn it —K E v Bala 25 Bom 675 And no question can arise at all as to its validity if the pardon has been withdrawn by an unauthorised Magistrate—Suraj Bhan v Crown 1918 P R 24 Under the old law the pardon remained in force until it was formally withdrawn under the present law the result of a failure to observe the conditions is that the approver may be put on his trial without any formal order of withdrawal or cancellation The act terminating the pardon was under the old law the withdrawal of pardon by the authority who granted it under the present Act it is the forfeiture by the approver—Sashi v K E 40 Cal 856

Therefore where an approver was tendered pardon by the District Magistrate but in the Court of Session he did not fulfil the condition of pardon whereupon the Sessions Judge directed the commitment of the approver held that the order of the Sessions Judge was not illegal It was not necessary that the pardon granted by the District Magistrate must be withdrawn by the Magistrate before the approver could be committed to the Sessions The Sessions Judge was competent to order the approver to be committed to the Court of Session when he was of opinion that the approver had forfeited the pardon—Crown v Kadu 1904 P R 31, Chanan v Crown 1 Lah 218

962 Trial of the Approver :—Commitment or trial along with other accused illegal —Sub-section (3) of section 337 lays down that the approver shall be detained in custody until the termination of the trial of the other accused persons by the Court of Session The effect of that section read with this section is that action can be taken against an approver who has forfeited his pardon after the trial of the other accused in the Court of Session is finished and then his trial should be commenced de novo If he has forfeited his pardon during the preliminary inquiry he cannot be committed to the Sessions along with the other accused—Q E v Bhan 23 Bom 493 Emp v Reappa 4 Bom L R 826 Q E v Ramaswami 24 Mad 321 Auna Chelam v Emp 31 Mad 272 Emp v Mohan 5 N L R 134 3 I C 912 (Contra—Sashi v K E 40 Cal 856 Q E v Brij Narain 20 All 529 Emp v Bulhor 29 All 4 Salim Khan v K E 5 A L J 601 K E v Bala 25 Bom 675 in these cases it is held that the commitment of the approver along with the other accused is not illegal)

If the accused has forfeited his pardon during the trial he cannot be tried at once along with the other accused since he has not been regularly committed to the Sessions but has been sent up as a witness—Q E v Sudra, 14 All 336, Q E v. Mulua, 14 All 502, Q. v Petumber, 14 W R 10, Sashi v K E, 42 Cal 856, Q E v. Kushya, Ratanlal 119, Chanan v Crown, 1 Lah 218 This is now expressly provided for by the proviso newly added In such a case the Sessions Judge should send him to a competent Magistrate for a regular commitment—Q v Bipro, 19 W R 43 Q E v Rama Tewari, 15 Mad 352, Q. E v. Sudra, 14 All 336, Q E v Jagat Chandra, 22 Cal 50 The approver should not be deprived of the benefit of a preliminary inquiry where he should have an opportunity of making his defence—Rama Varma v Q, 3 Mad 351

Where one of the accused at first promised to make a clean breast of all the circumstances and was tendered a pardon conditional on his doing so, but before he was treated as an approver and put into the box he however made a statement to the Court that he did not want the pardon and that he wished to be tried and that the pardon might be cancelled, whereupon he was tried along with the other accused, held that as the pardon though accepted for a time was rejected by the accused himself (and not forfeited) before it actually took effect the case did not fall under this section and the so called pardon was not a bar to the trial of the accused along with the others The pardon referred to in this section is an accepted pardon, the acceptance must continue in force till the person pardoned actually gives evidence and it is only then that any question would arise as to whether he has forfeited the pardon by not giving true evidence in the case—In re Basireddi Narappa, 45 M L J 613

Where the Judge sends up the approver to a Magistrate for commitment, the committing Magistrate must in his commitment-order give reasons for holding that the approver has forfeited his pardon—K E v Po Ket 10 Bur L T 46 8 L B R 447 17 Cr L J 337

Detention in custody —The Sessions Court is not justified as soon as the trial has closed of the offence with respect to which pardon has been tendered to an approver in sending the approver in custody to the Magistrate with a view to taking action against him for breach of the conditions of pardon The approver is entitled to be discharged as soon as the trial closes and action can be taken against him only by way of re arrest—Imp v Kothia 30 Bom 611 K E v Po Ket, 10 Bur L T 46 It is improper to keep the accused in further custody after the termination of the original trial—Local Govt v Mullu, 11 N L R 59, 16 Cr L J 117 Imp v Abani Bhushan, 37 Cal 845

963. Plea of pardon :—See the proviso The approver is entitled to plead, both before the committing Magistrate and before the Sessions Judge, in bar to his trial, that he had fulfilled the conditions on which pardon was tendered to him—Emp v Kothia, 30 Bom 611, Gangua, 37 All 331, Chanan v Crown, 1 Lah 218, K E. v Po Ket, 10 Bur L T 46, 17 Cr L J 337 The plea should be taken at the commencement of the proceedings before the Magistrate, and it would th be necessary for the Magistrate to consider whether the pardon been forfeited—Sashi v K E, 42 Cal 856 But the approver is entitled to plead the bar of pardon before the Sessions Judge although he had not done so before the committing Magistrate—Gangua v. Emp, 37 All 331, Sashi v K E, 42 Cal 856 Even though the committing Magistrate has decided against the approver, it is open to him to plead his pardon again at the trial before the Sessions Judge—Sashi, 42 Cal 836, Khial v Emp, 39 All 305, K E v Po Ket, 8 L B R 447, 17 Cr L J 337

Before an approver can be put on his trial on account of forfeiture of pardon, he must be given an opportunity of meeting with the allegation of the prosecution that he has failed to make a full and true disclosure of the facts within his knowledge, as required by sec 337 The mere expression of opinion by the Sessions Court that the person has not complied with the conditions of the pardon is not sufficient—Emp v Mariama 1889 P R 6, T Gale v K E, 7 L B R 1 The proper course is to draw up an order setting forth specifically the alleged breach of the condition of pardon, and to call upon the approver to shew cause on a future date why he should not be tried for the offence in respect of which pardon was tendered On the date fixed for the hearing unless the approver admits the alleged breach of the condition, the Magistrate or Judge should hear the evidence relied upon as establishing the breach and any rebutting evidence which the approver may offer, and should then record a definite finding as to whether there was a breach or not A definite finding arrived at in his manner is essential before the approver can be placed on his trial for the original offence—To Gale v K E, 7 L B R 1, 14 Cr L J 401 See the new Section 339A

The onus is on the prosecution to prove that the approver has forfeited his pardon—Sashi v K E 42 Cal 856, K. E v. Bala, 25 Bom 675 Emp v Kothia, 30 Bom 611, Kullen v Emp, 32 Mad 173 Khiali v Emp, 39 All 305 See the proviso

964. Sub-section (3)—Prosecution for perjury —When a pardon has been legally tendered to an accomplice and he breaks the condition of his pardon by making a retracted statement at the trial, proper sanction is necessary for the prosecution on each branch of the alternative charge—Q E v Dala, 10 Bom. 190 Want of sanction is not a mere irregularity but is an illegality which vitiates the proceedings—Sharifa v Emp, 1884 P R 42, Q E v Natu, 27 Cal 137

Sanction to prosecute should not be given merely on the ground that the approver contradicted himself before the committing Magistrate A witness who is in any way induced to make a false statement in connection with a capital charge should be allowed every possible Locus penitentiae—K E v Bodha, 11 A L J 964

It is not necessary that an approver should be punished for perjury if he can be punished sufficiently for that and the original crime, on a conviction for that original crime Sanction, therefore, ought to be refused, unless it appears that a conviction for the original crime is unlikely or a prosecution for it is undesirable for any other reason, or that on a conviction for the original crime the sentence that could be passed would be too light to cover both offences Before sanction can be granted, therefore, it must be shown that there is no intention of prosecuting the approver for the original crime or that he has already been prosecuted for it and has either been acquitted or has received or is likely to receive such a light sentence that it is not sufficient to cover his further crime of perjury—Local Govt v Gambhir 23 N L R 35 28 Cr L J 645

An approver was granted conditional pardon under sec 337 and then instead of being examined under sub-section (2) of sec 337 he was sent by the D S P to the committing Magistrate to have his statement recorded The Magistrate recorded his statement on oath in a miscellaneous proceedings and the approver then made a statement implicating himself and others in a dacoity He was then examined as a witness in the committal proceedings and there he denied all knowledge of the dacoity The District Magistrate thereupon applied to the High Court for sanction to prosecute him for perjury Held that the preliminary examination on oath was an unjustifiable and unnecessary procedure not authorised by law and it cannot provide the material for a prosecution for perjury in case the approver should subsequently resile from his statement No sanction can be granted on such material The proper course would have been to proceed with the trial of the approver for dacoity after obtaining the certificate of the Public Prosecutor—A E v Nga Bo Gye 3 Rang 224 26 Cr L J 1396 A I R 1925 Rang 286

The sanction must be given by the High Court The object is that the propriety of the prosecution of the approver should be considered and determined independently such an independent consideration cannot be expected from the Sessions Judge—Sharma v Emp 1884 P R 42

An application to the High Court for sanction for prosecution of an approver should be made by motion in open Court and not by a letter of reference—Q E v Manik Chandra 24 Cal 492 In re Madiga Nalla tadu 32 Mad 47 Crown v Bulaka 1904 P R 10 1 Cr L J 793 Crown v Raja 1910 P L R 175 13 Cr L J 451 An action can be taken by the High Court under this sub-section against an approver in respect of a statement made by him which is prima facie false even though the approver has not been examined as a witness in the case in connection with which he made his statement—Emp v Raja 1913 P L R 227 14 Cr L J 64

ask the accused whether he pleads that he has complied with the conditions on which the tender of the pardon was made

(2) If the accused does so plead, the Court shall record the plea and proceed with the trial, and the jury, or the Court with the aid of the assessors, or the Magistrate, as the case may be, shall, before judgment is passed in the case, find whether or not the accused has complied with the conditions of the pardon, and if it is found that he has so complied, the Court shall, notwithstanding anything contained in this Code pass judgment of acquittal

965 This section has been newly added by sec 88 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923

We consider that it is desirable to lay down some procedure with regard to the plea contemplated by the proviso to sub-section (1) of section 339 The Bill contains no indication as to when this plea is to be raised and what is to be the effect of it and difficulties of procedure may obviously arise with reference to sections 225 271 (?) and 27 We therefore propose a new section to be added after section 339 which lays down that when a person to whom a pardon is tendered is being tried under that section he shall at the commencement of the proceedings be asked whether he raises the plea that he has complied with the conditions on which the pardon was granted and if he does so plead the Court shall record a finding on the point and if it finds that the conditions have been complied with shall acquit the accused —Report of the Joint Committee (1922)

It is the duty of the Sessions Judge to ask the approver whether he relies on the pardon granted to him and to come to a finding whether the pardon has been forfeited It is not enough that the committing Magistrate has found that the pardon has been forfeited—In re Madiga Pothigadu 16 Cr L J 234 (Mad) The approver should be asked not simply whether he has fulfilled the conditions on which the pardon was granted but he should be asked whether he pleads that he has complied with the conditions on which the tender of pardon was made The terms of this section should be clearly explained to him and it should be made clear to him that he can plead the pardon as a bar to his trial —Ali v Crown 5 Lah 379 (381) 26 Cr L J 237

340 Every person accused before any Criminal Court may of right be defended by a pleader

Right of accused to be defended

340 (1) Any person accused of an offence before a Criminal Court, or against whom proceedings are instituted under this Code in any such Court may of right be defended by a pleader

Right of person against whom proceedings are instituted to be defended and his competency to be a witness

(2) Any person against whom proceedings are instituted in any such Court under Section 107, or under Chapter X, Chapter XI Chapter XII or Chapter XXXVI or under section 552, may offer himself as a witness in such proceedings

Change —This section has been re drafted by sec 89 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923

The expression person accused in section 340 may be read as referring only to persons accused of any offence it is proposed to make it clear that any person against whom proceedings are instituted under this Code is entitled to be defended by a pleader It is also laid down that persons against whom proceedings under Chapters X XI XII XXXVI, or under section 552 of the Code are pending do not labour under the ordinary disability of an accused person to be sworn and that they may be examined as witnesses in such proceedings —Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914)

966 Scope —It has been laid down in some cases that persons against whom proceedings are instituted under Chapters VIII and X are in the position of accused persons within the meaning of this section and are entitled to be defended by a pleader—Jhola Singh v Q E 23 Cal 493 Crown v Ida 1900 P R 15 Emp v Girand 25 All 375 Abinash v Emp 4 C W N 797 Nakhi Lal v Q E 27 Cal 656 The Legislature has now added the words person against whom proceedings are instituted which would expressly include person proceeded against under Chapters VIII and X and it will no longer necessary to enter into the much vexed question as to whether persons are in the position of accused persons Under the amended section, a person against whom proceedings have been instituted under sec 110 is entitled as a matter of right to have a reasonable opportunity afforded him of defending himself—Jatoi v Emp, 20 S L R 122, 27 Cr. L J 935

Where an inquiry under sec 476 is started against any person, the Court should hear the pleader appearing on behalf of such person—Ram Nihore v K E, 8 A L J 237

But a person against whom no process has been issued is neither an 'accused person nor a 'person against whom any proceedings have been instituted such a person has no right to attend much less to be represented by a pleader, during a preliminary inquiry held under section 202 before issue of process If he chooses to attend, he may do so like any other member of the public, but he has no locus standi as a party—Shaikh Chand v Mahomed Hanif, 4 N L R 81, 8 Cr L J 20, Golap Jan v Bholanath, 38 Cal 880

Sec 340 gives the accused person a right to be defended by a pleader, and this right begins from the moment that 'any person is accused of an offence before a Criminal Court or proceedings are instituted under this Code in any such Court An application by the Police for remand under sec 167 can be held to be a proceeding' instituted under this Code in a Criminal Court He is an accused, and appears as such before the Magistrate Therefore, at least from the moment after the 24 hours of arrest that he appears before the Court, this right begins His legal advisers can appear, oppose the remand, offer bail, or make any other legal application on his behalf —In re Llewellyn Evans, 50 Bom 741, 28 Bom L R 1043, 27 Cr L J 1169

967. Right of accused to be defended by pleader :—The accused has a right to choose his own pleader, and the Court is not entitled to tell him to appoint another pleader, because the pleader already engaged does not know how to behave in Court—In re James Vaverall Ratanlal 861 The Court has no power to forbid a duly qualified pleader to appear for the accused—Reg v Dajee Ratanlal 25 The accused has a right that the pleader engaged by him must be heard It is not a question of indulgence but of right. It is an elementary principle of law that no order ought to be made to a man's prejudice without hearing him, and his counsel must be heard before a final opinion is formed by the Court The Court has no discretion to refuse to hear the counsel —Emp v Iboo, 6 Bom L R 665 The Court cannot ask the pleader to sit down in the middle of the cross examination though it has power to disallow improper questions put by him—Reg v Dajee, Ratanlal 25 It is the duty of the Magistrate to afford the accused and his friends every opportunity of making his defence and he should not personally interpose in any way between them It is therefore improper for a Magistrate to refuse to allow the pleader engaged by the wife of an accused for his defence to have an interview with him or to appear and sit in Court—Q E v Uksudei 1 Bom L R 850 An accused should be given a reasonable opportunity of defending himself When after the commencement of the trial the application is made asking time to engage a pleader the reasonable course for the Magistrate to adopt would be to proceed with the examination in chief of the prosecution witnesses and then to allow a reasonable time to the accused to appoint a pleader—Pila v K E 47 All 147 26 Cr L J 575 If the accused s pleader is not heard the conviction will be set aside—In re Munirama 5 M L T 290 9 Cr L J 305

But a pleader not otherwise authorised to practise in a Court (e g a second grade Advocate) has no right to be heard by the Court But the Magistrate has a discretion to permit him to appear for an accused person This permission should be given sparingly and only in those cases in which the Magistrate considers that it is for the interests of the accused that it should be given—In re W Calogredy 10 Bur L T 117 18 Cr L J 345

Pleader appointed by Court —The position of a pleader appointed by the Court to defend a prisoner is not the same as that of a pleader whom the accused has authorised to act for him Any admission made by the former are not binding on the accused—Q E v Sangaya 2 Bom L R 751 (cited under sec 1)

Private Pleader —Under sec 4 (r) an accused person cannot claim as of right to be represented by a private person but he may be re presented by such person with the permission of the Court But in permitting or disallowing the appearance of private persons as pleaders a Magistrate should exercise a discretion in each case—Anonymous, 2 Weir 400 and a general order that no person will be allowed to practise as a private pleader is illegal—Krishnamachariar 2 Weir 401 In re Nagasami 31 M L T 458 An order excluding any particular individual in any particular case would be within the discretion of the Magistrate and therefore legal—Krishnamachariar 2 Weir 401

968 Mukhtars —Under the Code of 1872 the accused had a right to appear and be heard by a Mukhtar—Imp v Shivram 6 Bom 14 But under sec 4 (r) of the Code of 1898 (before it was amended in 1923) a Mukhtar could appear only with the permission of the Court —In re Anant Ram 30 All 66 But still it was held to be improper for a Magistrate to shut up the defence of the accused merely because he was represented by a Mukhtar and a general order prohibiting Mukhtars to appear in Sessions Courts was held to be illegal—Ishan Chandra v Emp 38 Cal 488 Magistrate should not by the in discriminate exclusion of persons who are invested by law a distinct professional status in criminal trials deprive parties of legal aid which they can frequently obtain at a moderate cost —Cal G R & C O., p 29 Ishan Chandra v Emp 38 Cal 488

Under section 4 clause (r) as now amended by Act XXXV of 1923 Mukhtars have now been placed on the same footing as pleaders and are entitled as of right to appear in all Criminal Courts without requiring any special permission

person is not an accused person and the proceedings are not criminal proceedings—Nur Mahomed v Bismella 16 Cal 781 Bachai v Jamuna 25 Cr L J 1091 (Cal) A person against whom proceedings are started under Chapter X may be examined on oath as a witness—Hirananda v Emp 9 C W N 983

341 If the accused, though not insane, cannot be made to understand the proceedings, the Court may proceed with the inquiry or trial, and, in the case of a Court other than a High Court, if such inquiry results in a commitment or if such trial results in a conviction the proceedings shall be forwarded to the High Court with a report of the circumstances of the case, and the High Court shall pass thereon such order as it thinks fit

Procedure where accused does not understand proceedings

970 Scope of Section —This section is intended to provide for cases where the accused is unable to understand the proceedings through deafness or dumbness or through ignorance of the language of the country and the want of an interpreter In such cases the High Court will order the detention of the prisoner during His Majesty's pleasure—Emp v Husen 5 Bom 262 Q E v Hussein Ratanlal 151

This section is inapplicable where the inability to understand the proceedings arises from unsoundness of mind In such cases the procedure prescribed by Chapter XXXIV should be followed—Emp v Husen 5 Bom 26 Q E v Kasiria Ratanlal 83 But if after inquiry under that Chapter it appears that the prisoner is not a lunatic the Magistrate should proceed under this section—In re Adala 11 M L T 24 13 Cr L J 24

If however the accused is able to understand the proceeding though he is deaf and dumb the provisions of this section do not apply and the case should be dealt with as in the ordinary way—Dubi Halwa 19 W R 37 K E v Dada Mahadu 3 Bom L R 371 K E v Nga San 4 Bur L T 150 Q v Bowka 22 W R 35 Q v Bouka 7 W R 7 In modern practice want of speech and hearing does not imply want of capacity either in the understanding or in memory but only a difficulty in the means of communicating knowledge The law in India certainly does not expressly provide for a sane deaf mute being exempted from punishment If his mind is sound his inability to hear and speak will not excuse him—K E v Nga San Myin 4 Bur L T 150 1 Cr L J 386 If it be shown that the deaf and dumb person had sufficient intelligence to understand the character of his criminal act he is liable to punishment—Deaf and Dumb Accused 40 Bom 598 18 Cr L J 143

971 Duty of Magistrate —Where the accused is deaf and dumb some means of communication with him should be adopted The Magistrate should try and get into communication with him with the assistance of his relations the Magistrate should make enquiry as to whether he has any friends or relatives who are accustomed to communicate with him and the manner in which he is communicated with in the ordinary affairs of his life—Deaf and Dumb Man 8 Bom L R 849 4 Cr L J 444 K E v Nga San 4 Bur L T 150 12 Cr L J 386 Q E v Samuel Ratanlal 696 Anonymous 2 Weir 403 Where the Magistrate omitted to attempt to communicate with the deaf and dumb accused the conviction was set aside as the accused was certainly prejudiced by such omission—Anonymous 6 M H C R App 7 2 Weir 403

Magistrate cannot pass sentence —The Magistrate can convict the accused and upon conviction can refer the case to the High Court but cannot pass sentence—Anonymous 2 Weir 403 In Q E v Ghanu 1889 P R 37 where the Magistrate passed sentence upon the accused the High Court set aside the sentence and passed such order as it thought proper

Summary Trial —Where the accused is a deaf mute it is highly inconvenient to conduct the trial summarily even though the offence is summarily triable—Deaf and Dumb Man 8 Bom L R 849

972 Reference to High Court —Reference can be made under this section to the High Court if the inquiry or trial results in a committal or conviction—Q E v Trikam Ratanlal 180 The Judge should proceed to the end of the trial and then refer the case if a conviction follows—Anonymous 2 Weir 403 and should not refer the case in the midst of the trial before any conviction or committal takes place—Deaf and Dumb Man 4 Bom L R 825 Where during the course of a trial it appeared that the accused was a deaf and dumb person and the Magistrate therefore referred the case to the High Court expressing his opinion that the prisoner was guilty it was held that the Magistrate ought to have proceeded to the end of the trial by convicting the accused and the mere expression of opinion that the accused was guilty did not amount to a conviction The High Court returned the case to the Magistrate and directed him to proceed with the trial and if the same resulted in a conviction to forward the proceedings again to the High Court—In re Dumb Man Ratanlal 879 In re Dumb Man Ratanlal 836

In making a reference under this section the Magistrate should state his view of the conduct of the accused and must take some evidence regarding the previous history and habits of the accused—Q E v Samuel Ratanlal 696

Orders which High Court may pass —The High Court may treat the proceedings before the Lower Court as amounting to a sufficient trial and pass sentence upon the accused according to the facts established in the case—Q v Bowka 22 W R 35 or may give him a further opportunity of being heard in the matter of the charge—Q v Bowka 22 W R 35 Q v Bowka 22 W R 72 or may direct a re trial if the Magistrate s trial was defective—Deaf and Dumb Man 8 Bom L R 849 The Court may upon a consideration of the tender age of the accused direct him to be made over to his father to be looked after by him—Q v Garga 7 N W P 131 The High Court may in a proper case discharge the accused with an admonition—Q v Bowka 22 W R 35 K E v Mona

4 Bom L R 296 The High Court may, if it is of opinion that the accused was by reason of unsoundness of mind incapable of knowing that what he did was contrary to law, and that no benefit will be likely to result to the accused by his being tried by the Court of Session direct him to be kept in jail pending the order of the Local Government —Q E v Somir, 27 Cal 368 The High Court may also treat the accused as a lunatic and report the matter to the Local Government under Sec 471—Crown v Hansa, 1901 P R 13

In serious cases, it is the practice of the High Court to refer the matter to the Local Government In the case of a minor offence the High Court itself can pass an appropriate sentence or discharge the accused—Emp v Rahman, 1 Lah 260, 21 Cr L J 621 Where a deaf and dumb accused was found guilty of attempt to commit suicide and at the trial he made certain signs indicating his guilt, the High Court affirmed his conviction and sentenced the accused to one day's simple imprisonment—Emp v Khashaba 25 Bom L R 43 A I R 1023 Bom 194

342. (1) For the purpose of enabling the accused to explain any circumstances appearing in the evidence against him, the Court may, at any stage of any inquiry or trial, without previously warning the accused, put such questions to him as the Court considers necessary, and shall, for the purpose aforesaid, question him generally on the case after the witnesses for the prosecution have been examined and before he is called on for his defence

Power to examine the accused

(2) The accused shall not render himself liable to punishment by refusing to answer such questions, or by giving false answers to them ; but the Court and the jury (if any) may draw such inference from such refusal or answers as it thinks just.

(3) The answers given by the accused may be taken into consideration in such inquiry or trial, and put in evidence for or against him in any other inquiry into, or trial for, any other offence which such answers may tend to show he has committed.

(4) No oath shall be administered to the accused.

973. Scope :—There is a conflict of opinion as to whether this section applies to trials of summons cases According to the Bombay, Calcutta, Allahabad, Patna and Lahore High Courts, and the Sind and Nagpur J C Courts, the Magistrate is bound in a summons case to examine the accused under this section—Imp v Fernandez, 45 Bom

This section does not apply to an inquiry under section 117 because the person called upon to give security is not in the position of an accused person within the meaning of section 342 Therefore the omission to examine the person called upon to give security is a mere irregularity curable under section 537 and not an illegality vitiating the conviction—Benode Behari v Emp 50 Cal 985 So also a person proceeded against under sec 488 is not looked upon as an accused person and omission to examine him does not vitiate the proceedings—Bachai v Jamuna 25 Cr L J 1091 (Cal)

Where an accused is examined by the Court before any evidence for the prosecution has been taken and before the commencement of the preliminary inquiry his examination cannot be said to be under sec 342 because at that stage there was no evidence for the prosecution recorded against him and no circumstances which he could be called upon to explain The statement must be taken to have been recorded under sec 164—Bahawala v Crown 6 Lah 183 26 P L R 331, 26 Cr L J 1238

from a prisoner particularly if he is undefended what explanation he may desire to offer regarding any fact stated by a witness or after the close of the case how he can meet what the Judge may consider to be damnatory evidence against him—Husein v Emp 6 Cal 96 Mazhar Ali v K E 50 Cal 223 36 C L J 417 Tara v Emp 48 I C 48 20 Cr L J 12 (Nag) And in order that the accused may explain all the facts appearing in evidence against him it is necessary that his attention should be directed to all the vital parts of the evidence against him specially if he is an ignorant person who cannot be expected to know or understand what particular parts of the evidence are or are likely to be considered by the Court to be against him—Tara v Emp 20 Cr L J 12 (Nag) The Court should not only point out to the accused the circumstances appearing in the evidence which requires explanation but it must out of fairness to the accused exercise that power in such a way that the accused may know what points in the opinion of the Court require explanation and failure or refusal on the part of the accused to give the explanation will entitle the Court to draw an inference against him—K E v Alimuddi 52 Cal 572 29 C W N 231 26 Cr L J 631

The object of this section is to enable the accused to explain each and every circumstance appearing in evidence against him this cannot be done by such a general question as What have you to say ? or What is your defence ? The specific point or points which weigh against the accused must be mentioned for if this is not done he cannot be reasonably expected to be able to explain those points—Maung Hmay v K E 1 Rang 689 K E v Alimuddi 52 Cal 572 41 C L J 101 26 Cr L J 631 The word generally does not limit the nature of the questioning to one or more questions of a general nature relating to the case but it means that the questions should relate to the whole case generally and should not be limited to any particular part or parts of it The word generally does not mean that the accused cannot be subjected to a detailed examination by the Court The law intends that the salient points appearing in the evidence against the accused must be pointed out to him in a succinct form and that he should be asked to explain them if he wished to do so—K E v Alimuddi 52 Cal 572 (per Mookerjee J Newbould J contra) The question must be framed in such a way as to enable the accused to know what he is to explain what are the circumstances which are against him and for which an explanation is needed A general question as to whether the accused has anything further to say is not a sufficient compliance with the requirements of this section—Bhokari v Emp 5 P L T 445 25 Cr L J 711 A I R 1924 Pat 791 Udhao v Emp 25 Cr L J 417 (Nag) Durga Ram v Emp 6 P L T 33 26 Cr L J 716 But another Patna case lays down that where the facts of the case are simple a general question such as Have you any statement to make ? may be sufficient—Baranali v K E 6 P L T 30 26 Cr L J 68

There is a difference in the wording of the first and the second portions of sub-section (1) of sec 342 the former being discretionary

(may put questions) and the latter mandatory (shall question him) If the Court has put questions to the accused under the first part of subsection (1) it would be a sufficient compliance with the provisions of the second portion if the Court gives to the accused an opportunity by putting to him one general question (e g Have you got to say any thing else ?) to explain the circumstances appearing in the case against him and in this connection the examination of the accused under the first portion of this subsection may be usefully looked into—Md Nasir ddin v Emp 4 Pat 450 6 P L T 588 26 Cr L J 954

But the mere fact that a large number of questions (as 55) were asked does not make the examination illegal where it appeared that the questions were not asked to elicit statements from the accused for the purpose of supplementing the case for the prosecution and the examination was not made in the nature of a cross-examination Where the accused attempted no defence and the object of the greater part of the questions was to ascertain whether the accused admitted the facts stated by the witnesses or wished to offer any explanation the mere length of the questions and of the answers of the accused should not lead to the inference that the examination was inquisitorial—Khudiram v Emp 9 C L J 55 3 I C 625

Under this section it is incumbent on the Court to ask the accused generally whether he wishes to offer an explanation of any of the evidence which has been given against him and if the Court does so that would be a sufficient compliance with this section This section also gives the Court power to put specific questions to the accused with regard to any of the evidence adduced for the prosecution but it is entirely in the discretion of the Judge whether he should after having put the general question ask such specific questions on particular points in the evidence—Emp v Narayana 26 Bom L R 109 25 Cr L J 1127

After the statement of the accused had been recorded under section 34 a witness for the prosecution was examined The witness however did not add materially to the evidence which had been already given for the prosecution and which the accused had had an opportunity of explaining The accused was not again examined after the examination of the witness Held that although the witness for the prosecution ought to have been examined before the examination of the accused under the imperative provisions of section 342 still as the accused in this particular case was not prejudiced by the error in procedure, the High Court applying the provisions of section 537 did not set aside the trial but warned the Magistrate to be careful to avoid the error in future—Emp v Bechu Chaube 45 All 124 20 A L J 874 24 Cr L J 67 In another Allahabad case where the accused was examined after the examination of the complainant and some of prosecution witnesses and then two other prosecution witnesses were examined but these two witnesses said that they knew nothing held that as the accused had not been prejudiced by this irregularity the trial was not vitiated—Khacho Mal v Emp 27 Cr L J 405 (All)

The accused should be examined before the evidence for the defence is taken The examination of the accused after all the prosecution witnesses as well as the witnesses for the defence are examined vitiates the conviction and sentence and the trial must be taken up again from the close of the prosecution case and the accused must be examined before he has entered upon his defence—Surendra v Isamuddi 51 Cal 933 (934) 26 Cr L J 261 Ram Charan v Emp 7 P L T 59 26 Cr L J 1289 But in a very recent Calcutta case it has been laid down that an examination of the accused after the conclusion of the defence evidence is a mere irregularity curable by sec 537—Tamez Khan v Rajabali 31 C W N 337 (338) 28 Cr L J 347 (dissenting from 51 Cal 933)

Although the Magistrate may under the first part of sub-section (1), examine an accused person before the case for the prosecution is concluded still this would not absolve the Magistrate from the obligation imposed upon him by the latter part of sub-section (1) to examine the accused after the witnesses for the prosecution have been examined and before he is called on for his defence—Ramnath v Emp 2 P L T 549 2 Cr L J 460 Moinuddin v Emp 2 P L T 455 2 Cr L J 4? Bhokari v Emp 5 P L T 443 Hamid Ali v Sri Kissen 28 C W N 118

tion and re examination of all the prosecution witnesses are over It is not enough that the accused has been examined after the examination in chief of the prosecution witnesses and before their cross examination and re examination Until the prosecution witnesses have been cross examined and re examined it cannot be said what the exact case that the accused will have to meet is and if he is forced to disclose his defence before cross examination it might very well be that the prosecution witnesses would be on their guard and the value of the cross examination destroyed The provision in Sec 342 is for the benefit of the accused and to enable him to obtain the full benefit of the section it is clear that he must be examined after the cross examination and re examination of the prosecution witnesses are over—Mitarjit Singh v K E 6 P L J 644 7 P L T 570 22 Cr L J 697 Kashi Pramanik v Dasu Pramanik 7 C W N 28 Jummun v Emp 50 Cal 308 Mazahar v K E 50 Cal 223 Gulzari Lal v Emp 49 Cal 1075 Fernandez v Emp 45 Bom 672 Emp v Nathu Kasturchard 50 Bom 42 27 Bom L R 105 6 Cr L J 690 Pramatha Nath Mukerjee v Emp, 50 Cal 518 (Servant Defamation Case) Dibakanta v Gour Gopal 50 Cal 939 Local Govt v Maria 20 N I R 174 Therefore where after seven of the prosecution witnesses were examined in chief the Magistrate examined the accused and then two more prosecution witnesses were examined and all the nine prosecution witnesses were cross examined held that there was no substantial compliance with the provisions of this section—Sailendra v K E 38 C L J 175 Krishtappa v Emp 25 Cr L J 713 (Nag) Mad Sadiq v Emp 26 P L R 533 26 Cr L J 1370 Where the prosecution witnesses are first examined in chief then the accused are examined under this section and afterwards the prosecution witnesses are cross examined the procedure is illegal and the trial is vitiated—Haronath v Ala Bux 28 C W N 119 38 C L J 281 Such non compliance with the provisions of this section is not an irregularity curable by sec 537—Ibid Mazahar v K E 50 Cal 223 But the Madras High Court holds that the words after the witnesses for the prosecution have been examined mean when the prosecution has finished calling evidence and do not include the cross-examination and re examination of the prosecution witnesses Therefore where the accused does not cross examine the prosecution witnesses after their examination in chief and then the Magistrate examines the accused and frames a charge and afterwards at a later stage the accused cross examines the prosecution witnesses and then the prosecution re examines them held that the omission to further examine the accused after the cross-examination and re examination of the prosecution witnesses does not vitiate the trial—Varisai Rowther v K E 46 Mad 449 F B (overruling Modura Muthu Vannian In re 45 Mad 820) This is also the view of the Rangoon High Court—Nga Hla v Emp 3 Rang 139 26 Cr L J 1336 (following 46 Mad 449) This seems to be the view of the Allahabad High Court also See Emp v Bechu Chaube 45 All 124 where the witnesses for the prosecution were examined in chief and on the same day the accused were questioned under sec 342 and afterwards the witnesses for the prosecution were cross examined the High Court made no objection to this procedure The Oudh Chief Court also holds that if the accused has been examined before the framing of the charge the omission to re examine him after the frame of charge and the cross-examination of the prosecution witnesses does not vitiate the trial if the cross examination of the prosecution witnesses adds nothing on which it is necessary to further examine the accused—Emp v Brij Behari 28 O C 130 1° O L J 183 2 O W N 327 26 Cr L J 1301 Khuman v Emp 2 O W N 3/8 26 Cr L J 13/4

Where the accused has been examined after the prosecution has finished its evidence under section 252 but a new and material matter in support of the prosecution case is elicited in cross examination or re examination of the prosecution witnesses under sec 56 it is desirable that the accused should again be questioned on the case under sec 342 and asked generally to explain the circumstances So also if the accused has already been examined before the framing of the charge and the prosecution calls fresh evidence after the formulation of the charge the accused must again be examined under section 342 on the termination of that evidence —Varisai Rowther v K E 46 Mad 449 at p 457 (F B)

The accused was examined by the Magistrate under this section before the charge was framed and after all the witnesses for the prosecution had been examined and cross examined at considerable length After the charge was framed under sec 254 most of the witnesses were recalled by the accused (under sec 256) for a further lengthy cross examination at the termination of which the Magistrate proceeded to record the defence evidence without questioning the accused again Held that although it may often be desirable that the accused should be again examined after the further cross examination of the prosecution witnesses recalled after the framing of the charge in order to ascertain whether the accused wishes to give any additional explanation still in the present case since the witnesses for the prosecution had been once cross examined at great length it would be unnecessary for the Court to examine the accused again after the further cross examination when no fresh circumstances were discovered after the recall and re cross examination of the prosecution witnesses—Byrne v Crown 4 Lah 61 In re Thachroth 45 M L J 279 Fazl Karim v Emp 26 Cr L J 1418 (Lah)

After the examination in chief of the prosecution witnesses the accused was examined and afterwards the prosecution witnesses were cross examined and re examined and the accused was asked as to whether he had anything to say, and then he filed a written statement held that the omission to examine the accused again after the cross examination and re examination of the prosecution witnesses did not vitiate the trial since the accused was asked whether he had anything to say and the filing of the written statement relieved the Magistrate of the necessity of re examining him orally in reference to the matters elicited in the cross examination and re examination of the prosecution witnesses—Mohiuddin v Emp 4 Pat 488 6 P L T 154 26 Cr L J 811, A I R 1925 P 414

Where an accused person has been examined under this section after the close of the prosecution case and the Court examines a person under sec 540 (whether such person be a prosecution witness or another person) not as regards the occurrence of the offence but as to some matter in relation to the title of the lands in respect of which the offence (rioting) was committed it is not necessary to examine the accused again—Prava Gope v K E 3 Pat 1015 (1017) 5 P L T 571 25 Cr L J 1276, Fazal Karim v Emp 26 Cr L J 1418 (Lah)

978 Who can examine —Only the Court conducting the trial or inquiry can examine the accused Neither the complainant nor the counsel for the prosecution nor any other person is authorised to put questions to the accused—10 Mad 121

979 Improper questions —(1) It is objectionable to put questions to the accused in regard to the matter which he had previously mentioned in his confession and which he had repudiated as untrue—K E v Bhut Nath 7 C W N 345 The Magistrate cannot put him any question with the object of trapping him into some sort of admission after he has resiled from his confession—Umar Din v Emp 7 Lah 179

(3) The object of examination under this section is to enable the accused to explain any circumstances appearing in evidence against him but where the prosecution had adduced no evidence implicating the accused in the offence with which he is charged the Magistrate has no right to put questions to the accused or to invite him to make a statement and the answers given by him to such questions are inadmissible in evidence against him—Abibulla v Kabib Rauthan 39 Mad 770 Devi Dayal v Crown 4 Lah 55 Q E v Veeran 9 Mad 4

(4) It is improper to ask questions to supplement the case for the prosecution or to fill up gaps in the evidence for the prosecution See Note 974 under heading Object of Examination

(6) It is improper for a Magistrate to put questions to the accused before his conviction in the present trial about his previous convictions either with a view to take them into consideration for the purpose of conviction or with a view to dispense with formal evidence as to the alleged previous convictions and as to the identity of the accused in the event of

conviction—Emp v Hiloom Jah 28 Bom 129 Yasin v K E 28 Cal 689 But see Emp v Kissan 4 N L R 163

980 Written statements —Though written statements can be put in and accepted by the Court still they can not be allowed to take the place of the examination of the accused which this section orders to be made—Amrita Lal v Emp, 42 Cal 957 Harnama v Emp 22 Cr L J 276 (Lah) Raghu Bhumij v K E 5 P L J 430 1 P L T 24, Moinuddin v Emp 2 P L T 455 Balkeshwar v Emp 23 Cr L J 114 3 P L T 322 In re Kasimalai 14 I W 418 23 Cr L J 697 Udhao v Emp 25 Cr L J 417 (Nag) The object of this section is to elicit answers from the accused in regard to certain matters and since written statements are generally drawn up by the legal advisers or friends of the accused and not by the accused themselves the practice of making such written statements will defeat the object of this section—K E v Durjendra 19 C W N 1043 Pramatha v Emp 50 Cal 518 (524) The promise to file written statements made at the time of the plea does not exempt the Court from its duty of examining the accused under this section—Pramatha v Emp 50 Cal 518 But where the written statement filed was full and elaborate and covered all the points raised by the prosecution and no further purpose would have been served by any further questions to the accused and it was not shown that the irregularity had caused him any prejudice the conviction need not be set aside nor retrial ordered—Ramnath v Emp 2 P L T 549 Bhagwat v Emp 4 Pat 231 6 P L T 73 26 Cr L J 93? Where the accused persons were not examined under this section after the examination of the prosecution witnesses but they filed written statements at that stage and also after the examination of the defence witnesses held that the accused not having been prejudiced and there having been no miscarriage of justice the High Court would not interfere in revision—Mir Tilawan v Emp 1 Pat 31

981 Sub Section (2) —Refusal to answer questions —The practice of refusing to answer questions in the Sessions Court and of putting written statements is a very pernicious one The refusal to answer questions may be attended with great risk to the accused for the Court may draw from such refusal an inference adverse to the accused—K E v Durjendra 19 C W N 1043

False answers —The immunity from prosecution for perjury is limited to answers to questions put by the Court during the examination The accused cannot escape liability if he makes false statements in an affidavit presented to the Court along with an application for transfer of the case —Allah Wasai v Emp, 26 Cr L J 1369 (Lah) Ghulam Md v Crown, 3 Lah 46 Emp v Pir Qadir Baksh 6 Lah 34 26 P L R 158 27 Cr L J 98 but the contrary view has been taken by the Allahabad High Court in Emp v Bindeshari 28 All 331 In re Barkat 19 All 200; and Emp v Matan 33 All 163 where it has been held that the ac-

Candy J that as soon as they were convicted (though not sentenced) they ceased to be accused persons and could be examined on oath as witnesses but Fulton J held that the conviction did not put an end to their trial and therefore they were still accused persons and their examination on oath was illegal—K E v Anuya 3 Bom L R 437

The provision in sub section (4) that no oath can be administered to the accused has reference only to the statement made by him in answers to questions put to him by the Court under this section It has no reference to any other act of the accused and therefore the accused can make an affidavit on oath in support of an application for transfer of the case under section 526—Ghulam Md v Emp 3 Lah 46 23 Cr L J 399

984 Accused —The word accused in this section means a person over whom the Magistrate or other Court is exercising jurisdiction therefore a person who has been discharged by the Police without being brought before a Magistrate is not an accused person and he can give evidence on oath in a trial of his accomplices—Q E v Mona Puna 16 Bom 661 Aung Min v K E 4 L B R 36

The term accused means a person under trial a person called upon to show cause under Section 133 is not an accused person within the meaning of this section and oath can be administered to him—Hira nanda v Emp 2 C L J 149 The parties to a proceeding under sec 145 are not accused persons and they can be examined on oath—Md Ayub v Sarafarza 26 Cr L J 70 (Oudh) So also a person against whom the Public Prosecutor has withdrawn the case can be administered oath and examined as a witness—Emp v Govind 18 Bom L R 266 17 Cr L J 256 An informer is not an accused person and this section does not prevent oath being administered to him—Mal Singh v Emp 1887 P R 38 A party to a proceeding under sec 363 of the Calcutta Municipal Act for the erection of an unauthorised structure is not an accused person and is not exempt from the administration of oath under sec 342 The erection of the unauthorised structure is not an offence it is only when an order for demolition of the structure is disobeyed that the person is said to commit an offence and becomes an accused—Krishen Doyal v Corporation of Calcutta 31 C W N 506 (508) 28 Cr L J 407

343 Except as provided in Sections 337 and 338 no influence, by means of any promise or threat or otherwise, shall be used to an accused person to induce him to disclose or withhold any matter within his knowledge

No influence to be used to induce disclosures

985 See Sec 24 of the Evidence Act and compare section 163 ante Where the case against an accused is withdrawn and he is examined as a witness any inducement offered to such person should be deemed as offered to him as a witness and not as an accused and does not make his evidence inadmissible though the credit to be attached to such w is diminished—Emp v Govind 18 Bom L R 266 17 Cr L J 256 instances of inducement threat and promise see notes under

Power to postpone or adjourn proceedings.

344. (1) If, from the absence of a witness, or any other reasonable cause, it becomes necessary or advisable to postpone the commencement of, or adjourn any inquiry or trial, the Court may, if it thinks fit, by order in writing, stating the reasons therefor, from time to time postpone or adjourn the same on such terms as it thinks fit, for such time as it considers reasonable, and may by a warrant remand the accused if in custody:

Remand.

Provided that no Magistrate shall remand an accused person to custody under this section for a term exceeding fifteen days at a time.

(2) Every order made under this section by a Court other than a High Court shall be in writing signed by the presiding Judge or Magistrate.

Reasonable cause for remand

Explanation.—If sufficient evidence has been obtained to raise a suspicion that the accused may have committed an offence, and it appears likely that further evidence may be obtained by a remand, this is a reasonable cause for a remand.

986 Scope of section :—This section relates to proceedings in inquiries or trials, and has nothing to do with Police investigations, and it contemplates a remand to jail not to Police custody—In re Krishnaji, 23 Bom 32 The custody mentioned in this section is quite different from the custody under section 167 The power of remand under sec 167 is given to detain prisoners in custody while the police make the investigation, and in a proper case, to commence the inquiry But the custody under sec 344 is intended for undertrial prisoners—In re Nagendra Nath 51 Cal 402 (412)

This section is applicable to cases even before the issue of process under sec 204 and the Magistrate is entitled unde sec 344, if there be a reasonable cause for doing so, to postpone any inquiry or trial and to postpone the issue of process, even if the case be a warrant case—Ram Saran v Nikhad Narasr, 6 P L T 477, 26 Cr L J 1179

987. Adjournment :—A Court of Justice has inherent jurisdiction to stay proceedings in a case pending before it and this section empowers a Criminal Court to adjourn an inquiry or trial for any reasonable cause—Paras Ram v Jalal Din, 1916 P W R 4, 17 Cr L J 7 Adjournments should not be made except upon strong and reasonable grounds It is most inexpedient for a sessions trial to be adjourned The trial before a Court of Session should proceed and be dealt with conti nuously from its inception to its finish Occasions may arise when it is necessary to grant adjournments, but such adjournments should be granted only on the strongest possible ground and for the shortest possible period—Badri Prasad v K E, 10 A L J 473, 13 Cr L J 861 'The evidence of witnesses should invariably be recorded as soon as possible after their attendance If from unavoidable causes an adjournment is indispensable, there should be no unnecessary delay Witnesses remaining over from day-to day should as a rule, be examined at the first sitting of the Court on the following day, and every effort should be made to minimise the inconvenience to which they may be put After the examination of witnesses has commenced the trial or preliminary inquiry should be proceeded with until all the witnesses in attendance have been examined, those for the prosecution being first examined and if any witness be detained for a longer period than two days the Magistrate should be careful to record the reason for each detention in the order sheet of the case —Cal G R & C O p 30 Where a trial is adjourned to a particular date, it is not competent for the Magistrate to accelerate the date of hearing against the wishes of the accused or his pleader The trial should not be concluded nor judgment pronounced without waiting till that date—Karam Din v Emp, 1898 P R 14

It is discretionary with the Court to adjourn the inquiry or trial under this section But this discretion is to be exercised only in cases which come really within the terms of this section It should be exercised carefully and according to rule and not arbitrarily If this power is used improperly and arbitrarily the High Court will interfere under section 15 of the Charter Act—Muthoora v Heera 17 W R 55 Ram Saran v Nikhad 6 P L T 477, 26 Cr L J 1179 When a Magistrate is of opinion that a party before him is unnecessarily wasting time and protracting the case, he has a discretion to refuse an adjournment for bringing fresh witnesses—Ali Sher v Mir Md 26 Cr L J 958 (Sind)

The Magistrate should take some evidence before granting adjournment On an application for adjournment by the prosecution on the ground that it would not be advisable to proceed with the case in the absence of an accused whose appearance had up to the date of the application not been secured, the Magistrate should before granting the application require the production of some evidence But the omission to do this, in a case in which the Magistrate had recorded some evidence before the issue of warrant, would not by itself entitle the accused to claim to be discharged—Billinghurst v Meek, 49 Cal 182, 22 Cr L J 465

The Court which adjourns the inquiry or trial and remands the accused is bound to record clearly the grounds of adjournment and remand—Manikam v Q, 6 Mad 63

988. Grounds of Adjournment —The Magistrate may adjourn a trial for the purpose of allowing the accused to secure the attendance of his witnesses—In re Dinoo Roy, 16 W R 21, Q v Totaram, 11 W R 15 The fact that the accused s advocate has gone to another place where he is detained in a lengthy criminal case is a reasonable ground.

for adjournment—Esteves v Emp, 4 Bur L T 213 12 Cr L J 474 If the Sessions Judge is of opinion that the prosecution has not laid a basis for the reception of the depositions taken before the committing Magistrate in the absence of the accused, he should adjourn the trial under this section and under section 540 summon such witnesses as he may deem material—Emp v Sagambar, 12 C L R 120 A Magistrate is justified in adjourning a case till the disposal of a counter case, where a point of law raised in the former case can be conveniently decided after the disposal of the latter case—Ram Saran v Nikhad, 6 P L T 477 26 Cr L J 1179 Where the counsel for the accused in a capital case applied for permission to cross examine the witnesses on the day following, as he was not prepared to cross examine them that day, the Court should grant the application—Sadasib v Emp, 41 Cal 299 According to the provisions of secs 256 and 257, the accused is entitled as a matter of right to ask for an adjournment after a charge has been framed against him, to enable him to adduce evidence in support of his defence—Emtaz Ali v Jagat 1 C W N 313 If a witness not examined before the committing Magistrate is tendered at the trial as a witness for the prosecution, and the accused objects on the ground that the examination of that witness will be a surprise to him, this may be a good ground for adjournment or postponement—Q E v Khan Mahamad, 1889 P R 1 Where a Magistrate has once issued process for the attendance of a defence witness, he is bound to enforce his attendance and cannot refuse an adjournment which is asked for by the accused in order that the witness s attendance may be secured—Mithir Lal v Emp, 24 Cr L J 370 (Cal) Where it is notified to the Court that an application is intended to be made to the High Court for transfer of the case, the Court is bound to give the party making the application a reasonable time for obtaining the order of the High Court and if necessary, to postpone the hearing—Q E v Virasami 19 Mad 375 The pendency of an appeal against the conviction of the accused in a case is a good ground for adjourning the trial of the same accused in a subsequent case—In re Mantra Kamaraju 6 M L T 90, 9 Cr L J 495 The accused is entitled to have an adjournment of his case so as to enable him to secure the services of a pleader whom he wants to engage for the purpose of cross examining the prosecution witnesses—Paras Ram v Jalal Din 1916 P W R 14 17 Cr L J 7

What are not good grounds for adjournment —The Magistrate cannot postpone an inquiry for a reason not contemplated by this section for instance his being busy with executive work—Muthoora v Heera 17 W R 55 The fact that the accused wants time to engage an advocate and prepare his defence is not a sufficient cause for adjourning a trial in ordinary cases though in complicated and difficult cases an adjournment may be granted on that ground—Taung Do v Crown, 1 L B R 270 But see 1916 P W R 14 cited above Where the proceedings have been completed against a prisoner, the decision of the case should not be deferred on the ground that the principal offenders have not been apprehended—3 W. R. (Cr Let) 21 Where a number of persons are accused of having committed an offence the absence of some of them is not a reasonable cause for adjourning the inquiry into the guilt of the rest who have appeared before the Magistrate—Emp v Nga Tun 1 L B R 60 The absence of a co accused and the desirability of a joint trial are not sufficient reasons for the further postponement of proceedings—Billing hurst v Meek 49 Cal 182

Where two cross cases are filed one on a complaint and the other on a police challan and the complainant in one case is the accused in the othe the postponement of the complaint case till after the disposal of the police challan case is not justified by the provisions of this section The two cases must be tried simultaneously but each case must be dealt with separately and on its own merits and the judgments in both the cases should be pronounced after both the trials are finished—Sk Bathar v Nobadali 28 C W N 487 26 Cr L J 65

989. Stay of criminal proceedings pending civil suit —This section empowers the criminal Court to adjourn an inquiry or trial for any reasonable cause and the institution of a civil suit between the same parties and in respect of the same property is certainly a reason able cause for which criminal proceedings should be stayed—Pars Ram v Jalal Din 1916 P W R 4 See also Ankamma v Adri aklu 18 L W 236 24 Cr L J 640 and In re Periasami 20 L W 544 35 M L T 99 It is true that there is no hard and fast rule that a criminal case should be stayed pending the disposal of a civil suit from which the criminal case has arisen or with which it is intimately connected—Subramanian Chetti 2 Weir 415 and that the institution of a civil suit is not always a valid ground for adjourning a criminal prosecution although the issues and evidence in the two cases are practically the same—Mathura v Durga 2 A L J 747 But each case should be dealt with according to its own particular circumstances and to avoid a regretable conflict of decisions between the Civil and Criminal Courts the criminal proceedings should be stayed pending the decision of the civil suit—Nur Din v Crown 1916 P W R 8 Kanhaiyalal v Bhagwan 48 All 60 23 A L J 956 26 Cr L J 1485 Although a decision of the Civil Court is not technically binding upon the Criminal Court still if the Civil Court decision is in favour of the accused it creates such a doubt in his guilt that it would almost become impossible for the latter Court not to give him its benefit Therefore it is proper for a Criminal Court to adjourn the proceedings till the decision of the civil suit—Pars Ram v Jalal Din 1916 P W R 4 If the object of prosecuting the criminal proceedings while a civil suit in relation to the same matter is pending be in reality to prejudice the trial of the civil suit or to coerce the accused into a compromise of the civil suit on terms to be practically dictated by the complainant the Magistrate should as a general rule postpone the criminal proceedings till the disposal of the civil suit—Subramanian Chetti 2 Weir 415 (416) An order staying a criminal trial on a complaint of rioting and mischief in which questions of possession will have to be gone into until a civil suit on a question of title has been disposed of is not a proper order—Nambia v Sudalai Muthu 44 M L J 612 A I R 1923 Mad 595

The Magistrate has a discretion in such cases to adjourn or continue the criminal proceedings If the Magistrate on a consideartion of all the circumstances exercises his discretion and either stays proceedings in the criminal cases pending the disposal of the suit or declines to do so the High Court as a Court of Revision will not as a general rule interfere with the exercise of such discretion—Subramania Chetti v Weir 415 (416) Varadarajula Naidu 1 M H C R 66

990 Costs of adjournment —The words on such terms as it thinks fit empower the Criminal Courts to allow the costs of an adjournment—Crown v Shuldhan 1904 P R 20 Sannasi v Sivasubramania 33 M L J 366 Raghunandan v Ramadin 2 P L W 218 19 Cr L J 6 This section clearly entitles a Court to award costs of adjournment to a party who has been put to unnecessary expenses by an adjournment on the application of the other party A judicious exercise of this power would have the effect of preventing many useless adjournments—Mathura Prosad v Basant 28 All 207 Where the accused asks for an adjournment to which he is not entitled the Court may make an order of adjournment conditionally on his paying the costs of the other side—Sew Prasad v Corporation of Calcutta 9 C W N 18 But it is improper to direct the accused to pay the costs of adjournment when he applies under Section 526 for a transfer—Fatta v Crown 1911 P W R 8

An order for costs will be made only in those cases where the circumstances are exceptional and where for some reason or other the ordinary everyday method of conducting criminal cases must be departed from—In re Abdul Rahiman 42 Bom 254 20 Bom L R 124 19 Cr L J 326 No order for costs should be made where the adjournment is inevitable and there is no other alternative Thus where the accused person being absent the Court cannot proceed with the case and is bound to adjourn the hearing it would be entirely opposed to the spirit of this section if the Magistrate under such circumstances passes orders awarding the costs of adjournment against the accused—Browne v Chandra Singh 1906 P R 6 Beedha v Emp 20 A L J 280 23 Cr L J 743

This Section does not apply to proceedings in appeal and therefore an order requiring the appellant to pay the costs of adjournment is improper and ultra vires—Suraj Bhan v Crown 1919 P R 29

Against whom costs may be awarded —The costs are to be paid by the party applying for the adjournment where a criminal case is taken up on a Police charge sheet filed on information given by a private person and such person engages a Vakil and moves the Court for an adjournment owing to the absence of the Vakil held that an order for costs can be validly made against that person on granting the adjournment prayed for even though he may not be a complainant under sec 200 since an informant is a person recognised in the Code as initiating criminal proceedings as much as a complainant acting under Section 190—Sannasi Kudumban v Sivasubramania 40 Mad 1130 33 M L J 366 But where the prosecution is wholly conducted by the Police and the adjournment is asked for only for the evidence of the Police the complainant cannot be ordered to bear the costs of the adjournment—Emp v Laxman 24

Bom L R 380 If an adjournment takes place for which the complainant is solely to blame then of course an order can be made that the complainant should pay any costs which may have been incurred by the accused for the adjournment—Ibid

991 Remand —Remands to custody should not ordinarily be ordered under this section without first recording some evidence to show that good grounds exist for believing that the accused has committed a non bailable offence—Ahmed Ali v Emp 11 N L R 162 if the offence is bailable the accused should be admitted to bail and not remanded to custody—Raghunandan v Emp 8 C W N 779

When the accused is at first brought before a Magistrate and remand is desired it is not necessary to go fully into the charge it is ordinarily sufficient to show by the evidence of a Police officer that they believe that the accused is concerned in the commission of an offence and on such proof the accused will be remanded to custody If the accused is again brought up after a remand and further remand is asked for some direct evidence of the guilt of the accused should be required to justify the Magistrate in ordering for further remand and with each remand the necessity for the production of evidence of guilt becomes more strong—Ponnusami v Q 6 Mad 69 Jamini v Emp 36 Cal 174 Ahmad Ali v Emp 11 N L R 16 16 Cr L J 705

An order of remand cannot be passed in the absence of the accused To remand is to re commit to custody The commitment requires the presence of the accused the re commitment also requires his presence—Anonymous 2 Weir 409

Grounds of remand —The Magistrate can remand the accused if sufficient evidence has been obtained to raise a suspicion that the accused may have committed an offence and it appears likely that further evidence may be obtained by such remand—Narendra v Emp 36 Cal 166 Where evidence was available but it appeared necessary to the Magistrate to defer the examination of witnesses in order that further evidence might be produced so that the inquiry when commenced might be continuous held that the remand of the accused in such a case was justified—Mar itham v Q 6 Mad 63 But a Magistrate is not justified in postponing an inquiry and remanding the accused when there is no evidence at all which could be the foundation of a charge and merely on the expectation that, after some time on some inquiry being made some evidence might be obtained—Muthoora v Heera 17 W R 55 Where the accused person had already made a confession and had produced an article stolen from a person and there was ample evidence before the Magistrate it was held that the remand of the accused in order to get from him a confessional statement is most improper—Anonymous 2 Weir 414

Remand to police custody —This section does not empower the Magistrate to remand an accused person who is in the custody of the Magistrate to Police custody for the purpose of obtaining information with regard to the offences which the accused may be alleged to have committed—In re Rama, 4 Bom L R 878 In re Krishnaji 23 Bom 32

an accused person may be remanded at a time by an order of the Magistrate—Reg v Surhja 5 B H C R 31 An accused person has the right to have the evidence against him recorded at as early a period as possible and the fact that there is or may be a great deal of evidence forthcoming is not a sufficient ground for detention for an inordinate period—Manikam v Q 6 Mad 63

If a Magistrate without reasonable cause delays proceedings with the trial of persons whom he keeps in jail he would be liable notwithstanding the provisions of Act XVIII of 1850 (Protection of Judicial Officers) to an action for damages if the prisoners are eventually acquitted—Q v Sahoo 11 W R 19

Compounding offences

345 (1) The offences punishable under the sections of the Indian Penal Code specified in the first two columns of the table next following may be compounded by the persons mentioned in the third column of that table —

Offence	Sections of Indian Penal Code applicable	Persons by whom offence may be compounded

Uttering words or sounds or making gestures or exhibiting any object intending to insult the modesty of a woman or intruding upon the privacy of a woman	509	The woman whom it is intended to insult or whose privacy is intruded upon

(3) When any offence is compoundable under this section, the abetment of such offence or an attempt to commit such offence (when such attempt is itself an offence) may be compounded in like manner.

(4) When the person who would otherwise be competent to compound an offence under this section is under the age of eighteen years or is an idiot or lunatic, any person competent to contract on his behalf may, with the permission of the Court, compound such offence

(5) When the accused has been committed for trial or when he has been convicted and an appeal is pending, no composition for the offence shall be allowed without the leave of the Court to which he is committed or, as the case may be before which the appeal is to be heard

(5A) A High Court acting in the exercise of its powers of revision under Section 439 may allow any person to compound any offence which he is competent to compound under this section

(6) The composition of an offence under this section shall have the effect of an acquittal of the accused with whom the offence has been compounded

(7) No offence shall be compounded except as provided by this section

Change—In sub section (1) the offence under section 508 I P Code has been added in sub section ( ) the offences under Secs 343 346 357 403 417 418 419 420 430 451 48 483 486 494 and 509 I P Code have been added Sub-section (5A) has been newly inserted and the italicised words in sub-sections (4) and (6) have also been added The changes are of minor character and no reasons have been particularly stated in the Bill

992 Withdrawal and composition—A withdrawal (Sec 248) must be by intimation to the Magistrate holding the trial whereas in many cases composition can be effected without the permission of the Court A withdrawal is permissible in a summons case whereas most of the compoundable cases are warrant ca es A withdrawal is the result of act of one party only namely the complainant without the consent of the accused whereas a composition presupposes an arrangement between both parties and implies a consent of the accused—M rray v Q E 21 Cal 103 Bajan Ali v K E 20 C W N 1209 Permission to withdraw can be given only to the complainant whereas the right to compound an offence does not always belong to the complainant—Chell im v Pat asami 14 Mad 3 9 On the withdrawal of the complaint the Magistrate can award compensation to the accused (Him mat v Baktawar,

Although a composition also signifies that the person against whom the offence has been committed has received some gratification (whether of a pecuniary character or otherwise) as an inducement for his desiring to abstain from a prosecution (Murray v Q E 21 Cal 103) still the passing of such consideration or gratification is not absolutely necessary to effect a valid composition—Hidayat v Q E, 1896 P R 9 And it is not necessary that the consideration should be of a monetary character —Mahomed Kani v Pattani 39 Mad 946 An apology is a sufficient consideration in cases of defamation or abuse—Emp v John 45 All 145 (146)

To constitute a valid composition it must appear that the parties *were free from influence of any kind and were fully aware of their res*pective rights—Murray v Q E 21 Cal 103

The composition may be effected in Court or out of Court The composition contemplated by this section is not limited to acts done in Court —Mahomed v Pattani 39 Mad 946 The offences enumerated in sub section (1) can be compounded out of Court and in such cases if a composition is proved the Magistrate must give effect to it and cannot proceed with the trial—Emp v Mulo 6 S L R 284

The offence must be compoundable —Before allowing a composition it is the duty of the Magistrate to find upon the evidence that a compoundable offence has been committed If the evidence discloses a non compoundable offence the Magistrate upon a petition of compromise cannot treat the case as a compoundable one and allow composition and acquit the accused—Emp v Ranchhod 37 Bom 369 O E v Naren Ratanlal 699 Emp v Asmal 4 Bom L R 718 Guru Prosad v Ajodhyanath 20 Cr L J 552 (Pat) So also the Magistrate has no jurisdiction to allow composition of a non compoundable offence on the ground that it would be better for the complainant to compromise and that the accused also desires to compromise and that it is probable that the case might in the end turn out to be a compoundable offence —K E v Hira Singh 1907 P W R 34

994 When offence can be compounded —Under this section a case may be compounded at any time before the sentence is pronounced therefore a petition of compromise filed by the parties when the judgment was actually being written should be accepted—Aslam v K E 45 Cal 816 22 C W N 744

An offence can be compounded even before a charge of the offence is laid in Court by the person injured It can be compounded apart from the question whether a charge or complaint has been laid before the Court or not and there is nothing in this section to suggest that a composition of an offence to be valid must be effected only after the accused is brought before the Court A composition made to prevent a case coming into Court is just as much a lawful composition under this section as one made after the case has come into Court There are certain offences however (sub-section 2) which can be compounded only with the permission of the Court and the operation of the composition is nece suspended in those cases, until the Court sanctions it—Kumarasami v Kuppusami, 41 Mad 685, 19 Cr L J 359

A Magistrate cannot allow composition after the records of the case have been called for by the High Court under sec 435 with a view to transfer the case When the records of the case were called for by the High Court, the case was no longer on the file of the Magistrate and his jurisdiction was suspended But the parties may compound the offence before the Magistrate to whom the case may be transferred by the High Court—In re Maruti, 49 Bom 5 3 27 Bom L R 350, 26 Cr L J 996

995. Proof —Although the provisions of the Contract Act may not apply, the proof of the arrangement must be similar to that which the Court requires for the proof of any agreement which is in issue—Murray v Q E, 21 Cal 103 The burden of proving that the offence has been validly compounded lies upon the accused—Ibid

Proof as to factum of composition —Where one party to a compoundable criminal case alleges that the case has been compromised and the other resiles from the compromise and denies the same, it is competent to the Court before which the case is pending to take evidence concerning the factum of the alleged compromise and to decide whether a compromise has in fact been arrived at or not—Mahomed v Pattani, 39 Mad 946, Kumarasami v Kuppusami, 41 Mad 685

996 Magistrate when bound to allow composition —If the offence is compoundable without the permission of the Court and a petition of compromise is put in the Court is bound to allow composition and has no option but to allow the offence to be compounded—Emp v Corrie, 1884 A W N 256 He is not at liberty to call upon the parties to adduce further evidence that the case has been compounded—Emp v Ganakrishna 16 Bom L R 939 It is his duty to accept the compromise and to dismiss the case and acquit the accused He is wrong in ordering the petition to be put up on the record—Kusum v Bechu 3 C W N 322 Mahomed Ismail v Faizuddi 3 C W N 548 Where the complainant and the accused are willing to compromise a composition cannot be refused on the ground that the master in whose quarrel the servant (complainant) was injured refuses to give his permission—Lalla v K E, 17 O C 9'

If a charge is framed in respect of a compoundable offence, and the proper person files a petition of compromise, the Magistrate cannot alter the charge into one of a non compoundable offence to prevent composition He must give effect to the petition and acquit the accused—Hasta v Crown, 1914 P R 29 16 Cr L J 81 (F B) If the offence in respect of which the complainant was made be an offence compoundable without the leave of the Court and a petition of compromise is made, the Magistrate is bound to give effect to the petition and acquit the accused, even though by mistake he had mentioned a non compoundable offence in the summons served upon the accused—Kadir Akram v Emp, 2 P L T 602, 62 I C 189 22 Cr L J. 493

If the offence is compoundable, it may be compromised, even though the case has been sent up by the Police—Q E v Nawab Jan, 10 Cal 531 See also Emp v John 45 All 145

997 Who can compound —The offence of hurt can be compounded only by the person to whom the hurt is caused—Emp v Lala 15 A L J 467 18 Cr L J 709 The widow or other relations of such person (that person dying in consequence of the hurt) cannot compound—Gangamma 2 Weir 418 Emp v Rahmat 37 All 419 Crown v Ramzan 7 S L R 200 Where hurt was caused to three persons and one of them died subsequently the remaining two cannot compromise the offence as regards the deceased—Emp v Sultan Singh 31 All 606 10 Cr L J 473 In other words where there are several complainants one complainant can compound the offence committed against himself but not the offence committed against others—Shib Chandra v Rabban 27 C W N 168

The offence of defamation can be compounded only by the person defamed and not by another person aggrieved by the defamation Thus where a charge of defamation for imputing unchastity to a woman is instituted on the complaint of the husband the husband cannot compound the offence—Chhotalal v Nathabhai 5 Bom 151 In such a case the wife is the only person who can compound the offence and she can do so without the consent or even against the will of her husband But if the defamatory matter was published with the intention of injuring the reputation of both husband and wife and the husband instituted the complaint, then no one except the husband could compound—Chellam v Ramaswami 14 Mad 379 An offence under section 498 I P C can be compounded only by the husband of the woman Though a complaint of that offence may be made by any person having the care of the woman during her husband's absence (section 199) still such person cannot compound the offence and an acquittal based upon such composition is illegal—Mahabat Ali v Emp 4 Lah L J 488 Hariram v Sain Das 24 Cr L J 120 (Lah) Mir Alam v Emp 5 Lah L J 183 A charge of criminal trespass can be compounded by the person who is in actual possession of the property trespassed upon and he (and not the juridical possessor) is the person who can bring the complaint in respect of the offence Otherwise we might have the juridical possessor (e g a trustee) prosecuting for criminal trespass and the actual possessor compounding the offence a result which could never have been contemplated by the Legislature —Tok Gyi v K L 8 L B R 425

A minor cannot compound an offence—Shib Singh v Q E, 1891 P R 17 but under sub section (4) it can be compounded with the permission of the Court by the person competent to contract on behalf of the minor

998 Permission of Court —In respect of the offences mentioned in subsection (1) no permission of the Court is necessary for compromise and no petition is therefore required to be presented to the C for its permission—Mahomed Kani v Pattani 39 Mad 946 except in the circumstances mentioned in subsection (5)—Emp v Khuda 1883 A W N 245 Emp v Ram Gopal 1886 A W N 167 In

of offences referred to in subsection (2) the permission of the Court is absolutely necessary and such permission can be granted only by the Court and not by a police officer Granting permission to withdraw is a judicial act and can be exercised only by the Magistrate a Police officer is not competent to entertain n application for the withdrawal of a complaint—Anonymous Ratanlal 91

In cases falling under sub-section (2) it is the duty of the Magistrate to decide whether he will or will not allow a compromise and the responsibility rests entirely with him Unless the offence is so serious that punishment is absolutely necessary the Magistrate would do well to exercise his discretion in allowing a composition Where the Magistrate refused to allow composition without sufficient reason the High Court in revision allowed the compromise—Seua Singh v Crown 1922 P W R 7 23 Cr L J 85 In cases falling under subsection (2) if the parties who are nearly related to one another are willing to patch up their quarrels the Magistrate should not refuse to allow composition—Aminulla v Emp 26 C W N 536

Under sub section (5) when an appeal is pending in respect of the offence it is the Appellate Court alone which can allow the composition the ruling in Emp v Thompson 2 All 339 (under the 1872 Code) which held that no offence could be compounded at the Appellate stage is no longer good law When an appeal is pending the permission of the Appellate Court is necessary even in respect of offences which are ordinarily compoundable without the sanction of the Court

Permission by High Court in revision —In Emp v Ram Piyari 37 All 153 Emp v Shiloo 45 All 17 Nidhan v K E 1904 P L R 252 Lalla v K E 17 O C 92 and Cholai v Emp 24 Cr. L J 590 (Oudh) it has been held that the High Court as a Court of Revision can exercise all the powers of an appellate Court and can grant permission to compound an offence But in Emp v Lala 15 A L J 467 Ram Chandra v Emp 37 All 127 Naqi v K E 11 A L J 13 Ramkaran v Emp 42 All 474 Crown v Harram 1918 P R 35 Akhoy v Rameshwar 43 Cal 1143 Aidhi v Emp 3 P L T 458 Adhar v Sitodh 18 C W N 1212 and Sankar Rargayya v Sankar Ramayya 39 Mad 604 it was laid down that an offence could not be allowed to be compounded when the case came before the High Court in Revision when the High Court was sitting neither as a Court of Original Jurisdiction nor as a Court of Appeal This latter view has now been rendered obsolete by the new subsection (5A) of this section which expressly gives the High Court the power to allow composition in revision

Composition on Retrial —When the accused was charged with and convicted of an offence compoundable without the leave of Court but on appeal the conviction was set aside and a trial ordered and the complainant then offered to compound the case it was held that it was open to the parties to compound the case in the same manner in which it could be compounded before conviction by the Magistrate and that no permission of the Court was necessary for the composition—Umrai v Makhulan 3 A L J 523

Recording reason —When allowing composition under sub-section (2) the Magistrate should briefly record his reason for granting sanction so that if an appeal is preferred the Appellate Court may be in a position to judge whether the discretion has been properly exercised—Crown v Konoo Meah 1 L B R 349

999 Compromise cannot be withdrawn —When the parties have filed a petition of compromise they cannot afterwards be allowed to withdraw the petition and to insist upon the case being tried—Mahomed Kani v Pattan 39 Mad 916 Kumarasami v Kuppusami 41 Mad 685 Kusim v Bechu 3 C W N 372 Hem Chandra v Girindra 33 C L J 26 Ram Richpal v Mata Din 25 Cr L J 810 (Lah) A composition arrived at between the parties is complete as soon as it is made and the accused is entitled to be acquitted even though one of the parties later on resiles from the compromise—Hem Chandra v Girindra 33 C L J 26 25 Cr L J 301

1000 Sub-section (6)—Acquittal —When the petition of composition is put in the Magistrate s sole remaining duty is to record a formal order of acquittal and set the accused person at liberty—Hasta v Crown 1914 P R 29 The Magistrate is bound to acquit the accused he acts illegally if he proceeds with the trial and convicts the accused—Kora Raman v Kandan 2 Weir 418 Emp v John 45 All 145 Any sentence that he may pass subsequently is illegal for the composition of an offence has the effect of an acquittal—Emp v Corrie 1884 A W N 256

The High Court in revision can set aside an order of acquittal passed on a petition of compromise if there has been any material irregularity—Crown v Ramzan , S L R 200 15 Cr L J 553

Compensation can be awarded under Section 250 only when the Magistrat himself acquits the accused after trial But a composition of an offence has in itself the effect of acquittal and no trial is held and therefore no composition can be awarded where the offence is compounded under this section—Emp v Khushali 1888 P R 19 Q E v Sangappa Ratanlal 957 Proceedings under Section 250 are inapplicable to a case where the accused person himself has by an agreement with the prosecutor arrived at a settlement and been a party to the compounding of the offence—In re Harkisardas 10 Bom L R 105[illegible]

When an offence is compounded the accused must be acquitted The conviction of the accused after composition is illegal and must be set aside—Emp v John 45 All 145 (148) A composition has the effect of an acquittal and not of discharge and is therefore a complete bar to the prosecution of the accused for the same offence—Emp v Mulo 6 S L R 284 14 Cr L J 29[illegible] Crown v Hurnam 1910 P L R 22 11 Cr L J 366 The Magistrate cannot after composition institute proceedings against the accused under Section 437 (now 436)—Emp v Unkar, 1884 A W N 13 A composition has the effect of barring out not only a prosecution for the same offence but also for a cogna[illegible] offence based on the same facts—Ratanlal 519 or for an offence ir[illegible] in the former offence which has been compounded—Shaikh Basiru

Shaikh Khairat Ali, 17 C W. N 948. But the compounding of an original charge is not a conclusive answer to a charge made against the complainant under Section 211 I P C—Q E v Atar Ali, 11 Cal 79

Where there are several accused persons, the composition of an offence with one of them has not the effect of acquittal of all the accused persons but only of the particular accused with whom the composition took place—Muthia Naek v K E, 41 Mad 323, Emp v Alibhai, 45 Bom 346; Anantia v. Crown, 5 Lah 239, 25 Cr L J 629, Ram Kishen v Emp, 1 Lah. 169, Chandan v. Emp, 19 A L J 374, Emp v Mohna, 7 Lah 344, 27 Cr L J 576 This is now made clear by the words "with whom the offence has been compounded" newly added in subsection (6) In Calcutta and Patna cases, it was held that if a compoundable offence was committed by a number of persons, and the complainant compounded the offence *with only one of them, the effect of such composition was to com*pound the complaint not only in respect of the persons with whom it was actually compounded, but also in respect of the other persons, and the composition operated as an acquittal of all the accused—Chander Kumar v Emp, 7 C W N 176, Shyam Behari v Sagar, 20 Cr L J 824, Shyam Behari v Sagar, 53 I C 824 1 P L T 32, Amar Ali v Emp, 2 P L T 584, Suraj Kumar v Emp, 4 P L T 107 This view is no longer correct

Where an accused is charged with two offences, and one offence is compounded, the charge for the other offence does not ipso facto lapse, and the accused is not necessarily acquitted in respect of that offence—Emp v Jarnali, 26 Cr L J 686 (Lah)

The composition effected under this section would be a complete bar to a civil suit for damages—Imp v Mulo, 6 S L R 284, 14 Cr L J. 292.

Procedure of Provincial Magistrate in cases which he cannot dispose of.

346. (1) If, in the course of an inquiry or a trial before a Magistrate in any district outside the presidency towns, the evidence appears to him to warrant a presumption that the case is one which should be tried or committed for trial by some other Magistrate in such district, he shall stay proceedings and submit the case, with a brief report explaining its nature, to any Magistrate to whom he is subordinate [illegible] having jurisdiction, as the

(2) The Magistrate to whom the case is submitted may, if so empowered, either try the case himself, or refer it to any Magistrate subordinate to him having jurisdiction, or commit the accused for trial.

1001. When Magistrate should proceed under this section —(1) The application of this section would be necessary if in the course of proceedings before a Magistrate, it should transpire that the offence committed is apparently one which the particular Magistrate is not competent to try or one in which it appears that he is in some way personally interested (Sec 556) or which he is declared to be otherwise incompetent to deal with (Secs 482 487)—Prinsep

(2) Proof of previous conviction against a person accused before a Magistrate will justify his taking action under this section—Q E v Chandra Dallal 1894 A W N 200

(3) When a Magistrate finds that he has no jurisdiction to try a case he should not discharge the accused but should proceed under this section—Munisami 2 Weir 373 If the offence is within his jurisdiction he should proceed in the ordinary way and if it is a Sessions case commit it to the Sessions he need not submit the case under this section to a superior Magistrate—Amir Khan v K F 7 C W N 457

(4) When the evidence discloses circumstances of aggravation which make the offence one cognizable by a superior tribunal it becomes the duty of the trying Magistrate to use the proper procedure for sending the case to the higher Court—Q E v Gundya 13 Bom 502 No tribunal can properly clutch jurisdiction by intentionally ignoring the facts which make the offence really cognizable by a higher tribunal—Anonymous, 2 Weir 21 and 2 Weir 421 K E v Ayyan 24 Mad 675 Thus where a theft is accompanied with violence it becomes a case of robbery, which is beyond the jurisdiction of a second class Magistrate and such Magistrate cannot ignore the fact of violence and try the case as one of theft only—Anonymous 2 Weir 420 (421)

Similarly no Magistrate is entitled to cut down an offence from that which is established by the evidence in order to give himself summary jurisdiction—In re Chunder Sukor 1 C L R 434 Bishu Shaik v Sahir, 29 Cal 409 Ramanund v Koylash 11 Cal 236 Sheo Bhajan v Mosawi 27 Cal 983 Emp v Abdool 4 Cal 18

Framing of charge neither necessary nor illegal —It is not illegal for a Magistrate of the 2nd or 3rd class to frame a charge even though at the time of framing the charge he intended to submit the case to a superior Magistrate or to the District Magistrate—K E v Nga Po 1905 U B R (Cr P C) 33 On the other hand if the inferior Magistrate sends the case to the superior Magistrate without framing a charge the superior Magistrate cannot send back the case to the inferior Magistrate with direction to prepare a charge under a particular section—O L v Fakira Ratanlal 499

1002 Power of the superior Magistrate —The superior Magistrate to whom the case is submitted may either try the case himself or refer it to any subordinate or commit the accused for trial But he has no power to send the case back to the Subordinate Magistrate for an order of committal because the sub Magistrate s jurisdiction ceases when he submits the case to the superior Magistrate and he cannot therefore re assume jurisdiction and commit the accused—Hampanna 45 Mad 846 23 Cr L J 710 If the superior Magistrate tries the case himself he must try it de novo he cannot convict the accused on the evidence recorded , Magistrate who submitted the case , he must hear the evidence

Failure to do so vitiates the whole trial, and the fact that the accused did not want the witnesses to be re called and consented to rely upon the evidence recorded by the submitting Magistrate does not cure the illegality The special provisions of sec 350 do not apply where a case is submitted under this section by a subordinate Magistrate to the superior Magistrate—Muhammad v K E 1905 P L R 91 Ambica v Emp, 19 Cr L J 615 (Pat), Inayat Husain v Emp, 1905 P L R 106, In re Paravada China Venku Nadu, 17 L W 247, 24 Cr L J 413 The law requires that the Judge by whom the case is to be tried should himself hear all the evidence of the witnesses and form an opinion of their credibility Where a case partly heard by an inferior Magistrate was brought by a superior Magistrate to his own file who then recorded the rest of the evidence, and then passed a decision on the whole evidence the conviction was held to be illegal —Q v Kullian, 2 N W P 468 If however, the accused is not prejudiced by the evidence not being taken afresh the High Court will refuse to set aside the conviction—Q E v Chandra Ballab, 1894 A W N 200

But if the superior Magistrate, to whom the case is submitted, commits the case to the Sessions, instead of trying it he need not take the evidence afresh, but can commit the case upon the evidence recorded by the inferior Magistrate—Kamani v Fakir, 12 C W N 136, Q E v Shesha, Ratanlal 472, Emp v Ram Prosad, 12 N L R 146, 18 Cr L J 57

Procedure when, after commencement of inquiry or trial, Magistrate finds case should be committed

347. (1) If, in any inquiry before a Magistrate or in any trial before a Magistrate before signing judgment, it appears to him at any stage of the proceedings that the case is one which ought to be tried by the Court of Session or High Court, and if he is empowered to commit for trial, he shall * * * commit the accused under the provisions hereinbefore contained.

(2) If such Magistrate is not empowered to commit for trial, he shall proceed under Section 346.

1003. Change —The words 'stop further proceedings and" occurring in the old section between the words "shall' and 'commit" have been omitted by sec 91 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923 'This amendment is designed to bring Section 347 into line with Section 208'—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914)

Under the old law, there was a conflict of opinion as to the meaning of the words 'stop further proceedings" In In re Durant Ratanlal 975 In re Sessions Judge 17 M L T 83 15 Cr L J 704 and Phanindra v Emp, 36 Cal 48 a very restricted meaning was assigned to these words The words were interpreted to mean that as soon as the Magistrate considered that the case was one which ought to be tried by the Court of Session he should at once stop all proceedings and then and there pass an order of commitment to the Sessions even though neither the witnesses for the prosecution had been cross examined nor the defence witnesses examined In other words the power of a Magistrate to make commitment under this section was not subject to the provisions of Chapter XVIII and the Magistrate was not bound to follow the procedure of that Chapter but could commit even though all the evidence on either side had not been taken

But a more reasonable construction has been given to the words in some other cases Thus in another Madras case and other cases the words stop further proceedings have been interpreted to mean that the Magistrate should stop proceedings with the case as a trial and should commit the case to the Sessions and in thus committing he should adopt the procedure laid down in Chapter XVIII These words do not enable the Magistrate to shorten the proceedings and then and there pass an order of commitment—Rangayya 36 Mad 3 1 Emp v Channing Arnold 6 L B R 129 (F B) Ulli Bai v Crown 17 S L R 188 26 Cr L J 148 The words under the provisions hereinbefore contained show that the Magistrate must make his proceedings conform to the provisions of Chapter XVIII and that before he writes and signs a committal order, the provisions of that Chapter must be followed and he must not conform to the mere passing of the committal order under section 213—Emp v Channing Arnold 6 L B R 129 (F B) It was not intended by this section to enable the Magistrate to deprive the accused of any of the rights conferred on him by Chapter XVIII—In re Chinnaian 15 Cr L J 366 (Mad) and an order of commitment made without taking all such evidence as the accused was prepared to produce before the Magistrate is invalid—Emp v Mahammed Hadi 26 All 177 Q E v Ahmadi 20 All 264 In a recent case the Calcutta High Court has also laid down that though the Magistrate decides to commit the case to the Sessions under sec 347, he should still follow the procedure of Chapter XVIII and allow the accused to cross examine the prosecution witnesses (sec 208) where the application to cross examine was made before the charge was framed and before the Magistrate decided to commit the case to the Court of Session —Jyotsna Nath v Emp 51 Cal 442 (445) 26 Cr L J 63 A I R 1924 Cal 780

This latter view will now prevail as a result of the present amendment which has deleted the above ambiguous words in order to remove this conflict of opinion

1004 Procedure —It is not intended by this section that if the Magistrate finds that an order of commitment is to be made under this section proceedings under Chapter XVIII are to be commenced de novo—In re Chinnaian 15 Cr L J 366 (Mad) Emp v Ilahi Baksh 2 All 910 therefore if the Magistrate has already completed the evidence of the complainant and his witnesses it is not necessary for him to take that evidence afresh Only in respect of the remaining proceedings the provisions of Chapter XVIII should be followed—Emp v Ilahi 2 All 910—

Ought to be tried —See notes to section 207 for the meaning of these words This section is couched in general terms and gives a

Magistrate very wide powers to commit if he is of opinion that the case is one which ought to be tried by the Court of Session The discretion vested in the Magistrate under this section cannot be limited by the provisions of sec 254 that is there is no suggestion in this section that the only possible reason for a competent Magistrate to commit a case is that he will not be able to pass a sufficiently severe sentence—A E v Ishahat 3 Rang 42 26 Cr L J 1389 A I R 1925 Rang 207 Crown Prosecutor v Bhagavathi 42 Mad 83 But a contrary view has been taken in some cases See Note 695 under sec 207

If in a case some of the accused persons are charged with an offence which ought to be tried by the Court of Session and the case against the other accused is a summons case which the Magistrate can try and adequately punish it is not illegal for the Magistrate to commit all the accused to the Sessions—Ghani Yakub v Crown 14 S L R 83 21 Cr L J 791

Before signing judgment —The commitment can be made if the judgment has not been given or signed After signing judgment no Court can alter or review the same See Sec 369

Commitment may be made after framing a charge—Emp v Audrut oollah 3 Cal 495

Trial of persons previously convicted of offences against coinage stamp law or property

348. (1) Whoever, having been convicted of an offence punishable under Chapter XII or Chapter XVII of the Indian Penal Code with imprisonment for a term of three years or upwards, is again accused of any offence punishable under either of those Chapters with imprisonment for a term of three years or upwards, shall if the Magistrate before whom the case is pending is satisfied that there are sufficient grounds for committing the accused, be committed to the Court of Session or High Court, as the case may be, unless the Magistrate is competent to try the case and is of opinion that he can himself pass an adequate sentence if the accused is convicted

Provided that, if any Magistrate in the district has been invested with powers under section 30, the case may be transferred to him instead of being committed to the Court of Session

(2) When any person is committed to the Court of Session or High Court under sub section (1), any other person accused jointly with him in the same inquiry or trial shall be similarly committed unless the Magistrate discharges such other person under section 209.

Change —The italicised words have been added by section 92 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923

"If the Magistrate . . . . committing the accused" —"This amendment has been made on the lines of section 209 (1)"—Report of the Select Committee of 1916

"Is competent to try the case" — We have introduced this amendment to make it clear that the section does not empower the Magistrate to pass sentence in a case which he is not competent to try —Report of the Joint Committee of 1922

In the proviso, the words "any Magistrate in the district" have been substituted for the words "the District Magistrate" occurring in the old section The amendment is merely verbal

Sub-section (2) — "This clause provides that when any person is committed to the Court of Session under section 348 any other person accused jointly, whom the Magistrate believes to be guilty shall be similarly committed Identical treatment will thus be accorded to all the accused" —Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914)

Sections 348 and 349 —If the accused is an old offender, the Magistrate should act under this section, and not refer the case to a superior Magistrate under section 349—Dasari Ramudu, 2 Weir 423 That section (sec 349) does not apply to a case where the accused is an old offender—K E v Po Thue 4 L B R 282 If a Magistrate instead of proceeding under this section erroneously sends up a case under section 349 it is open to the District Magistrate to take the case on his own file or to transfer it to some other first class Magistrate—Mari Naicken 2 Weir 422

1005. Procedure —The Magistrate must first of all determine, either as a preliminary matter or at any rate before framing a charge whether there has been a previous conviction if a previous conviction is proved, the Magistrate will then have to consider whether in the circumstances of the case his powers enable him to try and pass adequate sentence If he thinks they do not permit, he should not try but commit the case to the Sessions (but he should not discharge the accused), if they do permit, he may try the case himself If he commits the case to the Sessions, he ought not to find the accused guilty, but should merely frame a charge under section 210, and commit the case for trial under Chapter XVIII—In re Kora Sellandhi, 38 Mad 552

Commitment not imperative —The words unless convicted" did not exist in the Code of 1882 or in the earlier Codes, and therefore it was imperative on the Magistrate to commit if a previous conviction was proved, and he could not try the case himself—Ratanlal 704 But the 1898 Code gives a discretion to the Magistrate to try the case himself if he is competent to pass adequate sentence.

1006. Powers of District Magistrate —Under the proviso to this section, if the District Magistrate is invested with powers under sec 30, the case may be transferred to him instead of being committed to the Sessions In such a case the District Magistrate need not try the de novo, He can, under section 350, act on the evidence already by the Magistrate who transferred the case. See notes under sub-sec. (3) of section 350.

If the District Magistrate considers that the case should be committed to the Sessions, he should himself commit and not send back the case to the Subordinate Magistrate with a direction to commit.—Q. E. v. Iyyanna, 9 Mad. ... If the District Magistrate commits the case instead of trying it he can, it seems, act upon the evidence recorded by the subordinate Magistrate and need not commence the inquiry de novo. See Q. E. v. Sr... ... and Kamaksi v. Fakira ... cited in Note 100 under sec. 346.

349 (1) Whenever a Magistrate of the second or third class having jurisdiction, is of opinion, after hearing the evidence for the prosecution and the accused, that the accused is guilty, and that he ought to receive a punishment different in kind from, or more severe than, that which such Magistrate is empowered to inflict, or that he ought to be required to execute a bond under Section 106, he may record the opinion and submit his proceedings, and forward the accused, to the District Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate to whom he is subordinate.

Procedure when Magistrate cannot pass sentence sufficiently severe.

(1A) When more accused than one are being tried together and the Magistrate considers it necessary to proceed under sub-section (1) in regard to any of such accused, he shall forward all the accused who are in his opinion guilty to the District Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate.

(2) The Magistrate to whom the proceedings are submitted may, if he thinks fit, examine the parties and recall and examine any witness who has already given evidence in the case, and may call for and take any further evidence, and shall pass such judgment, sentence or order in the case as he thinks fit, and as is according to law:

Provided that he shall not inflict a punishment more severe than he is empowered to inflict under Sections 32 and 33.

Change.—Sub-section (1A) has been added by section 93 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923. This is similar to sub-section ( ) of section 348.

1007. Application of section —The provisions of this section are subject to the express provision of section 348 Therefore where the accused is an old offender, a second class Magistrate should commit him to the Sessions under section 348 and not submit the case to the superior Magistrate under this section—Dasari Ramudu 2 Weir 423 K E v Po Thwe 4 L B R 282

The procedure prescribed by this section is unsuited to cases tried summarily—K E v Jalal Khan 4 L B R 277

1008 Reference to Superior Magistrate —Who can refer—Only the second or third class Magistrate can refer A first class Magistrate is not competent to submit the case under this section—Q E v Pershad 7 All 414

This section does not authorise any Bench of Magistrates to refer a case for higher punishment—K E v Jalal 4 L B R 277

Reference discretionary —Whether a case ought to be referred to the superior Magistrate or not is within the discretion of the subordinate Magistrate, and the District Magistrate cannot direct the subordinate Magistrate to send up the case under this section If he so directs his order is ultra vires—Anonymous 2 Weir 427

To whom case can be referred —The case can be referred to the District Magistrate or the Magistrate to whom the referring Magistrate is subordinate and to no other Magistrate—Emp v Vinayak 38 Bom 719 16 Cr L J 273

When reference can be made —This section authorises a reference to the superior Magistrate when the subordinate Magistrate considers that the accused should receive a severer sentence than he himself is competent to inflict If the punishment which the sub ordinate Magistrate proposed was one which he himself could inflict the reference was improper and the Magistrate should himself try the case—In re Phulla 1881 A W N 99 When a case was sent to the District Magistrate not because the referring Magistrate was not competent to pass a severe sentence but on the ground that it was advisable that the matter should be dealt with by the District Magistrate it was held that the transfer was neither under section 349 nor under section 192 and therefore the conviction made by the District Magistrate was illegal and must be set aside—Q E v Radhe 12 All 66

Under this section the Magistrate can make a reference to a superior Magistrate if he considers that the accused should receive a severer punishment than he can inflict it does not apply where the Magistrate thinks that the accused should be dealt with under section 562 because an order under section 562 directing release upon probation of good conduct is not a punishment—Baba v Emp, 24 Cr L J 738 (Nag)

1009 Powers and duties of referring Magistrate —If the subordinate Magistrate sends the case to the higher Magistrate for severer punishment he cannot convict the accused the conviction and sentence are reserved for the higher Magistrate The referring Magistrate is required to state his opinion only, but he cannot convict—Q E v Mc Ratanlal 387, Prayag Gope v King Emp, 3 Pat 1015 (1017) 5

If the subordinate Magistrate sends the case for the purpose of binding down the accused under sec 106 the Magistrate should neither convict nor pass sentence himself The conviction sentence and the order for security are all to be passed by the superior Magistrate—Mahmadi Sheikh v Aji Sheikh 21 Cal 622 Rohimuddi v Emp 35 Cal 1093

Forward the accused —The reason of forwarding the accused is that the accused has a right to be present at the proceedings held before the Magistrate to whom the case is transferred such proceedings being a continuation of the proceedings before the referring Magistrate—Q v Gunesh 7 W R 38 The right exists even though the superior Magistrate does not examine the parties or recall and re examine the witnesses and the accused will be at liberty to contend before that Magistrate that there is no sufficient case made out against him and the Magistrate if he thinks so may discharge or acquit him—Reg v Ragha 7 B H C R 31

Sub-section (1A) —It was held under the old section that where several accused were charged before the subordinate Magistrate he could convict some of them and send up the others to the superior Magistrate such a procedure was not improper nor the conviction illegal but in such a case it was more advisable to forward all the accused to the superior Magistrate instead of convicting some of the accused—Raghava 2 Weir 428 Nachian 2 Weir 429 The new sub-section (1A) now makes it imperative on the Magistrate under such circumstances to forward all the accused to the superior Magistrate See K E v Dodo 18 S L R 216 26 Cr L J 1363

But if there are several accused and the Magistrate finds only one of them to be guilty he should not send all the accused to the superior Magistrate but should acquit the accused whom he finds not guilty and send that accused alone whom he considers guilty—Sultan Md v Emp 24 A L J 80 26 Cr L J 1630

1010 Sub-section (2) —Powers and duties of the Superior Magistrate —When a case is referred to a superior Magistrate the whole case is opened up for him to deal with it according to his own discretion—Q E v B p da Ratanlal 350 In dealing with the case he should not confine himself to considering whether the decision of the subordinate Magistrate was plainly and manifestly opposed to the evidence but he should find on the evidence the facts which he considers proved and pass judgment accordingly—Q E v Appaji Ratanlal 636 Anonymous 5 M H C R App 43 If the superior Magistrate convicts the accused for an aggravated form of the offence he must commence the trial afresh for such offence and cannot act on the evidence already recorded—Anonymous 2 Weir 21 (22) and 2 Weir 428 So also if the offence is one which is beyond the jurisdiction of the subordinate Magistrate to try the superior Magistrate cannot act upon the evidence already recorded by the subordinate Magistrate—Q E v Sitaram 1 Bom L R 27 The Magistrate to whom a case is transferred is competent to pass such judgment sentence or order as he thinks fit He is free to deal with the case according to his own discretion and he can if he thinks fit order a commitment to the Court of Session—Q E v Chinnappa Ratanlal 945 In re Chinnimarigadu 1 Mad 289 Q E v Virana 9 Mad 377 Abdul Wahab v Chandia 13 Cal 305 Emp v Abdulla 4 Bom 240 He has to make up his mind whether the accused are guilty or not and exercise his own independent judgment in the case, and to write a judgment conformable to the requirements of section 367 He cannot simply pass sentence on the accused without writing any judgment—Karuppia v Emp (1920) M W N 170

The superior Magistrate to whom the case is referred has no power to send back the case to the subordinate Magistrate upon any ground whatsoever. He must dispose of it himself by acquitting or convicting the accused or by committing him for trial—Emp v Thakur Dayal 26 All 344 Q E v Chinnappa Ratanlal 945 Dula Faqueer v Bhagirat 6 C L R 276 and even if the case is sent back to the subordinate Magistrate the latter cannot take up the case after he has referred the case his jurisdiction over it ceases and any order passed by him would be illegal —Dula v. Bhagirat 6 C L R 276 Q E v Hara 10 Bom 196 If the superior Magistrate thinks that a commitment to the Sessions is necessary, he himself should make the commitment he cannot send back the case to the referring Magistrate with direction to commit the case to the Sessions—Q E v Virasina 9 Mad 377 If however the reference is defective e g if the referring Magistrate has omitted to record in writing the statement of the accused as required by section 364 the superior Magistrate can return the case with a direction to supply the defect and the subordinate Magistrate in such a case is also competent to come to a fresh and different conclusion as to the guilt of the accused and acquit some of them—Anonymous 2 Weir 426

The superior Magistrate can act upon the evidence already recorded by the subordinate Magistrate and is not bound to hold a de novo trial under section 350—Raghava 2 Weir 428 (429) This is now made by the amendment made in sub-section (2) of section 350 which lays that that section does not apply to a transfer of proceedings u 349 See K E v Dodo 18 S L R 216

350 (1) Whenever any Magistrate, after having heard and recorded the whole or any part of the evidence in an inquiry or a trial, ceases to exercise jurisdiction therein, and is succeeded by another Magistrate who has and who exercises such jurisdiction, the Magistrate so succeeding may act on the evidence so recorded by his predecessor, or partly recorded by his predecessor and partly recorded by himself, or he may re summon the witnesses and recommence the inquiry or trial

Conviction or commitment on evidence partly recorded by one Magistrate and partly by another

(a) in any trial the accused may, when the second Magistrate commences his proceedings demand that the witnesses or any of them be re summoned and re heard,

(b) the High Court, or in cases tried by Magistrates subordinate to the District Magistrate, the District Magistrate may, whether there be an appeal or not, set aside any conviction passed on evidence not wholly recorded by the Magistrate before whom the conviction was held if such Court or District Magistrate is of opinion that the accused has been materially prejudiced thereby and may order a new inquiry or trial

(2) Nothing in this section applies to cases in which proceedings have been stayed under S 346 or in which proceedings have been submitted to a superior Magistrate under section 349

(3) When a case is transferred under the provisions of this Code from one Magistrate to another, the former shall be deemed to cease to exercise jurisdiction therein and to be succeeded by the latter within the meaning of sub section (1)

Change —The italicised words have been added by section 94 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 The reasons are stated below in their proper places

1011 Object and scope of section —The general principle is that a case must be decided by the Magistrate who heard the evidence

But if this principle has to be strictly observed it will follow that in every case of transfer the succeeding Magistrate will have to try from the beginning all cases which have been partly heard by his predecessor in office and there will be endless delay in trials And this section is obviously intended to meet such cases—Harduar v Khega 20 Cal 870 Jangilal v Emp 19 Cr L J 657 (Nag) In view of the frequent changes in the office of Magistrates the Code provides specially that a Magistrate may pronounce judgment on evidence recorded by his predecessor or on evidence partly recorded by his predecessor and partly by himself—Tarada v Q 3 Mad 112

This section applies not only where one Magistrate is succeeded by another but also where the second Magistrate is in his turn succeeded by another Magistrate The third Magistrate can act on evidence recorded by his two predecessors This section is not confined to a case where there is only a single occurrence of one Magistrate succeeding another —Govirdan v Krishnam 45 M L J 808

This section gives the succeeding Magistrate jurisdiction to decide the case on evidence recorded by his predecessor but it cannot give him jurisdiction to deliver a judgment written by his predecessor Where the Magistrate who heard the evidence and tried the case was transferred to another district and from that place he sent a written judgment which was pronounced by his successor at the place where the case was tried held that there was no jurisdiction to do so and the conviction and sentence so passed were illegal and that the accused must be retried—Baisnab Charan v Amin Ali 50 Cal 664 38 C L J 202 24 Cr L J 489 Md Rafique v K E 43 C L J 100 27 Cr L J 406 But the Madras High Court and the Oudh Chief Court hold that the succeeding Magistrate can sign and pronounce the judgment written by his predecessor and thus adopt it as his own—In re Savarimuthu 40 Mad 108 32 M L J 81 Chandika v Emp 28 O C 109 11 O L J 725 In re Sankara Pillai 18 M L J 197 - Cr L J 459

1012 Application of section —(1) This section applies to an inquiry under Chapter VIII therefore where a Magistrate holding an inquiry under section 107 is transferred after the examination of some prosecution witnesses and is succeeded by another the person called upon to shew cause why he should not give security may under proviso (a) insist upon the re summoning and re examination of those witnesses—Buroda v Karimuddi 4 C L R 452 Venkatachinnayya 43 Mad 511 (F B)

(2) This section is applicable to proceedings under section 145 Where in the course of such proceedings one Magistrate is transferred the succeeding Magistrate can act upon the evidence already recorded—Ali Mahomed v Tarak 13 C W N 420 Anu v Jitu 37 Cal 81? Sondi Singh v Gobind Singh 5 P L T 237 25 Cr L J 89 Syed Sadek v Sachindra 37 C L J 128 24 Cr L J 569

(3) This section applies to inquiries preliminary to c
The succeeding Magistrate can commit the case to the Sess

(4) This section would enable a Magistrate to try a case in which his predecessor has issued a process and granted adjournment but has recorded no evidence—Q E v Govinda Ratanlal 652

(5) This section does not apply to cases tried by Benches of Magistrates—Damri v Bhowani 23 Cal 194 Q E v Basappa 18 Mad 394 Hardwar v Khega 20 Cal 870 Girdhari v Crown 2 Lah 237 Abdul Ghani v Emp 1921 P L R 1 22 Cr L J 511 Itala v K E 9 Bur L T 203 18 Cr L J 96 Even the new section 350A does not apply where one Magistrate of a Bench is replaced by another that section contemplates cases wherein all the Magistrates constituting the Bench have heard the proceedings throughout See notes under that section

(6) This section applies only to Magistrates but not to Sessions Judges A Sessions Judge is not competent to pronounce judgment on evidence recorded by his predecessor or on evidence partly recorded by his predecessor and partly by himself—Q v Ramdoyal 21 W R 47 Durga Charan v Emp 8 C L J 59 Tarada v Q 3 Mad 112 Badri Prasad v Emp 35 All 63 13 Cr L J 861 Even the consent of the accused would not enable the Sessions Judge to do so and validate such procedure—K E v Sakharam 26 Bom 50 Bhuta Singh v Emp 1890 P R 1 Q v Salamut 23 W R 59

(7) This section refers to cases where one Magistrate is succeeded by another Magistrate and does not apply where the Magistrate remains the same and his official designation is merely changed Thus where a Head Assistant Magistrate having almost completed the trial of a criminal case was appointed to the office of a Deputy Magistrate in another place in the same District and the case was brought on to his file to the latter place by order of the District Magistrate he could proceed to try the case from the point at which he had arrived as Head Assistant Magistrate prior to his transfer to the post of Deputy Magistrate and the accused cannot demand under proviso (a) that the trial must be commenced de novo—Karuppana v Ahobalamatam 22 Mad 47

(8) This section does not apply where the District Magistrate holds further inquiry into a case under section 437 (now 436) In such a case he must hold the inquiry de novo and cannot rely on the evidence recorded by the Magistrate who previously tried the case—Q E v Hasnu 6 All 367

1013 "Succeeded" —A liberal construction should be put upon the provisions of section 350 Where on the death of a Magistrate empowered under section 30 the District Magistrate being the only remaining Magistrate in the district having powers under that section took upon his file a case which was being tried by the deceased it was held that the District Magistrate must be regarded as having succeeded the deceased Magistrate within the meaning of this section—Gorelal v Emp 19 Cr L J 705 (Nag) When a case is transferred from one Magistrate to another the former Magistrate is said to be succeeded by the latter See sub section (3) and notes thereunder

1014 'Recommence the inquiry or trial' —If the succeeding Magistrate chooses to recommence the trial he must recommence by resummoning and re examining the witnesses But he cannot go to any stage previous to that He cannot dismiss the complaint under section 203—Bahram v Baldeo 7 C P L R 36 or refer the case to the Police under section 202 for inquiry and report—Sadappachariar v Ragavachariar 9 Mad 282

If a charge has already been framed by the preceding Magistrate the succeeding Magistrate cannot cancel the charge—Sriramulu v Krishna Rou 38 Mad 585 Crown v Nathu 1903 P R 14 Simhadri v Sitaram L W 1244 The principle is that if the proceedings before the preceding Magistrate have developed into the stage of a trial by the frame of a charge the succeeding Magistrate cannot go beyond the stage of trial and transform the trial proceedings into an inquiry by cancellation of the charge—Sriramulu v Krishna Row 38 Mad 585 And since the succeeding Magistrate cannot cancel the charge an order subsequently passed letting off the accused is one of acquittal and not one of discharge— Simhadri v Sitarama 2 L W 1244 Sriramulu v Krishna 38 Mad 585

If a trial is commenced de novo by the succeeding Magistrate he must observe all the procedure of the trial and cannot omit any part of the procedure Where in a de novo trial the Magistrate omitted to examine the prosecution witnesses (who had already been examined by the proceeding Magistrate) but allowed them to be cross examined by the defence it was held that the trial was not in due compliance with this section and ought to be set aside—Sobh Nath v Emp 12 C W N 138 Sidik v Emp 20 S L R 50 27 Cr L J 33 A de novo trial means a trial from the beginning of the case The object of granting a de novo trial is to enable the Magistrate who hears the case to see the way in which the witnesses give evidence before him to mark their demeanour and thereby to be in a position to judge of their credibility This object is lost if the witnesses are not examined again but are only allowed to be cross examined by the accused Such a procedure is not a de novo trial and the conviction of the accused must be set aside—Narayana v Bojanna 49 M L J 423 26 Cr L J 1596 Similarly where the Magistrate holding the de novo trial merely read over to the accused the deposition of the prosecution witnesses (recorded by the preceding Magistrate) though he allowed them to be cross examined the procedure was held to be illegal—Htin v Than Pe 9 L B R 92 Mangal Singh v Crown 1919 P W R 16 Mangal Singh v Emp 21 Cr L J 119 (Lah)

Transfer of Magistrate to his original place —Before the conclusion of the trial the trying Magistrate was transferred Thereupon the case was transferred to the file of a superior Magistrate who began to try it de novo. Afterwards the original Magistrate was re transferred to his original place and the superior Magistrate transferred the case to him with a direction to proceed from where he had originally left it It was held that the inferior Magistrate must try the case de novo and could proceed from where he had originally left the case because all t taken place before the inferior Magistrate originally had been su

Transfer of case to the transferred Magistrate —A Magistrate was transferred after he had finished the major portion of the trial of a case The succeeding Magistrate granted a de novo trial But the District Magistrate was of opinion that as only a small amount of work remained to be done in the case, it could be best done by the Magistrate who had tried the case, and so he (Dt Magistrate) transferred the case to the original Magistrate Held that even the original Magistrate to whom the case was thus transferred could not take up the case from the point at which he had left it, but that he must start the case de novo, because as soon as he was transferred all the proceedings which had previously taken place before him were wiped out—Sardar Khan Saheb v Athanulla, 47 M L J 926, 26 Cr L J 510

1015. Proviso (a)—Right of Accused —Under the proviso (a), the accused has a right to demand that the witnesses or any of them shall be resummoned or reheard The policy of the law is that an accused should be able to claim a right not to be convicted by a Magistrate who has not himself heard the whole evidence—Sahib Din v Crown 3 Lah 115 23 Cr L J 330 The accused can exercise his right under the proviso (a) in case of a trial only, where a preliminary inquiry before commitment is transferred before frame of charge the accused is not as of right entitled to an inquiry de novo—Palaniandv, 32 Mad 218, Crown v Nathu 1903 P R 14 Proceedings in a warrant case before a charge is framed are merely an inquiry and not a trial and if a case is transferred at that stage, the accused cannot demand a fresh examination of witnesses to be made by the succeeding Magistrate—Ramanathan v K E 46 Mad 719 But the accused is not altogether without a remedy, because as soon as the charge is framed by the succeeding Magistrate, he can under sec 256 recall all the prosecution witnesses whose evidence has been taken, and thus he has a right equivalent to that of demanding a de novo trial—Palaniandy v Emp, 32 Mad 218 (219) But according to the Calcutta High Court a trial commences as soon as the case is called on with the Magistrate on the Bench the accused on the dock and the representatives of the prosecution and for the defence are present in Court for the hearing of the case The proper time for the accused to ask for resummoning and rehearing of the witness is as soon as the trial commences before the second Magistrate—Gomar Sirdar v Q E, 25 Cal 863 In trials of summons cases and in summary trials, the time when the accused is to demand that the witnesses shall be resummoned and reheard is when the second Magistrate commences his proceedings—Sahib Din v Crown 3 Lah 115, 23 Cr L J 330

According to the Calcutta High Court this proviso applies only to a trial and does not apply to an inquiry under section 145, consequently, a Magistrate has power to proceed with the inquiry of a case under sec 145 where a portion of the evidence has been recorded by his predecessor and he is not bound to start the proceeding de novo on the application of the accused—Syed Sadek v Sachindra, 37 C L J 128 Sondi Singh v

Govind, 5 P L T 737 25 Cr L J 89 But a Full Bench of the Madras High Court has laid down that the proviso (a) applies to an inquiry under sec 117, because such inquiry according to sub-section (2) of sec 117 is made in the manner prescribed for conducting trials in summons or warrant cases and in fact has all the features of a trial—Venkata Chinnaya v K E 43 Mad 511 (F B) This is also the view of the Oudh Court—Baij Nath v Emp 27 O C 323 25 Cr L J 1380

The accused person must himself claim or waive the right Where a case was transferred from one Magistrate to another and during the arguments on the transfer application the pleader for the accused stated his intention not to have a de novo trial in the Court to which the case was transferred and subsequently the accused demanded a trial de novo it was held that there was no waiver of the right under this section and that there must be a de novo trial—Jangi Lal v Emp 19 Cr L J 657 (Nag)

The Magistrate is not bound to ascertain from the accused whether he wishes to exercise the right conferred by the proviso This section confer the right on the accused to demand and does not prescribe that the Magistrate shall ask the accused whether he will exercise the right or not—Nga Po v K E L B R (1912) 151 The Magistrate is not bound to have the accused brought before him to ascertain whether he wishes to exercise this right—Kesram v Emp 1884 P R 6 An omission on the part of the Magistrate to ask the accused whether he wants evidence to be reheard is a mere irregularity curable by sec 537 In Barachi v K E 10 Bur L T 73 17 Cr L J 401 however it has been held that it is necessary for the Magistrate to acquaint the accused with the fact that he is entitled to have the witnesses re called and re examined There are many cases in which it is desirable that the Magistrate who passes judgment should have the opportunity of seeing the witnesses

But there is no doubt that if the accused wants the evidence to be reheard the Magistrate must recommence the trial—Hnyin v Than Pe, 9 L B R 92 19 Cr L J 321 and the refusal by the Magistrate to do so would be an illegality not curable by sec 537—Amir Khan v Emp 1903 P R 3 Gomer Sirdar v Q E 5 Cal 863

An accused person cannot demand a de novo trial on the transfer of a trying Magistrate merely on the ground that that Magistrate had not heard his counsel—Chandika Prosad v K E 28 O C 109 25 Cr L J 1075

Where the accused claims under this section to have the witnesses re examined by the succeeding Magistrate the witnesses should be re-summoned without the payment of any fees—Elias v Ezakiel 8 Bur. L T 43

Under this clause when a trial is held de novo it is the duty of Magistrate on the desire of the accused to re-summon the wit But the Magistrate can resummon only those witnesses who are a al If any witness dies in the meantime and the evidence which before the previous Magistra witnesses are resummoned, the procedure is quite in accordance with law—Lekal v Emp, 8 Lah. 570, 28 Cr L J 451

1016. Proviso (b) —A District Magistrate can under proviso (b) set aside a conviction passed by a first class Magistrate in the district though no appeal lies from his order to the District Magistrate—Q E v Pirya Gopal 9 Bom 100 Opendra v Dukhini, 12 Cal 473, Q E v Laskari, 7 All 853; In re Padmanabha, 8 Mad 18

1017. Sub-section (2) —The procedure laid down in this section does not apply to proceedings stayed under sec 346—Muhammad v K E, 1905 P R 25 Thus, where a Magistrate trying a case was of opinion that the accused deserved a severer punishment than he could inflict, and stayed the proceedings and submitted the case to the District Magistrate under sec 346, it was held that the District Magistrate could not convict the accused on the evidence recorded by the referring Magistrate even though the accused did not want the evidence to be reheard—Muhammed v K. E, 1905 P R 35 Ambika v. Emp, 19 Cr L J 625 (Pat) In such a case the accused has no power to waive his right to a trial de novo, and the failure to hold a trial de novo is an illegality which vitiates the whole trial and is not merely an irregularity covered by sec 537—Ambika v Emp, 19 Cr L J 625 (Pat)

This subsection as now amended further lays down that the procedure of this section does not apply to sec 349 Even prior to this amendment it was held that the superior Magistrate to whom a case had been transferred under section 349 could act upon the evidence already recorded by the subordinate Magistrate and was not bound to hold a de novo trial—Raghava, 2 Weir 428 This is now made clear by the present amendment See K E v Dodo, 18 S L R 216, 26 Cr L J 1363

1018. Sub-section (3) —Transfer of proceedings —Subsection (1) applies where the Magistrate is transferred from one place to another, the case remaining in the same Court But does that subsection apply where a case is transferred from one Magistrate to another under section 528, the Magistrate remaining in the same post? In other words, does that subsection apply to transfer of cases as well or is it confined only to transfer of Magistrates only? There was some difference of opinion under the old section as to this question In the following cases it has been held that this section covers cases where proceedings are transferred by section 528 from the Court of one Magistrate to that of another, because as soon as a case is transferred from one Magistrate to another the former 'ceases to exercise jurisdiction' in the case within the meaning of this section—Mahesh v Emp, 35 Cal 457, Kudrutulla v Emp, 39 Cal 781, Palaniandy v Emp 32 Mad 218, Barachi v Emp, 10 Bur L T 73, 17 Cr L J 401, Chandra Kishore v K E, 21 C W N 755, Ramdas v Emp, 40 All 307 Nanhua, 36 All 315, Akbar Ali v Emp, 20 Cr L J 41 (Nag) Ganga Chetty v Emp, 20 Cr L J 496, Rupa Singh v Emp, 22 Cr L J 82, 1 P L T 679 But the contrary view was taken in the following cases—Q E v Angnu, 1889 A W N 130, Dy Leg Rem v Upendra 12 C W N 140, Crown v La Tok, 1 L B R 301, Q E v

To remove this conflict of opinion subsection (3) has been added, adopting the former view 'There has been some difference of opinion as to the position when cases are transferred from one Magistrate to another otherwise than from a predecessor to a successor in office The Amendment provides that the Magistrate from whom the case is transferred shall be deemed to cease to have jurisdiction within the meaning of this section'—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914)

350A No order or judgment of a Bench of Magistrates shall be invalid by reason only of a change having occurred in the constitution of the Bench in any case in which the Bench by which such order or judgment is passed is duly constituted under Sections 15 and 16, and the Magistrates constituting the same have been present on the Bench throughout the proceedings.

Changes in constitution of Benches

This section has been added by Sec 95 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923

In the Bill of 1921 it was intended to add the following sub-section to section 350 —

"(4) The provisions of this section shall apply so far as may be to proceedings before any Bench of Magistrates constituted under section 15 wherever the Magistrates sitting together in any proceeding are not the same as those who were sitting together at the last hearing thereof"

In other words it was intended to lay down that if during the hearing of a trial any Magistrate of a Bench was absent and was replaced by another such a change would not affect the proceeding and the trial need not be commenced de novo the new Magistrate would be able to act on the evidence already recorded But this clause did not meet with the approval of the Joint Committee who observed "We think, however, that the new sub section (4) which has been introduced in the Bill to deal with the case of Benches goes somewhat too far, and we have substituted for it a new section after section 350 which in our opinion gives effect to the law as laid down by the High Courts Briefly, it provides that a judgment of a Bench shall be valid when the Bench is duly constituted at the time of passing the judgment and the judgment is passed by Magistrates all of whom have heard the proceedings throughout" Report of the Joint Committee (1922)

1019. Hearing by one Bench, decision by another —A case must be decided by the same Bench which heard the evidence and arg Where the evidence for the prosecution was taken before two H Magistrates, and on a subsequent day the evidence for the d was taken and judgment delivered by a Bench consisting of of those Magistrates and another, the High Court set aside the and ordered a new trial—Hardwar v Khega, 20 Cal 870,

v Rajah Ali 12 Cal 558 Re Subramania 38 Mad 304 Damri v Bhawani 23 Cal 194 Mathura v Emp 41 All 116 Nga Paik v Nga Saw 20 Cr L J 336 U B R (1918) 4th Qr 118 Girdhari v Crown 1 Lah 237

1020 Absence of some of the Magistrates —Where a trial was begun before a Bench of seven Magistrates and when the judgment was pronounced only five out of the seven were present it was held that the mere circumstance that two out of the seven Magistrates were absent on the day on which the accused was convicted did not affect the legality of the conviction as the other five Magistrates attended the trial from beginning to end—Karuppana v Chairman 21 Mad 246 Venkatrama v Swaminatha 38 Mad 797 15 Cr L J 549 Where two Magistrates who decided a case sat throughout the trial and constituted the quorum of the Bench the trial will not be vitiated by the mere fact that two other Magistrates who were not necessary to the quorum and who were present at the time of the commencement of the inquiry were not on the Bench at the time of the decision of the case—Balbhadra v Tribhuban 3 N L R 67 Khuda Baksh v Emp 15 A L J 463 18 Cr L J 749 But where in the course of the trial by a Bench consisting of a stipendary and two honorary Magistrates one of the honorary Magistrates was absent and important evidence was recorded in his absence but on the following day he resumed his seat and joined with the other Magistrates in signing the order for the conviction of the accused it was held that the conviction was bad—In re Shambhu Nath 13 C I R 212 So also where in a trial before a Bench of Magistrates one of the members constituting the Bench was absent on the date when witnesses were examined it was held that the conviction of the accused was bad and that there must be a retrial—In re Tantravali Bapiraju 36 M L J 367 20 Cr L J 823 The trial of an accused by a Bench of Magistrates one of whom did not hear the entire evidence is bad in law and a conviction by such Bench cannot be sustained—Abdul Ghani v Emp 1922 P L R 1 22 Cr L J 511 Emp v Gangappa 23 Bom L R 833 22 Cr L J 615 It is wrong that a Magistrate who has been absent during a part of the trial should express an opinion on evidence which he has not heard and possibly influence his fellow Magistrates who were in a better position than he was to decide the case—Emp v Gangappa 23 Bom L R 833 Only those persons who have heard the whole of the evidence can decide the case—Itala v K E, 8 L B R 463 18 Cr L J 96 So also where a case was heard by a Bench consisting of two Magistrates who formed the quorum but on the day on which judgment was pronounced one of the members was replaced by another who had not heard the evidence and judgment was pronounced convicting the accused it was held that as one of the members on the occasion when judgment was pronounced did not hear the evidence it was difficult to say that the accused were not prejudiced consequently the trial was illegal—Mathura v Emp 41 All 116 Where out of three Magistrates constituting a Bench only one is present on all hearings throughout the trial sitting sometimes with one sometimes with the other and sometimes with both the trial is bad as contravening the provisions of this section even though the quorum consisted of two—Banwari v Emp 7 Lah 122 27 Cr L J 463 In order that the conviction should be legal it must be by a quorum of Magistrates required under the rules each of whom has heard the whole evidence —Emp v Nihchal 13 S L R 166 53 I C 609 20 Cr L J 769 Where a case was tried by a Bench of Magistrates one of whom recorded the evidence while the other was sitting close by and going on with another case held that as the hearing took place practically before only one of the Honorary Magistrates the order must be set aside and the case tried de novo—Sultan v Shamser 25 O C 18? 23 Cr L J 606

Want of quorum —Where a Bench of Magistrates established by the Local Government is under the notification establishing it to consist of not less than two members one member of the Bench cannot alone adjudicate upon a case—K E v Lady 190 A W N 158 Where the rules relating to a Bench of Magistrates provide that two members shall constitute the quorum evidence recorded by a Magistrate sitting singly is not evidence recorded in a Court and the mere reading over to the Bench when properly constituted of the statements so recorded would not render those statements admissible as evidence—Emp v Gulu 20 S L R 134 27 Cr L J 542 (543) A I R 1926 Sind 192 Similarly a trial by two members of a Bench which according to rules must consist of not less than three members is bad in law—Q E v Muthia 16 Mad 410 Thus where a Bench of three Magistrates constituted under the rules commenced a trial and heard the prosecution evidence but afterwards one member of the Bench was absent and the remaining two Magistrates went on with the trial heard the defence evidence and convicted the accused held that the trial having been in contravention of the rules was void The trial ought to have been adjourned till the absent member was present or it should have been held afresh before a different set of Magistrates—Emp v Mohideen 44 Bom 400 21 Cr L J 369

351 (1) Any person attending a Criminal Court, although not under arrest or upon a summons, may be detained by such Court for the purpose of inquiry into or trial of any offence of which such Court can take cognizance and which, from the evidence, may appear to have been committed and may be proceeded against as though he had been arrested or summoned

Detention of offenders attending Court

(2) When the detention takes place in the course of an inquiry under Chapter XVIII or after a trial has been begun, the proceedings in respect of such person shall be commenced afresh, and the witnesses reheard

1021. This section applies even though a trial has actually begun In Q v Sutherland, 14 W R 20 it was held that this could not be applied where the trial was actually being proceeded with, because such a course deprived the prisoner of the opportunity of preparing his defence and subjected him to be tried on evidence which was taken before he was put into the position of a prisoner This ruling is no longer good law, because sub-section (2) provides for the difficulty presented in that ruling and requires the proceedings to be commenced afresh

This is a self contained section and the cognisance which a Magistrate takes under this section in respect of an offence is independent of the provisions of Sec 190 (c) Consequently the provisions of section 191 are inapplicable where a Magistrate takes cognisance under this section—Emp v Sakhia, 5 N L R 113 (114) As to taking cognisance against a witness in a case, see notes under section 190 (c)

352. The place in which any Criminal Court is held for the purpose of inquiring into or trying any offence shall be deemed an open Court to which the public generally may have access, so far as the same can conveniently contain them:

Court to be open.

Provided that the presiding Judge or Magistrate may, if he thinks fit, order at any stage of any inquiry into, or trial of, any particular case, that the public generally, or any particular person, shall not have access to or be or remain in, the room or building used by the Court.

1022. Court to be open —Jail trial—This section does not necessarily make a trial in a jail invalid where there is nothing to show that admittance was refused to any one who desired it or that the prisoners were unable to communicate with thier friends or counsel But it is undesirable to hold trials in a jail because it is difficult to get counsel to appear in jail—Sahai Singh v Crown, 1917 P W R 21

The evidence of a Ghosha woman should be taken behind a purdah at a private place where she can come, in the presence of the accused only, the Judge taking such precaution as he can to secure her identity —Anonymous, 2 Weir 432

Exclusion of police Officers —A police officer who has investigated into a case should not be allowed to be present before a Magistrate when he records a confession made by the accused—Emp v Ramananda 1885 A W N. 221

This section gives power to the Court of ordering that any particular person shall not remain in the room used by the Court It makes no exception in the case of a Police-officer When the accused person objects to the presence of a Police officer or other person, the Magistrate has to decide whether the accused's fear of prejudice to his case is reasonable considering the intelligence and susceptibilities of the class to which he belongs and not merely whether the presence is convenient or helpful to the Court or the prosecution It is not advisable that a Police officer interested in the case proceeding before the Magistrate should receive exceptional treatment, as a seat on a dais as it is calculated to breed suspicion in the mind of the accused as to the independence of the Magistrate—Nathu Singh v Emp, 8 N L J 95 26 Cr L J 1130

CHAPTER XXV

OF THE MODE OF TAKING AND RECORDING EVIDENCE IN INQUIRIES AND TRIALS

353 Except as otherwise expressly provided, all evidence taken under Chapters XVIII, XX, XXI, XXII and XXIII shall be taken in the presence of the accused, or, when his personal attendance is dispensed with, in the presence of his pleader

Evidence to be taken in presence of accused

1023 Scope of section —This section lays down that all evidence shall be taken in the presence of the accused and it includes both the evidence for the prosecution as well as for the defence Where after all the prosecution witnesses were examined the accused absconded and the witnesses named by him were examined in his absence and he was convicted the conviction was held to be illegal—N a Po Shian v K E L B R (1917) 4th O 15

If the witnesses are not examined in the presence of the accused the trial is invalid and the conviction will be set aside—Q v Lalla Chowby 2 N W P 49 An order is wholly illegal if it is based on evidence which is recorded behind the back of a party at a time when he was not a party to the proceeding at all—Narayan v Chandrabhaga Bai 26 Cr L J 1089 (Nag) When a pardanashin lady was examined in a passage screened from the direct view of the Court and her voice could be perfectly heard in the Court and by the accused and he made no objection it was held that the evidence was virtually heard in the presence of the accused—Hassan Khan v Emp 1887 P R 41 But pardanashin ladies should not be generally summoned to appear in Court to give evidence but may be examined on commission—In re Huro Sundery 4 Cal 20 In re Basant Bibi 12 All 69 In re Faridunnissa 5 All 92

Two trials were held of two sets of accused who were the opposite parties in a fight in each case the accused wanted the evidence for the prosecution in the cross case to be treated as defence evidence and the Sessions Judge did so Held that in such a case the defence evidence being one given by the prosecution in the other case, was obviously one given in the absence of the accused This was a violation of the provisions of this section and was not only irregular but illegal—Allu v Cr 4 Lah 376 Muhammad v Emp, 25 Cr L J 5?? (Lah) ??

commitment is made on evidence taken in the absence of the accused, the commitment is void, and the subsequent trial must be set aside—Khanan v Crown 1913 P L R 260 Where the evidence of witnesses taken in the absence of the prisoner at a former trial was read out to them and put in as evidence at the present trial it was held that the proceeding was irregular and prejudicial to the prisoner, and that such witnesses should have been subjected to a fresh oral examination in the presence of the prisoner—Q v Bishonath, 12 W R 3 See also Q E v Nund Ram, 9 All 609 Reg v Buldei, Ratanlal 24

The Magistrate should not only take the evidence in the presence of the accused, but his record must show on the face of it that he has done so The Magistrate should by the use of a few apt words on the face of the deposition make it apparent that he had taken the evidence in the presence of the accused—Q E v Pohop Singh, 10 All 174

When his personal attendance is dispensed with —See Sec 205 The presence of an accused person may be dispensed with on ground of his ill health—Emp v King, 14 Bom L R 236 A respectable pardanashin woman should not ordinarily be compelled to appear in person in the first instance unless and until there is a strong likelihood of the charge being proved—Habbo v Crown, 1909 P W R 5 9 Cr L J 158, In re Khandamani, 45 Mad 359 and where her presence is dispensed with the evidence may be recorded in the presence of her pleader—Prem Kaur v Mai Sham, 1908 P W R 20, In re Kandamani, 45 Mad 359 23 Cr L J 266.

Manner of recording evidence outside presidency-towns

354. In inquiries and trials (other than summary trials) under this Code by or before a Magistrate (other than a Presidency Magistrate) or Sessions Judge, the evidence of the witnesses shall be recorded in the following manner.

Record in summons cases and in trials of certain offences by first and second class Magistrates

355. (1) In summons cases tried before a Magistrate other than a Presidency Magistrate, and in cases of the offences mentioned in sub section (1) of Section 260, clauses (b) to (m) both inclusive, when tried by a Magistrate of the first or second class, and in all proceedings under Section 514 (if not in the course of a trial), the Magistrate shall make a memorandum of the substance of the evidence of each witness as the examination of the witness proceeds.

(2) Such memorandum shall be written and signed by the Magistrate with his own hand, and shall form part of the record.

(3) If the Magistrate is prevented from making a memorandum as above required, he shall record the reason of his inability to do so, and shall cause such memorandum to be made in writing from his dictation in open Court, and shall sign the same, and such memorandum shall form part of the record

1024. Scope of section —In summons cases the deposition may be recorded in the form of a memorandum but it is not necessary that the recorded deposition should be read over to the accused and an omission to do so cannot be regarded as a fatal defect —Anonymous, 2 Weir 433

In cases referred to in section 260 if they are tried summarily only the substance of the evidence must be embodied in the judgment, as well as the particulars mentioned in section 264 If those cases are tried regularly, instead of summarily, the procedure of this section is to be followed—Kuchi v K E, 3 L B R 3

The language of section 354 ("other than summary trials) shows that section 355 does not apply to a summary trial and in such a trial, the Magistrate need not make any memorandum of the substance of the evidence of each witness Even if he makes such a memorandum the notes do not form part of the record and need not and should not be kept on the record the Magistrate is at liberty to destroy the notes if he pleases —Mantoo v Emp 49 All 261, 28 Cr L J 97 (dissenting from Satish Chandra v Emp, 48 Cal 280) Ismail v Emp, 25 A L J 346, 28 Cr L J 442 See Note 864 under sec 263

In proceedings under Chapter XXXVI (maintenance proceedings) the evidence ought not to be recorded as in summary trials but in the manner provided by this section—Kalidasi v Durga Charan 20 Cal 351

There is no provision as to the language in which the memorandum is to be recorded But there is also no provision which renders it illegal for an Indian second class Magistrate to record the memorandum in English Such a procedure is a mere irregularity which does not vitiate the trial, unless a failure of justice has been occasioned thereby—Q E v Gopal, 19 Mad 269

Under Sub-section (2) the Magistrate must sign the record, if he omits to do so the illegality vitiates the trial—Bilkeshwar v. Emp, 3 P L T 322 23 Cr L J 114, A I R 1922 Pat 5

Record in other cases outside presidency-towns

356 (1) In all other trials before Courts of Session and Magistrates (other than Presidency Magistrates), and in all inquiries under Chapters XII and XVIII, the evidence of each witness shall be taken down in writing in the language of the Court by the Magistrate or Sessions Judge, or in his presence and hearing under his personal direction and superintendence, and shall be signed by the Magistrate or Sessions Judge

Evidence given in English.

(2) When the evidence of such witness is given in English, the Magistrate or Sessions Judge may take it down in that language with his own hand, and, unless the accused is familiar with English, or the language of the Court is English, an authenticated translation of such evidence in the language of the Court shall form part of the record

(2-A) When the evidence of such witness is given in any other language, not being English, than the language of the Court, the Magistrate or Sessions Judge may take it down in that language with his own hand or cause it to be taken down in that language in his presence and hearing and under his personal direction and superintendence, and an authenticated translation of such evidence in the language of the Court or in English shall form part of the record

Memorandum when evidence not taken down by the Magistrate or Judge himself.

(3) In cases in which the evidence is not taken down in writing by the Magistrate or Sessions Judge, he shall, as the examination of each witness proceeds, make a memorandum of the substance of what such witness deposes; and such memorandum shall be written and signed by the Magistrate or Sessions Judge with his own hand, and shall form part of the record.

(4) If the Magistrate or Sessions Judge is prevented from making a memorandum as above required, he shall record the reason of his inability to make it.

Change :—Sub-section (2-A) has been added by section 96 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923 The reason is thus stated "Section 356 does not provide for evidence being taken down in any other language than that of the Court, or if the language of the Court is not English, in English The result is a certain loss of accuracy whenever evidence is given in a third language, as it has to be translated into and taken down in, the language of the Court or in English The object of the amendment is to secure greater accuracy and to avoid waste of time in translation "—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1921)

The words ' or cause it to be taken . . . . superintendence '' sub-section (2A) did not exist in the Bill or Report but were added during the Debate in the Legislative Assembly to meet the case of a Magistrate or Judge who does not know the language in which the evidence is given In such cases it will be necessary for the Magistrate or Judge to have the statement recorded in the language in which the evidence is given —Legislative Assembly Debates 7th February 1923 page 2035

1025 Record of Evidence —The provisions of this section are imperative and omission to record the evidence in the mode prescribed by this section is a material irregularity sufficient to set aside the proceedings—Janki Prosad v Emp 19 Cr L J 235 (Pat) Q E v Barmajit, 1891 A W N 145 Where a Magistrate made no vernacular record of the evidence of the complainant and his witnesses the procedure was held to be illegal—Matai v Anant Ram 1890 A W N 164 Udit Narain v Emp 17 A L J 1146 21 Cr L J 28

The provisions of sub-section (1) are imperative and the entire evidence must be recorded fully either by the Magistrate himself or by somebody else under the direction of the Magistrate In the latter case (i e where the evidence is recorded by any person other than a Magistrate) the Magistrate should under sub-section (3) make a memorandum of the evidence But sub-section (3) does not override the provisions of sub section (1) but is merely supplementary to it In other words the fact that the Magistrate is making a memorandum of the evidence does not do away with the necessity of the evidence being fully recorded by some other officer of the Court Where a Magistrate in a proceeding under section 145 neither recorded the evidence fully in his own hand nor caused it to be recorded fully by anybody else but simply made a memorandum of the evidence purporting to act under sub-section (3) it was held that the provisions of sub section (1) not being complied with the whole proceedings of the Magistrate must be set aside—Sadananda v Krishna Mandal 42 Cal 381

Where there is a discrepancy in a material part of the evidence of the principal prosecution witnesses between the record in the vernacular in which that witness gave evidence and the record in English the accused is entitled to the benefit of the doubt created thereby Generally speaking the evidence as recorded in the vernacular in which the witness deposed is entitled to a greater weight and is more reliable than the record made in the English language but where the Magistrate who made the English record was an experienced Magistrate fully conversant with the vernacular in which the witness gave his evidence the English record is also reliable but all the same the accused is entitled to the benefit of any doubt caused by the discrepancy between the two records—Sadhu Singh v Crown 24 Cr L J 624 (Lah)

Language of record of evidence

357. (1) The Local Government may direct that in any district or part of a district, or in proceedings before any Court of Session, or before any Magistrate or class of Magistrates, the evidence of each witness in the cases referred to in Section 356, be taken down by the Sessions Judge or Magistrate with his own hand and in his mother-tongue, unless he is prevented by any sufficient reason from taking down the evidence of any witness, in which case he shall record the reason of his inability to do so and shall cause the evidence to be taken down in writing from his dictation in open Court.

(2) The evidence so taken down shall be signed by the Sessions Judge or Magistrate, and shall form part of the record :

Provided that the Local Government may direct the Sessions Judge or Magistrate to take down the evidence in the English language, or in the language of the Court, although such language is not his mother-tongue.

1026. The authority conferred on an officer by this section is personal to that officer and remains in force only so long as he remains in the particular district in which it has been conferred—Anon., 5 M. H. C. R. App. 9. Therefore, where a Magistrate empowered to record the deposition in his own handwriting while in district B did the same when he was transferred to another district, under the belief that the authority previously given to him in district B was personal to him and still remained in force, and committed the accused for trial, it was held that the Magistrate's proceeding was irregular ; but since the accused was not prejudiced thereby, his commitment was not set aside—Chakaradiyil Kalu Nair, 2 Weir 434 (435).

The plea of the accused need not be recorded in the words of the very language in which it is made ; when it is a foreign language, the record must be in the language in which it is interpreted to the Court—Emp. v. Vaimbilee, 5 Cal. 826.

358. In cases of the kind mentioned in Section 355, the Magistrate may, if he thinks fit, take down the evidence of any witness in the manner provided in Section 356, or, if within the local limits of the jurisdiction of such Magistrate the Local Government has made the order referred to in Section 357, in the manner provided in the same section.

Option to Magistrate in cases under S. 355.

1027. The ordinary and proper and convenient way of recording evidence is to take it down in the first person exactly as spoken by the witness—Q. v. Zoolfikar, 16 W. R. 36. The Judge should in taking down evidence adhere as far as possible to the words actually used either in the question or in the answer given by the witness. The provisions of law will not be complied with by recording a more or less accurate paraphrase of the evidence given by a witness—Emp v Nga Saw 11 Bur L R 8 The Judge is not bound to make a verbatim record of any particular questions and answers It is left to the discretion of the Judge, if either side specially requests him to do so—Ibid

Mode of recording evidence under S 356 or S 357

359 (1) Evidence taken under Section 356 or Section 357 shall not ordinarily be taken down in the form of question and answer, but in the form of a narrative

(2) The Magistrate or Sessions Judge may, in his discretion, take down, or cause to be taken down, any particular question and answer

Procedure in regard to such evidence when completed

360 (1) As the evidence of each witness taken under Section 356 or Section 357 is completed, it shall be read over to him in the presence of the accused, if in attendance or of his pleader, if he appears by pleader, and shall, if necessary, be corrected

(2) If the witness denies the correctness of any part of the evidence when the same is read over to him, the Magistrate or Sessions Judge may, instead of correcting the evidence, make a memorandum thereon of the objection made to it by the witness, and shall add such remarks as he thinks necessary

(3) If the evidence is taken down in a language different from that in which it has been given and the witness does not understand the language in which it is taken down the evidence so taken down shall be interpreted to him in the language in which it was given, or in a language which he understands

1028 Object and Scope of Section —The object of this section is to give an opportunity to the witnesses to explain or correct the statements made by them—Ramdhari v Emp 4 P L W 44 19 Cr L J 169 This section is enacted for the protection of witnesses it provides that a witness in order to satisfy himself that the evidence which has been taken down is correct may have it interpreted to him if he desires it in a language which he understands—In re Okhoy 7 C L R 393

This section applies to evidence recorded under section 356 or 357, but not to evidence recorded in summons cases under section 355 Where the evidence in a summons case is recorded in the form of a memorand under section 355 it is not incumbent on the Magistrate to read over memorandum of the deposition to the witness—Ramdhari v *

P L W 44, 19 Cr L J 169 and omission to do so is not fatal to the conviction—Anonymous 2 Weir 433

In an inquiry under sec 107 the evidence must be recorded as in a summons case (see section 117) i e it must be recorded in the manner prescribed in section 355 and not as laid down in sec 356 or sec 357 Sec ... led under sec ... that the depo ... f the accused—Legal Remembrancer v Jafar 52 Cal 668 26 Cr L J 1456

But in an inquiry in a good behaviour case the provisions of section 360 will apply and failure to comply with those provisions would vitiate the inquiry or trial—Sanatan v Emp 52 Cal 632 41 C L J 352 26 Cr L J 1240 Kaurab Ali v Emp 52 Cal 470 26 Cr L J 1 33

This section applies to the evidence of witnesses and not to the examination of the accused—Q v Radhoo 12 W R 44

This section applies to proceedings under section 145 and the evidence of each witness must be read over to him in the presence of the accused the term accused being applicable to persons proceeded against under Chapter XII Even if the term accused does not apply to such persons still this section would cover the proceedings under Chapter XII because, section 356 (which is referred to in this section) expressly mentions Chapter XII—Ram Narain v Dhonrai 3 P L T 291 23 Cr L J 125 Aswini Kumar v Puti 52 Cal 437 29 C W N 474 26 Cr L J 914 But a Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court has recently laid down that the parties to the proceedings under section 145 are not accused persons and that therefore the provisions of sec 360 apply to proceedings under sec 145 only to this extent that the evidence of each witness must be read over to that witness and the attendance of the parties at the reading over is not necessary—Narendra v Sabarati 57 Cal 721 (F B) 29 C W N 701 41 C L J 479 26 Cr L J 1194 This decision practically over rules the case of Ishan Chandra v Hriday 29 C W N 475 26 Cr L J 915 where it was held that the word accused not being applicable to the parties in a proceeding under Ch XII section 360 had no application at all to such a proceeding and it was not obligatory to read over the deposition to the witnesses

In a later Patna case it has been held that even an omission to read over the evidence to the witness is a mere irregularity which does not vitiate an order under section 145—Sordhi Singh v Sri Gobind 5 P L T 237 25 Cr L J 89

1029 Deposition must be read over to witness —If the deposition is recorded in a language which the witness does not understand it must be interpreted to the witness in the language which he understands If the deposition is read over to the witness in a language which is neither understood by the accused nor by the witness it is an illegality which materially prejudices the accused—Q v Issur Raut 8 W R 61 But if the witnesses did not require their depositions to be interpreted to them in their own language the reading over the depositions to them in a language which they did not understand would not afford any ground for the accused to have his conviction set aside—In re Okhoy 7 C L R 393

The provisions of this section are obligatory and not merely directory. It is incumbent on the Judge to read over the deposition to each witness, even though such a procedure should occupy considerable time—Amrita Lal v Emp 42 Cal 957 Jyotish Chandra v Emp 36 Cal 955 And a departure from such a practice might lead to considerable embarrassment and place a serious impediment in the administration of justice—Jyotish Chandra v Emp 36 Cal 955 The object of this section is to ensure the accuracy of the record and omission to comply with the provisions of this section is an illegality which vitiates the trial irrespective of whether the accused have been prejudiced or not and is not a mere irregularity curable by section 537—Haronath v Sonai Mia 28 C W N 119 38 C L J 281 25 Cr L J 789 Hiralal v Emp, 28 C W N 968, 52 Cal 159 (Contra—Mohiuddin v Emp 4 Pat 488 6 P L T 154, 26 Cr L J 811 Abdul Rahman v Emp 27 Cr L J 669 4 Bur L J 213, Mayeth v Emp 3 Rang 612 27 Cr L J 857) It is not a sufficient compliance with this section if the Magistrate merely hands over the recorded deposition to the witness to read it for himself and the witness reads it himself because the section requires that the deposition must be read over in the presence i e in the hearing of the accused, in order that the accused should have an opportunity of correcting any mistake in it—K E v Jogendra 42 Cal 240 Sahorali v Emp 26 Cr L J 951 (Cal) Md Yasin v Emp 52 Cal 431 29 C W N 650 It is not a sufficient compliance with this section if the deposition is read by a witness himself and then afterwards it is explained by the Judge to the accused in the absence of the witness—Jessarat v Emp 29 C W N 526 26 Cr L J 1009 But the Patna High Court holds that even though a deposition is not read over to the witness according to the provisions of this section but is read by the witness himself still the deposition is legal evidence In other words non compliance with this provision of the section does not vitiate the trial—Jagwa Dhannuk v K E 5 Pat 63 7 P L T 396 27 Cr L J 484 And the same view has recently been taken in the Privy Council case of Abdul Rahman v Emp 5 Rang 53 (P C) 31 C W N 271 28 Cr L J 259 in which Lord Phillimore observed "Although it is regrettable that such an irregularity should creep in and though it might be taken into account with other elements of objections to the satisfactory character of the trial it would not by itself be ground sufficient for quashing a conviction The bare fact of such irregularity, unaccompanied by any probable suggestion of any failure of justice having been thereby occasioned is not enough to warrant the quashing of a conviction which may be supported by the curative provisions of section 537" Their Lordships disapproved of the ruling in the Calcutta case of Hiralal v Emp 52 Cal 159 (cited supra)

Depositions of witnesses which have not been read over to the witnesses are nevertheless admissible under sec 145 Evidence Act to contradict the witnesses in a subsequent trial—Fazlur Rahman v Emp, 6 Pat, 478 28 Cr L J 772

This section lays down that the evidence of each witness shall be read over to him as it is completed and this procedure should be strictly followed It is not sufficient compliance with this section to read out each sentence of the statement of a witness as it is being recorded—Wadhawa v Emp 22 Cr L J 669 (Lah) So also it is not proper for the Magistrate to examine a number of witnesses and ask them to be in a room and then have the depositions read over to them at the end of the day s work Such a procedure is not merely an irregularity but an illegality vitiating the trial —In re Kuppa Mudalier 49 Mad 71 49 M L J 421 26 Cr L J 1587 A I R 1925 Mad 1206 Abdul Bari v K E 42 C L J 585 27 Cr L J 375 A I R 19 6 Cal 157 Shamserali v Emp 53 Cal 129 A I R 19 6 Cal 563 7 Cr L J 688

The deposition must be read over to the witness in the presence of the accused so as to give the accused an opportunity to challenge the correctness of the record—Rameshwar v Emp 6 P L T 493 26 Cr L J 927 A conviction based upon evidence not read over in the presence of the accused is illegal and must be set aside—Sugiri Eradu 2 Weir 435 It is improper to have the deposition of the witness read over to him by a clerk in the verandah of the Court house though both the witness and the clerk were in view of the accused Such a deposition cannot be admitted in evidence—Nga San v K E U B R (1912) 1st Qr 123 If the accused is in attendance the deposition must be read over in the presence of the accused and not in the presence of his pleader It is only when the accused appears by a pleader that the reading over of the evidence in the presence of the pleader is sufficient—Kasim Ali v Sarada Kripa 30 C W N 336 27 Cr L J 509 Where the accused appears by pleader the deposition of a witness may be read over in the presence of a pleader of one of several accused—Rakhal Chandra v K E 36 Cal 808 13 C W N 94

The object of reading over a deposition to a witness is to obtain an accurate record from the witness of what he really means to say and to give him an opportunity of correcting the words which the Magistrate or his clerk has taken down It is not to enable the accused or his advocate to suggest corrections No doubt the evidence has to be read over in the presence of the accused or his pleader he s entitled to be sure that it has been read over and that the witness has had an opportunity of correcting the written word But he (the accused) is not necessarily entitled to the opportunity of suggesting corrections At the same time it would be a better course if depositions other than mere formal ones were read over so that the accused or his pleader could hear them and give their undivided attention to them Care would of course have to be taken that no suggestion should be conveyed to a witness in the form of a correction which would make him alter his evidence but there might be obvious slips to which under proper safeguard attention might be called by the accused or his pleader Still it should be remembered that the primary object is to fix the witness and to enable him to protect himself against any inaccuracy in the words taken down

There is nothing in the section to indicate the exact time when the deposition should be read over and if the deposition is read over at the close of the cross examination it fulfils the requirements and objects of the section—Ramdhari v Emp 4 P L W 44 19 Cr L J 169

While the evidence of one witness is being read over to the accused, it is highly improper for the Court to proceed with the evidence of the next witness Such a procedure is a violation of the provision of this section and vitiates the inquiry or trial—Manik v K E 41 C L J 393, 26 Cr L J 1267 Adiladdi v K E 26 Cr L J 1016 (Cal) Singiri Eradu 2 Weir 435 Darghai v Emp 52 Cal 499 26 Cr L J 1213 The Rangoon High Court holds that such a procedure does not vitiate the trial but is a mere irregularity curable by section 537—Abdul Rahman v K E 4 Bur L J 213 27 Cr L J 669 A similar view has been taken in In re Muthu Kumara 21 M L J 411 12 Cr L J 44 This view has since been affirmed by the Privy Council in Abdul Rahman v Emp 5 Rang 53 (P C)

When a deposition is not read over a to witness in the presence of the accused according to the provisions of Sub-section (1), the witness cannot be prosecuted for perjury—Emp v Mayadeb, 6 Cal 762 Jyotish v Emp 36 Cal 955 Mahendra v Emp, 12 C W N 845, Ram Narain v Dhanrai 3 P L T 291 23 Cr L J 125 Brahmadeo v Emp, 2 P L T 380 Kadir v Emp 18 Cr L J 966 11 Bur L T 202 Kamal Chinathan v Emp 28 Mad 308 Kelluri v Emp 42 Mad 561 K E v Jogendra, 42 Cal 240 Contra—Turya v Emp 12 Bur L T 167, where it is held that a witness can be prosecuted for perjury inspite of the fact that his deposition has not been read over to him in the presence of the accused, the deposition should not be treated as a nullity merely because of the irregularity, it can be proved by other evidence, e g, by evidence that the witness admitted it to be correct when it was read over to him and by the evidence of the Judge or Magistrate who recorded it So also it has been held in In re Bogra 8 M L T 117 11 Cr L J 482 that evidence not read over to the witness in the presence of the accused may not be used as evidence against the accused but may be the basis of a prosecution of the witness for perjury

Under this section, the Magistrate is not required to record a memorandum at the end of each deposition that the deposition was read over in the presence of the accused though it is much better to do so in order to prevent complaints as to his not having done so—Rameshwar v Emp, 6 P L T 493, 26 Cr L J 927, Bhagwat Singh v Emp 4 Pat 231, 6 P L T 73, 26 Cr L J 932 But the absence of such a memorandum does not prove that the deposition was not read over—Bhagwat v Emp, 4 Pat, 231.

1030. Deposition may be corrected —Before a deposition is closed, a witness should be given an opportunity of explaining and correcting any contradictions which it may contain, and the statement which the witness finally declares to be the true one must be taken that which he intended to make—Reg v Balkrishna, Ratanlal 54 An honest witness who wishes to alter or correct a statement he has once made, should be allowed to do so, and should not be deterred from doing so by the fear of a criminal charge—Habibulla v Q E, 10 Cal 937

If the Court instead of allowing the correction to be made, proceeds to make a memorandum according to sub section (2) such memorandum must be appended to the deposition and care should be taken that the practice and the form prescribed by law are exactly adhered to—Q v Komurooddee, 13 W R 17

1031. Language —The distinction between section 360 and section 361 is very marked Under the latter section if evidence is given in a language not understood by the accused or his pleader, it is to be interpreted in their language, while under section 360 when it is read over it is to be interpreted to the witness in his own language, but there is no provision for its being interpreted to the accused Thus, if the depositions are taken down in English, and the language of the accused is Hindee, and the language of the witness is Burmese, the depositions will have to be taken by getting the witness answers in Burmese, having them interpreted to the Court so that they may be taken down in English, and futher interpreted to the accused so that he may understand them in Hindee When, however, the deposition comes to be read over, as it will be in English it will be interpreted to the witness in Burmese, but not to the accused in Hindee and if the accused neither knew English nor Burmese, he will be none the wiser—Abdul Rahman v Emp, 5 Rang 53 (P C) 31 C W N 271 52 M L J 585

361. (1) Whenever any evidence is given in a language not understood by the accused, and he is present in person, it shall be interpreted to him in open Court in a language understood by him

Interpretation of evidence to accused or his pleader

(2) If he appears by pleader and the evidence is given in a language other than the language of the Court, and not understood by the pleader it shall be interpreted to such pleader in that language

(3) When documents are put in for the purpose of formal proof, it shall be in the discretion of the Court to interpret as much thereof as appears necessary.

1031A. This section relates to the oral evidence of witnesses As to documentary evidence, though an accused has a right to have all or any part of the document used in his trial translated or interpreted to him yet it is not necessary to interpret formal documents such as Government Gazettes at length, that would be merely wasting time It would be enough if the prisoner were made to understand what they were and for what purpose they were used—Q v Ameerooddeen, 15 W R 25

If the accused appears by a pleader who understands the language in which the evidence is given by the witness, the omission to interpret the evidence to the accused is not a material defect—Q v Bhoobun 1 W R 50

Record of evidence in Presidency Magistrate's Courts

362 (1) In every case in which a Presidency Magistrate imposes a fine exceeding two hundred rupees or imprisonment for a term exceeding six months he shall either take down the evidence of the witnesses with his own hand or cause it to be taken down in writing from his dictation in open Court All evidence so taken down shall be signed by the Magistrate and shall form part of the record

Record of evidence in Presidency Magistrate's Courts

362 (1) In every case tried by a Presidency Magistrate in which an appeal lies, such Magistrate shall either take down the evidence of the witnesses with his own hand or cause it to be taken down in writing from his dictation in open Court All evidence so taken down shall be signed by the Magistrate and shall form part of the record

(2) Evidence so taken down shall ordinarily be recorded in the form of a narrative but the Magistrate may, in his discretion take down or cause to be taken down, any particular question or answer

(2 A) In every case referred to in sub section (1) the Magistrate shall make a memorandum of the substance of the examination of the accused Such memorandum shall be signed by the Magistrate with his own hand, and shall form part of the record

(3) Sentences passed under Section 35 on the same occasion shall for the purposes of this section, be considered as one sentence unless they are sentences of imprisonment ordered to run concurrently

(4) In cases other than those specified in sub-section (1) it shall not be necessary for a Presidency Magistrate to record the evidence or frame a charge

Change —Sub-section (1) has been amended as shown in parallel columns the italicised words in sub-section (3) have been inserted and sub-sections (2 A) and (4) have been newly added by the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 The reasons are below

1032 Scope —Summary trials —The provisions as to summary trials do not apply to trials before Presidency Magistrates A warrant case must be tried by them in the manner laid down in Chapter XXI subject to the provisions of this section as to the recording of evidence—Q E v Abdul Ratanlal 539

Reference under Sec 123 (2) —In cases where the Presidency Magistrate makes a reference to the High Court under Sec 123 (2) he must duly record the evidence but it is not necessary that he should record it as fully as a Moffusil Magistrate—Emp v Nepal 13 C W N 318

Sub-section (1) — We think that the opening words of sub-section (1) of section 362 require amendment As the section stands it seems to imply that a Presidency Magistrate before he commences his inquiry must make up his mind as to the maximum limit of the sentence which he will impose We think that the sub-section would read better as amended by us compare the wording of section 264 —Report of the Select Committee of 1916

But even this amendment does not improve the position because in order to ascertain whether an appeal will lie from his sentence the Presidency Magistrate will have to make up his mind whether he will pass a sentence of over six months imprisonment or a fine exceeding two hundred rupees (Sec 411) The Joint Committee in confirming the above amendment has also admitted it —

We are inclined to agree with those critics who point out that the re draft proposed in sub section (1) of section 362 does not get rid of the difficulty that a Magistrate has to make up his mind as to the sentence he will impose before he begins trying the case We do not see how this difficulty can be got rid of but we think that the amendment proposed has the advantage of bringing the language of this section into conformity with the language of sections 263 and 264 and we would therefore retain this sub-clause

In order to meet difficulties that have arisen we have introduced a sub-section (2 A) laying down that Presidency Magistrates in cases subject to appeal shall make a memorandum of the substance of the examination of the accused and we have introduced a new clause making a consequential amendment in sub-sec (4) of sec 364

The non official members who constituted a majority in the Committee expressed their dissatisfaction with the distinctions drawn in the Code between Presidency Magistrates and other Magistrates and in particular with regard to this clause would have liked to see Presidency Magistrates required in warrant cases at all events to keep as full a record as any other Magistrates But the Committee as a whole held that there was some force in the contention put forward by numerous High Court Judges that no change should be made in the Code affecting to any extent the special powers of Presidency Magistrates until a much fuller inquiry had been made into the question of their status powers and procedure We desire to take this opportunity of placing on record our hope that it may be possible to appoint a small committee to undertake the investigation — Report of the Joint Committee (1922)

Where a Presidency Magistrate sentences an accused person to imprisonment for more than 6 months he is bound to record the evidence of witnesses even though the sentence is imposed for the purpose of the detention of the accused in a reformatory—Emp v Md Roshan, 26 Bom L R 1232 26 Cr L J 454

1033 Sub-section (2) —Mode of recording evidence —Evidence should be recorded in the form of direct narration Where a Presidency Magistrate in contravention of the provisions of this section, recorded the evidence of some more or less formal witnesses in the form of an indirect narration it was held that such irregularities in the mode of recording evidence where no failure of justice had been occasioned thereby, were cured by section 537 and the trial was not on that account vitiated—In re Gulab Chand 18 Cr L J 336 (Mad)

It is the duty of the Magistrate in recording evidence under this section to take a note of all the material facts whether they appear in the course of the examination in chief or in the course of the cross examination—Ah Foong v K F 46 Cal 411, 22 C W N 834, 20 Cr L J 24

Sub-section (3) —'Unless concurrently' —"It is provided that when sentences in excess of one are passed which are ordered to run concurrently, it is the heaviest sentence which determines the applicability of section 362 —Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914)

1034. Sub-section (4) — It is intended by this sub section to remove the uncertainty which at present exists regarding the duties of a Presidency Magistrate in recording evidence and framing a charge in petty cases '—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914)

Sub-section (1) provides that the evidence must be fully recorded in cases where the Presidency Magistrate passes appealable sentences, and there is no obligation on the Magistrate to record evidence in non appealable cases—Fmaman v Emp, 31 Cal 983, Shaikh Babu v. Emp, 33 Cal 1036 In a Bombay case it has been held that although the Magistrate has a discretion in cases not falling under this section to take down the evidence or not, still this discretion should be exercised judicially in a reasonable spirit and not arbitrarily, and there should be a record of the evidence, so that the High Court in Revision may judge of the propriety or legality of the order passed by him—Emp v Haris Chandra 10 Bom L R 201 The new sub-section (4) now totally dispenses with the necessity of recording evidence in non-appealable cases 363 When a Sessions Judge or Magistrate has recorded the evidence of a witness, he shall also record such remarks (if any) as he thinks material respecting the demeanour of such witness whilst under examination.

Remarks respecting demeanour of witness

1035 The object of this section is to give to the Appellate C some aid in estimating the value of the evidence recorded by the trate—Q v Rasoo Kullah, 12 W R 51 Though in criminal

Appellate Court should be guided by the remarks made under this section as to the demeanour of witnesses, yet it is bound to independently consider the facts of the case—Moula Baksh v Q E, 1898 P R 6 But where a Sessions Judge of experience had in the most emphatic manner stated that the demeanour of the witnesses was evasive, that they inspired him with no confidence, and that no man could be convicted on their testimony, the Appellate Court before accepting their testimony must be assured in the most positive and convincing manner that there was no ground for the Sessions Judge's criticism Where the evidence is all oral, and its credibility is a mere matter of opinion, the opinion of the Court which heard the witnesses and noticed their demeanour must be treated as almost conclusive—Emp v Bishen Singh 1914 P L R 125

It is always unsafe for a Judge or a Magistrate to pronounce an opinion as to the credibility of a witness, until the whole of the evidence has been taken A Magistrate may note the demeanour of the witness, but except there is very clear proof afforded by his own statements that the witness is unworthy of credit, it is unsafe to assume that he is so, till the evidence has been exhausted—Palani Nadan, 2 Weir 435 (436)

Examination of accused how recorded

364. (1) Whenever the accused is examined by any Magistrate, or by any Court other than a High Court established by Royal Charter or the Chief Court of Oudh, the whole of such examination, including every question put to him and every answer given by him, shall be recorded in full in the language in which he is examined, or if that is not practicable, in the language of the Court or in English; and such record shall be shown or read to him, or if he does not understand the language in which it is written, shall be interpreted to him in a language which he understands, and he shall be at liberty to explain or add to his answers.

(2) When the whole is made conformable to what he declares is the truth, the record shall be signed by the accused and the Magistrate or Judge of such Court, and such Magistrate or Judge shall certify under his own hand that the examination was taken in his presence and hearing and that the record contains a full and true account of the statement made by the accused.

(3) In cases in which the examination of the accused is not recorded by the Magistrate or Judge himself, he shall be bound * * * * * * * as the examination proceeds, to make a memorandum thereof in the language of the Court, or in English, if he is sufficiently acquainted with the latter language, and such memorandum shall be written and signed by the Magistrate or Judge with his own hand, and shall be annexed to the record. If the Magistrate or Judge is unable to make a memorandum as above required, he shall record the reason of such inability.

(4) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to apply to the examination of an accused person under Section 263, or in the course of a trial held by a Presidency Magistrate.

Change.—The words 'Chief Court of Oudh' have been added by the Oudh Courts Act XXXII of 1925. The italicised words at the end of sub-section (4) have been added by the Crim Pro Code Second Amendment Act XXXVII of 1923. The object of this amendment is "to make it clear that in cases where an appeal lies the Presidency Magistrate shall take down a memorandum of the examination of the accused person as already provided in the new sub-section (2A) of section 362 and that in non appealable cases no record of the examination of the accused need be made."—Statement of Objects and Reasons (Gazette of India, 1923 Part V, page 242). This amendment has been made in deference to the opinion of Shah J in 46 Bom 441 (at pp 447—448) in which his Lordship remarked that the provisions of section 364 should be relaxed so far as Presidency Magistrates are concerned.

The words "unless he is a Presidency Magistrate" which occurred in sub-section (3) have been omitted by the same Amendment Act.

1036. Scope and application of section.—The rules laid down in this section are applicable to the examination of the accused under section 342—Emp v Nagar, 4 Bom L R 461.

This section applies only to examination of the accused during inquiries and trials and not during investigations which are governed by sec 164—Reg v. Bai Ratan, 10 B H C R 166. But still the rules laid down in this section are equally applicable to confessions taken under sec 164 in the course of an investigation—Reg v Shivya 1 Bom. 219, Emp v Gajadhar, 1883 A W N 243. See sec 164 (2).

This section does not apply to a summary trial. See sub-section (4). See also sec 354 ('other than summary trials'). If a case is tried summarily, the Magistrate need not record the full statement of the examination of the accused in the form under sec 364, i e he need not record the questions and answers in detail. It is sufficient if he makes a brief note of the examination on the record—Bhawani v Emp 3 O W N 946, 28 Cr L J 76, Parsotim v K E, 6 Pat 504, 8 P L T 757, 28 Cr L J 1037.

This section applies to the record of statement made by an accused. A person against whom no process has been issued is not in the position of an accused person, and if such person is examined in an inquiry under sec 202 his statement cannot be regarded as having been recorded under this section—Sat Narain v Emp 32 Cal 1083

This section does not apply where there has been no examination of the accused The Magistrate only examines the accused when he thinks it necessary for the purpose of enabling him to explain any circumstance appearing in the evidence against him The examination of an accused prior to commitment is in the discretion of the Magistrate If the Magistrate does not examine the accused or if the accused is unwilling to submit to an examination it is sufficient for the Magistrate to make a note of the fact and record it as a reason for not examining the accused—Crown v Dost 11 S L R 52

1037 Record of question and answer —Every question and every answer must be recorded verbatim no matter whether relevant or irrelevant—15 W R (Cr Let) 3 Where the examination has not been recorded in full so as to include the questions and answers as required by this section it is not admissible in evidence without further proof—Reg v Kalla 2 B H C R 395 Reg v Pevadi 2 B H C R 397 Reg v Vithoji 2 B H C R 398

Where the Judge asked the accused persons as to whether they would make any statement or not and they replied in the nagative the Judge should record what the exact questions were that were put to the accused Where in such a case there was no record made of the questions and answers and the only indication of it was to be found in the order sheet wherein the Judge made the following remark The accused declined to make any statement in this Court and on being asked whether they would adduce evidence they replied in the negative held that the provisions of section 364 were violated and the trial having been vitiated by such omission the accused should be retried—Emp v Nani Mandal 52 Cal 403 41 C L J 50 26 Cr L J 761 Sarat Chandra v Emp 52 Cal 446 26 Cr L J 1244 A I R 1925 Cal 821 Mes er Bepari v K E 29 C W N 939 26 Cr L J 1037

It is not necessary for the Magistrate to state in the body of the examination that the statement comprised every question put to the accused and every answer given by him and that he had liberty to add to or explain his answers Attestation at the foot of the examination is sufficient—Q v Goshto 15 W R 68

Where the confession of the accused was recorded in a simple narrative form instead of in the form of questions and answers as required by this section and there was nothing to show that the accused was prejudiced thereby, it was held that the irregularity did not affect the admissibility of the statement in evidence and was cured by section 533—Emp v Deo Dat 45 All 166 Emp v Atta 1892 A W N 60 Emp v Munshi 8 Cal 616 Tekoo v Emp 1 Cal 539 Khudiram v Emp 9 C L J 55 3 I C 625 Although [illegible] at importance [illegible] the questions put to the accused (bec[illegible] mes a statem[illegible] in answer to a question put may have [illegible] meaning if [illegible] without such question) still if the omi[illegible] the que[illegible] not affect the sense and meaning of the [illegible] tement the [illegible] not make the statement inadmissible in evidence—Emp v Sagambar 12 C L R 190 Tibo Miah v Q 8 Cal 618 (Foot note)

Record need not be in Magistrate's handwriting —There is nothing in this Code which necessitates a Magistrate to take down the examination of the accused in his own hand It is enough if he appends a certificate that the examination was conducted in his presence and contains accurately all that was said by the accused—Q v Lecay Narain 20 W R 50

1038 Language —The law requires that ordinarily the statement of the accused must be recorded in the language in which it was made the object being to represent the very words and expressions used so as to ensure accuracy and prevent misrepresentation and misconstruction of what was said—Q E v Sagal 1 Cal 64 Emp v Nari Mandal 52 Cal 403 41 C L J 50 26 Cr L J 761 This rule of law ought not to be deviated from unless it is shown that it was impracticable to write the statement in the language in which it was made If the answers were not taken down in the language in which they were given the irregularity cannot be cured by sec 533—Q E v Nilmadhab 15 Cal 595 Jai Narain v Q E 17 Cal 862 Bawa v K E 10 O C 112 Section 364 lays down that the confession is to be recorded in the language in which it was made or if that is not practicable in the language of the Court or in English And it would be for the prosecution to establish the impracticability of recording the statement in the language in which it was made—Jai Narain v Q E 17 Cal 862 Q E v Nilmadhab 15 Cal 595 Bawa v K E 10 O C 112 6 Cr L J 94 Where the accused was examined by the Magistrate in Marathi and gave his answers in Marathi the statements should be recorded in Marathi It is illegal to record them in English—Q E v Sirmal Ratanlal 633 Q E v Visram Babajee 21 Bom 495 If however it is not practicable to record the statement in the language in which it is made the law directs that the statement shall be recorded in the language of the Court or in English—Q E v Sagal 21 Cal 642 Thus where the confession of the accused person made in Bengali was recorded by the Magistrate in English because he could not write Bengali well and there was no moharrer with him at the time it was held that there was no illegality—Q E v Fazai Miai 22 Cal 817 See also Khudiram v Emp 9 C L J 55 Where the Magistrate recorded the confession of the accused on a holiday and since he could not get the service of any one to write Hindustani he recorded the confession in English translated it in Urdu to the accused who admitted it to be correct held that the confession was properly recorded in accordance with the provisions of this section—Emp v Bachania 1891 A W N 35 Where a confession made in Hindustani was recorded by a Muhammadan Magistrate in Bengali the language of the Court the High Court held that it could not be presumed that the Magistrate must have had sufficient acquaintance with Urdu so as to be able to record the statement in that language and that in the absence of any evidence it should be presumed that the Magistrate found it impracticable to record the statement in Urdu—Lal Chand v Q E 18 Cal 549 So also in Emp v De Dat 45 All 166 Emp v

Anta 1892 A W N 60 Q E v Visram Babaji 21 Bom 495 Ralli Ram v Emp 1899 P R 7 and Emp v Chatter, 16 C P L R 122 although it was practicable for the Magistrate to record the statement in the language in which it was made, still an English record was held to be good if it was translated to the accused in his own language and no prejudice was caused to him the irregularity being cured by sec 533 See also Emp v Fernand, 4 Bom L R 785 Where the Magistrate was a Bengalee and the accused was a Bengalee but the accused made his confession partly in Bengali and partly in English and he understood English well and he read through his statement and corrected it, held that the Magistrate did not act illegally in recording the confession in English—Nilmadhab v Emp 5 Pat 171 27 Cr L J 957

When a Magistrate is unable to record a confession in the language in which it is made he should not employ a police officer to write it down The employment of a police officer even as a scribe in recording a confession is objectionable—Khudiram Bose v Emp, 9 C L J 55 3 I C 625

Although the terms of sections 164 and 364 are imperative still if the Magistrate, instead of recording the confession himself employed a clerk to do so it was held that the irregularity would be cured by sec 533 by examining the Magistrate—Badan Singh v K E 1909 P R 2

If the confession of the accused is made in a foreign language, unknown to the Court or Magistrate the Code does not require that it should be recorded in that language In such a case, the record of the confession should be in the language in which it is conveyed to the Court by the interpreter—Emp v Vaimbilee 5 Cal 826 Where a statement was made by the accused in Manipuri and communicated to the Magistrate by an interpreter in Bengali and the Magistrate recorded it in English and there was also a record in Manipuri but the two records differed it was held that the record in Manipuri should be regarded as the proper record and the only evidence in the case—Q E v Sagal 21 Cal 642

1039. 'Record to be shewn to accused' etc. —Before a statement can be admitted in evidence it is necessary to see that such statement has been deliberately made and recorded and that after being recorded it has been shown or read over to the accused so that he might be assured that his words have been correctly taken down—Q v Narain 7 W. R 49 An omission to read over and intrepret to the accused the statement recorded by the committing Magistrate and to record any explanation or statement the accused may make at the time is an irregularity that vitiates the trial Merely recording in the judgment that the statement or examination of the accused was put in and read out to him is not a compliance with the requirements of the section—Tatu Santal v K E, 6 P L J 147 Where there was nothing to show that the record of the confessional statement made by the accused before the committing Magistrate was shown or read over to the accused such statement cannot be used as evidence against him—Emp v Dewan Kahar, 4 P L T 186 24 Cr L J 497 This section requires that the record shall be shown or read over to the accused and if he does not understand the language in which it is written, it must be interpreted in a language which he understands Where a Magistrate showed or read a confession recorded in English to the accused who did not understand English the provisions of this section were not complied with—Bhe leekee 4 N W P 16

1040 Sub-section (2)—Record must be signed —The record of confession must be signed by the accused A record which does not bear the signature of the accused is not admissible in evidence until the defect is cured in the manner provided by section 533—Emp v Gajadhar, 1883 A W N 243 Where the signature or mark of the accused was not taken to the record of the statement made by him to a Magistrate the defect can be cured by examining the Magistrate as a witness to prove that the statement recorded was duly made—Q E v Chedda 1896 A W N 161 Q E v Raghu 23 Bom 221 Reg v Dera Dayal 11 B H C R 237 Where the signature of the accused was not taken by the committing Magistrate, and no objection was raised before the Sessions Court by his pleader on the ground of absence of signature and no prejudice was caused to the accused it was held that under the circumstances of the case the irregularity was not a sufficient ground for reversing the judgment—Reg v Dera Dayal 11 B H C R 237 The signature of the accused to his confession is taken as a voucher of the authenticity of the statement and not as an admission of its correctness Therefore where the signature is not taken at the time the confession is made but is taken the next day, and the Magistrate swears of the authenticity of the confessional statement, there is no such illegality or irregularity as would affect the admissibility of the statement in evidence—Khudiram v Emp 9 C L J 55 3 I C 625 The record must be signed by the accused himself in his own handwriting, it cannot be signed by another person for the accused If so signed it is inadmissible in evidence—Reg v Daya Anand 11 B H C R 44 but now see section 533

If the accused is unable to write his mark or thumb-impression (45 All 166) is a sufficient compliance with the requirements of this section But if he can write his thumb-impression is not sufficient—Sadanand v Emp 32 Cal 550

The signature of the accused must be taken in the presence of the Magistrate To take it in an adjoining room in the presence of a clerk and not in the immediate presence of the Magistrate is not a proper compliance with the provisions of this section—Q E v Bhika Ratanlal 687

Refusal to sign —Sub section (2) involves only the Magistrate offering the record for the accused s signature but it does not empower the Magistrate to require the accused to sign Therefore an accused who refuses to sign the record of statement does not commit an offence punishable under section 180 I P C That section of the Penal Code applies only when the Magistrate is legally empowered to require the accused to sign the statement—K E v Ba Tin 3 L B R 199 Imp v Sirsapa 4 Bom 15 But it has been laid down by the Allahabad High Court that the ... sign ...

commits an offence under section 180 I P C—Emp v Umer Khan 39 All 399 So also per Melville, J in Imp v Sirsapa, 4 Bom 15

Signature of Magistrate —The affixing of an unreadable initial to the statement of the accused is not a proper compliance with this section —Q v. Bhikaree, 15 W R 63

1041. Certificate —The absence of the certificate in the recorded examination of the accused is not necessarily fatal to its admissibility—Reg v Vyankatrao, 7 B H C R 50 Where a Magistrate omitted to certify a confession as required by sec 364 and did not record the whole of the questions put to the accused, the High Court declined to interfere where no prejudice resulted to the accused—Kamalugade, 2 Weir 436 A defect in the certificate to be attached by a Magistrate to the examination of the accused can be cured only by taking evidence that the accused duly made the statement recorded, either by examining the Magistrate or some other person who was present when the statement was recorded It cannot be cured by examining a witness to prove that it was taken down in the hand writing of the Magistrate himself—Emp v Balasur, 8 C P L R 6, Emp v Lal Sheikh, 3 C W N 387, Reg v Peradi, 2 B H C R 397; Q E v Anga Valayan, 22 Mad 15 Q E v Raghu, 23 Bom 221, Badan v K E, 1909 P R 2 It cannot be cured by the addition of the certificate at the direction of the District Magistrate after an appeal is disposed of—Reg v Vyankatrao, 7 B H C R 50

This section does not prescribe any particular form of the certificate When a confession bore a certificate of the Magistrate containing the words "taken by me" but did not say that the confession was made in his hearing, it was held that the certificate substantially complied with the requirements of this section—Noshai v. Emp, 5 Cal 958

The certificate need not be in the handwriting of the Magistrate, it is sufficient if it is signed by the Magistrate—Q v. Rezza Hosain, 8 W R 55

1042. Non-compliance with the section —The rules laid down in this section should be strictly followed—Emp v Gajadhar, 1883 A W N 213 Magistrates should in all cases be careful to observe all the provisions of section 164 and this section, for although various defects can be cured, the value of the confession may be very much diminished by non compliance with the strict letter of the law—Ralli Ram v Q E, 1890 P R 7

Non-compliance with the formalities of this section may be remedied by Sec 533 by oral evidence (of the Magistrate who recorded it) that the accused duly made the statement recorded—Q E v Raghu 23 Bom 221, Lal Chand v Q E, 18 Cal 549, Reg v Vithoji, 2 B H C R 398 Where the confession though signed by the accused was not recorded in the manner prescribed by this section and there was no certificate showing that the record contained in full the statement made by the accused, it was admitted in evidence in spite of these defects and held to be proved by its production—Ahmed Din v Emp, 1881 P R 20, Sher Singh v Emp, 1881 P R 21

But section 533 does not apply and cannot make a confession admissible where no attempt has been made to conform to the provisions of this section Thus, where the confessions were neither recorded in the language of the accused nor were signed by the accused nor certified by the Magistrate held that there was a total non-compliance with the provisions of this section and sec 533 would not cure such grave irregularities —Q E v Viran 9 Mad 224 Where no record whatever has been made of a confession such confession cannot be proved merely by oral evidence, Section 533 deals with errors in the record and does not apply where no record whatever has been made of such a confession—Emp v Gulab, 35 All 260 14 Cr L J 211 See also Emp v Nani Mandal, 52 Cal 403 cited in Note 1037 ante

365 Every High Court established by Royal Charter may from time to time by general rule, prescribe the manner in which evidence shall be taken down in cases coming before the Court, and the Judges of such Court shall take down the evidence or the substance thereof in accordance with the rule (if any) so prescribed	365 Every High Court established by Royal Charter, and the Chief Court of Oudh shall from time to time, by general rule, prescribe the manner in which evidence shall be taken down in cases coming before the Court, and the evidence shall be taken down in accordance with such rule.

Record of evidence in High Court

Change —This section has been amended by section 99 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 "The word 'shall' would make it compulsory upon High Courts to prescribe by rules the manner in which evidence should be taken down The section will not of course limit the discretion of the High Court as to what form the rules should take' —Report of the Select Committee of 1916

"We do not think it necessary that the Judges of the Court should take down the evidence themselves But we are of opinion that there should certainly be some record '—Report of the Joint Committee (1922)

The words ' and the Chief Court of Oudh" have been added by the Oudh Courts Act XXXII of 1925

CHAPTER XXVI.

OF THE JUDGMENT.

Mode of delivering judgment

366 (1) The judgment in every trial in any Criminal Court of original jurisdiction shall be pronounced, or the substance of such judgment shall be explained —

(a) in open Court either immediately after the termination of the trial or at some subsequent time of which notice shall be given to the parties or their pleaders, and

(b) in the language of the Court, or in some other language which the accused or his pleader understands:

Provided that the whole judgment shall be read out by the presiding Judge if he is requested so to do either by the prosecution or the defence.

(2) The accused shall, if in custody, be brought up or, if not in custody, be required by the Court to attend to hear judgment delivered, except where his personal attendance during the trial has been dispensed with and the sentence is one of fine only or he is acquitted in either of which cases it may be delivered in the presence of his pleader.

(3) No judgment delivered by any Criminal Court shall be deemed to be invalid by reason only of the absence of any party or his pleader on the day or from the place notified for the delivery thereof, or of any omission to serve or defect in serving on the parties or their pleaders or any of them the notice of such day and place.

(4) Nothing in this section shall be construed to limit in any way the extent of the provisions of Section 537

The requirements of Sections 366 and 367 are not mere matters of form The provisions of these sections are based upon good and substantial grounds of public policy and whether they are or not the Sessions Judges must obey them and not be a law to themselves—Q E v Hargobind 14 All 242

1043 Judgment —Judgment means the expression of opinion of the Judge or Magistrate arrived at after due consideration of the evidence and of the arguments—Dinnu v Sridhar 21 Cal 121 An order of dismissal of a complaint under section 203 is not a judgment—Emp v Chinna 29 Mad 126 An order dismissing a case for default of appearance of the complainant is not a judgment—Kalatchand v Emp 25 A I R 76. Bilkhu v Dasmoni 10 C L J 80 Judgment means a judgment of conviction or acquittal but not an order of discharge under section 209 or 253—Dwarka v Lem [illegible] 8 Cal 652 Mir Ahmad v Md Askari 23 Cal 256 Emp v Maheshwari 31 Mad 543 Emp v Nathu 9 Bom

L R 250 On the other hand if the Magistrate after taking some evidence however incomplete the evidence may be enters into the merits of the complaint and makes an order of discharge, such an order is a judgment —Dwarka v Benimadhab 28 Cal 652 The final order of acquittal on a petition of composition is not a judgment—Hasta v Crown 1914 P R 9 16 Cr L J 81 because such an order is made without any consideration of the evidence

The judgment referred to in this section is a judgment passed in a trial the section does not therefore apply to final orders made in sanction proceedings under section 195—In re Nagappa 6 Bom L R 897 (Sanction proceedings however are now abolished)

1044 Delivery of Judgment —The delivery of judgment and the passing of sentence is an integral part of the criminal trial and must be done by the Judge himself It is not a mere formality and a deliberate breach of this express provision of law is not a mere irregularity curable by Section 537 Where on the date fixed for delivery of the judgment the Judge being ill he signed and dated his judgment and sent it to be translated to the accused by the interpreter the Judge himself not being present in Court and the judgment was so translated by the interpreter it was an illegality and a retrial must be ordered—Rambir v Emp 24 Cr L J 584 1 Bur L J 192 But the Allahabad High Court takes a more liberal view and holds that where a Magistrate wrote out a judgment signed and dated it but owing to physical incapacity had it read out by another Magistrate it was at the most an irregularity which was covered by section 537—Nur Md Khan v Emp 21 A L J 137 24 Cr L J 173 A judgment which is not delivered is no judgment Where a Judge after writing his judgment but before delivering it dies or leaves the Bench his written judgment cannot be considered as a judgment but it is merely an opinion A judgment though written and signed is inoperative until it is pronounced and must be taken merely as an expression of opinion—Ramdhun v K E, 11 A L J 745 14 Cr L J 562

The judgment must be delivered in open Court—Damu v Sridhar 21 Cal 121

The judgment must be pronounced by the Judge or Magistrate who held the trial The duty of signing and delivering the judgment cannot be delegated by the presiding officer to another person Where a Magistrate after holding trial in one district went away to another district and thence sent his judgment to the Magistrate of the former district to be delivered and the District Magistrate delivered it the trial was set aside and retrial ordered—Q E v Jia Lal 1889 A W N 181 Baisrab Charan v Amin Ali 50 Cal 624 38 C L J 262 24 Cr L J 489 But the Madras High Court and the Oudh Chief Court are of opinion that the delivery of the judgment by the successor of the Magistrate who wrote it is not illegal —In re Sankara Pillai 18 M L J 197 7 Cr L J 459 Chandika v Emp 28 O C 109 11 O L J 725 See also In re Savarimuthu 40 Mad 100 where it has been held that the succeeding Magistrate can date sign pronounce a judgment written by his predecessor and thus adopt it own.

The judgment must be pronounced in the presence of the accused Where the accused having absconded, the Magistrate passed sentence in [illegible]

[illegible] Sardar, 1917 P R 36 If, however, the judgment is one of acquittal or of fine only, it may be passed in the absence of the accused, under sub-section (2)—Crown v Jamal Khatun, 6 S L R 206

The judgment in a criminal case must be passed without undue delay, as delay is not only unjust to the accused, as it prevents them from appealing at once, but is opposed to the principles of law—Emp v Baldeo, 5 C P L R 24 In a trial by jury, it is not necessary, under section 367 to record a judgment, but only the heads of charges to the jury should be recorded, and these should be written out as soon as possible after the charge to the jury has been actually delivered, when the facts of the case are fresh in the mind of the Judge—Faindra v Emp, 36 Cal 281 In this case the charge to the jury was written 3 weeks after, and the High Court severely condemned the delay

It is not necessary that the whole of the judgment should be read It is sufficient if the substance of the judgment is delivered Omission to read a portion in the judgment is a mere irregularity covered by section 537—Venkataramanayya, 2 Weir 711, Kamakshemma v Emp, 38 Mad 498, 14 Cr L J. 595.

1045. Conviction or acquittal before judgment —The judgment must always be written and delivered before sentence is passed It is illegal to pronounce a sentence at the termination of the trial and to postpone the writing of the judgment to a future occasion—Punjab Circ, P 239 In as much as the sentence in a case of conviction, and the direction to set the accused at liberty in a case of acquittal, can only follow on the decision and cannot precede it, and in as much as the decision must be contained in the written judgment it must necessarily follow that the sentence is illegal if there is no written judgment when it is passed—Q E v Hargobind, 14 All 242 Where the judgment was delivered after the order of acquittal was passed, the acquittal was set aside and a re trial ordered—Q E v Abdul Majid, 1892 A W N 157 Where the judgment was written and delivered some days after the prisoners were convicted and sentenced, it was held that this was a violation of the express provisions of this section and was more than a mere irregularity, and the conviction and sentence must be set aside—Bardanu Atchayya v Emp, 27 Mad 237

In some cases, however, it has been held that such an irregularity does not vitiate the whole proceedings unless there has been a failure of justice, such irregularity will be cured by Section 537—Tilak Chandra v Baisagomoff, 23 Cal 502, Crown v Monolhan, 5 S L R 131, Emp v Thave Issaji, 13 Bom. L R 635, Damu v Sridhar, 21 Cal 121, Kamakshamma 38 Mad 498, Saularalinga v Narayan, 45 Mad 913 (F B), Ata Md v Emp, 25 Cr L J 705 (Lah) Section 497 (4) now provides for acquittal of the accused before judgment on taking a bond from him for appearance on the day of judgment

Where a Magistrate died after pronouncing the sentence but before writing the judgment the High Court reversed the conviction and sentence and ordered retrial—Q E v Lanthia 1 Bom L R 160 But in 2 Weir 438 where the Magistrate died after passing sentence but before recording a judgment it has been held that a conviction on a trial regularly held will not be set aside merely because the Magistrate had been unavoidably prevented from recording a judgment and the right of appeal of the accused would not be taken away by the absence of a complete judgment

Loss of judgment —This section only imposes the condition that the judgment must be pronounced in open Court and imposes a few other conditions but such conditions do not include the condition that the record should not have been lost In cases where the judgment has been lost the appropriate course for a Judge is to re write the judgment from memory and from the materials on record and place it on record—Kamakshamma v Emp 38 Mad 498

Language of judgment Contents of judgment

367 (1) Every such judgment shall except as otherwise expressly provided by this Code, be written by the presiding officer of the Court or from the dictation of such presiding officer in the language of the Court, or in English, and shall contain the point or points for determination, the decision thereon and the reasons for the decision, and shall be dated and signed by the presiding officer in open Court at the time of pronouncing it, and where it is not written by the presiding officer with his own hand, every page of such judgment shall be signed by him.

(2) It shall specify the offence (if any) of which and the section of the Indian Penal Code or other law under which, the accused is convicted and the punishment to which he is sentenced Judgment in alternative.

(3) When the conviction is under the Indian Penal Code and it is doubtful under which of two sections or under which of two parts of the same section of that Code the offence falls, the Court shall distinctly express the same and pass judgment in the alternative

(4) If it be a judgment of acquittal, it shall state the offence of which the accused is acquitted and direct that he be set at liberty

(5) If the accused is convicted of an offence punishable with death and the Court sentences him punishment other than death, the Court shall in its judgment state the reason why sentence of death was not passed :

Provided that, in trials by jury the Court need not write a judgment, but the Court of Session shall record the heads of the charge to the jury.

(6) For the purposes of this section, an order under Section 118 or Section 123, sub-section (3), shall be deemed to be a judgment.

1046. Change —The italicised words in sub section (1) and the new sub section (6) have been added by Section 100 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923

Under the old Section it was held that the judgment must be written by the Magistrate himself he could not get it written by a clerk—Q E v Lakshmibai Ratanlal 545 Subramanya v Q, 6 Mad 396, and that if the judgment was written at the dictation of the Magistrate, and the Magistrate merely signed it the procedure was illegal—Manik Lal v Corporation of Calcutta, 4 C L J 411 The present Amendment in sub-section (1) will now allow such procedure

Language —Under this section the judgment of a Criminal Court should be written in the language of the Court or in English Where an Honorary Magistrate wrote his judgment in Urdu instead of in Hindi, the language of the Court it was held to be irregular, but such irregularity was cured by Section 537—Dhari Adhari v Harihar, 4 C L J 232, 4 Cr L J 162

1047. Contents of judgment —The judgment must be self contained and nothing should be left out If any material finding is left out in the judgment the defect cannot be cured by the Magistrate s subsequent explanation to the Appellate Court—Jiralhan v K E 7 C L J 238 A judgment should contain sufficient particulars to enable a Court of Appeal to know what facts were found and how—Q E v Dhurmiya Ratanlal 833 The judgment should show that the Court had considered the evidence and had found in a case of conviction that the facts proved to the satisfaction of the Court brought an offence home to the accused person whom the Court convicted—Q E v Pandey Bhat, 19 All 506 (F B) Where a judgment though not a long and elaborate one, affords a clear indication that the Court duly considered the evidence it is a good judgment—Kasimuddi v Q E, 1 C W N 169 But if the judgment is so meagre that it is impossible to form an opinion as to the merits of the case or to say whether there has been a miscarriage of justice or not, the judgment must be set aside—Rupa Mandal v Keshal, 5 C L J 452

Where an Appellate Court finds that the Magistrate has not written a judgment in conformity with the provisions of Section 367, the correct procedure is to accept the appeal and to remand the case for hearing de novo The Appellate Court cannot retain the appeal on its file and ask for a judgment which the Magistrate has failed to record—Karuppiah v Emp 1920 M W N 120, 21 Cr L J 52

Points for determination —Every judgment of a Criminal Court must contain a clear statement of the points for determination—Bom H C Cr Cir p 38 The attention of all Criminal Courts is invited to this necessity of very strictly observing the provisions of the latter portions of clause (1) of section 367 which declares that the judgment must contain the points for determination the decision thereon and the reasons for the decision —Cal G R & C O p 36 Where the Sessions Judge convicted the accused without stating the facts of the case or the points for determination or even the section under which the accused was convicted the judgment was set aside—Ektar Khan v Emp 9 C W N xxiii The accused person is entitled to have an independent judgment of the trying Court and such judgment must be prepared in accordance with and must contain the particulars required by section 367 Otherwise it is no judgment at all Where a second class Magistrate thinking that a severer punishment should be inflicted on the accused than what he was authorised to award recorded his opinion and forwarded the proceeding to the Sub divisional Magistrate and the latter in convicting the accused wrote the following judgment I agree with the finding arrived at by the learned trying Magistrate and convict all the accused for the offence of unlawful assembly as stated in the charge held that this was not a judgment at all—Thakur Singh v Emp 20 Cr L J 444 (Pat) Where the Magistrate has given strong and legal reasons for his decision his omission to refer to the minute details of the case does not vitiate his judgment—Durga Singh v Emp 24 Cr L J 181 (Pat) Where the judgment showed that the Judge had appreciated the points which the prosecution had to establish and that he had clearly in view the points for determination viz, the credibility of the evidence of the witnesses for the prosecution and he expressed his opinion on that point it was held that the judgment was good and should not be set aside—Rohimuddi v Q E 20 Cal 353 Where an Appellate Court rejected an appeal without specying the points for determination or the decision or the reasons thereof the appeal was ordered to be reheard—Utam v Crown 1876 P R 6

In every case of mischief the question of legal title to the property is a point for determination It is the duty of the Criminal Court to determine what was the intention of the alleged offender and whether he was not acting in the exercise of a bona fide claim of right—Emp v Budh Singh 2 All 101 In a case of dacoity the Judge should at first give a general outline of the case the course of the investigation and the arrest of the various accused and then the case for and against each accused should be dealt with in detail and the Judge should arrive at a conclusion with regard to each individual accused—Nga Mu v Emp 2 Bur L J 199 In a case of unlawful assembly and riot the judgment should contain as one of the points for determination a statement as to the existence of the elements constituting the unlawful assembly—Ram Lal v Haricharan 37 Cal 194 It is the duty of the Judge to determine where several alternative common objects of the unlawful assembly are alleged in the charge which of the common objects is made out—Manaruddi v E 35 Cal 718 Dasarathi v Raghu 36 Cal 158 In a charge of the point for determination is the dishonest intention, especially if a bona fide claim is set up—Ram Lal v Hari Charar, 37 Cal 194

'Decision thereon' —The Sessions Judge should be careful to record findings on all the charges under which the prisoner is sent up for trial —Q v Mahomed Ali 13 W R 50 Where there are several accused the case of each accused should be dealt with in detail and the Judge should arrive at a decision with regard to each individual accused—Nga Mu v Emp 2 Bur L J 199 In re Dakshinamurti, 1918 M W N 129 19 Cr L J 200

Reasons for decision —Every judgment must contain the reasons for decision a judgment which states merely the offence and the punishment and contains no statement of the reasons for conviction is insufficient and invalid—Q E v Kala Ratanlal 310 Even in a summary trial the law requires under sec 203 that the Magistrate should give a brief statement of the reasons for his findings A judgment in a single line is not a judgment in accordance with law—Jankey Rai v Emp, 20 Cr L J 431(Pat) In a proceeding under sec 145 the Magistrate should, in the final order sufficiently state the reasons therefor, so that the High Court may in revision determine whether or not the Magistrate has directed his mind to the consideration of the effect of the evidence adduced before him—Bhuban Chandra v Nibaran, 49 Cal 187, 25 C W N 887 An order of discharge under section 253 is not a judgment, and the writing of reasons is not necessary But it is desirable that the Magistrate should record his reasons for the discharge, although it is not compulsory—Emp v Nabi Fakira, 0 Bom L R 250

Remarks and comments —The testimony and conduct of police officers examined in a criminal trial may be commented upon in the judgment in the same degree as those of any other material witnesses but no further —Q v Budri, 23 W R 65 Comments on the conduct of witnesses and parties should not go beyond what is really necessary for the elucidation of the case Any humorous remarks or ridicule on strangers should be avoided—Ma kyn v Kin Lat, 11 I C 1000 4 Bur L T 173, Emp v Baldeo 5 C P L R 24 The language of a judgment should be temperate and sober, and not satirical A judgment should not admit irrelevant matter to the record, but should confine itself to a consideration of the issues before the Court, together with a fair and legitimate comment on any errors or irregularities that may be disclosed in the course of the trial —Emp v Thomas Pellako, 5 Bur L T 20 13 Cr L J 250 A judgment should not contain remarks about the accused to the effect that he was a person of wealth and influence and had prevented truth from appearing unless such conduct of the prisoner is established by evidence—Q v Dhurum 8 W R 13 The judgment should not contain any damaging remarks regarding a witness in a criminal trial—In re Malik Umar, 1910 P W R 2, 11 Cr L J 178 or regarding the conduct of a counsel when such counsel's conduct was not at all objectionable—Lachchu v Emp 1 O L J 141 15 Cr L J 420, or regarding a person who is not a party or witness in the proceeding—Benarasi Das v Crown 6 Lah 166 26 Cr L J 1326 An Appellate judgment should not contain any imputations about the motives of the trying Magistrate—Yacool 2 Weir 535 The High Court has power to expunge any objectionable remarks from the lower Court s judgment see Note 1214 under sec 439

Specification of offence —See sub section (2) The offence of which the accused is convicted must be specified in the judgment with the same precision as in the charge—K E v Taik Pyu 5 L B R 21 2 I C 619 Marandde v Emp 35 Cal 718

Sentence —Under this section the sentence is a part of the judgment and when an accused person is convicted it is incumbent upon the Court to pass a formal sentence of even a single day s imprisonment or any other punishment to make the record legally complete—Emp v Kalua 1884 A W N 219 In estimating the sentence to be passed the defence put forward by the accused should not be treated as a matter of aggravation—Emp v Cheda Lal 1883 A W N 170

As to the legality of passing sentence before judgment see notes under sec 366

1048 Signing —This section requires that the judgment must be signed But if the judgment is entirely in the hand of the Magistrate it does not become inoperative by reason of the fact that he forgot to sign and date it The irregularity does not affect the merits of the case and is cured by section 537—Ram Singh v Emp 47 All 284 23 A L J 8 26 Cr L J 688

The signature should be made with a pen and not with a stamp There are obvious reasons why judicial documents should be authenticated in such a manner that their authenticity may admit of proof But the affixing of a signature with a stamp would be no more than a mere irregularity—Subramanya v Q 6 Mad 396 But mere initialling is not signing —Q E v Kanhu O S C 192

The signature of the Magistrate must be appended to the judgment at the time of pronouncing it in open Court—Q E v Gaupal Ratanlal 429 In re Savarimuthu 40 Mad 108 But omission to date and sign the judgment at the time of pronouncing it is an irregularity covered by sec 537—Venkataramanayya 2 Weir 711 (712)

The dating and signing of the judgment must be done by the presiding officer of the Court it cannot be delegated to any body else—Q E v Jia Lal 1889 A W N 181 Where a Magistrate who has tried a case and written out the judgment is succeeded by another before he has actually pronounced the same it is not obligatory on the succeeding Magistrate to pronounce the same and much less can he be compelled to do so though he may if he chooses date sign and pronounce it in which case he will be adopting it as his own—In re Savarimuthu 40 Mad 108 Quære whether it will be legal for the succeeding Magistrate to date sign and pronounce the judgment written by his predecessor when the accused demands a de novo trial (under sec 350) ?—Ibid

Sub-section (3) —Judgment in the alternative —The doubt in sub-section (3) is the same as that referred to in sec 236 i e, a doubt as to the application of law to the facts proved and not a doubt as to whether the accused had committed any offence See notes under sec 236 Where the judgment did not state in express terms that the Court was in doubt as to the question under which of two sections the offence fell it was held that this wa at most an irregularity and did not vitiate the judgment—Boya Takirugadu 2 Weir 440

Sub-section (4) —Judgme of acquittal —Under sub-section (4) if the judgment is one of acquittal the accused is entitled to be discharged from custody immediately on the judgment of acquittal being pronounced and his further detention becomes unlawful No formal warrant of release addressed by the Court to the Superintendent of the Jail is necessary it is for the jail authorities (in whose custody the accused had remained) to satisfy themselves of the result of the trial—Anonymous 5 M H C R App 2

1049 Sub-section (5) —Judgment in capital cases —Judges are bound to pass a capital sentence in a case of murder when they believe the evidence and they must not shrink from doing their duty—Q v Sabnarain 7 W R 33 It is highly improper that a Sessions Judge should pass a sentence of death and at the same time in his reference to the High Court recommended for mercy—M H C Pro 24 4 1866 A person convicted of murder should ordinarily be sentenced to death To justify the passing of a sentence of transportation for life there should be really extenuating circumstances and not a mere absence of aggravating circumstances—Emp v Nga Myat 18 Cr L J 113 (Bur) Mi Shue v Emp 2 Bur L J 277 Crown v Ngatha 1 L B R 216 (F B) Mi She Yi v K E 25 Cr L J 1121 (Rang) The fact that the crime was committed without premeditation in the heat of passion upon a sudden quarrel is not an extenuating circumstance—Emp v Nga Myat 18 Cr L J 113 The reasons justifying the infliction of the lesser penalty under section 367 (5) must be such as are in accordance with established legal principles The drunkenness of the accused is not a sufficient reason for not inflicting capital sentence Unless drunkenness amounts to unsoundness of mind so as to enable insanity to be pleaded by way of defence or unless the degree of drunkenness is such as to establish incapacity in the accused to form the intent necessary to constitute the crime drunkenness is neither a defence nor a palliation and is not a reason for inflicting a sentence of transportation for life instead of a death sentence—Haryam v Crown

death was commuted to transportation for life where owing to an aperture in the neck of the accused communicating with the larynx it was likely that if he were hanged a complete severance of the head from the body would ensue—Boodhoo 2 C L R 215 Where the Sessions Judge feels reasonable doubt whether a sentence of death would be the proper penalty the doubt like all other doubts should be given in favour of the accused and a sentence of transportation should be passed In such a case it is highly improper for the Sessions Judge to pass a sentence of death and to leave the responsibility to the High Court of commuting the sentence if necessary—Shwe Ch v K E 3 L B R 111

1050 Heads of charge to the jury —Under this section the Judge is not required to write out in extenso the charge which he addresses to the jury He is to record merely the heads of the charge because it is impossible for the Judge to write down everything he says to the jury—Keamuddi v Emp 51 Cal 79 (82) The heads of charge to the jury need not be a verbatim reproduction of the Judge s observations to the jury nor it is necessary that the charge should be written out before it is delivered But whether they are written out before delivery or taken down verbatim they should be placed on record by the Judge as soon as he may find it possible to do so and whilst what he said is fresh in his recollection The record need not be meticulous or lengthy but it must give accurately the substance of what the Judge said to the jury so that the High Court may if occasion arises be able to ascertain from this record whether the law and the facts relative to the case were fairly and property put to the jurors Where the Judge s record of his charge to the jury is simply this Sections 141 to 149 and 299 to 304 I P Code read over and explained held that such a short summary was not a sufficient compliance with the law—Rupan Singh v K E 4 Pat 626 27 Cr L J 49 Khijiruddin v Emp 53 Cal 372 27 Cr L J 266 The heads of the charge mean that the Judge must faithfully record the line upon which he addressed the jury both on the evidence and on the law and the object of these heads of charge is to inform the High Court should occasion arise of what direction he gave in law to the Jury and the nature of the summing up of the evidence not only for the prosecution but also for the defence The heads of charge are not intended to be an exhaustive detail of every particular which the Judge may have addressed to the jury but they should contain in an intelligible form and with sufficient fulness the points of law and direction given by the Judge to the jury and the record should represent with absolute accuracy the substance of the charge by the Judge to the jury—Eknath v K E 1 P L J 317 Ramindra v Emp 36 Cal 281 Emp v Ikramuddin 39 All 348 Abdul v K E 35 C I J 437 26 C W N 997 Khijruddin v Emp 53 Cal 372 4 C L J 504 27 Cr L J 66 Rahamali v Emp 26 Cr L J 1151 (Cal) The heads of the charge should contain such statement as will enable the Appellate Court to decide whether the evidence has been properly laid before the jury or whether there has been any direction in the charge—Q v Kasiri 23 W R. 32 Emp v Baij 1903 A W N 232 Abbas v Q E 25 Cal 736 In re Shambi

Although under sec 367, only the heads of the charge to the jury are required to be recorded still as the law allows an appeal on grounds of misdirection, it is not only desirable but necessary that the charge should be recorded with sufficient fulness to enable the Appellate Court to see that all points of law were clearly explained to the jury and that the summing up was proper and free from misdirection—B[illegible] 10 C W N 605, 3 Cr L J [illegible] Parkan v Emp, 34 Cal 605 Abul Gaffar v Emp 16 C W N [illegible] 24 Cr L J [illegible] Laxmana 2 Weir 585 The Judge should also record in his charge what evidence he reads out to the jury—Q E v Basavarappa Ratanlal 017 It is not sufficient for the Judge to state in his record of the heads of the charge that he referred to certain sections of the Penal Code and explained to the jury the law with regard to the offence he should set out in the record the directions which he gave to them in respect of the law in order that the High Court may not have to speculate as to what the Judge said but may be in a position to judge whether the elements constituting the particular offence in question had been properly and fairly explained to the jury—Kasimuddin v Emp, 4 Cal 703 21 Cr L J 603 The Judge's comments on the evidence of identification should be recorded in a form which will enable the appellate Court to know what was actually said—Abdul v K E 35 C L J [illegible]

Where a joint trial is held of several offences some of which are triable by jury and others with the aid of assessors and in respect of the latter offences the jury become assessors, it is the duty of the Sessions Judge to pronounce a judgment containing the particulars specified in this section in respect of the latter offences. 1051 Appellate Judgment — It should be observed that section 424 of the Code extends the provisions of section 367 to the judgments of the Lower Appellate Courts and it is essential that the judgment of such Courts should comply with the provisions of this section —Cal C P & C O p 36 An appellate judgment, like the judgment of the Court of the first instance must fulfil the conditions laid down in this section that is the judgment must state the points for determination the decision thereon and the reasons for the decision—Emp v Devendra, 17 Bom L R 165, Dalip Singh v Crown, 5 Lah 305 Wargan v Emp, 2 P L T 610 Ab Charan v Gels Bhua 2 P L T 225 Birdarlan 21 Cr L J 421 (Lah) Where the Appellate Court merely rejected the appeal without specifying these points, the appeal was ordered to be reheard—I[illegible] v Crown 1876 P R 6.

Besides specifying these points, the Appellate Court has to decide two more points, viz (1) is the objection raised in the memorandum of appeal a valid objection ? and if not, (2) is there any ground apparent on the record for interference in appeal ? A judgment which does not decide these points is not a valid judgment—Jairam v Emp, 8 N L R 54

It is the duty of the Sessions Judge in disposing of an appeal to

Defective Appellate Judgments —It is difficult to lay down any rule with precision as to what judgment of an Appellate Court complies and what judgment does not comply with the requirements of this Code It cannot be held that merely because the form of judgment does not exactly comply with all the requirements of this section and of section 424 it is not a valid judgment The omissions in the judgment must be substantial in order to invalidate it—Q E v Pandeh 10 All 506 Though the judgment of the Appellate Court is not in proper form the High Court should not interfere with an order of acquittal unless there has been a miscarriage of justice—Rupa Mandal v Keshab 5 C L J 452 5 Cr L J 319 Where the Appellate judgment shows that the Judge had appreciated and had in view all the points the High Court should not interfere in revision merely because the form of judgment does not exactly comply with all the requirements of this section—Rohimuddy v Q E 20 Cal 353 But where the Appellate Court which dismissed the appeal not summarily but after notice to the parties omitted to write the judgment altogether such an omission was not a mere irregularity curable [illegible] 537 but a grave illegality—Emp v Devendra 17 Bom L R

1052 Sub-section (6) — We think it desirable to orders under sections 118 and 1[illegible]3 (3) should be deemed to for the purposes of this section —Report of the Joint C

This sub-section supersedes In re Ramasamy Chetty, 27 Mad. 510 (512) where it was held that an order passed in security proceedings was not a "Judgment."

In Venkatachinnaya v. K. E., 43 Mad 510, it was contended for the Crown that the word 'inquiry' in section 117 did not mean a trial, but Ayling J., in overruling this contention observed as follows (at pp 524—525).—"If the word is to be given the narrow interpretation contended for the Crown, such provisions as those in Chapter XXVI regarding judgments will not apply to security cases. That is to say, the Magistrate in ordering security under section 118 would be under no legal obligation, inter alia, to record a judgment setting forth his reasons (section 367) or to give the accused a copy of it without delay (section 371) So far as I can see, apart from the operation of section 117, the Magistrate might simply record an order requiring the execution of a bond, without recording any reasons or discussing the evidence I do not think this could have been intended especially as care has been taken to provide for an appeal against an order for security (vide section 406) and for the interference of Chief Presidency or District Magistrates (section 125)." The present sub section gives legislative recognition to the above remarks of Ayling J

Change.—This section has been amended by section 101 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923

The wording of the old section admitted of the interpretation that High Courts had unlimited powers of altering or reviewing their judgment (though such interpretation was never made in any of the decided cases) The present section as now amended lays down that the High

Court has no power to alter or review its judgment except as provided by the Letters Patent The references to sections 395 and 484 have been omitted because there are cases other than those referred to in these two sections in which a review of judgment is possible e g section 434 See the Report of the Joint Committee of 1922

1053 Scope of section —Although this section refers in express terms to judgments under Chapter XXVI of the Code still it is clear that the principle laid down herein applies also to final orders which are in the nature of judgments—In re Harilal 22 Bom 949 An order which is passed on full inquiry and after hearing both sides is in the nature of a judgment and such an order cannot be altered after it is once passed and signed Thus an order of a District Magistrate passed after full enquiry refusing to deliver to the Political Superintendent of a Foreign State a property seized in execution of a search warrant cannot be altered by the Magistrate himself The only course open to the Magistrate is to make a reference to the High Court and have his own order cancelled —In re Harilal 22 Bom 949 An order under Chapter XII is in the nature of a judgment and a Magistrate having passed an order under section 146 cannot cancel the order and pass an order under Section 147 instead—Ram Dulare v Ajodhya 16 O C 192 14 Cr L J 605 Lachmi v Bhusi 19 Cr L J 225 (Pat) An order in sanction proceedings (now abolished) comes under this section and a Sessions Judge refusing to revoke a sanction has no jurisdiction to review his order and revoke it—Q E v Ganesh 3 Bom 50 A final order in maintenance proceedings (Sec 488) is in effect a judgment and the Magistrate cannot review a final order passed in such a proceeding—Varda v Manmaya 21 C W N 344

But where a Sessions Judge on appeal in annulling a conviction omits to order a retrial he is not precluded by this section from passing such an order subsequently Such an order does not amount to an alteration of judgment—In re Ram Reddi 3 Mad 48 A Magistrate who makes an order under section 145 without any direction as to costs has power to order the same subsequently under section 148 (3) and such latter order is not an alteration or review of his judgment in the original case within the meaning of this section—Nafar Chandra v Siddhartha 47 Cal 974 So also where a Magistrate disposing of a criminal appeal accidentally omits to pass an order under sec 520 it will be open to him or to his successor to pass the order afterwards Such an order does not amount to an alteration of the judgment—In re Subba Naidu 43 M L J 87 A I R 1922 Mad 329

Further inquiry —An order for further inquiry does not amount to a review of the order of dismissal or discharge The terms of this section must be read as controlled by section 437 (now 436) That section does not limit the power of a District Magistrate to make further inquiry into a case in which an order of dismissal or discharge may have been passed by a subordinate Magistrate and there is no bar to a District Magistrate making further inquiry into a case in which such order may have been passed by Jamely—Bidhu Chandalini v Moti 28 Cal 107 But where a District Magistrate has already dealt with a case in revision and decided that there was no cause for interfering with the order of discharge he cannot subsequently order further inquiry because such an order would be an order reviewing the earlier one and is prohibited by this section—Nga Than v Emp 5 Bur L T 37 13 Cr L J 301

1055 No power of High Court to alter its judgment —See notes under Change above The law is now the same as it was practically before It should be noted that inspite of the words other than a High Court occurring in the old section the High Court held that it had practically no power to alter or review its own judgment under the old law There being no provision in the Letters Patent or the Government of India Act authorising the High Court to exercise the power of review the words other than a High Court could not be read as conferring on the High Court that power by implication—In re Kunhammad 46 Mad 382 (389) It has even been remarked in In re Gibbons 14 Cal 42 (47) that so far as the High Court was concerned there was no substantive enactment in this section it did not confer any power on the High Court nor did it take away any of the powers which existed in that Court before the passing of this section

The Legislature has not conferred in express words upon the High Court the power of reviewing its judgment in all criminal cases as it has done in all civil cases The provisions of the old section so far as they affect a High Court merely apply to questions of law, which arise in its original criminal jurisdiction and which are reserved and subsequently disposed of under the provisions of section 434 and the corresponding sections of the Letters Patent—Q E v Durgacharan 7 All 672 The words other than a High Court' do not give the Division Bench of the High Court power to review its judgment passed by it in a criminal appeal The words are to be accounted for by the power of review given to the High Court under section 434 on points specially reserved by the Judge presiding at the High Court Sessions—Q E v Mohan Ratanlal 791 In re Kunhammad 46 Mad 382 (404) In other words the High Court cannot entertain an application to review a judgment passed by it on appeal in a criminal case—Q v Godai 5 W R 61 Q E v Mohan Ratanlal 791 Hale v K E 1909 P R 1 Emp v Kale 45 All 143 (145) In re Iruga 50 M L J 51 27 Cr L J 184 The Code of Criminal Procedure was passed after the Code of Civil Procedure The latter contains a section expressly authorising review of judgment but the former contains no corresponding section From this it may be reasonably inferred that the Legislature did not intend to confer in criminal cases the power similar to that which they had given in civil cases—Q v Godai 5 W R 61 (63) As soon as the appellate judgment is pronounced and signed by the Judges the High Court is functus officio and neither the Court itself nor any Bench of it has any power to revise the decision or interfere with it in any way—In re Gibbons 14 Cal 42 Q E v Durgacharan 7 All 672 In re Kunhammad 46 Mad 382 (401) Paras Ram v Emp 1 O W N 891 26 Cr L J 543 Even if a single Judge of the High Court has passed an order dismissing an appeal a Division Bench of the High Court cannot review that order by re hearing the appeal—Kunhammad 46 Mad 382 (404) If the Division Bench of the High Court passes an erroneous order in appeal the only remedy is to make a petition (under Ch XXIX) to the Local Government the authority with whom rests the discretion either of executing the law or of commuting or setting aside the sentence

—Q E v Mohun Ratanlal 701 Emp v Kale 45 All 143 (145) So also a Division Bench cannot review an order which has been passed by them in revision—Q E v Fox 10 Bom 176 (F B) Gobind Sahai v Emp 38 All 134 Q E v Durgacharan 7 All 672 Al Al Lok v K E, 1905 U B R (Cr P C) 35 Nand Kishore v Emp 20 Cr L J 447 (Pat) Q E v Chimaba Ratanlal 458 A single Judge of the High Court has no power to alter or revise an order passed by him in revision—In re Soma Naidu 47 Mad 428 (431) The High Court will not review its order passed in appeal or revision even on the ground of discovery of fresh evidence because such evidence ought to have been produced at the trial—Q E v Chimaba Ratanlal 458 Emp v Kale 45 All 143 (145) So also if a revision case is dismissed by the High Court for default of payment of printing charges it is not competent for the High Court to rehear the case or entertain a fresh application for revision—Appayya v Venkatappayya 44 M L J 7 23 Cr L J 746 Even if a revision petition is dismissed for default of appearance of the practitioner who filed it the High Court is not competent to restore the petition to its file—In re Ranga Rao 23 M L J 371 But in another recent case of the Madras High Court as well as in the cases of the other High Courts it has been held that when a criminal appeal or revision petition is dismissed by the High Court for default of appearance there is no decision on the merits and therefore there is no proper disposal of the case according to law There being no provision in the Code for dismissing an appeal or revision petition for default of appearance the order of dismissal is no judgment at all and the High Court is not debarred from rehearing the appeal or revision petition—Kunhammad Haji 46 Mad 382 (402 403) (dissenting from In re Ranga Rao 23 M L J 371 and Emp v Md Yasin 4 Bom 101) Rajjab Ali v Emp 46 Cal 60 (63) 20 Cr L J 265 Kishen Singh v Girdhari 23 Cr L J 750 (Lah) Similarly if an order is passed in the absence of the accused without giving him an opportunity of being heard in accordance with the provisions of sub-section (2) of sec 439 as for instance where by mistake a case is posted on a day anterior to that fixed in the notice to the accused the order is null and void and the High Court is to proceed with the matter afresh after proper notice to the accused—In re Soma Naidu 47 Mad 428 (434) 46 M L J 456, 34 M L T 218 6 Cr L J 370 Rajjab Ali v Emp 46 Cal 60 (63) If an appeal is dismissed by a High Court Judge under sec 421 without the appellant or his pleader being given reasonable opportunity of being heard in support of the same the order is passed without jurisdiction and the Court has power to make an order that the appeal should be reheard after giving the appellant or his pleader a reasonable opportunity of being heard—Md Sadiq v Crown 7 Lah L J 108 26 Cr L J 1169 A I R 1925 Lah 355

Under the present section as now amended the power of the High Court is as limited as it was before the amendment In view of the cases reported in the Indian Law Reports 7 All 672 10 Bom 176 (F B) and 14 Cal 4 (I L) it is proposed to make it clear that section confers no power on the High Court to alter or review its own j after it has been signed —Statement of Objects and Reasons (1921) Even section 561A does not confer on the High Court the power to review its own judgment—Nazar Mohd v Hara Singh 26 P L R 616 27 Cr. L. J. 23, Sadiq v Emp 7 Lah L J 108, 26 Cr L. J 1169

As soon as the judgment is signed, it becomes final and the Court is functus officio The mere fact that there has been no formal order issued by the High Court or communicated to the Lower Court in pursuance of the judgment does not enable the High Court to review its judgment A judgment must be taken to mean and refer to the judicial act of the Court in finally disposing of the case and must therefore indicate only the order of the Court when it is read out and signed by the Judge, and cannot be meant to refer to the formal order on the judgment subsequently drawn up and issued merely as a clerical act by the ministerial officers of the Court—In re Arumuga, 50 M L J. 51, 27 Cr L J. 184, A I R 1926 Mad 420

The High Court like the Lower Courts, can review its judgment before it is signed—Amodini v Darsan, 38 Cal 828 13 Cr L J 120, Bibhuti v Dasi Moni 7 C W N vii The Allahabad High Court can review its judgment after it is signed but before it is sealed because the judgment of that High Court is not complete until it is sealed and till then it may be altered by the Judge concerned—Q I. v Lalit 21 All 177 Gobind Sahai v Emp 38 All 134 Emp v Kaller 27 All 9?

Presidency Magistrate's judgment

370. Instead of recording a judgment in manner hereinbefore provided, a Presidency Magistrate shall record the following particulars :—

(a) the serial number of the case ;
(b) the date of the commission of the offence ;
(c) the name of the complainant (if any) :
(d) the name of the accused person, and (except in the case of an European British subject) his parentage and residence ;
(e) the offence complained of or proved ;
(f) the plea of the accused and his examination (if any) ;
(g) the final order ,
(h) the date of such order ; and
(i) in all cases in which the Magistrate inflicts imprisonment, or fine exceeding two hundred rupees, or both, a brief statement of the reasons for the conviction

1056. Scope of section —This section does not apply to proceedings under sections 2 (1) and 3 of the Workman's Breach of Contract

Act (XIII of 1859) Those proceedings are not Criminal proceedings and no offence can be said to have been committed under those sections A Presidency Magistrate is not therefore bound to frame a record in such proceedings in accordance with the provisions of this Section—Abheram v Abdul 27 Cal 131

1057 Clause (1)—Reasons for conviction —The meaning of this clause is that where the offence is sufficiently grave to involve a fine of Rs 200 or imprisonment as the substantive sentence, the Magistrate is bound to record his reasons (In re Dervish Hussain, 46 Mad 253) so as to enable the party to bring the matter up to the High Court but in petty cases which can be met by a fine of few rupees the decision of the Magistrate may be recorded shortly—Moteeram v Belaseeram 14 Cal 174 This section requires that in cases in which the accused is sentenced to imprisonment a Presidency Magistrate shall record a brief statement of the reasons for the conviction It is not sufficient for him to record that the offence is proved for that may be necessarily implied from the fact that he has convicted the accused The law requires something further as the reasons for the conviction—Natabar v Prokash, 27 Cal 461 So also, a mere statement to the effect ' I believe the evidence for the prosecution and the evidence of the complainant and I convict the accused ' is not a statement of reasons—Emp v Shankar, 17 Bom. L R 890, 16 Cr L J 771 The Magistrate should state his reasons in such a manner as to enable the High Court to judge of the sufficiency of the materials before the Magistrate to support the conviction—Yacoob v Adamson 13 Cal 272, Emaman v Emp 31 Cal 983 Toolsey v Emp, 8 C W N 587 Where there was not on the record any summary of the evidence nor such a statement of facts and reasons for conviction as would enable the High Court to say whether the materials were sufficient to support the conviction, it was held that the conviction should be set aside—Toolsey v Emp 8 C W N 587, Yacoob v Adamson 13 Cal 272; Emaman v Emp 31 Cal 983 Even in a non appealable case, the Presidency Magistrate should state his reasons so as to enable the High Court in revision to judge the sufficiency of materials before the Magistrate to support the conviction—Yacoob v Adamson, 13 Cal 272 A Presidency Magistrate (as also an Honorary Presidency Magistrate), who tries and convicts an accused in a summary trial is bound to give reasons for the conviction—In re Varadarajulu 31 M L T 400, In re Thurman, 20 I W 330, 25 Cr L J 1083 But the omission to record the reasons in a summary trial is a mere irregularity, and the High Court will not interfere in revision if the accused has not been prejudiced—In re Thurman (supra)

The omission to record the various particulars required to be under section 370 is a mere irregularity and not an illegality, wl the important items of these particulars have been recorded, omissions are of no real importance—Bishnupada v Emp, 3c 981, 27 Cr L J 1131

The imprisonment referred to in this clause is sub ment A sentence of imprisonment in default of pay

sentence of imprisonment within the meaning of this clause—Holloram v Belaseeram 14 Cal 174

If the Magistrate omits to record the reasons, the defect is not cured by section 441 which permits a Presidency Magistrate to submit with the record (when called for under section 435) a statement setting forth the grounds of his decision. Section 441 does not abrogate the terms of section 370 but it merely allows the Presidency Magistrate to supplement the reasons which have been already recorded under section 370—In re Dervish Hussain 46 Mad 253. But if the statement submitted under section 441 discloses sufficient grounds for the decision the defect in not recording reasons under sec 370 may be excused under section 537, if no substantial failure of justice has occurred—Ibid

Copy of judgment, etc., to be given to accused on application

371 (1) On the application of the accused a copy of the judgment, or when he so desires, a translation in his own language, if practicable, or in the language of the Court, shall be given to him without delay. Such copy shall in any case other than a summons case, be given free of cost.

(2) In trials by jury in a Court of Session, a copy of the heads of the charge to the jury shall, on the application of the accused, be given to him without delay and free of cost

Case of person sentenced to death

(3) When the accused is sentenced to death by a Sessions Judge, such Judge shall further inform him of the period within which, if he wishes to appeal, his appeal should be preferred.

The application for copy of judgment need not be stamped. See Q E v Ragba, Ratanlal 364

Judgment when to be translated

372. The original judgment shall be filed with the record of proceedings, and where the original is recorded in a different language from that of the Court and the accused so requires, a translation thereof into the language of the Court shall be added to such record.

Court of Session to send copy of finding and sentence to District Magistrate 373 In cases tried by the Court of Session the Court shall forward a copy of its finding and sentence (if any) to the District Magistrate within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the trial was held.

CHAPTER XXVII.

OF THE SUBMISSION OF SENTENCES FOR CONFIRMATION.

374 When the Court of Session passes sentence of death, the proceedings shall be submitted to the High Court and the sentence shall not be executed unless it is confirmed by the High Court.

Sentence of death to be submitted by Court of Session

When the record of a case in which a sentence of death has been passed is submitted to the High Court under section 374, all the Police Diaries connected with the case should be simultaneously forwarded—Cal G R & C O p 39

375 (1) If when such proceedings are submitted the High Court thinks that a further inquiry should be made into, or additional evidence taken upon, any point bearing upon the guilt or innocence of the convicted person, it may make such inquiry or take such evidence itself, or direct it to be made or taken by the Court of Session.

Power to direct further inquiry to be made or additional evidence to be taken.

(2) Such inquiry shall not be made nor shall such evidence be taken in the presence of jurors or assessors, and, unless the High Court otherwise directs, the presence of the convicted person may be dispensed with when the same is made or taken.

(3) When the inquiry and the evidence (if any) are not made and taken by the High Court, the result of such inquiry and the evidence shall be certified to such Court.

1058 Under this section the High Court can take additional evidence itself In Q E v Basanta 25 Bom 168, the High Court admitted in evidence a confession rejected by the Sessions Judge In Bhagwan v Crown, 1911 P W R 16, 12 Cr L J 412, the High Court (then Chief Court) admitted further evidence and inspected the building where the offence was alleged to have been committed

The High Court when recording further evidence under this section, can dispense with the presence of the accused, especially where the additional evidence is recorded by itself—K E v Tirumal 24 Mad 523

The High Court acting under this section is not entitled, with a view to make its opinion still more conclusive with reference to the discrepancies in the testimony of the witnesses on which the Trial Judge has properly dwelt, to test that testimony still further by reading the statements of those witnesses made to the police and entered in ...

diary, in other words, to treat as evidence what could be used at all events only for the purpose of discrediting these witnesses—Dal Singh v K E 44 Cal 876 (P C)

376 In any case submitted under Section 374 whether tried with the aid of assessors or by jury, the High Court—

Power of High Court to confirm sentence or annul conviction.

(a) may confirm the sentence, or pass any other sentence warranted by law, or

(b) may annul the conviction, and convict the accused of any offence of which the Sessions Court might have convicted him, or order a new trial on the same or an amended charge, or

(c) may acquit the accused person :

Provided that no order of confirmation shall be made under this section until the period allowed for preferring an appeal has expired, or, if an appeal is presented within such period, until such appeal is disposed of 1059. Power of High Court —Though a High Court has power to substitute its own finding for the unanimous verdict of the jury in a trial for murder, when the sentence comes on for confirmation before the High Court, still as a matter of practice the High Court will not generally allow the verdict to be attacked arbitrarily It is necessary that the convict must show prima facie that the verdict is unsupported by evidence. The High Court will not permit the same latitude in the criticism of the evidence before the jury that it allows in an ordinary appeal from a trial with assessors—Gul v Emp, 15 S L R 103 (F B), 23 Cr L J 33 But the High Court will undoubtedly interfere with the verdict if it is perverse or if evidence has been improperly admitted or excluded, or if there is a misdirection by the Judge—Ibid Where there has been a misdirection in the summing up to the jury, the conviction and sentence should be set aside and a retrial ordered—Emp v Rajab Ali, 31 C W N 881, 28 Cr L J 742

High Court may go into facts and law —When a case is submitted under section 374, the whole case is reopened before the High Court and the High Court is bound to go into the facts as well as the law although the conviction is by the verdict of the jury—Q v Jaffir Ali 19 W R 57, Q E v Chatradhari 2 C W N 49, Emp v Daji, 17 Bom L R 1072, 16 Cr L J 818, and the High Court s power under this section is not limited as in appeal—Chatradhari, 2 C W N 49 In a case referred to the High Court under section 374 for confirmation of a death sentence, it is the practice of the High Court to be satisfied on the facts of the case as well as the law that the conviction is right before it proceeds to confirm the sentence—Q E v Abdul Razak, Ratanlal 710 Though the jury have unanimously convicted an accused for murder, it is the duty of the High Court on a reference under sec 374 to be satisfied that the finding of fact is supported by the evidence on the record—Arshed Ali v Emp, 30 C W N 166

Where the High Court hears the appeal of a co accused not sentenced to death along with a reference under section 374 in respect of a person sentenced to death it was held under the old law that it was not open to the High Court to go into the facts in the appeal—Q E v Chatradhari 2 C W N 49 and the hearing of the appeal was limited as laid down in sections 418 and 423 (2) to points of law only—Ibid But now see the new sub-section (2) of section 418

Question of jurisdiction —In determining whether the sentence should be confirmed the High Court may also consider whether the conviction was by a Court of competent jurisdiction—Emp v Sarmukh 2 All 218

1060 Commutation of sentence —Where the condition of the convict was such that if he were ordered to be hanged decapitation would ensue (owing to an aperture in the neck communicating with the larynx) the High Court commuted the sentence of death into one of transportation for life—Boodhoo 2 C L R 215 In Autor Singh v Emp 17 C W N 1213 there being a difference of opinion among the Judges who heard the reference, the case had to be referred to a third Judge (sec 378) and there was a delay of six months in the High Court before the final decision was arrived at The third Judge upheld the conviction for murder but commuted the sentence of death into one of transportation on the ground that the capital sentence had been hung over the heads of the accused for six months owing to the delay in the High Court

Conviction for any other offence —Where the accused was tried before the Sessions Judge for murder and concealment of murder and was convicted of murder but no finding was given on the minor charge the High Court in acquitting the accused of the charge of murder could convict him of the minor charge where there was evidence to support it inspite of the omission of the Sessions Judge to give any finding in respect of this minor charge—Md Shah v Crown 1913 P R 8 The Bombay High Court holds that in a reference under this section the High Court cannot alter a conviction for murder into one for culpable homicide not amounting to murder unless there is a petition of appeal along with the reference If no appeal is preferred the only course is to order a retrial for the other offence—Reg v Balapa 1 Bom 639 But there is nothing in this section to warrant such a view

1061 Retrial —Where the evidence taken before the Court of Session was incomplete and further evidence was necessary before judgment could be properly pronounced upon the accused the High Court ordered a retrial—K E v Daulat 6 C W N 921 Where the accused was undefended in the Sessions Court the High Court ordered a retrial on the same charge after proper arrangement being made for his defence —K E v Mohar Ali 19 C W N 556 16 Cr L J 481 See also Reg v Balapa 1 Bom 639 above

377 In every case so submitted, the confirmation of the sentence or any new sentence or order passed by the High Court shall when such Court consists of two or more Judges, be made passed and signed by at least two of them

Confirmation or new sentence to be signed by two Judges

378 When any such case is heard before a Bench of Judges and such Judges are equally divided in opinion the case with their opinions thereon shall be laid before another Judge, and such Judge, after such hearing as he thinks fit, shall deliver his opinion and the judgment or order shall follow such opinion

Procedure in case of difference of opinion

When a case is referred to a third Judge he must give his own independent opinion and should not necessarily decide the case according to the opinion of the Judge who was in favour of the acquittal—Emp v Bundi 1887 A W N 15

379 In cases submitted by the Court of Session to the High Court for the confirmation of a sentence of death the proper officer of the High Court shall without delay, after the order of confirmation or other order has been made by the High Court, send a copy of the order under the seal of the High Court, and attested with his official signature, to the Court of Session

Procedure in cases submitted to High Court for confirmation

380 Where proceedings are submitted to a Magistrate of the first class or a Sub divisional Magistrate as provided by Section 562, such Magistrate may thereupon pass such sentence or make such order as he might have passed or made if the case had originally been heard by him, and, if he thinks further inquiry or additional evidence on any point to be necessary, he may make such inquiry or take such evidence himself or direct such inquiry or evidence to be made or taken

Procedure in cases submitted by Magistrate not empowered to act under S 562

1062 The Magistrate to whom a case is submitted under section 562 must pass such sentence and make such order as he thinks fit If however on a perusal of the evidence he comes to the conclusion that the conviction should not have taken place he can acquit the accused under the powers vested in him under this section—Mi Thi v Mi Kin 19 5 U B R 1st Qr 55

The Magistrate to whom the case is referred cannot send the as back to the inferior Magistrate Where a second cla s Magistrate finding the accused guilty of an offence under section 325 I P C submitted the case to the District Magistrate for an order under section 562 bu the District Magistrate sent the case back to the 2nd class Magistrate pointing out that section 562 [before its present amendment] was inapplicable (as the offence was beyond its scope) it was held that the District Magistrate s order sending back the case was illegal becuase under this section he could pass such sentence or order as he might have pass d if the case had originally come to him and he could not have sent it to the s cond class Magistrate for the purpose of sentence if he had originally heard it—K E v Abdul 4 L B R 150

Appeal —See sections 407 and 408 as now amended

CHAPTER XXVIII

Of Execution

381 When a sentence of death passed by a Court of Ses ion is submitted to the High Court for confirmation, such Court of Session shall on receiving the order of confirmation or other order of the High Court thereon, cause such order to be carried into effect by issuing a warrant or taking such other steps as may be necessary

Execution of order passed under S 376

The date named by the Sessions Court in its warrant for the execution of a sentence of death shall not be less than fourteen or more than twenty one days from the date of the issue of such warrant —Cal G R & C O page 39

382 If a woman sentenced to death is found to be pregnant, the High Court shall order the execution of the sentence to be postponed, and may, if it thinks fit, commute the sentence to transportation for life

Postponement of capital sentence on pregnant woman

1063 The fact that the accused is a pregnant woman is not a sufficient ground for commutation of sentence—Q v Panhee 15 W R 66 in such a case execution will be deferred until delivery as provided by this section

The High Court is the only tribunal in which the law has vested the power of postponing the execution of a sentence of death passed on a woman found to be pregnant—Anonymous, 2 Weir 441 (442)

The pregnancy of the woman should be certified by a civil surgeon—Bombay Gazette, 1879, page 471

Execution of sentences of transportation or imprisonment in other cases

383. Where the accused is sentenced to transportation or imprisonment in cases other than those provided for by Section 381, the Court passing the sentence shall forthwith forward a warrant to the jail in which he is or is to be confined, and, unless the accused is already confined in such jail, shall forward him to such jail, with the warrant.

1064 Sentence when to commence —A sentence of imprisonment ought to commence from the time the sentence is passed A sentence of imprisonment to take effect at a future date is bad in law A Magistrate has no power to postpone the execution of the sentence at the request of the accused—In re Kishen Soonder, 12 W R 47 Where a Magistrate passes a sentence of imprisonment on an accused and admits him to bail in order that he may have the means of appealing, held that the admission to bail does not make the sentence one to commence at a future date and does not therefore make it illegal—In re Okhoy Kumar, 7 C L R 393, Kishen Soonder, 12 W R 47 When a Judge convicts the accused he must pass sentence on him at once, he has no power to adjourn the passing of sentence for an indefinite period—Emp Keshavlal 14 Bom L R 144, 13 Cr L J 288

The commencement of the sentence cannot also be ante-dated A sentence of imprisonment for the time already passed in the lock up is illegal, but a sentence of imprisonment until the rising of the Court is good and legal—Bhagel v Crown, 1907 P W R 9

When a prisoner has been committed to jail under two separate warrants the sentence in the one to take effect from the expiry of the sentence in the other, the date of such second sentence shall, in the event of the first sentence being remitted on appeal, be presumed to take effect from the date on which he was committed to jail under the first or original sentence—Cal G R & C O, page 40

Where to be imprisoned —When a case is submitted to the High Court under section 307, and the High Court passes a sentence, it does so as a Court of Reference and not in the exercise of its ordinary original jurisdiction, and therefore it has power, on conviction and sentence, to send the accused to jail outside the Presidency Town The High Court is required to send the accused to that jail in which he would have been confined by the Court submitting the case—In re Horace Lyall, 29 Cal 286

It is illegal for a Magistrate to direct the accused to be imprisoned in a Police lock up, A jail is a prison within the meaning of the Prisons

Act and the Prisoners Act but it does not includ a poli e lo k up—K E v Po Thin 7 L B R 6

It is illegal to confine a person in a jail other than that mentioned in the warrant—Shamsonnessa v Anne Love 11 Cal 527 (ci ed under ec tion 384)

Calculation of period of imprisonment —In calculating sentences of imprisonment the day on which the sentence is passed and the day of release ought to be included and considered as days of imprisonment for example a man sentenced on the 1st January to one month s imprison ment should be released on the 31st January and not on the 1st February—Mad G O No 2411 dated 22 11 81

384 Every warrant for the execution of a sentence of imprisonment shall be directed to the officer in charge of the jail, or other place in which the prisoner is, or is to be, confined

Direction of warrant for execution

1065 The warrant of imprisonment must be signed by the Magistrate and the signature should be affixed by pen and not by means of a stamp—Subramaiya Ayyar v Q 6 Mad 396

The period of imprisonment should be definite thus in an order under sec 123 the Magistrate should state the period for which the accused is to be imprisoned in default of finding security it is illegal to direct the accused to be imprisoned until he gives security—Mailamdi v Tanpulla 8 Cal 644

It is illegal to confine a person in a jail other than that mentioned in the warrant Where a sheriff s officer delivered over to the officer in charge of the Alipore Jail a judgment debtor who had been duly com mitted to Presidency Jail the confinement in the Alipore Jail was held to be illegal—Shamshonnessa v Anne Love 11 Cal 52

385 When the prisoner is to be confined in a jail, the warrant shall be lodged with the jailor

Warrant with whom to be lodged

386 (1) Whenever an offender has been sentenced to pay a fine the Court passing the sentence may take action for the recovery of the fine in either or both of the following ways, that is to say, it may—

Warrant for levy of fine

(a) issue a warrant for the levy of the amount by attachment and sale of any moveable property belonging to the offender,

(b) issue a warrant to the Collector of the District authorising him to realise the amount by execution according to civil process the moveable or immoveable property, or both, of the defaulter:

Provided that, if the sentence directs that in default of payment of the fine the offender shall be imprisoned, and if such offender has undergone the whole of such imprisonment in default, no Court shall issue such warrant unless for special reasons to be recorded in writing it considers it necessary to do so.

(2) The 'Local Government may make rules regulating the manner in which warrants under sub-section (1), clause (a), are to be executed, and for the summary determination of any claims made by any person other than the offender in respect of any property attached in execution of such warrant.

(3) Where the Court issues a warrant to the Collector under sub-section (1), clause (b), such warrant shall be deemed to be a decree, and the Collector to be the decree-holder, within the meaning of the Code of Civil Procedure 1908, and the nearest Civil Court by which any decree for a like amount could be executed shall, for the purposes of the said Code, be deemed to be the Court which passed the decree, and all the provisions of that Code as to execution of decrees shall apply accordingly:

Provided that no such warrant shall be executed by the arrest or detention in prison of the offender.

Change —The whole section has been redrafted by sec 102 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923 The old section stood as follows —

"386 Whenever an offender is sentenced to pay a fine, the Court passing the sentence may, in its discretion, issue a warrant for the levy of the amount by distress and sale of any moveable property belonging to the offender, although the sentence directs that, in default of payment of the fine, the offender shall be imprisoned"

The main changes introduced are —Firstly, under the old law, fine could be recovered only by distress and sale of moveable property; under the present law it can be recovered by sale of immoveable property also, as provided in clause (b). Secondly, under the old law, fine could be recovered by distress and sale even though the offender had undergone the full term of imprisonment in default of payment of fine, the present section ordinarily prohibits the recovery of fine in such cases, and allows it only on special reasons, see the proviso to Sub sec. (1). Thirdly, sub-sections (2) and (3) have been newly added The reasons have been stated below. In clause (a) the word 'attachment' has been substituted for

'distress' by the Select Committee of 1916 'as we think it is more appropriate'

1066. Scope of section —Sections 63—70 I P C and the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code in respect of levy of fines shall apply to all fines imposed under any Act Regulation Rule or Bye law unless the Act, Regulation Rule or Bye law contains an express provision to the contrary—Section 25 General Clauses Act (X of 1897)

Thus the provisions of sections 386—389 of this Code shall apply to the levy of penalties and fines imposed under Act V of 1861 (General Police Act) on conviction before a Magistrate—Section 37 General Police Act (V of 1861) Compensation under section 250 of this Code shall be recoverable as a fine and this section prescribes the mode in which the fine may ordinarily be recovered—Piryag v Arja Mean 2 Cal 139 But the provisions of this section do not apply to fines imposed under Act XXI of 1856 (Abkari Act) such fines cannot be levied by distress and sale of the offender s property—Govt v Junglee Beldar 17 W R 7

1067. Sentence of fine —It should be specific —A sentence of fine imposed upon more than one prisoner individually and collectively is not a proper sentence It should be specifically stated in the sentence what amount each individual prisoner is to pay—Anonymous 5 M H C R App 5

It should be levied immediately —There should be no delay in the levy of a fine directly upon passing a sentence A Magistrate cannot defer the levying of the fine imposed on the prisoner till the period of appeal shall have expired or until the orders of the Appellate Court are received on appeal preferred by the accused Nor can the Appellate Court order the original Court to abstain from levying the fine till the disposal of appeal —7 W R (Cr Let) 13 As to the period of limitation within which fine may be recovered see section 70 I P C

Who can levy fine —The term Court is not restricted to the particular individual who held office The successor in office of a Judge or Magistrate may levy a fine imposed by his predecessor—Chunder Coomar v Modhusoodun 9 W R 50

1068 Clause (a)—Distress and sale —It is lawful for the Magistrate to issue his warrant for the levy of fine by distress and sale of the goods of the offender and at the same time to order his imprisonment for non payment of fine It is not necessary to postpone imprisonment till the distress and sale of goods have failed to realise the fine and the imprisonment should not be allowed to stop the process for the levy of fine so as to give the offender time to remove his goods beyond the reach of the law—Govt v Junglee Beldar 17 W R 7

This clause allows the distress and sale of moveable property of the offender But growing crops are not moveable property for the purposes of this clause—Anonymous 2 Weir 444 Rights and interests or shares in the joint moveable property of a joint Hindu family of which the accused is a member cannot be sold under this clause—Anonymous, 2 Weir (443) Q E v Sita Nath 20 Cal 478 Hira Lal v Crown, 1915 P L

28 16 Cr L J 166 If the accused is a member of an Alayasantana family the distress and sale of his moveable property in execution of a warrant under this clause is illegal—Achuma v Rudra 2 Weir 443 But according to the Bombay High Court the words belonging to the offender do not mean belonging exclusively to the offender and therefo e the the share of the accused in the moveable property of the jo nt Hindu family of which th accused is a member can be attached—Shiltngappa v Gurlingava 49 Bom 906 27 Bom L R 1363 Moveable property (money) b longing to the accused s brother and deposited in Court by the accused s brother as security for the appearance of the accused in a criminal trial cannot be seized as the money does not belong to the accused Even the fact that the accused and his brother are members of a joint Hindu family will not enable the Court to seize the money—19 A L J 887 Moveable property of the offender in a Native State can not be seized for the realisation of a fine adjudged by a British Court only the property remaining in British India can be seized and sold—Anonymous 2 Weir 444

1069 Clause (b) —The old law provided for the distress and sale of moveable property only immo eable property could not be atta hed and sold for the recovery of fine—Madari v Mehr Din 22 Cr L J 399 (Lah) 61 I C 527 Reg v Lallu 5 B H C R 63 Q E v Sita ath 20 Cal 478 Clause (b) now allows attachment and sale of immoveable properties also

1070 Proviso —Levy of fine after imprisonment —It was held under the old section that an offender who had undergone the full term of imprisonment to which he was sentenced in default of payment of fine was still liable to have the amount levied by distress and sale of any moveable property belonging to him—Q v Modoosoodun 3 W R 61 because the imprisonment which the Court imposed in default of payment was intended as a punishment for non payment and not as a satisfact on and discharge of the amount due—Reg v Gulab Chand Ratanlal 91 (9) But the Court had a discretion in the matter wl ether fine should be re covered after the accused had undergone imprisonment for nonpayment If it appeared that the fine was not paid for want of means or that its realisation would be ruinous to the offender or his family it was not desirable that further steps should be taken for the levy of fine but if there was reason to believe that the offender had means to pay but would not pay and would prefer to undergo imprisonment the law was strictly enforced and steps were taken for the realization of the fine within the period allowed bylaw—See Punjab Circ Chapter LI p 264

The proviso in the present section now lays down that if the offender has undergone the whole term of the imprisonment awarded in default of fine the Court should not issue a warrant for levy of the fine The new proviso directs that after the imprisonment awarded in default of payment of fine has been served no further steps should be taken for the recovery of the fine unless the Court for special reasons to be recorded considers it necessary The infliction of a double punishment is ordinarily uncalled for, and by the issue of warrants for the recovery of fines when there is no real reason why they should be recovered the time of the police is frequently wasted Convicted persons also are thus harassed for long periods after they have expiated their offences by undergoing imprisonment'—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1921)

Unless for special reasons to do so —These words at the end of the proviso are intended for the case of a contumacious person who may evade the fine and suffer imprisonment and yet having the means to pay the fine not pay the fine In such a case the serving of the period of imprisonment provided in default of payment of fine should not absolve the person from paying the fine See Legislative Assembly Debates 8th February 1923 page 2061

1071 Sub-section (2) —Claims of third parties —By this sub-section power is given to the Local Government to make rules regarding the execution of warrants and the determination of claims—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914)

Under the old law when a claim was preferred by a third party to the ownership of the property distrained the Magistrate was not required by law to try any such claim because this section did not contain any provision for the trial of claims which might be preferred to the property distrained under this section —Q E v Gasper 22 Cal 935 Hira Lal v Crown 1915 P L R 28 16 Cr L J 166 What the Magistrate had to do in such a case was to postpone the sale of the property and to allow the claimant an opportunity of establishing his title in a Court having jurisdiction to determine civil rights—Anonymous 2 Weir 445 When a claim was preferred the Court was to direct postponement of the sale of the property for such time as might be necessary to enable the claimant to establish his right (by a civil suit) But if the property was of such a nature that an immediate sale would be for the benefit of the owner the property could be sold and the sale proceeds held over—Q E v Chhagan Ratanlal 976 Q E v Kandappa 20 Mad 88 Q E v Gasper, 22 Cal 935

Under the present law the Magistrate is empowered to determine summarily the claims of third parties This view was also taken in a Burma case—Mingaing v Emp 1 Bur S R 332

1072 Sub-section (3) — We would add a clause after sub-section (2) to enable a fine to be realised through the Collector as if the order was a decree of a Civil Court We can see no reason why a property owner who may be able to conceal his moveables should not be forced to pay a fine which has been inflicted upon him by a Criminal Court just as much and by the same process as a civil debt It seems to be recognised that the liability is so enforceable by section 70 Indian Penal Code and the decision in Emp v Sitanath Mitra I L R 20 Cal 478 and we think that this should be made clear by the section under consideration The proper person to effect such realisation is we think the Collector of the district who will be treated as the decree holder —Report of the Select Committee of 1916

The Joint Committee of 1922 approving of this amendment has marked We recognise that the procedure prescribed may in-cases involve considerable delay, and we attempted to find some more summary method of proceedings against immoveable property on the lines of those laws which enable moneys due to the Crown to be recovered as arrears of land revenue We have however, found ourselves unable to devise any procedure which will not be open to most of the objections put forward against the present clause"

1073. Revision —The order of a Magistrate for sale of properties under this section is not a judicial proceeding and is not the proper subject of criminal revision, the claimant whose property is wrongly sold under this section may proceed by way of civil suit (either against the purchaser or against the Secretary of State)—Secretary of State v Sukhdeo, 1898 A W N 173, Q E v Kandappa, 20 Mad 88, Hira Lal v Crown 1915 P L R 28, 16 Cr. L J. 166.

Effect of such warrant

387. A warrant issued under Section 386 sub-section (1) clause (a) by any Court may be executed within the local limits of the jurisdiction of such Court, and it shall authorize the attachment and sale of any such property without such limits, when endorsed by the District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such property is found

Change —The italicised words have been substituted for the words "such warrant" (occuring in the old section) by sec 103 of the Cr P C Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 This amendment is merely verbal, and consequential to the amendment of sec 386

The word attachment has been substituted for the word distress in this section as well as in section 386, as the term is more appropriate

Suspension of execution of sentence of imprisonment.

388. When an offender has been sentenced to fine only and to imprisonment in default of payment of the fine, and the Court issues a warrant under S. 386, it may suspend the execution of the sentence of imprisonment and may release the offender on his executing a bond with or without sureties, as the Court thinks fit, conditioned

Suspension of execution of sentence of imprisonment.

388. (1) When an offender has been sentenced to fine only and to imprisonment in default of payment of the fine and the fine is not paid forthwith, the Court may—

(a) order that the fine shall be payable either in full on or before a date not more than thirty days from the date of the order, or in two or three instalments, of

for his appearance before such Court on the day appointed for the return to such warrant, such day not being more than fifteen days from the time of executing the bond, and in the event of the fine not having been realized the Court may direct the sentence of imprisonment to be carried into execution at once

(2) In any case in which an order for the payment of money has been made, on non recovery of which imprisonment may be awarded, and the money is not paid forthwith, the Court may require the person ordered to make such pay-which the first shall be payable on or before a date not more than thirty days from the date of the order and the other or others at an interval or at intervals, as the case may be, of not more than thirty days, and

(b) suspend the execution of the sentence of imprisonment and release the offender on the execution by the offender of a bond with or without sureties as the Court thinks fit conditioned for his appearance before the Court on the date or dates on or before which payment of the fine or the instalments thereof, as the case may be is to be made; and if the amount of the fine or of any instalment, as the case may be is not realised on or before the latest date on which it is payable under the order, the Court may direct the sentence of imprisonment to be carried into execution at once

(2) The provisions of sub section (1) shall be applicable also in any case in which an order for the payment of money has been made, on non recovery of which imprisonment may be awarded, and the money is not paid forthwith, and if

ment to enter into a bond as prescribed in sub-sec. (1), and, in default of his so doing, may at once pass sentence of imprisonment as if the money had not been recovered.	the person against whom the order has been made, on being required to enter into a bond such as is referred to in that sub-section, fails to do so, the Court may at once pass sentence of imprisonment.

Change —This section has been redrafted by the Criminal Procedure Code Second Amendment Act XXXVII of 1923 This amendment has been made on the recommendation of the Indian Jails Committee See Gazette of India, 1923, Part V, p 242

Sub-section (1) —Sub section (1) is inapplicable where no alternative sentence of imprisonment (for non-payment of fine) has been passed Where a Magistrate sentences an offender to a fine, but omits to pass a sentence of imprisonment in default of payment of the fine, he has no power to bind over the accused in his own recognizance to appear (under clause b) —Venkatrapragada, 2 Weir 445

Who may issue warrant.

389 Every warrant for the execution of any sentence may be issued either by the Judge or Magistrate who passed the sentence, or by his successor in office.

See 9 W R 50 cited under sec 386

Execution of sentence of whipping only.

390. When the accused is sentenced to whipping only, the sentence shall, subject to the provisions of Section 391, be executed at such place and time as the Court may direct.

The italicised words have been added by Sec 21 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act XII of 1923

1074. When the accused is sentenced to whipping only, the sentence cannot be deferred it must be carried out as soon as practicable This section authorises the Court to fix the time and place for its execution, but not to postpone it—Q E. v Abdulla, Ratanlal 906, Meyyan v Emp, 26 Mad 465 An order that an accused person shall not be whipped until after the expiry of the sentence of imprisonment passed in another trial, is illegal The sentence should be carried out as soon as practicable—Q E v Nga Po, L B R (1900—1902) 53 The sentence cannot be postponed pending an intended appeal—Meyyan v Emp, 26 Mad 465 But these cases should now be read subject to clause (2) of sec 391 which allows postponement of whipping if the accused furnishes bail

. For general rules as to whipping see notes under sec 32.

391 (1) When the accused is sentenced to whipping in addition to imprisonment in a case which is subject to appeal, the whipping shall not be inflicted until fifteen days from the date of the sentence, or if an appeal is made within that time, until the sentence is confirmed by the Appellate Court, but the whipping shall be inflicted as soon as practicable after the expiry of the fifteen days, or, in case of an appeal, as soon as practicable after the receipt of the order of the Appellate Court confirming the sentence

Execution of sentence of whipping in addition to imprisonment

391. (1) When the accused

(a) is sentenced to whipping only and furnishes bail to the satisfaction of the Court for his appearance at such time and place as the Court may direct, or

(b) is sentenced to whipping in addition to imprisonment, the whipping shall not be inflicted until fifteen days from the date of the sentence, or if an appeal is made within that time, until the sentence is confirmed by the Appellate Court, but the whipping shall be inflicted as soon as practicable after the expiry of the fifteen days or in case of an appeal as soon as practicable after the receipt of the order of the Appellate Court confirming the sentence

(2) The whipping shall be inflicted in the presence of the officer in charge of the jail, unless the Judge or Magistrate orders it to be inflicted in his own presence

(3) No accused person shall be sentenced to whipping in addition to imprisonment, when the term of imprisonment to which he is sentenced is less than three months

1075 This section has been amended by sec 92 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act XII of 1923 The old section contemplated only those cases where the accused was sentenced to whipping as well as to imprisonment if the accused was sentenced to whipping only this section did not apply and the sentence of whipping could not be postponed—Anonymous 2 Weir 446 But the newly added clause (a) now provides for such cases

has been sentenced to whipping as well as to imprisonment the whipping may be postponed as provided by this section until 15 days from the date of sentence or until confirmation of the sentence on appeal but it is illegal to postpone the sentence of whipping till after the term of imprisonment has expired—Anonymous 6 M H C R App 38 Anonymous 7 M H C R App 29 Emp v Jaimant 4 Bom L R 436 Q E v Habla Ratanlal 803, Jiwan Ram, 1881 A W N 133 Emp v Jagannath 4 Bom L R 919, Q E v Sagram, Ratanlal 300 Where a Magistrate ordered that the prisoner be brought before him at the expiration of the sentence of imprisonment and that the sentence of whipping should then be carried out, the High Court cancelled the sentence of whipping as having become inoperative and incapable of being carried out by lapse of time—Hur Chandra v Jafer Ali 20 W R 72

'As soon as practicable,—The whipping must be carried into effect as soon as practicable after the expiry of the time specified in this section If through accident, or neglect or wilful breach of duty of the officer the sentence of whipping was not carried into execution the prisoner is not thereby freed from liability to undergo the sentence still remaining unexecuted—Q E v Mahadhu, Ratanlal 136

Double sentence of whipping —An accused cannot be sentenced to a double sentence of whipping when he is convicted of two offences thus where a person is convicted of offences under sections 454 and 380 I P C it is illegal to pass a sentence of 15 stripes for each offence—Q E v Dagdu Ratanlal 935

Sub-section (3) —When a sentence of imprisonment for less than three months is awarded, an additional sentence of whipping is illegal—Q E v Bhica 2 Bom L R 54

Mode of inflicting punishment

392 (1) In the case of a person of or over sixteen years of age, whipping shall be inflicted with a light rattan not less than half an inch in diameter in such mode, and on such part of the person, as the Local Government directs; and, in the case of a person under sixteen years of age, it shall be inflicted in such mode, and on such part of the person and with such instrument as the Local Government directs

Limit of number of stripes

(2) In no case shall such punishment exceed thirty stripes, and, in the case of a person under sixteen years of age, it shall not exceed fifteen stripes.

'Such part of the person —(1) In case of a person of or over sixteen years of age in C P Madras, Bengal and Assam, the punishment of whipping is inflicted on the bare buttocks the offender being tied to a triangle—See C P Gazette Notification No 20 of 4 1 1899 Fort St George Gazette, 1898 Part 1, p 1248, Wilkins 148, Assam Gazette,

1899 Part II p 384 In Burma the punishment is inflicted on the breech —Burma Gazette 1891 Part 1 p 201 In Bombay if the punishment is inflicted in private (i e within the precinct of the prison) it shall be inflicted on the bare buttocks and when inflicted in public (i e outside the Jail precincts) across the bare shoulders—Bombay Government Gazette 1893 Part 1 p 110 Bom G R No 608 of 1897

(2) In case of a person under sixteen years of age in Bombay U P C P and the Punjab the whipping is inflicted on the bare buttocks with a light rattan not exceeding half an inch in diameter but the offender is not tied to a triangle but simply held on it or is held in some other convenient way See Bom G R No 6727 dated 16 9 1898 G O No 1 900 of 12 5 1898 (U P) C P Gazette Notification No 20 of 4 1 1899 Punjab Gazette 1899 Part 1 p 314 In Burma the whipping is inflicted on the breech—Burma Gazette 1898 Part 1 p 307 In Bengal it may be inflicted on the posteriors or on the hands as the Court may direct —Cal G R and C O page 67 Having regard to the general feeling of the respectable classes of the people as to the degrading character of the punishment of whipping the Lieutenant Governor has left it to the discretion of the Court in the case of juvenile offenders to inflict the punishment on the hand instead of on the buttocks This discretion should be exercised according to the circumstances of each case as age and social position of the offenders and the nature of the offence For very young boys of respectable position convicted of offences which do not imply depravity or confirmed dishonesty strokes on the hand appear to be the appropriate punishment Care is however necessary and should be taken to avoid causing serious injury to the hand when whipping is inflicted on the palm —Cal G R & C O pages 63—64 In C P if the boy is under twelve years of age the whipping may be inflicted on the hands at the discretion of the Magistrate—C P Gazette Notification No 20 of 4 1 1899

Number of stripes —Under the provisions of this section and the next not more than one sentence of whipping and that not exceeding thirty stripes should be awarded at one time—Emp v Nga Po 1906 U B R (Cr P C) 47

Not to be executed by instalments Exemptions

393 No sentence of whipping shall be executed by instalments and none of the following persons shall be punishable with whipping namely—

(a) females,

(b) males sentenced to death or to transportation or to penal servitude, or to imprisonment for more than five years,

(c) males whom the Court considers to be more than forty five years of age

1076. This section forbids the execution of the punishment

ping in respect of certain persons, and since the execution is p ohibited such persons cannot be sentenced to whipping for it is futile to pass a sentence which cannot be executed Therefore a person who is sentenced to 7 years rigorous imprisonment cannot be sentenced to whipping in addition because the execution of such punishment is prohibited by clause (b) of this section—Aklar v Crown, 1919 P R 30

Sentence of whipping cannot be enhanced —The accused was convicted under section 382 I P C and was sentenced to whipping and the sentence was duly executed An application was afterwards made to enhance the sentence on the ground that it was inadequate, it was held that the sentence of whipping could not be enhanced by the infliction of an additional number of stripes because under this section no sentence of whipping could be executed by instalments—Q E v Balu Ratanlal 537

Clause (b) —A sentence of whipping passed on a person who is already under sentence of death etc is illegal Even if the sentence of whipping precedes instead of following the other sentence, the passing of the latter sentence renders the infliction of the punishment of whipping illegal—Anonymous, 1 Mad 56

394 (1) The punishment of whipping shall not be inflicted unless a medical officer if present, certifies, or, if there is not a medical officer present, unless it appears to the Magistrate or officer present, that the offender is in a fit state of health to undergo such punishment.

Whipping not to be inflicted if offender not in fit state of health

(2) If, during the execution of a sentence of whipping, a medical officer certificates, or it appears to the Magistrate or officer present that the offender is not in a fit state of health to undergo the remainder of the sentence, the whipping shall be finally stopped

Stay of execution

1077. Particular attention should be directed to section 394 which prohibits the execution of a sentence of whipping when the offender is not in a fit state of health to undergo that punishment and all officers are reminded that the Governor General in Council cosiders that the precaution of having a medical officer present at the time of the infliction of the punishment should be observed in every instance when practicable'—Cal G R & C O page 65

Before the commencement of whipping, the Medical Officer must give a certificate whether the offender is in a fit state of health to undergo the whole punishment of whipping There is no provision of law authorising a medical officer to give a certificate that the accused is fit to receive only a portion of the sentence, such a certificate cannot be held as granted under sub section (1)—In re Emperor 31 Mad 84 Such a certificate cannot be treated as one under sub-section (2) because that sub section refers to a certificate granted during the execution of the sentence—Ibid

Under sub section (1) the Medical Officer is to give a certificate either that the offender is in a fit state of health to undergo the whole sentence passed on him or that he is not in a fit state of health to undergo it at all If he certificates that the accused is fit to undergo a smaller number of stripes than that ordered by the Magistrate the certificate cannot be held as one granted under this section and is invalid the Magistrate cannot in such a case inflict a smaller number of stripes in accordance with the medical certificate and in lieu of the rest of the stripes not inflicted he cannot award imprisonment under section 395 infra—In re Emperor 31 Mad 84

395 (1) In any case in which under Section 394, a sentence of whipping is wholly or partially prevented from being executed, the offender shall be kept in custody till the Court which passed the sentence can revise it, and the said Court may, at its discretion, either remit such sentence, or sentence the offender in lieu of whipping or in lieu of so much of the sentence of whipping as was not executed to imprisonment for any term not exceeding twelve months or to a fine not exceeding five hundred rupees which may be in addition to any other punishment to which he may have been sentenced for the same offence

Procedure if punishment cannot be inflicted under S 394

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to authorize any Court to inflict imprisonment for a term or a fine of an amount exceeding that to which the accused is liable by law, or that which the said Court is competent to inflict

Change —The italicised words have been added by section 105 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 The Amendment in sub section (1) enables a sentence of fine to be awarded in lieu of a sentence of whipping which cannot be carried out —Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914)

Under the old law it was held that the Court had no power to revise a sentence of whipping by inflicting a fine—Q E v Sheodin 11 All 308 Anonymous 2 Weir 449 These cases are now rendered obsolete

1078 Wholly or partially prevented —Wholly prevented refers sub section (1) of section 394 Partially prevented refers to sub (2) of that section—In re Emperor 31 Mad 84

'The Court which passed the sentence can revise it —The

which can revise the sentence is the Court which passed the sentence Even where a sentence of imprisonment and whipping passed by a District Magistrate is confirmed on appeal by the Sessions Judge, still the Magistrate is not prevented from revising the sentence—Emp v Carr 1880 P. R 10 But the words 'the Court which passed the sentence' do not mean the same officer who inflicted the sentence, therefore, where a Magistrate who passed the original sentence of whipping was transferred the District Magistrate who had jurisdiction over the whole district was competent to commute the sentence of whipping to one of imprisonment—Chhajju v Emp, 1901 P R 33

Power of revision —The Court can revise the sentence of whipping by awarding solitary confinement in lieu of whipping under this section—Q E v Gaman 1890 P R 14 The Court may remit the sentence altogether, even though it is competent to inflict a term of imprisonment in lieu of whipping—Crown v Po Thit 1 L B R 202

The imprisonment which the Court can award under this section in lieu of whipping must not exceed the term which the Court is competent to award under section 32 Where a Magistrate sentences the accused to the maximum term of imprisonment which he is competent to inflict as well as whipping, and the whipping cannot be carried out, he cannot sentence him to a further term of imprisonment in lieu of whipping he ought to remit the sentence of whipping altogether—Karat Ahmad, 2 Weir 449, Q E v Ram Barar, 21 All 25, Crown v Barkat Ali 1901 P R 11

396 (1) When sentence is passed under this Code on an escaped convict, such sentence, if of death, fine or whipping shall, subject to the provisions hereinbefore contained, take effect immediately, and if of imprisonment, penal servitude or transportation, shall take effect according to the following rules that is to say —

Execution of sentences on escaped convicts.

(2) If the new sentence is severer in its kind than the sentence which such convict was undergoing when he escaped, the new sentence shall take effect immediately

(3) When the new sentence is not severer in its kind than the sentence the convict was undergoing when he escaped, the new sentence shall take effect after he has suffered imprisonment, penal servitude or transportation, as the case may be, for a further period equal to that which, at the time of his escape, remained unexpired of his former sentence.

Explanation.—For the purposes of this section—

(a) a sentence of transportation or penal servitude shall be deemed severer than a sentence of imprisonment;

(b) a sentence of imprisonment with solitary confinement shall be deemed severer than a sentence of the same description of imprisonment without solitary confinement; and

(c) a sentence of rigorous imprisonment shall be deemed severer than a sentence of simple imprisonment with or without solitary confinement

1079 The word sentence includes an order of imprisonment passed under section 123—Q E v Pandu Khandu Ratanlal 7/4 Contra—K E v Nga Po Thin 2 L B R 7?

What this section contemplates is that the severer sentence must be undergone first Where the accused who was a life convict under sentence of transportation for murder was convicted for attempting to escape from lawful custody and was sentenced to four months rigorous imprisonment the latter sentence must not commence immediately but should be undergone after the expiry of the sentence of transportation—Q E v Mahadu Ratanlal 965

Sentence on offender already sentenced for another offence

397 When a person already undergoing a sentence of imprisonment, penal servitude or transportation is sentenced to imprisonment, penal servitude or transportation, such imprisonment, penal servitude or transportation shall commence at the expiration of the imprisonment, penal servitude or transportation to which he has been previously sentenced unless the Court directs that the subsequent sentence shall run concurrently with such previous sentence

Provided that if he is undergoing a sentence of imprisonment, and the sentence on such subsequent conviction is one of transportation, the Court may, in its discretion, direct that the latter sentence shall commence immediately or at the expiration of the imprisonment to which he has been previously sentenced

Provided, further, that where a person who has been sentenced to imprisonment by an order under Section 123 in default of furnishing security is, whilst undergoing such sentence, sentenced to imprisonment for an o committed prior to the making of such order, the latter sentence shall commence immediately

Change —The italicised words and the second proviso have been added by section 106 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 The reasons are stated below

1080 Principle —The general rule is that a sentence commences to run from the time of its being passed and this section creates an exception in the case of persons already undergoing imprisonment and postpones the operation of the subsequent sentence until after the expiry of the previous sentence—In re Krishnanand 3 B L R A C 50 Q v Sobrai 20 W R 70

Undergoing imprisonment —A person is said to be undergoing an imprisonment the moment the sentence of imprisonment is passed though he has not yet been sent to jail Therefore where a person is tried on the same day for two different offences in two different trials then as soon as the first trial is over and he is convicted and sentenced he is said to 'undergo imprisonment and if he is convicted and sentenced in the second trial also he is said to be sentenced to imprisonment while already undergoing a sentence of imprisonment within the meaning of this section—Muthusami 2 Weir 451 Emp v Nga Po 3 Bur L J 3" 25 Cr L J 1310 But in Makhan v Emp 19 Cr L J 707 (All) it has been held that until an accused has actually passed into jail he cannot be said to be undergoing imprisonment and therefore where two sentences of imprisonment are passed in two trials on the same accused on the same day this section does not apply as the accused cannot be said to be undergoing imprisonment under the first trial as soon as the sentence is passed therefore the second imprisonment need not commence after the expiry of the imprisonment awarded in the first trial the Magistrate may order that the two sentences should be concurrent

Detention under the order of a Civil Court is not a sentence of imprisonment within the meaning of this section therefore a Magistrate has no power to order that the sentence of imprisonment awarded by him shall take effect on the expiry of a term of detention in the Civil jail which had been ordered by a Civil Court—Emp v Makha Gyi 4 Bur L J 9 3 Rang 93 26 Cr L J 821 A I R 1925 Rang 202

1081 Order of sentences —The meaning of this section is that sentences will take effect in the order in which they are passed The sentence which is first passed and which the accused is undergoing must be given effect to first and any subsequent sentence passed upon the accused must follow after the expiration of the first sentence Where a Magistrate passes separate sentences of imprisonment on the same accused in separate trials but on the same day, the sentences will take effect in the order in which they are passed by the terms of this section and the Magistrate need not therefore give any direction in his judgment in respect of the same—Muthusami 2 Weir 451

But the above rule as to the sequence of sentences applies only to the 1st para of this section It is only the sentences mentioned in para 1 (i e, sentences of imprisonment) that can be directed to take effect in the order in which they were passed A sentence of whipping cannot be deferred till the sentence of imprisonment for that will contravene the provisions of section 391—Q E v Sagram Ratanlal 300 As regards the sentences mentioned in the first proviso the Magistrate has a discretion to direct either that the subsequent sentence should take effect after the expiration of the prior sentence or that it should take effect at once

Imprisonment in foreign territory —Where a person sentenced to imprisonment in a foreign territory is subsequently convicted of an offence in British India it is competent for the Magistrate to pass a sentence which shall take effect after the expiration of the sentence in the foreign State— Q E v Venkataram 20 Mad 444

1082 Concurrent sentences —It was held prior to the present amendment that a Magistrate could not direct that the subsequent sentence should run concurrently with the previous sentence because a Magistrate could pass concurrent sentences only when the offences were tried at one and the same trial (see sec 35)—Kamal Mandal v K L, 20 C W N 1300 Ratanlal 552 Ratanlal 18 Q E v Bhaguandas 2 Bom L R 111 Emp v Tukaram 4 Bom L R 876 1912 M W N 396 2 Weir 453 Harak Narain v Emp 19 A L J 316 11 A L J 263 Nga Sein Po v Emp 1 Rang 306 Emp v Garda Singh 1912 P L R 20 Q E v Khuda Bux 2 S L R 23 4 L B R 117 even where the trials were held on the same way the Magistrate could not make the sentences in the two trials concurrent—1894 P R 12 But now the amendment made at the end of the first para of this section will allow the subsequent sentence to run concurrently with the previous one In accordance with the amendment a Court will be empowered to pass a sentence to run concurrently with any other term of imprisonment etc which the person convicted is already undergoing —Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914) See Mahadeo v Emp 7 Cr L J 807 (S1) (Nag)

At the expiration of —A person was convicted by a Magistrate and sentenced to 2 years imprisonment and a month afterwards he was sentenced to three years imprisonment by the Court of Session which directed the sentence to take effect on the expiration of the sentence passed by the Magistrate On appeal the conviction and sentence passed by the Magistrate were set aside It was held that the sentence of the Sessions Court must be deemed to have commenced from the time it was ordered to commence i e after the expiration of the Magistrate s sentence whether by reversal or completion of the punishment and not before—Anonymous Ratanlal 139 K E Khandu Ratanlal 523 But in 2 Weir 450 under similar circumstances it was held that the imprisonment already gone must be reckoned as imprisonment under the sentence in the viction which was not reversed So also the Calcutta High C down Where a prisoner has been committed to jail under t warrants the sentence in the one to take effect from the ex sentence in the other the date of such second senten of the first sentence being remitted in appeal be presumed to take effect from the date on which he was committed to jail under the first or original sentence"—Cal G R & C O, page 40 But these remarks can only apply where the sentences in the two trials are of the same kind otherwise the Bombay rulings cited above should apply Those rulings are more reasonable and practical though the Madras case and the Calcutta High Court Rule are more favourable to the accused

First proviso —Where a person who is already undergoing imprisonment is sentenced by the Sessions Judge to transportation for life the sentence of transportation passed by him will commence at the expiration of the previous sentence of imprisonment unless the Judge in his discretion makes a further order that the sentence of transportation shall take effect immediately—Ratanlal 391

An order directing that a sentence shall take effect on the expiration of another sentence, is not a part of the judgment and may therefore be made after the judgment has been signed Therefore, where a Sessions Judge, in ignorance of the fact that the accused is already undergoing imprisonment, sentences him to transportation for life, it is subsequently open to him to order even after the judgment has been signed that the sentence of transportation shall take effect immediately—Ratanlal 391

1083 Second proviso —This proviso lays down that if a person who is imprisoned under section 123 in default of furnishing security is subsequently sentenced to imprisonment for an offence committed prior to the passing of the order under section 123 the latter sentence (i e the substantive sentence of imprisonment) shall take effect immediately. This is also laid down in a large number of decided cases Joghi v Emp 31 Mad 515 37 Bom 178, Emp v Durga, 5 Bom L R 26 8 N L R 20

Under the old law there was no distinction as to whether the offence for which the person imprisoned under section 123 was subsequently convicted was committed before or after the making of the order under section 123 The law was that if a person undergoing imprisonment under section 123 was subsequently convicted of an offence and sentenced to imprisonment (whether this offence was committed before or after the sentence of imprisonment passed under section 123 was immaterial) the latter imprisonment must take effect at once and should not be postponed till after the expiry of the period of imprisonment awarded under section 123—Q E v Tulshya Ratanlal 970 2 Weir 452 16 Cr L J 622 (Mad) Emp v Vishnu Balkrishna 14 Bom L R 963 Emp v Kanu 5 Bom L R 26, Emp v Durga 6 Bom L R 1098, 1914 M W N 500 3 S L R 114 Crown v Sukhal 15 S L R 205 Crown v Ghulam 7 S L R 203, 27 Mad 525 Joghi v Emp 31 Mad 515 37 Bom 178 Shin Taung v Emp, 10 Bur L T 266 1895 P R 11, 8 N L R 20 And this law has not been altered under the present section In 34 Bom 326 and Markanda v K E 1 P L J 212 it has been held that the two sentences must run concurrently This would be in consonance with the amendment made at the end of the first para of this section (In Emp v Tula Khan 30 All 334 it was held that the sentence under section 123 must take effect first But this ruling was dissented from in almost all the cases cited above)

With reference to this amendment the Joint Committee (19[illegible]) observe

We think that the law should be that in cases where an offence has been committed prior to the order under section 123 but the conviction takes place subsequently the sentences should ordinarily run concurrently but where the offence is committed after the order under section 123 has been passed e g cases of escape from custody or jail or offences committed in jail then we think that the imprisonment for the subsequent offence should ordinarily not be concurrent otherwise the prisoner might in some cases receive no further punishment for his subsequent offence

Saving as to Ss 396 and 397

398 (1) Nothing in Section 396 or Section 397 shall be held to execuse any person from any part or the punishment to which he is liable upon his former or subsequent conviction

(2) When an award of imprisonment in default of payment of a fine is annexed to a substantive sentence of imprisonment, or to a sentence of transportation or penal servitude for an offence punishable with imprisonment, and the person undergoing the sentence is after its execution to undergo a further substantive sentence or further substantive sentences of imprisonment, transportation or penal servitude effect shall not be given to the award of imprisonment in default of payment of the fine until the person has undergone the further sentence or sentences

Sub section (2) renders obsolete the ruling in Anonymous Ratanlal 13[illegible] where it has been held that when a convict is imprisoned under two warrants which order consecutive punishments the first warrant should be completely executed both in respect of the substantive sentence of imprisonment and the imprisonment in default of fine before any effect is given to the second warrant Now under sub section (2) the imprisonment in default of payment of fine shall take effect last of all

Confinement of youthful offenders in reformatories

399 (1) When any person under the age of fifteen years is sentenced by any Criminal Court to imprisonment for any offence, the Court may direct that such person, instead of being imprisoned in a criminal jail, shall be confined in any reformatory established by the Local Government as a fit place for confinement, in which there are means of suitable discipline and of training in some branch of useful industry or which is kept by a person willing to obey such rules as the Local Gov ment prescribes with regard to the discipline and training of persons confined therein.

(2) All persons confined under this section shall be subject to the rules so prescribed.

(3) This section shall not apply to any place in which the Reformatory Schools Act, 1897, is for the time being in force.

1084. A sentence of imprisonment is a condition precedent to an order under this section Where there is no preliminary sentence of imprisonment, an order under this section cannot be passed—1910 P R 31

The period of detention in the Reformatory School should be a definite period Where the trying Magistrate ordered the offender to be detained in a Reformatory for 'five years or until he attains the age of 18 years' in lieu of imprisonment, it was held that the words or until 18 years should be deleted—Emp v Rama Sudama, 15 Bom L R 306

The period of detention in the Reformatory must not be longer than the period of imprisonment at first ordered Where a Magistrate finding a juvenile offender guilty of theft in a building sentenced him to three month's rigorous imprisonment and ordered that in lieu of that sentence the offender should be confined in a Reformatory for 14 months it was held that having once passed a sentence of imprisonment for a particular term it was not competent to the Magistrate to direct that the offender should be confined in a Reformatory for a longer term—Reg v Ganpaya Ratanlal 109

'Reformatory' —Where no Reformatories have been established but only Reformatory Schools, the Court should not order the offender under this section to be sent to a Reformatory, but should pass an order under the Reformatory Schools Act, sending the boy to a Reformatory School—Q E v Madasami, 12 Mad 94

Sub section (3) —The introduction of the Reformatory Schools Act repeals the operation of this section so far as may be practicable in those places where that Act applies—Q E v Madasami 12 Mad 94 Thus this section has no application in the Punjab where the Reformatory Schools Act is in force—Crown v Noor Mahomed 1918 P R 17

400. When a sentence has been fully executed, the officer executing it shall return the warrant to the Court from which it issued with an endorsement under his hand certifying the manner in which the sentence has been executed.

Return of warrant on execution of sentence

CHAPTER XXIX

OF SUSPENSIONS REMISSIONS AND COMMUTATIONS OF SENTENCES

Power to suspend or remit sentences

401 (1) When any person has been sentenced to punishment for an offence the Governor General in Council or the Local Government may at any time without conditions or upon any conditions which the person sentenced accepts suspend the execution of his sentence or remit the whole or any part of the punishment to which he has been sentenced

(2) Whenever an application is made to the Governor General in Council or the Local Government for the suspension or remission of a sentence the Governor General in Council or the Local Government as the case may be may require the presiding Judge of the Court before or by which the conviction was had or confirmed to state his opinion as to whether the application should be granted or refused together with his reasons for such opinion, and also to forward with the statement of such opinion a certified copy of the record of the trial or of such record thereof as exists

(3) If any condition on which a sentence has been suspended or remitted is in the opinion of the Governor General in Council or of the Local Government as the case may be not fulfilled the Governor General in Council or the Local Government may cancel the suspension or remission and thereupon the person in whose favour the sentence has been suspended or remitted may if at large be arrested by any police officer without warrant and remanded to undergo the unexpired portion of the sentence

(4) The condition on which a sentence is suspended or remitted under this section may be one to be fulfilled by the person in whose favour the sentence is suspended or remitted or one independent of his will

(4A) The provisions of the above sub sections shall also apply to any order passed by a Criminal Court und

any section of this Code or of any other law, which restricts the liberty of any person or imposes any liability upon him or his property

(5) Nothing herein contained shall be deemed to interfere with the right of His Majesty, or of the Governor General when such right is delegated to him, to grant pardons, reprieves, respites or remissions of punishment

(5A) Where a conditional pardon is granted by His Majesty or, in virtue of any powers delegated to him by the Governor General, any condition thereby imposed of whatever nature, shall be deemed to have been imposed by a sentence of a competent Court under this Code and shall be enforceable accordingly

(6) The Governor General in Council and the Local Government may, by general rules or special orders, give directions as to the suspension of sentences and the conditions on which petitions should be presented and dealt with

Change —The italicised words and sub sections (4A) and (5A) have been added by section 107 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923

1085. Scope of section —This section applies only to persons sentenced to imprisonment and not to persons upon whom a conditional pardon has been tendered under section 337—Q E v Gargacharan 11 All 79

In cases of murder the Judge may report any extenuating circumstances calling for a mitigation of the punishment to the Government and the Government may thereupon take such action under this section as it thinks proper—Q E v Kader Nasya 23 Cal 604 Q E v Lakshman 10 Bom 512 In these two cases the accused committed murder without any apparent sane motive and was suffering from mental derangement of some sort and the High Court holding that the accused was not entitled to be acquitted under section 84 I P C recommended the case to the Local Government under this section to be dealt with in such manner as it thought fit

Procedure —All recommendations for remission or suspension of a sentence made under section 401 by an officer of any subordinate Court to the Local Government in regard to a convict whose case has been before the High Court on appeal shall be made through the High Court —Cal G R & C O p 40

Certified copy of record —The original record need not be sent Objection has been taken to the inconvenience of this and we think that it will be sufficient to require a certified copy of the record to be furnished —Report of the Select Committee of 1916

Such record thereof as exists —It is well known that in the case of proceedings in a High Court the Judges object to their notes being treated as part of the record and we have therefore referred in our proposed amendment of section 401 (2) to a certified copy of the record of the trial or of such record thereof as exists We think in cases where it is necessary in considering a petition for mercy for Government to know, as it frequently may be the nature of the evidence given at a trial in a High Court we can safely trust to the courtesy of High Court Judges to furnish a copy of their notes —Report of the Select Committee of 1916

Sub-sections (4 A) and (5 A) — The new clause (4 A) is intended to make it clear that the power to remit sentences conferred by section 401 can be exercised in the case of orders of a penal nature e g orders under section 565 of the Code The object of the new clause (5 A) is to enable any condition upon which a pardon has been granted by His Majesty or by the Governor General when such power has been delegated to him to be enforced in the same way as a sentence of a Court —Statement of Objects and Reasons (1921)

In sub-section (4 A) the word law has been used instead of the more common word Act to make it clear that this section applies to the case of persons sentenced by tribunals constituted by Regulations and Ordinances—Report of the Joint Committee (1922)

Sub-section (5) — Or of the Governor General — We have made a formal amendment in this sub-section in view of the special delegation to the present Governor General of His Majesty s prerogative of pardon —Report of the Select Committee of 1916

402 (1) The Governor General in Council or the Local Government may, without the consent of the person sentenced, commute any one of the following sentences for any other mentioned after it —

death, transportation penal servitude, rigorous imprisonment for a term not exceeding that to which he might have been sentenced, simple imprisonment for a like term, fine

(2) Nothing in this section shall affect the provisions of Section 54 or Section 55 of the Indian Penal Code

Sub-section (2) has been added by section 108 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 Doubts have been expressed as to the consistency of section 402 with section 54 or 55 of the Indian Penal Code and these have now been resolved —Statement of Objects and Reasons (1921)

CHAPTER XXX

OF PREVIOUS ACQUITTALS OR CONVICTIONS

403 (1) A person who has once been tried by a Court of competent jurisdiction for an offence and convicted or acquitted of such offence shall, while such conviction or acquittal remains in force not be liable to be tried again for the same offence, nor on the same facts for any other offence for which a different charge from the one made against him might have been made under section 236, or for which he might have been convicted under sec 237

Person once convicted or acquitted not to be tried for same offence

(2) A person acquitted or convicted of any offence may be afterwards tried for any distinct offence for which a separate charge might have been made against him on the former trial under section 235, sub section (1)

(3) A person convicted of any offence constituted by any act causing consequences which, together with such act, constituted a different offence from that of which he was convicted, may be afterwards tried for such last mentioned offence, if the consequences had not happened, or were not known to the Court to have happened, at the time when he was convicted

(4) A person acquitted or convicted of any offence constituted by any acts may, notwithstanding such acquittal or conviction, be subsequently charged with, and tried for, any other offence constituted by the same acts which he may have committed, if the Court by which he was first tried was not competent to try the offence with which he is subsequently charged

(5) Nothing in this section shall affect the provisions of section 26 of the General Clauses Act, 1897, or section 188 of this Code

Explanation —The dismissal of a complaint, the stopping of proceedings under section 249, the discharge of the accused, or any entry made upon a charge under section 273, is not an acquittal for the purposes of this section.

Illustrations

(a) A is tried upon a charge of theft as a servant and acquitted He cannot afterwards while the acquittal remains in force be charged with theft as a servant or upon the same facts with theft simply or with criminal breach of trust

(b) A is tried upon a charge of murder and acquitted There is no charge of robbery but it appears from the facts that A committed robbery at the time when the murder was committed he may afterwards be charged with and tried for robbery

(c) A is tried for causing grievous hurt and convicted The person injured afterwards dies A may be tried again for culpable homicide

(d) A is charged before the Court of Session and convicted of the culpable homicide of B A may not afterwards be tried on the same facts for the murder of B

(e) A is charged by a Magistrate of the first class with and convicted by him of voluntarily causing hurt to B A may not afterwards be tried for voluntarily causing grievous hurt to B on the same facts unless the case comes within paragraph 3 of the section

(f) A is charged by a Magistrate of the second class with and convicted by him of theft of property from the person of B A may be subsequently charged with and tried for robbery on the same facts

(g) A B and C are charged by a Magistrate of the first class with and convicted by him of robbing D A B and C may afterwards be charged with and tried for dacoity on the same facts

1086 Principle —This section is an amplification of the well known maxim of law nemo debet bis vexari This principle does not rest on any doctrine of estoppel but embodies the well established rule of common law that a man may not be put twice in peril for the same offence—Emp v Chinna 29 Mad 126 (F B) Where an offence has already been the subject of judicial investigation and adjudication and there has been an acquittal the acquittal is conclusive and it would be a very dangerous principle to adopt to regard a judgment of not guilty as not fully establishing the innocence of the accused—Rex v Plummer [1902] 2 K B 339 cited in Emp v Lalit Mohan 38 Cal 559 (578)

1087 A person —Person not tried at the first trial —This section bars a subsequent trial of the same person who had once been placed on trial for the same offence But does it bar the trial of persons who had not been placed in the first trial but who were implicated in the offence committed by the accused who was placed in the first trial? According to Bishun Das v K E 7 C W N 403 the principle of this section extends to such persons and therefore where three out of persons concerned in the same offence were at first placed on trial

acquitted a subsequent trial of the remaining two persons for the abetment of the offence was barred by this section But this ruling has been disapproved of in several other cases Thus where on a complaint charging a number of persons with several offences only three were sent up for trial and they were acquitted on the ground that the prosecution case was untrue and subsequently other persons alleged to be implicated in the same offences were sent up it was held (dissenting from Bukun Das v K E 7 C W N 493) that the trial of these persons was not barred under this section—Kolari Sardar v Mehr Khan 37 Cal 680 Chandra v Ahadulla 53 Cal 606 30 C W N 546 27 Cr L J 58 So also where in a previous trial two persons were acquitted by the jury of the offence of conspiring with a third person who was not placed on trial it was held that the acquittal of those two persons did not operate as a bar to the trial of the third person—Manindra v Emp 41 Cal 54 18 C W N 580 See also 10 C W N 1031 But in such a case although the plea of autre fois acquit would not be available to the present accused and the acquittal of another person would not bar the issue of process against the present accused still the fact that another person accused upon the same facts of having been implicated in the same offence has been acquitted may properly be taken into consideration by the Magistrate in determining whether upon the material before him there is sufficient ground for proceeding to issue process against the present accused—Subal Chandra v Ahadulla 53 Cal 606 30 C W N 546, Cr L J 58

Person absent in the first trial —Where a complaint against two accused A and B was dismissed and the accused A who attended Court to answer the charge was acquitted the acquittal would operate in favour of the other accused (B) also who was absent, and would bar fresh proceedings against him on the same facts—Panchu Singh v Umar Mahomed 4 C W N 316 In this case the second accused was placed on trial though he was absent on the day of hearing But where out of three persons concerned in an offence, two persons were found and the third not found and the two were placed on trial and convicted the case of the third when found should be heard and decided irrespective of the fact that there had been a previous trial and conviction of the other accused the second trial is not barred by this section—Emp v Chir 36 All 168 12 A L J 2 1 15 Cr L J 200

1088 Tried —There must be a previous trial of the accused to bar a subsequent trial under this section Where a complaint of a non cognizable offence was made before the Police and the Magistrate did not take cognizance of that offence on the police report, there could not be said to have been a trial of that offence and consequently a subsequent complaint of that offence is not barred by this section—Govt v Shidapa 5 Bom 403 So also where a Magistrate after taking cognizance of an offence dismisses the complaint under section 203 there cannot be said to have been a trial of the accused and it is open to the Magistrate to rehear the complaint—Emp v Chinna 20 Mad 126 So also where no process had been issued against the accused and no proceedings taken against them but the Magistrate simply permitted the withdrawal of the charge sheets against the accused it was held that the withdrawal of the charge sheets was no bar to fresh proceedings being taken against the accused by drawing fresh charge sheets—In re Muthia Moopan 36 Mad 315 14 Cr L J 559

It is not necessary that there should be a full previous trial and an acquittal or conviction on the merits Where the accused appears and answers to a charge he is said to be tried although the case may be dismissed for non appearance of the complainant He is not liable to be tried again for the same offence on the same facts upon the complaint of another person—Suranna v Venkata 2 Weir 457 In re Guggilapu Peddaya 34 Mad 253 The words who has once been tried mean against whom proceedings have been commenced in Court i e against whom the Court has taken cognizance of the offence and issued process Therefore where the Police filed a charge sheet against a certain person before a Magistrate and summons was issued but before it was served the Public Prosecutor with the consent of the Court withdrew from the prosecution under section 494 and the accused was acquitted it was held that the accused must be said to have been tried and acquitted within the meaning of this section and the acquittal barred a further trial for the same offence—In re Dudi Kula Lal Sahib 40 Mad 976 But in another Madras case it is held that the non appearance of a complainant on the first day of hearing and the consequent acquittal of the accused under section 247 do not bar a retrial because the accused cannot be said to have been tried on the first complaint the trial of an accused in a summons case cannot be said to begin until the particulars of the offence are stated to the accused under sec 242 and where there is nothing in the record to show that any trial was commenced on the first complaint section 403 would not bar the Court from taking cognizance of the second complaint—Kotayya v Venkayya 40 Mad 977 (Note) See Note 1089 below

Irregularity in the first trial —If there is a gross irregularity or illegality in a trial such trial will not operate as a bar to a retrial of the accused for the same offence—13 W R 42 But if the trial is regularly conducted it will bar a second trial even though the second Court considers that the former conviction or acquittal was unwarranted by the evidence given in the first trial—7 W R 15 Even if the order of acquittal was passed in the first trial under a misapprehension of law it would still operate as a bar to a second trial—4 S L R 174 The absence of a charge does not make the trial illegal Where the trial had otherwise been regularly conducted even though no formal charge had been framed the order of acquittal would bar subsequent proceedings—3 All 129

But where the first trial was conducted without any complaint at all the trial was void ab initio and therefore a second trial is not barred—Narakram v Emp 19 Cr L J 706 (Oudh) The trial of an accused under section 21 of the Bengal Food Adulteration Act (VI of 1919) without obtaining the sanction of the Municipality is not a trial at all C quently the acquittal of the accused at such a trial does not bar a prosecution after having obtained the necessary sanction—P Bane Bipin Bihary 30 C W N 382, 27 Cr L J 751

1089 Conviction or Acquittal —This section bars a second when the accused is acquitted in the first trial and not where he is s discharged—Parmeshwari v Jagannath 17 A L J 867

What amounts to acquittal —It is not necessary that there shou an acquittal on the merits therefore the withdrawal of the rema charges under section 240 on conviction of one of several charge the effect of acquittal and bars a fresh trial on the same facts—19 55 The non appearance of the complainant in a summons case ha effect of acquitting the accused (sec 247) and he cannot be tried for the same offence—see 2 Weir 437 Emp v Dutta 45 All 58 Nanda v Rakhahari 38 C L J 196 27 Cr L J 716 Emp v Bha Prasad 1885 A W N 43 Panchu v Umar 4 C W N 346 Ram M v Emp 2 P L T 170 Kiran Sarkar v Emp 5 P L T 15 24 Cr 815 In re Guggilapu Padlaya 34 Mad 253 In re Sinnu Gounda Mad 1028 26 M L J 160 In re Dudi Kala 40 Mad 976 Cor Kolayya v Venkayya 40 Mad 977 (Note) cited above The withdr of a summons case by the complainant operates as an acquittal o accused A compromise under section 345 has the effect of acquit Ratanlal 519 1914 P R 29 The withdrawal of the Public Prosec from the case under section 494 (b) has the effect of acquitting the cused and will bar a fresh trial—12 Mad 35 Maladeogir v Emp N I R 26 In re Dudikula 40 Mad 976 23 Cr L J 305 (Sind) Bu order made under section 494 (a) is an order of discharge of the acc person and sec 403 does not bar the entertainment of a fresh compl —Ramanand v Ali Hassan 26 Cr L J 129 (Pat) The dismissal summons case amounts to an acquittal—1917 P W R 14 An orde acquittal under sec 258 cannot be treated as an order of discharge one of acquittal and bars a second trial of the same offence on the s facts—In re Gandi Apparaju 43 Mad 330

But a wrong order of acquittal will not bar a subsequent trial un this section If a Magistrate tries a warrant case as a summons case acquits the accused without framing a charge such an order of acqui will be treated as one of discharge only and cannot operate as a bar t re trial—1886 A W N 260 1888 A W N 96 If in a warrant ca before the charge is drawn up and the accused called upon to plead to the Magistrate erroneously acquits the accused the acquittal amou only to a discharge and does not bar a re trial—6 W R 13 (But if trial has been otherwise regularly conducted the absence of a form charge will not convert the order of acquittal into one of discharge a the order of acquittal will bar a re trial—3 All 129) Where a pre minary charge sheet was laid by the Police before the Magistrate und section 107 against several persons but the Police intending to withdr it in order that they might present a fresh charge sheet against some or of those included in it the Magistrate permitted the withdrawal a endorsed on the charge sheet that the accused were acquitted It was he

that such an endorsement was illegal, because neither an order of discharge nor one of acquittal could be passed in a case where no process has been issued against the accused; and therefore the Magistrate's order was no bar to fresh proceedings being taken on a second charge sheet—In re Muthia Moopan, 36 Mad 315

On the other hand, where a person who ought to have been acquitted, is erroneously ordered to be discharged only, the order of discharge will be treated as one of acquittal, and will bar a re trial Thus, where a Public Prosecutor withdraws from the case under sec 494 after the frame of charge, the accused ought to be acquitted and not discharged, if however, he is ordered to be discharged, he will be deemed to have been acquitted and a subsequent trial and conviction on the same facts is illegal and will be set aside—Q E v Sivarama, 12 Mad 35 So also, where in a warrant case, the accused has pleaded to a charge, the Magistrate can either convict or acquit him, his order dismissing the case will be one of acquittal and not one of discharge of the accused—In re Jadubar, 5 C L R 259 1914 P R 29

An appellate Court set aside a conviction and sentence on the ground that the Court below did not comply with the provisions of section 360 It left the question of retrial to the District Magistrate The District Magistrate held a retrial Held that the order of the Appellate Court did not amount to an acquittal It was passed on a consideration of a point of law only and without recording any finding on the merits of the case Such an order did not bar the retrial of the accused by the District Magistrate—Emp v Miajan 53 Cal 102 27 Cr L J 733 following Beni Madhab v Emp 46 Cal 212

1090. Court of competent jurisdiction —The Council of Elders established under the Punjab Frontier Regulation (IV of 1887) is a Court of competent jurisdiction for the purposes of this section and a person convicted by such Council cannot be retried on the same facts —Sarwar v Emp, 1884 P R 30 Under the Burma Village Act, the village headman has the power to try as a Court an offence under sec 294 I P C and other offences Therefore, a person who had once been tried by the village headman for an offence under sec 294 I P C is not liable to be tried again for the same offence—Nga F v K E, 1 Rang 449 A village Munsif in Madras is not a recognised tribunal under the Cr P Code, and consequently an acquittal by a village Munsif does not bar the trial of the accused by a Magistrate—Rama Naidu v Veerapuram Venkatasami, 53 M L J 102 28 Cr L J 507

It is necessary to a plea of autre fois acquit that the first Court should have had competent jurisdiction to try the offence, and therefore the conviction or acquittal of an accused by a Court not having jurisdiction is no bar to the institution of fresh proceedings against the accused on th same facts—2 W R 9, 6 W R 13 A trial by a Court not having ju diction is void ab initio, and the accused, if acquitted, is liable to be tried It is not necessary to get the trial set aside before the ac

The trial of the accused by a Court in a Native State bars their trial by a Court in British India on the same facts and for the same offence—Teja Singh v Emp 5 Lah L J 5-4

Where the law requires a previous sanction (now abolished) or complaint under sec. 195 before a charge can be entertained by a Court that Court is not a Court of competent jurisdiction until the sanction has been obtained or the complaint has been made—Emp v Jiwan 37 All 10 16 Cr L J 144 In re Samsuddin 22 Bom 711 Jivram v Emp 4? No sanction is required for a prosecution under sec 8- of the Registration Act and therefore a Court has jurisdiction to try the accused for that offence without a sanction—Maung Saing v K E., 1 Ran- 09 -5 Cr L J 101 (following 11 Cal 560) But see Hussain Khan v Emp 39 All 293 and Mohan Lal v Emp 19 A L J 813, 2- Cr L J 50

While such conviction or acquittal remains in force —This means as long as such conviction or acquittal is not set aside by a Court of Appeal or Revision If the conviction or acquittal is set aside by the Appellate Court the result will be that the previous trial is annulled and the prisoner may be again put upon his trial— W R 2 7 W R 3 So long as the conviction or acquittal is not set aside, it will bar a second trial even though the second Court considers that the acquittal in the first trial is not warranted by the evidence produced in the first trial —7 W R 15 So also an acquittal of an offence arising out of certain facts under a wrong section will prevent a further inquiry into any offence based on the same facts until that acquittal is set aside—Ram Nidh v Ram Saran 26 O C 28?

1091. Retrial —Where the jury is discharged under section 305 the accused may be retried under section 308 such a retrial is not barred by this section In such a case the accused is being tried on the original indictment and not tried again The duty of the Court is to continue the trial of the accused before another jury and the process may continue without the accused being tried again under section 403—Emp v Nirmal Kanta 41 Cal 107? (Moreover in such a case i e where the jury is discharged under section 305 the accused is neither convicted nor acquitted and therefore his retrial is not barred under this section)

An appeal or a revision is not a retrial but a continuation of the same trial—Q E v Jabanullah ?3 Cal 975 9 All 134 and therefore the Court of Appeal can convict the accused on a charge on which he has been acquitted by the first Court or order a retrial on the same charge—22 Cal 377

1092 "For the same offence' —The former conviction or acquittal is a bar to a second trial if the offence is the same Thus a person charged with and acquitted of an offence under the Abkari Law (Bombay Act V of 1878) cannot subsequently be tried for the same offence —Q E v Gustadji 10 Bom 181 If the offences be different and based on different facts though based on the same evidence the previous trial will not bar a second trial Thus where the prisoner was charged with the forging of a certain document in the first trial and acquitted he can afterwards be tried for the forging of some other document with regard to which evidence was given at the previous trial It would be no defence in the second trial that evidence was given in the first trial which if believed would have ended in his conviction for both the offences—7 W R 15 The trial of the accused for the dishonest receiving or retaining of certain stolen articles bars a second trial of the accused in respect of other stolen articles found in his possession on the same date in the absence of evidence to show that the different articles which were the subject of the charges in the two trials were received at different times —Ganesh Sahu v Emp 50 Cal 594 K E v Bishun Singh 3 Pat 503 (519) 5 P L T 319 25 Cr L J 738 Ishan Muchi v Q E 15 Cal 511 Q E v Makhan 15 All 317

Second complaint by different person —A person once convicted of an offence cannot be tried again for the same offence and on the same facts even though the complainant in the second case is not the same person as the complainant in the first case Thus the accused assaulted several persons A B etc At first A filed a complaint against the accused and they were convicted under section 323 I P C Afterwards B filed a similar complaint against the same accused on the same facts Held that the second trial was barred—Ram Chandar v Emp 18 A L J 85

"Same facts —A Court ought not to decide that a charge pending trial before him is barred under this section without an investigation of the facts put forward on behalf on the complainant—Radha Kishan v Fatik Chand 23 C W N 543 Where the complainant charges the accused before the Magistrate with a certain offence and a preliminary objection is put forward on behalf of the accused that he had been previously tried on the same facts in another Court and acquitted it is the duty of the Magistrate to hear the evidence and ascertain what are the facts in the two cases in order to determine whether the facts in the present case are the same as those in the previous case—M N Mukherjee v Matangi Charan Palit 23 C W N 599 Where the accused was charged in the former trial for an offence under section 401 I P C but the charge failed because the approver s statement on which the prosecution was based was considered unreliable a subsequent trial for an offence under section 413 I P C is not barred by the provisions of this section because the second trial is not based on the same facts as those on which the former trial proceeded In the first trial the prosecution rested primarily on the approver s statement but in the second trial the prosecution is based entirely on the evidence as to the discovery of the stolen property in the house of the accused—Chhajju v Emp 26 P L R 470 26 Cr L J 1097

1093 Trial for different offence upon the same facts —The protection offered by this section extends to different offences only when they are based on the same facts and fall within the provisions of section 236 or section 237—Q E v Subedar Krishnappa 1 Bom L R 15 Where a person has been tried and convicted or acquitted for an offence arising out of a particular set of facts he cannot while such conviction or acquittal remains in force be again tried in respect of any offence based on the same facts unless the case can be brought under one or other of the specific exceptions to the rule provided by sub-sections (2) to (4)—Mahadeorao v Emp 9 N L R 26 14 Cr L J 135

Examples —(1) A trial for the offence of theft of an animal bars a subsequent trial for the offence of mischief for subsequently killing that animal—Madar 1 Weir 497 Similarly where a person was tried for the offence of mischief and was acquitted on the ground that the tree in respect of which the mischief was alleged to have been committed was

(7) A person charged under section 324 I P C cannot, if the offence has been compounded, be again tried on the same facts for an offence under section 323 I P C, if the composition which has the effect of an acquittal is still in force—Ratanlal 519

(8) Where a Magistrate issued processes against and summoned the accused for one of several offences alleged against them, and acquitted them of the offence for which they were summoned, no fresh processes could be issued against them either in respect of the offence already tried or in respect of the other offences—Suresh v Banku, 2 C L J 622

(9) Where the prisoner was at first tried under sec 498 I P C for having enticed away a married woman from her husband, and was acquitted on the ground that the whole case was fabricated, and the prisoner was next charged and convicted under sec 363 I P C of having kidnapped two infants of the woman, who were with her when she left the house, it was held that the second trial was illegal, because so long as the acquittal under section 498 I P C remained in force, the second Court was bound to take it as proved that the accused did not entice the woman, and therefore, the offence under sec 363 alleged to been committed while the prisoner enticed away the woman was disproved by the above finding of fact—1911 P L R 56

(10) A person acquitted of the charge of cheating cannot be tried again for the offence of falsification of accounts upon the same facts—Emp v Nand Kishor, 20 Cr L J 667 (Patna)

(11) The accused was tried under sec 363 I P C and acquitted The Sessions Judge directed further inquiry to be made to ascertain whether offences under secs 366 and 368 I P C were committed It was held that the order directing further inquiry was illegal in as much as kidnapping (sec 363 I P C) is an essential element in offences under secs 366 368 I P C and the accused having been already acquitted of the offence of kidnapping he could not be put on trial again for offences under secs 366 368 I P C—Md Saleh v Emp 20 Cr L J 576 (Pat)

(12) An acquittal of the prisoner on charges under secs 380 411 I P C for being found in possession of a quantity of jute bars subsequent proceedings in respect of the same act under section 54A of the Calcutta Police Act because in the previous trial the charge of theft (Secs 380 411 I P C) might have been joined with a charge under sec 54A of the Calcutta Police Act under the provisions of sec 236 of this Code—Manhari v K E 45 Cal 727 22 C W N 199 19 Cr L J 198

(13) Where the accused was acquitted of a charge of unlawful assembly with the common object of assaulting a person the District Magistrate is not justified in ordering a further inquiry into the offence of hurt on the same facts while the order of acquittal remains in force —Jairam v Raj Kumar 5 C W N 72

(14) Where a person was at first charged with kidnapping a minor girl under section 363 I P C but the trying Magistrate finding that the girl was not under sixteen acquitted the accused a second trial on the same facts for the offence of abducting the girl in order to confine her secretly (section 365 I P C) was barred The accused in the first trial might have been charged in the alternative with the second offence under section 237 of this Code—Kala Nath v K E 24 C W N 836

(15) If a person charged under section 338 I P C with having caused grievous hurt by rashly driving a motor car was acquitted on the ground that it was not proved that he was driving the car he cannot be subsequently tried under section 16 of the Motor Vehicles Act for the offence of driving the car without a license—Maksuddin v Emp 2 P L T 31 22 Cr L J 63

(16) Where an accused was tried under sec 408 I P C for criminal breach of trust in respect of three sums of money alleged to have been dishonestly misappropriated and it was part of the prosecution case at the trial that he had made three false entries to conceal the misappropriation and he was acquitted by the jury, but was subsequently charged on the same evidence under section 477A I P C (falsification of accounts) in respect of the said three entries it was held that he should not on the same facts be tried again for what were virtually the same offences charged in a different form—49 Cal 924

(17) Where the accused were at first charged under sec 193 I P C

and acquitted by the Magistrate who dealt very exhaustively with the evidence and came to the conclusion that the culpability of the accused had not been established beyond reasonable doubt and the accused were subsequently charged with offence under secs 467 and 471 read with sec 120B of the I P C upon facts which were wholly inseparable from the facts upon which the previous case was proceeded with held that the subsequent trial was barred by this section—Cheraghali v Satish 30 C W N 384 26 Cr L J 1023

(18) The accused went into a Mahomedan graveyard and there cut down a tree They were at first tried under sec 297 I P C for hurting the religious feelings of the Muhammadans by cutting down the tree and were acquitted They were subsequently prosecuted for theft of the tree Held that the trial of the accused for theft based on the same set of facts was barred under sec 403—Fatteh Md v Emp 8 Lah 52 27 Cr L J 1019

But the previous trial for an offence founded on a particular set of facts does not bar a second trial for a different offence based on different facts Thus the previous acquittal on a charge of theft does not bar a subsequential trial for the offence of receiving stolen property as the latter offence is supported by certain additional facts ascertained subsequent to the first trial—Leg Dy Rem v Hatim Molla 10 C W N 1031 The previous trial for forging a certain document does not bar a subsequent trial for forging another document—7 W R 15 An acquittal on the charge of murder does not prevent another trial upon a charge of robbery because the two offences are so widely different that in the first trial for murder the accused could not have been convicted of the offence of robbery under the provisions of sec 237 of this Code—Walla v Crown, 4 Lal 373 (375)

For which a different charge might have been made —This section protects a person against a trial for any other offence for which a different charge from the one made against him might have been made but where the offence for which he is to be tried again is the same charge that was made against him in the first trial the defence must fail Thus where the accused was charged in the first trial with the murder of A under section 302 I P C as well as with culpable homicide of A under section 304 I P C and was acquitted by the jury of the charge of murder, but the jury disagreeing as to the culpable homicide the accused was retried for that offence it was held that the second trial was not illegal for a charge in respect of that offence had already been made in the first trial If the accused had been charged with murder alone no doubt a verdict of not guilty would protect him from another trial for culpable homicide but where a charge of culpable homicide was also made the case falls outside the provisions of the law dealing with cases where it might have been made —Imp v Nirmal Kanta Roy 41 Cal 1072

1094 Sub-section (2) —Sub-section (2) permits a second trial for a distinct offence for which a charge might have been framed under sec 235 (1) as having been committed in the course of the same transaction

Examples —(1) Where certain persons after beating the inmates of a house carried off a woman and on the first trial they were charged under sections 452 and 325 I P C for house trespass and grievous hurt and convicted it was held that such conviction did not bar a subsequent trial for the offence of abduction which had been committed in the course of the same transaction The case fell under section 235 (1) and therefore under sub section (2) of this section—Baldeo v K E 3 A L J 2

(2) A previous conviction for being in possession of counterfeit coins under section 243 I P C does not bar a subsequent trial under section 240 I P C for passing other coins knowing them to be counterfeited They were two distinct offences—Emp v Prasanna 31 Cal 1007

(3) The accused was at first tried on a charge of abetment of forgery of a document He was again tried by the Sessions Court in respect of the same document for using as genuine a forged document It was held that the previous acquittal was no bar to the second trial The case was not governed by sub-section (1) of this section in as much as the case was not one contemplated by section 236 there being nothing doubtful what should be the true view of the offence committed the case fell under sub section (2) of this section because the two offences were distinct offences and committed in the course of the same transaction within the meaning of section 235 (1)—Jivram v Emp 40 Bom 97

(4) The acquittal of an accused on a charge under section 400 I P C does not bar the trial of the accused under section 395 I P C for committing one of the dacoities in respect of which evidence was given at the previous trial—Q E v Subedar Krishnappa 1 Bom L R 15

(5) Where six documents were alleged to be fabricated at one and the same time and at first the accused was tried for fabricating three of the documents and acquitted a second trial for fabricating the other three documents is not barred But in the circumstances of the case it was not desirable that the second trial should take place as the fabricating of all the documents was treated in the first trial as one offence—2 A L J 673

(6) Where the accused threatened three witnesses the trial and conviction of the accused for threatening one witness does not bar a second and separate trial and conviction of the accused for threatening the other two witnesses—9 W R 30

(7) The conviction of the accused for an offence under the Excise Act does not prevent the accused from being subsequently tried for an offence under the Merchandise Marks Act the two offences being distinct and committed in the course of the same transaction—23 Cal 174

(8) The conviction of the accused for committing affray (sec 160 I P C) is no bar to their trial and conviction for the offence of causing hurt (sec 323 I P C) committed in the course of the affray—Ram Sukh v Emp, 47 All 284 23 A L J 8 26 Cr L J 688

(9) A complaint was preferred under sections 352 and 504 I P C but the Magistrate issued process upon the accused directing him to

(10) The accused who were Police constables committed rioting in the course of which they took several persons in custody They were at first tried for wrongful confinement under section 342 I P C in respect of the arrests made by them and were acquitted subsequently they were convicted of rioting under section 147 I P C Held that the second trial was not barred The two offences fell under section 235 (1) of this Code—Ram Sahay v Emp 48 Cal 78 24 C W N 763 21 Cr L J 614

(11) The accused was charged under sec 409 I P C for criminal breach of trust in respect of Rs 18 924 alleged to have been misappropriated by him between 1st October 1921 and 1st March 1922 The charge was withdrawn with the leave of the Court and the accused was acquitted He was subsequently charged with having committed criminal breach of trust in respect of a sum of Rs 100 on the 30th November 1921 The prosecution alleged that the defalcation of this item of Rs 100 was not included in the sum of Rs 18 9 4 and the facts relating thereto were not known to him at the time of the previous charge Held that as the sum of Rs 100 (the subject of the subsequent charge) was not included in the gross sum of Rs 18 924 (the subject of the previous charge) the offence subsequently charged was not the same in respect of which the accused was previously acquitted therefore the previous acquittal did not operate as a bar to the subsequent trial of the accused—Nagendra Nath v Emp 50 Cal 632 25 Cr L J 156 27 C W N 578 (following Emp v Kashinath 12 Bom L R 226)

(12) A person who has been convicted of theft (sec 3 9 I P C) in respect of a certain quantity of opium can be subsequently tried for illicit possession of the same opium under section 9 of the Opium Act (1 of 1878)—Deoki v Emp 48 All 496 24 A I J 509 27 Cr L J 767

But a person who has been tried and acquitted of offenc s under sections 201 and 202 I P C cannot be tried again for an offence under section 176 I P C based on the same facts Such a case does not come under section 235 (1) but under section 235 (2) and therefore sub section (2) of this section does not apply It falls under sub-section (1) of this section and the second trial is barred—Sharbekhan v Emp 10 C W N 518

1095 Sub-section (3) — Constituted a different offence —The facts or circumstances must be such as to indicate a different kind of offence of which there could be no conviction at the first trial It is not enough to show merely circumstances of aggravation or seri consequences of the offence which have occurred since the first Where a person was convicted under section 21 of the Rangoon

Act 1899 for being in possession of an article supposed to be stolen he cannot be tried subsequently for an offence under section 457 I P C merely on the ground that the owner of the article is traced and some further evidence is available—8 Bur L T 129 The new evidence must constitute a different kind of offence for which he could not have been tried at the first trial

Were not known to the Court —The new facts or consequences must have occurred since the conviction or acquittal at the first trial Thus where a person was at first tried for causing grievous hurt and convicted and after the conviction the injured man died it was held that the accused could be again tried for the offence of culpable homicide since the consequence of hurt (i e the death) did not take place until after the first trial—Crown v Sarbiland 1901 P R 3 36 All 4 So also where a person was acquitted of an offence under the Bombay City Municipal Act for proceeding to erect certain balconies in contravention of the Act he can be subsequently tried for failure to remove these balconies after notice because the offence of non removal of these balconies could not have been committed until the notice to remove them was served and the service was made only after the previous acquittal—Municipality of Bombay v Javer 4 Bom L R 575

But if the new facts or consequences were known to the Court at the time of the first trial a second trial for an offence constituted by these new facts would be barred Thus where the prisoner was at first tried for causing hurt and before the trial and conviction for hurt the injured man died and the fact was known to the Court which convicted the prisoner for hurt he could not again be tried for homicide under this sub-section though he might be under sub-section (4)—Mahadeogir v Emp 9 N L R 26 14 Cr L J 135

1096 Sub-section (4) —Was not competent —The words not competent to try mean had no jurisdiction to try —K E v Krishna Aiyar 24 Mad 641 If a person has been acquitted or convicted of an offence but the same facts disclose another offence which could not be tried by the same Magistrate who tried the first offence then the previous acquittal or conviction is no bar to further proceedings for the latter offence—In re Venkataranga 18 Cr L J 643 (Mad) Palani Goundan v Emp 48 M L J 490 6 Cr L J 108 Therefore the trial of the accused for an offence of voluntarily causing grievous hurt by a Magistrate does not bar the trial of the accused for attempt to murder on the same facts as the previous trial was by a Court not competent to try the latter offence—7 N W P H C R 371 Where a Magistrate convicted the accused of rioting a fresh complaint of dacoity based on the same facts was not barred since the Magistrate who tried the offence of rioting was not competent to try the offence of dacoity—7 Mad 557 Similarly a previous conviction for the offence of causing hurt tried before a Magistrate does not bar a subsequent trial by the Sessions Judge of an offence under section 304 upon the same facts—Emp v Bahiru 5 Bom L R 125 43 Mad 330 A conviction by a Magistrate for a minor offence does not bar a subsequent trial for murder

because the Magistrate was not competent to try the offence of murder—Ratanlal 337 Wadhaua v Croun 1912 P R 7 A person acquitted or convicted by a Magistrate under section 465 I P C may on the same facts be tried by a Court of Session under section 467 on the allegation that the document said to have been forged was a valuable security—19 Cr L J 388 (Cal) When on a complaint made under sections 409 and 477A I P C a second class Magistrate proceeded to deal with the case as one under section 408 I P C and acquitted the accused and the complainant afterwards presented a further complaint to the District Magistrate praying for the trial of the accused under sections 409 and 477A I P C it was held that the District Magistrate was competent to take cognizance of the second complaint as the second class Magistrate who dealt with the first complaint was not empowered to commit the accused persons for trial to the Court of Session—Krishnadhone v Mahendra 23 C W N 518 A person convicted by a village Headman under the Burma Village Act for assault can be tried subsequently by a Magistrate for the causing of hurt upon the same facts the village Headman not being competent to try the offence of causing hurt—(1919) U B R 3rd Qr 135

If however the Court (Sessions Judge) which tried the previous offence was also competent to try the subsequent offence the trial of the latter offence is barred by this section and the fact that the first offence was triable with the aid of assessors and the second offence was triable by a jury, is immaterial—K E v Krishna Aiyar 4 Mad 641 This sub-section refers to the competency of the tribunal to try the offence—36 Mad 308 and not to the nature of the offence i e as to whether it is triable by jury or with assessors

The absence of a proper complaint under section 199 of the Code renders the Court incompetent to try the offence Where a Magistrate dismissed a complaint of an offence under section 498 I P C on the ground that the complaint was not made by the person specified under section 199 and acquitted the accused it was held that the order of acquittal amounted to a finding that the Court was not competent to try the offence in the absence of a complaint by the proper person and therefore a fresh complaint instituted by the proper person (the husband of the woman) was not barred under this section—Umeruddin v Emp 31 All 317 9 Cr L J 576 Similarly where the accused was first tried under sections 366 368 and 376 I P C and acquitted and subsequently the husband of the woman preferred a complaint under section 498 I P C on the same facts and the accused was tried and convicted it was held that the second conviction was not illegal since the previous Court was not competent to try the accused under section 498 in the absence of a complaint by the husband—Emp v Tikaram 17 Bom L R 678 As to the effect of absence of complaint under section 195 see Note 1090 above

Where a previous prosecution for an offence under section 171F I P C failed on the ground that sanction under section 196 Cr P C not obtained a subsequent prosecution on the same facts an

the same offence is not illegal if it is launched after obtaining such sanction In the absence of a sanction in the first trial the first Court which tried the accused was not a Court of competent jurisdiction in respect of the offence and the second trial is not therefore barred—Ram Nath v K E 24 A L J 180 27 Cr L J 705 A prosecution for an offence specified in section 82 of the Registration Act cannot be commenced without the sanction of the officers mentioned in section 83 of that Act and consequently, an acquittal in a previous trial for an offence under section 419 I P C when no such sanction under section 83 had been given is no bar to a subsequent prosecution under section 82 of the Registration Act on such sanction being given The Court in the previous trial was not competent to try the accused under section 82 of the Registration Act—Mohan Lal v Emp 19 A L J 813 22 Cr L J 50 Hussain v Emp 39 All 293 But see 1 Rang 299 and 11 Cal 566 Where an accused charged under section 21 of the Bengal Food Adulteration Act 1919 (Act VI of 1919) was acquitted on the ground that the sanction of the Municipal Commissioners was not obtained and subsequently the sanction was obtained and another prosecution was launched held that the previous acquittal did not operate as a bar to the fresh prosecution—P Banerjee v Bipin 30 C W N 382 27 Cr L J 751

1097 Explanation —What orders do not amount to acquittal — (1) The dismissal of a complaint under section 203 is not an order of acquittal within the meaning of this section and therefore upon such dismissal it is competent for the Magistrate to entertain a fresh complaint or to re hear the original complaint see notes under sec 203

(2) An order under section 249 stopping the proceedings of a trial has been specially excluded by the explanation from being an order of acquittal and therefore it does not bar fresh proceedings—1913 P R 9

(3) A stay of trial under section 240 has not the effect of acquittal of the accused Where a Magistrate trying an accused for offences under sections 193 and 204 I P C convicted the accused under the former section but with regard to the latter the Magistrate thinking that the facts constituted some other offences ordered the papers to be placed before the District Magistrate and later on the accused was again put on trial under section 204 I P C it was held that the first disposal did not amount to an acquittal but only to a stay of trial under section 240 and the subsequent trial was not barred by this section—1889 A W N 8

(4) Where the prisoner is released by the Appellate Court on the ground of illegal or irregular procedure in the Lower Court the release is no bar to the retrial of the accused for the same offence—13 W R 42

Discharge of accused —Section 403 applies only to cases of acquittal or conviction and has no application to a case in which the accused person has been discharged—17 A L J 867

It is competent for the Magistrate to rehear a complaint after the accused is discharged under section 253 or 259 See notes under those sections An order of discharge under section 333 is no bar to fresh proceedings—K. E v Sheikh Idoo 49 Cal 71 but see 52 Cal 590

PART VII.

OF APPEAL, REFERENCE AND REVISION.

CHAPTER XXXI.

Of Appeals.

Unless otherwise provided, no appeal to lie

404. No appeal shall lie from any judgment or order of a Criminal Court except as provided for by this Code or by any other law for the time being in force

1099. No appeal.—Ordinarily no appeal lies, except as otherwise provided by this Code or by any other special law. In a case in which no appeal lies from an order, the proper course is to make an application for revision—1893 A. W. N. 147. Although the law may not allow appeal in certain cases, the High Court in the exercise of the powers vested in it as a Court of Revision may, in those cases and on very exceptional grounds, act as an Appellate Court—Q. E. v. Sheikh Badrudin, 8 Bom. 197. If an appeal is presented to the High Court in a case in which no appeal is allowed to the High Court, the case may be disposed of under its revisional powers, if the High Court finds that it is a proper case in which it may exercise its revisional jurisdiction. See 9 Cal. 513.

1100. Appeal to Privy Council.—Unlike the Civil Procedure Code, the Code of Criminal Procedure contains no provision for appeal to the Privy Council. It is only in the power of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council exercising the prerogative right on behalf of the Crown to entertain appeals in matters of criminal jurisdiction—In re Joy Kissen Mookerjee 1 W. R. 13 (P. C.)

An appeal to the Privy Council lies only under very special and exceptional circumstances. It is not in every case in which it could be shown that the Judge had misdirected the jury, that an appeal will be allowed—15 All. 310. Before granting the certificate that the case is a fit one for appeal to the Privy Council, the High Court must be satisfied that there is a reasonable ground for thinking that grave and substantial injustice may have been done by reason of some departure from the principles of natural justice—In re Bal Gangadhar Tilak, 33 Bom. 221: 10 Bom. L. R. 973, 9 Cr. L. J. 226. The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council does not lightly interfere in criminal cases; but where justice has been gravely and injuriously miscarried and the sentence pronounced against the appellant formed an invasion of his liberty and denial of his just rights as a citizen their Lordships felt called upon to interfere—Louis Edouard Laviers v King 18 C W N 98 (P C) 15 Cr L J 305 26 M L J 1

The rule has been repeatedly laid down and invariably followed that His Majesty will not review or interfere with the course of criminal proceedings unless it is shown that by a disregard of the forms of legal process or by some violation of the principles of natural justice or otherwise substantial and grave injustice has been done—Abdul Rahman v Emp 5 Rang 53 (P C) 6 Bur L J 65 29 Bom L R 813 31 C W N 271 52 M L J 585 5 A L J 117 28 Cr L J 259 Channing Arnold v Emp 41 Cal 1023 (P C) 18 C W N 785 15 Cr L J 309 In re Dillet (1887) 12 A C 459 The Sovereign in Council interferes only when it is shown that injustice of a serious and substantial character has occurred A mere mistake on the part of the Court below as for example in the admission of improper evidence will not suffice if it has not led to injustice of a grave character Nor do the Judicial Committee advise interference merely because they themselves would have taken a different view of the evidence admitted Such questions are as a general rule treated as being for the final decision of the Courts below Error in procedure may be of a character so grave as to warrant the interference of the Sovereign Such error may for example deprive a man of a constitutional or statutory right to be tried by a jury or by some particular tribunal Or it may have been carried to such an extent as to cause the outcome of the proceedings to be contrary to fundamental principles which justice requires to be observed But where the error consists only in the fact that evidence has been improperly admitted which was not essential to a result which might have been come to wholly independently of it the case is different The dominant question is the broad one whether substantial justice has been done and if substantial justice has been done it is contrary to the general practice of the Board to advise the Sovereign to interfere with the result—Dal Singh v K E 44 Cal 876 (P C) 15 A L J 475 19 Bom L R 510 21 C W N 818 33 M L J 555 18 Cr L J 471

Period of Limitation for appeal—See Arts 150 150A 154 155 and 157 of the Indian Limitation Act IX of 1908

Appeal from order rejecting application for restoration of attached property

405 Any person whose application under section 89 for the delivery of property or the proceeds of the sale thereof has been rejected by any Court may appeal to the Court to which appeals ordinarily lie from the sentences of the former Court

Court to which appeals ordinarily lie means Court to which appeals lie in the majority of cases even though in a particular instance, appeal may lie to another Court—In re Anant Rao 11 Bom 438

406. Any person who has been ordered under Section 118 to give security for keeping the peace or for good behaviour may appeal against such order—

Appeal from order requiring security for keeping the peace or for good behaviour.

(a) If made by a Presidency Magistrate, to the High Court ;

(b) If made by any other Magistrate, to the Court of Session :

Provided that the Local Government may, by notification in the local official Gazette, direct that in any district specified in the notification, appeals from such orders made by a Magistrate other than the District Magistrate or a Presidency Magistrate shall lie to the District Magistrate and not to the Court of Session :

Provided further, that nothing in this section shall apply to persons the proceedings against whom are laid before a Sessions Judge in accordance with the provisions of sub-section (2) or sub-section (3A) of Section 123.

1101. Change —This section has been redrafted by section 109 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 The old section stood thus —

"406 Any person ordered by a Magistrate other than the District Magistrate or a Presidency Magistrate to give security for good behaviour under section 118 may appeal to the District Magistrate "

The main changes introduced are —(1) Under the old section an appeal was allowed only in a good behaviour case, no appeal lay from an order directing security to keep the peace—In re Chet Ram, 27 All 623, Har Datt v Emp, 14 A. L J 268, 17 Cr L J. 165, Baranasi v Parah 11 A. L J 16, 35 All 103 ; 11 Bom. L R 740 ; Shamrao v Emp, 19 N L R 160 These cases are now over-ruled, and an appeal is now allowed from such order

(2) Under the old law there was no appeal against an order of a District Magistrate or Presidency Magistrate directing security—1898 A W N 127 under the present law, an appeal lies from the order of any Magistrate

(3) Under the old law, the appeal lay to the District Magistrate, under the present law, it will ordinarily lie to the Court of Session, and in the case of orders by a Presidency Magistrate, to the High Court This provision did not exist in the Bills or Reports but was made during the debate in the Legislative Assembly. The reason of this amendment has been thus stated by Dr Gour, on whose motion the amendment was carried · "All cases in the district relating to the breach of the peace and good behaviour are cases in which the District Magistrate is interested officially, and it is only fair that any order passed by a Magistrate should be revisable on appeal by an independent tribunal such as the Sessions

Judge . . Is the accused likely to get fair and even handed justice at the hands of the District Magistrate who peruses case dairies and police reports and hears a good many things which undoubtedly he is bound to hear about the badmashes of his district and about people who are disturbers of public peace ? or is it likely that justice will suffer and has suffered in the past by such cases being finally disposed of by him rather than by an independent tribunal such as the Sessions Judge ? '—Legislative Assembly Debates 8th February 1923 pp 2063 2064

1102. Scope —This section applies only to an order requiring security under section 118 an order directing security to keep the peace under section 106 is not appealable—2 Weir 460

Clause (b) —Under the old law an appeal from an order passed by a Magistrate (other than the District Magistrate) lay to the Court of the District Magistrate and not to the Court of Session—Mahendra v K E, 48 Cal 874 25 C W N 383 23 Cr L J 209 1 S L R 98 Even an appeal from the order of an Additional District Magistrate lay to the District Magistrate and not to the Sessions Judge—48 Cal 874 Under the present law the appeal will lie to the Sessions Court only under a special notification under the first proviso the appeal will lie to the District Magistrate.

Second proviso —This proviso expressly lays down that the moment a reference is made to the Court of Session under section 123 it operates as a bar to an appeal The reason is two fold first since the Sessions Judge is seized of the case on the reference any appeal to him is unnecessary, secondly if an appeal is allowed to the Court of the District Magistrate under the first proviso there may be two different decisions one by the District Magistrate on appeal and another by the Sessions Judge on the reference The principle of this proviso was recognised under the old law see Oamar Din v Emp 23 Cr L J 454 (Lah)

Where the order of a Sub divisional Magistrate under sec 123 is confirmed by the Sessions Judge the order passed by the Sessions Court becomes the operative order and no appeal lies therefrom to the District Magistrate as it were from the order of the Sub divisional Magistrate—I B R (1893 1901) 381 When a reference has been made to the Sessions Judge under sec 123 and disposed of no appeal lies to the District Magistrate—Crown v Ida 1900 P R 15 nor even to the High Court—9 Cal 878

406A Any person aggrieved by an order refusing to accept or rejecting a surety under Section 122 may appeal against such order—

Appeal from order refusing to accept or rejecting a surety.

(a) if made by a Presidency Magistrate, to the High Court ;

(b) if made by the District Magistrate, to the Court of Session ; or

(c) if made by a Magistrate other than the Di Magistrate, to the District Magistrate.

This section has been added by section 110 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 "We think that there should be a general right of appeal against the rejection of a surety, and we have provided for it in section 406A"—Report of the Select Committee of 1916

Appeal from sentence of Magistrate of the second or third class

407. (1) Any person convicted on a trial held by any Magistrate of the second or third class, or any person sentenced under Section 349, or in respect of whom an order has been made or a sentence has been passed under Section 380 by a Sub-divisional Magistrate of the second class, may appeal to the District Magistrate.

Transfer of appeals to first class Magistrate.

(2) The District Magistrate may direct that any appeal under this section, or any class of such appeals, shall be heard by any Magistrate of the first class subordinate to him and empowered by the Local Government to hear such appeals, and thereupon such appeal or class of appeals may be presented to such Subordinate Magistrate, or, if already presented to the [illegible] h Subordi- [illegible] withdraw [illegible] appeals so presented or transferred.

Change:—The italicised words have been added by section 111 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 A similar amendment is made in section 408 also

1103. 'Convicted on a trial' —Since the word 'offence' as defined by section 4 includes an act in respect of which a complaint may be made under section 20 of the Cattle Trespass Act, a person against whom an order under section 22 of that Act is made is a person 'convicted on a trial' within the meaning of this section, and an appeal against such conviction by a second or third class Magistrate lies under this section—19 Mad 517, Rodriks v. Papa Dada, 46 Bom 58

Second or Third Class Magistrate —If a second class Magistrate is holding a trial, and after the hearing is complete, he is invested with first class powers and he convicts the accused in the latter capacity, he will be deemed to have held the trial as a second class Magistrate, and the appeal will lie against his judgment in this trial to the District Magistrate It is not the conviction but the holding of the trial by a second or third class Magistrate that determines the forum of appeal—Emp v. Nga Pas, 4 L B R 239, 8 Cr L J 48 But where a Magistrate begins a trial as a second class Magistrate but before the hearing of the arguments he is invested with first class powers, i e, where part of the trial is held by him as a 2nd class Magistrate and part as a first class Magistrate, the proper tribunal for hearing the appeal from his conviction is the Sessions Judge and not the District Magistrate—Shobhanjan v Emp, 6 P L T 554, 26 Cr L J 914, A I R 1925 Pat 472, Babu Ram v Crown, 8 Lah 203

An appeal from a Bench of Magistrates invested with 2nd or 3rd class powers will lie under this section to the District Magistrate—Q E v Narayanasami, 9 Mad 36 But if a Bench when sitting together is invested with first class powers though consisting of second or third class Magistrates an appeal from such Bench will not lie to the District Magistrate but to the Sessions Judge—Haialdar v Jagu Mian 9 Cal 96

1104. Sub-section (2) —Transfer by District Magistrate —The District Magistrate may delegate his work of hearing appeals but not any revisional work Where a District Magistrate directed an Assistant Collector under him to perform all routine work of the Collector's office including criminal appellate and revisional work it was held that as regards revisional work such a delegation was ultra vires, because this section does not refer to work of that kind but as regards appellate work, the delegation is valid—Bai Harku v Sitaram 2 Bom L R 536

An Additional District Magistrate is subordinate to the District Magistrate for the purposes of this sub-section and the District Magistrate may transfer an appeal to the Additional District Magistrate See sec 10 (3)

The Court to which an appeal is transferred for disposal and on which the responsibility for its correct disposal rests is not bound by any opinion as to the necessity for taking further evidence formed by the Court from which the appeal was transferred and which is no longer responsible for the decision of the appeal—In re Alagu Ambalam 31 Mad 277 18 M L J 89 7 Cr L J 329

Even though a District Magistrate has transferred the appeal to a Sub divisional Magistrate the District Magistrate has jurisdiction to withdraw the appeal to his own file from the file of a Sub-Divisional Magistrate by whom it has been heard in part Where such Sub Divisional Magistrate had issued summons for the examination of certain witnesses as Court witnesses it is not incumbent on the District Magistrate on the withdrawal of the case to his own file to examine those witnesses as he is not bound by any opinion of the Sub Divisional Magistrate—In re Alagu Ambalam 31 Mad 277

408 Any person convicted on a trial held by an Assistant Sessions Judge, a District Magistrate or other Magistrate of the first class, or any person sentenced under Section 349, or in respect of whom an order has been made or a sentence has been passed under Section 380 by a Magistrate of the first class, may appeal to the Court of Session:

Appeal from sentence of Assistant Sessions Judge or Magistrate of the first class

Provided as follows:

(a) * * *

(b) when in any case an Assistant Sessions Judge or a Magistrate specially empowered under Section 30 passes any sentence of imprisonment for a term exceeding four years, or any sentence of transportation, the appeal of all or any of the accused convicted at such trial shall lie to the High Court ;

(c) when any person is convicted by a Magistrate of an offence under Section 124A of the Indian Penal Code, the appeal shall lie to the High Court

Change —The italicised words have been added by section 112 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 Clause (1) which referred to European British Subjects has been omitted by the Criminal Law Amendment Act XII of 1923

1105. 'Convicted' —A person who is convicted but on whom no sentence is passed the person being released on probation under section 562 is said to be 'convicted within the meaning of this section and can appeal—Emp v Manohar, 1904 P R 24 1 Cr L J 1098 Emp v Maiki 28 Bom L R 671 27 Cr L J 873 Hayat v Crown 1917 P R 20 18 Cr L J 401 Bahadur v Ismail 52 Cal 463 20 C W N 151 If a Magistrate of the first class passes an order under section 562 in a summary trial section 414 will not apply but the case will be governed by this section, and an appeal will lie to the Sessions Judge—Emp v Hira Lal 46 All 828 (830), 22 A L J 751, 25 Cr L J 1244

Sentence under Section 349 —When a case is referred to a District Magistrate under section 349 the fact that he is also invested with special powers under section 30 will not empower him to pass a sentence of five years' imprisonment , such a sentence is ultra vires having regard to the last clause of section 349 The appeal in such a case will lie to the Court of Session, and not to the High Court under proviso (b)—Nga Pya v K E, 4 L B R 53

Sentence under Section 380 —Where proceedings were submitted under section 380 by a second class Magistrate to a first class Magistrate in order that the accused might be dealt with under section 562 and the latter convicted and sentenced the accused and the question arose under the old law as to whether an appeal lay to the Sessions Judge or to the District Magistrate, it was held that the sentence passed by the first class Magistrate under section 380 in a case submitted to him was unquestionably a sentence passed by such Magistrate, and the appeal lay to the Court of Session—Emp v Bhimappa, 17 Bom L R 895 This is now expressly laid down in the present section as amended

1106. Court of Session —Where a Magistrate was authorised to try all offences throughout the whole District, and there were two

Sessions Divisions in the District an appeal from a sentence of the Magistrate will lie to the Sessions Division within whose jurisdiction the Head quarters of the Magistrate were situate irrespective of the place where the offence was committed—Valia Ambu v Emp 30 Mad 136 Hiralal v Crown 1918 P R 7 19 Cr L J 310

Appeal heard without jurisdiction —Where an accused person was acquitted by a Sessions Judge in an appeal which he had no jurisdiction to hear, he may be re arrested even after the expiration of the period to which he was originally sentenced to be imprisoned, and may be made to undergo the rest of his term—Ratanlal 17

1107. Proviso (b).—The reason for this proviso obviously is that when a long term of imprisonment has to be undergone, the question whether the offence is proved should be tried in appeal by a Court of a higher grade than it would be tried by if the sentence were less—Nga Pya 4 L B R 53 The sentence of imprisonment exceeding four years in this proviso must be taken to mean the substantive sentence of imprisonment apart from any sentence of imprisonment in default of fine Therefore an appeal from a sentence awarding 4 years rigorous imprisonment and a fine of Rs 100 and in default of fine to six months rigorous imprisonment lies to the Court of Session and not to the High Court—Khuda Bakhsh v Crown 1918 P R 19 19 Cr L J 742

An appeal from the conviction and sentence of less than four years' imprisonment by an Assistant Judge lies to the Sessions Judge and not to the High Court simply because by the time the appeal is filed the Assistant Sessions Judge has been promoted to the position of Offg Sessions Judge (and is therefore incompetent to hear the appeal against his own order) The proper procedure in such a case would be to file the appeal before the Offg Sessions Judge who on the receipt of the appeal would either send it to the High Court or would postpone its hearing till the return of the permanent incumbent—Garib Lal v Crown 3 P L J 102 19 Cr L J 442

1108 Concurrent sentences —Under section 35 (3) concurrent sentences cannot be aggregated together for the purpose of raising the status of the forum of appeal—Gurusahay v Emp 3 P L J 138 Emp v Tulsi Ram 35 All 154 11 A L J 111 Therefore where an Assistant Session Judge or a Magistrate specially empowered under section 30 passes several sentences of imprisonment upon an accused each of which is for a term of four years or under and the sentences are ordered to run concurrently the appeal from the conviction and sentences lies to the Sessions Court and not to the High Court—Lakshmi v K E 23 C L J 595 Gurusahai v Emp 3 P L J 138 Sher Muhammad v Crown, 1901 P R 25 Jagadish v K E 10 N L J 135 28 Cr L J 672

411 Any person convicted on a trial held by a Presidency Magistrate may appeal to the High Court, if the Magistrate has sentenced him to imprisonment for a term exceeding six months or to fine exceeding two hundred rupees

Appeal from sentence of Presidency Magistrate

1111 Imprisonment —The word imprisonment means a substantive sentence of imprisonment and does not include an award of imprisonment in default of payment of fine the operation of which is contingent only on the fine not being paid Therefore where the Presidency Magistrate inflicted a sentence of six months rigorous imprisonment and a fine of Rs 200 and in default of payment three months simple imprisonment the two sentences of imprisonment could not be combined to give the prisoner a right of appeal—In re Jotharam 2 Mad 30 Schein v O I 16 Cal 99 O E v Hari 20 Bom 145

412 Notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained where an accused person has pleaded guilty and has been convicted by a Court of Session or any Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class on such plea, there shall be no appeal except as to the extent or legality of the sentence

No appeal in certain cases when accused pleads guilty

1112 Conviction on his own plea —The principle of this section is that the accused in pleading guilty to the charge is considered to have waived his right to question the legality of the conviction he can only quest on the extent or legality of the sentence—Emp v Akub Ali 31 C L J 127 Emp v Jafar 5 Bom 85 When a person has been convicted on his own plea by a Presidency Magistrate no appeal shall lie to the High Court except as to the extent or legality of the sentence although he is sentenced for a term exceeding six months or to fine exceeding Rs 200—5 Bom 85 Where a charge has been framed against accused person under section 221 (7) of this Code, and such person has pleaded guilty to the charge that he is a previous convict, the Appellate Court under section 412 is precluded from opening the question whether the accused is a previous convict or not—Emp v Kissan, 4 N L R 163.

A person who pleaded guilty to the charge and was convicted by a second class Magistrate, is not barred from contending in appeal that the conviction is illegal. Section 412 bars the appeal where the conviction was by a first class Magistrate—Chunilal v Emp, 28 Bom L R 1023 27 Cr L J. 1148

Extent and legality of the sentence:—Under this section the right of appeal when the accused has pleaded guilty is limited to such matter as may be a special ground of complaint with respect to the sentence, (as distinguished from the conviction itself), whether on the ground that the sentence is beyond what the circumstances of the case required, or that the sentence is illegal or not authorized by law—Emp v Jafar, 5 Bom 85 Although the Appellate Court may reject an appeal on the ground that the accused has pleaded guilty before the Lower Court, still the extent and legality of the sentence will have to be considered by the Appellate Court —Ratanlal 954 and in order to consider the legality of the sentence the Appellate Court must satisfy itself that the plea of guilty was properly made after the nature of the offence was explained to and understood by the prisoner—22 Bom 759

But where no sentence was passed (e g, where the accused was convicted upon his own plea of guilty, and was released under section 562 on his executing a bond) the right of appeal is absolutely barred—Hayata v. Crown, 1917 P R. 20

413 Notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, there shall be no appeal by a convicted person in cases in which a Court of Session or the District Magistrate or other Magistrate of the first class passes a sentence of imprisonment not exceeding one month only, or of fine not exceeding fifty rupees only, or of whipping only.

No appeal in petty cases

413. Notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, there shall be no appeal by a convicted person in cases in which a Court of Session [* * *] passes a sentence of imprisonment not exceeding one month only or in which a Court of Session or District Magistrate or other Magistrate of the first class passes a sentence of fine not exceeding rupees fifty only. * *

No appeal in petty cases

Explanation.—There is no appeal from a sentence of imprisonment passed by such Court or Magistrate in default of payment of fine when no substantive sentence of imprisonment has also been passed.

Change —This section has been amended by section 24 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1923 Under this section as now amended, a right of appeal is given against conviction by District Magistrates or Magistrates of the first class where they pass sentences of imprisonment even for a period of one month or less Under the old law (section 416) only an European British subject could appeal against such sentence "We consider that outside the presidency towns in the case of all persons, both European and Indian there should be an appeal against any sentence of imprisonment passed by a Magistrate This involves a substantial modification of the general law of the land and will to a certain extent increase the work of the Sessions Courts Nevertheless we are of opinion on general grounds, and apart from the particular case of the European British subject, that an appeal should lie against any sentence It is to be noted that short sentences of imprisonment should where possible be avoided and the number of sentences of one month and under passed by District Magistrates and first class Magistrates should not as far as we can judge, be very large In the case of a sentence passed in a trial by a Court of Session, we would allow no appeal in respect of a sentence of one month or under" —Report of the Racial Distinctions Committee, Para, 19

This section also gives a right of appeal against a sentence of whipping.

1113. Sole sentence of imprisonment —Where the accused was sentenced to 14 days' imprisonment and to pay the cost of court fees, the sentence is a sole sentence of imprisonment not exceeding one month and the order to pay the court fees is no part of the sentence and is not a sentence of fine added to imprisonment, so as to make it appealable (sec 415)—Madan v Haran, 20 Cal 687, Q E v Khajabhoy, 16 Mad 423, Emp v Karuppanna, 29 Mad 188, 1 Weir 724 (Contra—22 Mad. 153, 5 M H C R App 28)

Fine —Compensation awarded under section 22 of the Cattle Trespass Act is not a fine, and therefore an appeal lies from the order awarding compensation less than rupees fifty—Rodriks v Papa Dada, 16 Bom 58

Aggregation of sentences —Where a person is charged with two separate offences in one trial, the amount of the whole punishment awarded for the two offences must be regarded as one sentence for the purpose of determining whether an appeal lies or not—3 C L R 511; Reg v. Rama, 1 Bom 223 See section 415

Passing appealable sentence at the request of accused —When a Magistrate at first passed a non appealable sentence, and shortly afterwards at the request of the accused enhanced the sentence to appealable, and on appeal the Sessions Judge struck out the adde as illegal, and declined to hear the appeal on the ground that as originally passed was not appealable, it was held that as had passed an appealable sentence, an appeal lay und whether that sentence was passed legally or illegally and that the Sessions Judge was bound to hear the appeal on the merits—33 Bom 418

414 Notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained there shall be no appeal by a convicted person in any case tried summarily in which a Magistrate empowered to act under section 260 passes a sentence of imprisonment not exceeding three months only, or of fine not exceeding two hundred rupees only, or of whipping only

No appeal from certain summary convictions

414 Notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained there shall be no appeal by a convicted person in any case tried summarily in which a Magistrate empowered to act under section 260 passes a sentence * * * of fine not exceeding two hundred rupees only * * *

No appeal from certain summary convictions

This section has been amended by section 25 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act XII of 1923 By this amendment certain sentences passed on summary convictions which were originally non appealable (i.e. imprisonment for three months or less or whipping) are now made appealable Under the old law only European British subjects could appeal from such sentences

If a Magistrate of the first class passes an order under sec 562 in a summary trial this section does not apply because an order under sec 562 is not a sentence of imprisonment or fine but section 408 will govern the case and an appeal will lie to the Court of Session—Emp v Hira Lal 46 All 8 8 (1924) A I R J 51 25 Cr L J 144

415 An appeal may be brought against any sentence referred to in section 413 or section 414 by which any two or more of the punishments therein mentioned are combined but no sentence which would not otherwise be liable to appeal shall be appealable merely on the ground that the person convicted is ordered to find security to keep the peace

Proviso to sections 413 and 414

Explanation—A sentence of imprisonment in default of payment of fine is not a sentence by which two or more punishments are combined within the meaning of this section

1114 Combination of sentences—Where the accused was sentenced to one day's imprisonment and a fine of fifty rupees the fact that the accused was not actually sent to jail does not prevent the combination the passing of the sentence of imprisonment is sufficient and the two sentences of imprisonment and fine may be combined for the purposes of appeal—33 All 510

Security to keep the peace —The imprisonment to be undergone in default of furnishing security to keep the peace is not a part of a substantive sentence If the substantive sentence is not in itself appealable it does not become so merely because the person convicted has been ordered to find security to keep the peace—Maghu v K E 7 O C 338 1 Cr L J 1054

The words security to keep the peace refer only to those cases where the accused is ordered to find security to keep the peace under this Code and not where he is ordered to do so under any local enactment Thus where the accused was sentenced in a summary trial to three months imprisonment (which was non appealable prior to the amendment of sec 414) and further ordered under sec 31A of the Rangoon Police Act to give security it was held that this section did not apply and the sentence passed was appealable—Kathan v K E 4 L B R 359

Again this section applies where the accused is ordered to give security to keep the peace and not where he is required to furnish security for good behaviour—Kathan v K E 4 L B R 359

415 Notwithstanding anything contained in this Chapter, when more persons than one are convicted in one trial, and an appealable judgment or order has been passed in respect of any of such persons all or any of the persons convicted at such trial have a right of appeal

Special right of appeal in certain cases

This section has been added by sec 114 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 to remove the conflict of opinion which existed under the old law as will be evident from the undernoted cases

1115 Where several persons are tried and convicted at one trial some of whom are sentenced to appealable sentences while the rest are awarded non appealable sentence all of them will be able to appeal the fact that non appealable sentences are passed on some of them does not by virtue of section 413 take away their right of appeal Sec 413 applies to the case where only a non-appealable sentence is passed and not where non appealable as well as appealable sentences are pronounced—Crown v Naurati 1915 P R 30 Ba Thaw v K E 4 L B R 354 Jaisukh v Crown 1916 P R 16 Sheopal v K E 15 O C 386 Lal Singh v Emp 38 All 395 Biswanath v Emp 2 Cr L J 297 (Pat) Section 413 curtails the right of appeal only in cases in which there is no sentence upon any convicted person above the limit prescribed by sec 413 but if any of the convicted persons in the same case has received any punishment above that limit the right of appeal of any other person receiving a sentence below that limit is not at all curtailed but he

with the one who received a higher punishment has the right uncontrolled and uncurtailed—Pheku v K E, 4 P L J 135 20 Cr L J 515 (per Jwala Prasad J) This view has been adopted in the present section

The contrary view was taken in In re Uruma 16 M L T 33, 49 Mad 591, Phanu v K E, 4 P L J 435 (per Atkinson J), 39 All 293 Crown v Unar, 10 S L R 156, In re Annasami, 24 M L T 182, 21 Cr L J. 679 (All) in these cases it was held that the language of section 413 was imperative and took away the right of appeal under such circumstances, and the accused against whom non appealable sentences were passed could not acquire the right by reason of the fact that they were tried jointly with some other persons who received appealable sentences—24 M L T 182 This view has not been accepted by the Legislature and is overruled by the present Amendment

Where a person has been ordered to be released on probation of good conduct under sec 562 (which order is appealable under sec 408) and other persons have been awarded non appealable sentences, the latter persons also will be entitled to appeal, by operation of the provisions of this section—Bahadur v Ismail, 52 Cal 463, 29 C W N 151, 26 Cr L J 455.

Where more persons than one are convicted in one trial by the High Court criminal sessions and leave to appeal is granted to one of them under sec 449 (1) on the ground of his being an European British Subject such leave should also be granted to others (even if they are not proved to be European British Subjects) in view of the provisions of sec 415A—Gallagher v Emp, 54 Cal 52, 28 Cr L J 481

416 [Repealed]

This section, which has been repealed by the Criminal Law Amendment Act, XII of 1923 stood as follows —

"416 Nothing in section 413 and 414 applies to appeals from sentences passed under Chapter XXXIII on European British subjects"

That is, it laid down that in respect of those sentences which were non appealable in the case of Indian subjects an European British subject had a right of appeal This distinction is now abolished and both European and Indian subjects are placed on the same footing and given equal rights of appeal

417. The Local Government may direct the Public Prosecutor to present an appeal to the High Court from an original or appellate order of acquittal passed by any Court other than a High Court.

Appeal on behalf of Government in case of acquittal

If one of two accused is acquitted, and no appeal is preferred by the Government against his acquittal, he must be deemed to be innocent of the charge made against him, and the Sessions Judge (in an appeal by the other accused against his conviction) ought not to pass any remarks impugning the correctness of the acquittal If the Sessions Judge passes any such remarks the High Court will order those remarks to be expunged from the record—Abdul Aziz v Emp 25 Cr L J 1245 (Lah)

1116 Appeal against acquittal —The High Court has no authority to entertain an appeal under this section except upon an appeal by the Local Government—19 W R 55 6 C L R 245 14 Mad 363 The intention of the Legislature is that there should be no interference by the High Court with acquittal even though improper except upon a formal appeal by the Local Government—Emp v Miyaji 3 Bom 150 The law by limiting the right of appeal against judgments of acquittal to the Local Government prevents personal vindictiveness from seeking to call in question judgments of acquittal by way of appeal and evidently intends that such interference shall take place only in cases where there has been a miscarriage of justice so grave as would induce the Local Government to move in the matter—Dy Leg Rem v Karuna 22 Cal 164

Even the District Magistrate is not competent to refer the case to the High Court—K E v Chandika 24 O C 4 Where the prisoners convicted by a Magistrate are acquitted on appeal by the Sessions Judge it is not competent for the District Magistrate to transmit the proceeding to the High Court to have the Sessions Judge s order of acquittal set aside—In re A David 6 C L R 245

As to the High Court s power of revising an order of acquittal either at the instance of the Local Government or at the instance of a private complainant see Note 1204 under sec 439

1117 Public Prosecutor —Only the Public Prosecutor can file an appeal under this section The Local Government cannot direct any other person to appeal The Legal Remembrancer is a Public Prosecutor within the meaning of this section—Legal Remembrancer v Tularam 23 C W N 96 46 Cal 544 By a notification published in the Calcutta Gazette on the 24th June 1886 the Legal Remembrancer of Bengal became the ex officio Public Prosecutor in all cases before the High Court on its Appellate side except in cases coming from the Presidency Magistrates or the Magistrates in Calcutta So also by a notification in the Behar and Orissa Gazette on the 1st April 1912 the Legal Remembrancer of Behar and Orissa became the ex officio Public Prosecutor for that province But the Legal Remembrancer of Bengal cannot be deemed to be Public Prosecutor for the province of Behar when he has not been specially appointed as a Public Prosecutor for that province even the fact that the Legal Remembrancer of Bengal has been directed by a letter of the Government of Behar to file an appeal in the Calcutta High Court under section 417 Cr P C against an order of acquittal passed in a Beh case does not make him a Public Prosecutor for Behar when letter did not specially appoint him as such and especially there is already a Public Prosecutor for the province of Behar

the Legal Remembrancer of Bengal therefore cannot file the appeal—Deputy Legal Remembrancer v Gaya Prosad 41 Cal 425

A private prosecutor can neither present an appeal under this section nor apply in revision—14 Mad 363 In re Poora Churn 7 Cal 447

1118 High Court —An appeal will lie under this section only to the High Court Where a District Magistrate entertained an appeal from an order of acquittal passed by the subordinate Magistrate it was held that the District Magistrate acted without jurisdiction—7 Mad 213 26 Mad 478 So also a Sessions Judge has no right to entertain an appeal against an order of acquittal—Baijanath v Court Kanta 20 Cal 633 7 C W N cclvi

1119 Order of acquittal —The withdrawal of a complaint by a complainant operates as an order of acquittal—19 W R 55 A judgment passed by the Sessions Judge following the verdict of the jury acquitting the accused is a judgment of acquittal for the purpose of appeal by the Local Government—Emp v Judoonath 2 Cal 273 The words appellate order of acquittal mean and include all judgments of an Appellate Court by which a conviction is set aside—24 W R 41

The acquittal contemplated by this section need not be acquittal upon all the charges Where in a case tried by jury an accused charged with murder was acquitted of that charge but was convicted of culpable homicide not amounting to murder this section did apply and an appeal by the Local Government would lie in respect of the charge of murder even though the judgment of the Sessions Judge was not a judgment of absolute acquittal—Emp v Judoonath 2 Cal 273 Sitaram v Emp 1 O L J 421 2 O W N 550 26 Cr L J 1364

Limitation—An appeal under this section must be presented within six months from the date of the order appealed against (See Art 157 of the Indian Limitation Act 1908)

418 (1) An appeal may lie on a matter of fact as well as a matter of law, except where the trial was by jury, in

Appeal on what matters admissible which case the appeal shall lie on a matter of law only

Explanation—The alleged severity of a sentence shall, for the purposes of this section, be deemed to be a matter of law

(2) Notwithstanding anything contained in sub-section (1) or in Section 423, sub section (2), when, in the case of a trial by jury any person is sentenced to death, any other person convicted in the same trial with the person so sentenced may appeal on a matter of fact as well as a matter of law

Change—Sub section (2) has been newly added by section 115 of the Cr P C Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 The reason is stated below

1122 Scope of section—This section is applicable alike both to appeals by Government (sec 417) against an order of acquittal and to appeals by convicted persons against conviction and sentence—17 C P L R 75 (92) Therefore where in a case tried by jury the Local Government appealed to the High Court under section 417 against an order of acquittal and the grounds of appeal were all questions of fact the High Court rejected the application because under this section an appeal in the jury case can lie only on a question of law—10 Cal 1029

A Judicial Commissioner sitting on the original side and holding a sessions trial is to be deemed a Sessions Judge and not a Judge of the High Court and an appeal from his decision lies under this section to a Bench of the Judicial Commissioner s Court Khudabux v Emp, 19 S L R 309 26 Cr L J 562 (I B) A I R 1925 Sind 249

1123 Trial by jury—Where the trial was by jury the appeal will lie on a matter of law only By restricting appeals from cases triable by jury to matters of law only this section gives finality to the verdict of the jury where there has existed no error of law nor misdirection and where the Judge has concurred with the majority—Ratanlal 730

The words where the trial was by jury mean where the trial was in fact held by jury and not where the trial ought to have been held by jury And therefore where the accused was tried by jury in a case which ought to have been tried with the aid of assessors no appeal would lie except on a question of law the trial would be treated as one by a jury—25 Bom 680 23 Bom 696 25 Cal 555 3 Bom L R 28 But in 3 Cal 765 24 W R 30 Ratanlal 961 18 W R 59 it was held that in such a case the trial would be deemed as one held with the aid of assessors treating the verdict of the jury as the opinion of the assessors and the prisoner would not lose his right of appeal on the facts In 26 Mad 243 where a person was charged with an offence triable by jury and the jury acquitted him of that charge but found him guilty of an offence triable with the aid of assessors Benson J, held that the ver

was to be treated as an opinion of assessors and that an appeal lay on the facts of the case but Bhashyam Aiyangar J held that the jury had authority under section 238 in trying an offence triable by jury to find as an incident to the trial that certain facts were proved in the trial which constituted a minor offence and to return a verdict of guilty on such offence though such offence might not be triable by a jury, and therefore in this case the verdict was to be treated as a verdict on a trial by jury and an appeal would lie only on a point of law

In a case where a person is tried by a jury, and there is also another charge which is tried by the Judge with the same jury as assessors an appeal will lie on a matter of fact—18 Cr L J 346 (Mad)

1124. Matter of law —An appeal under this section from cases tried by jury lies on matters of law only and the Appellate Court cannot go into the facts of the case If it were to do so it would be substituting the decision of the Judges of that Court for the verdict of the jury who had the opportunity of seeing the demeanour of witnesses and weighing the evidence with the assistance which this affords whereas the Judges of the Appellate Court can only arrive at a decision only on a perusal of the paper-evidence—Wafadar v Q E 21 Cal 955, 39 All 348 23 C W N 661 If there is no question of law involved in the case the High Court has no power to interfere however absurd or perverse the verdict may be—14 Mad 36

Every petition of appeal in cases tried by jury should state clearly in what respect the law has been contravened The Court will not hunt through the records and find out the illegality if any The parties must point out in their petition of appeal wherein there has been a departure from the law Unless the exact contravention of law is pointed out, the petition of appeal is liable to be rejected—1 W R 21

Examples of 'matters of law —The question as to the admissibility of evidence which has been rejected by the Sessions Judge is a matter of law—2 Bom 61, so also the question as to whether the evidence which had been admitted by the Sessions Judge ought to have been admitted is a matter of law—Emp v Waman 27 Bom 626, 23 C W N 661 so also, an omission to consider relevant evidence—7 Cal 263, or a mis direction to the jury—25 Cal 230, 23 C W N 661 or a non-direction by the Judge on a question of prime importance in favour of the prisoner —27 Bom 644 But the High Court will not interfere with the verdict of the Jury merely because the Sessions Judge admitted an inadmissible evidence regarding an unimportant matter which had only a remote bearing on the question in issue and the admission of which could not have affected the verdict of the jury—Keramat v K E, 42 C L J 578 27 Cr L J A I R 1926 Cal 147

The High Court on a point of law as to the admissibility of evidence can review the whole case and determine whether the admission of rejected evidence would have affected the result of the trial—2 Bom 61 19 E 749

When High Court can go into facts —Where a Judge does not agree with the verdict of the jury and submits the case to the High Court

under section 307 the whole facts of the case may be gone into by the High Court The clear provisions of section 307 allowing the High Court to consider the entire evidence are not in any way curtailed by section 418 or 423 and the High Court can interfere with the verdict of the jury if it thinks proper to do so—Q E v McCarthy 9 All 490 see also 39 All 348 So also the High Court can go into the facts when a case is referred to it under section 374 for a confirmation of the sentence of death—19 W R 57 Q E v Chatradhari 2 C W N 49 In short, in a case tried by a jury the High Court can enter into facts only on a reference under section 307 or 374 and not on an appeal under this section

Sub-section (2) —Where in a Sessions trial of several accused one of the accused was sentenced to death and the other to lower punishments and all of them appealed it was held under the old law that the High Court on a reference under section 374 in respect of the person sentenced to death could go into the facts but in dealing with the appeal of the other persons the High Court must be confined to matters of law and could not enter into the facts—Q E v Chatradhari 2 C W N 49 This anomaly is now removed by sub section (2) This clause provides that when in the case of a trial by jury one person is sentenced to death and another to a lower punishment the second accused may appeal on a matter of fact as well as on a matter of law This is intended to remove the anomaly under the existing law that a High Court acting under section 374 could consider the facts of the case as regards the former accused but on an appeal of the second accused could only intervene on a point of law —

41 . ade in the form of a ing presented by the appellant or his pleader, and every such petition shall (unless the Court to which it is presented otherwise directs) be accompanied by a copy of the judgment or order appealed against, and, in cases tried by jury, a copy of the heads of the charge recorded under Section 367

Petition of appeal

1125 Scope of section —This section prescribes the form under which a petition of appeal is to be presented It applies even where the accused is in jail section 420 deals only with the mode in which the petition of appeal is to be presented when the petitioner is in jail and does not dispense with the other formalities prescribed by this section—1891 A W N 48 Section 420 is not derogatory to the general rule laid down in section 419 The latter section (419) applies as much to a prisoner in jail as to any other appellant and requires that the petition shall be prepared in a certain form while section 420 is only concerned with the manner of presentation of an appeal from jail—13 All 171

1126 Contents of petition —A petition of appeal in a case tried by jury can be made only on a question of law and the petition should state clearly in what respect the law has been contravened—1 W R 21 (cited under section 418)

A petition of appeal containing defamatory statements against the Magistrate will not be entertained Such petition may be returned for representation after eliminating the scandalous remarks—In re Clue Durant, 15 Bom 488 A petition of appeal containing a false statement will not make the petitioner liable to punishment for the false statement, because a criminal appeal is a continuation of the criminal case, and the appellant has got all the privileges of the accused—12 Mad 451 (cited in Note 981 under section 342)

1127. Presentation of petition :— As regards presentation no special method is enjoined in the Code, and the question is one of administrative convenience alone Therefore an actual presentation to an officer of the Court such as a Bench Clerk (in the High Court) or to one of the Judges, its members, is valid—29 M L J 101. But depositing a petition of appeal in a box kept for the convenience of parties (in the compound of a Court house) and intended for the deposit of papers for the Court is not a proper presentation because the box is not intended for appeals and also because a petition of appeal might have been deposited there by a person who could not legally present it—19 Mad 354

The petition should be presented in person, the transmission of it by post is not a sufficient compliance with the requirements of this section —2 Weir 467, Ratanlal 464, Q E v Arlappa, 15 Mad 137

Presentation by Pleader —The petition should be delivered to the proper officer of the Court, either by the appellant or by his pleader—Q E v Arlappa, 15 Mad 137 Presentation of an appeal by the vakil's gomasta or clerk is equivalent to presentation by pleader if the vakil has signed the petition and has been duly authorised by a vakalatnama—2 Weir 469 20 Mad 87 But presentation of the petition through a person who is not the clerk of the pleader, and over whose action and conduct the pleader has no control, is not a proper presentation—Q E v Ramasami, 21 Mad 114 Where a petition of appeal was prepared on behalf of three accused and signed under vakalat by their pleader and was presented by another pleader who held vakalat only from one of the accused, it was held that there was a proper presentation of the petition of appeal on behalf of all the accused—2 Weir 476 But where the prisoners had conflicting interests to each other, e g, where each of the prisoners made confessions exonerating himself and incriminating the other, it would be improper for one pleader to present an appeal on behalf of both and to represent both who had conflicting interests—1890 P R 13

The word pleader' includes a 'mukhtear' as well as any other person authorised by the appellant, and the presentation of the petition through them would be proper—Imp v Sivaram, 6 Bom 14, In re Suba Atlala 1 Mad 304 This is now made clear by the present definition of the word 'pleader' in Section 4 (r) as amended in 1923, by which a mukhtear has been placed on the same footing as a pleader.

1128 Copy of Judgment —It is in the discretion of the Appellate Court to admit an appeal without its being accompanied by a copy of the judgment or order appealed against where injustice might accrue to the appellant by insisting on a strict compliance with this section But in such cases before hearing the appeal the Court should have before it a copy of such judgment or order which it may get by sending for the record—Emp v Sitaram 5 Bom L R 704

Where there are several accused in a case and all of them prefer a joint appeal only one copy of the judgment appealed against is required to be filed and it is not necessary that there shall be a distinct appeal petition by each of the convicted persons separately accompanied by a separate copy of the judgment—Emp v Sitaram 5 Bom L R 704 Batasha v Emp 18 Cr L J 51 (Oudh)

A copy furnished in the prisoner s own language is sufficient —Ratanlal 82. See notes under Section 371

420 If the appellant is in jail, he may present his petition of appeal and the copies accompanying the same to the officer in charge of the jail, who shall thereupon forward such petition and copies to the proper Appellate Court

Procedure when appellant in jail

1129 This section deals with the manner of presentation of an appeal by a prisoner in jail but it does not dispense with the formalities prescribed by section 419 These formalities must be observed see 1891 A W N 48 and 13 All 171 cited in Note 1125 under section 419

Where the petitioner is in jail every facility such as pen ink paper and even a writer should be allowed to him to enable him to prepare the petition of appeal—13 W R 69 1 B H C R 16

There is nothing in this section to indicate that it is intended to deprive the appellant in jail of the opportunity of being heard in appeal Therefore where the appellant is in jail notice of the date of hearing should be given either to him or his pleader so that he may have a reasonable opportunity of being heard in support of his appeal—2 Weir 4

A jail appeal was preferred by some of the prisoners and while the appeal was pending a petition of appeal on behalf of some of the prisoners was filed through a mukhtar The Sessions Judge rejected the jail

421. (1) On receiving the petition and copy under Section 419 or Section 420, the Appellate Court shall peruse the same and if it considers that there is no sufficient ground for interfering it may dismiss the appeal summarily:

Summary dismissal of appeal

Provided that no appeal presented under Section 419 shall be dismissed unless the appellant or his pleader has had a reasonable opportunity of being heard in support of the same.

(2) Before dismissing an appeal under this section the Court may call for the record of the case, but shall not be bound to do so.

1130. Appellant not bound to appear.—An appeal should not be dismissed merely because the appellant or his pleader failed to appear to support the petition but the Appellate Court must consider whether there exist sufficient grounds for its interference, and must properly determine the appeal on the merits—Ratanlal 593, Ram Ekbal [illegible], 14 A. L. J. 377, Ratu Charan v. Emp., 5 N. L. R. 76, 46 Mad. [illegible] Bali [illegible] v. Emp., 24 Cr. L. J. 475 (Pat.). If the appellant does not appear but leaves the question of admission or rejection of the appeal to be determined by the Appellate Court on the papers, the Appellate Court is bound to peruse the papers and the appellant is not bound to appear a second time by counsel or in person—Ratanlal 7[illegible]0. But if the Appellate Court thinks that the presence of the prisoner (appellant) is necessary for the purpose of disposing of the appeal, the Court can direct that the prisoner be brought before it—2 Weir 475.

No sufficient ground for interfering.—The appellant's pleader should be allowed, if necessary, to refer to the certified copies of the evidence to show that there were sufficient grounds for interfering. Where the Judge disallowed the pleader to refer to the evidence, he acted erroneously—Mawa v. K. E., 11 O. C. 300, 9 Cr. L. J. 55.

Where there are in the memorandum of appeal allegations of withholding witnesses, of refusals to grant warrants and summonses to witnesses, and of disregard of certain evidence filed in the case, there were sufficient grounds for interference—Ratanlal 016. So also, where the grounds of appeal disclose reasons for discrediting the witnesses for the prosecution, there are sufficient grounds for interference and the Appellate Court ought not to dismiss the appeal—29 Mad. [illegible].

If no sufficient grounds for interference are shown, the Appellate Court should not interfere, but should dismiss the appeal—Emp v Sajiwan, 5 All 386

1131 Summary dismissal of appeal—Although this section gives the Appellate Court power to dismiss an appeal summarily that power must be exercised with judicial discretion Appeals which are complicated both in law and fact ought not to be summarily dismissed—19 Cr L J 228 (Cal) 3 P L J 389 22 Cr L J 349 (Cal) Where there has been a dispute as to facts and where the credibility of witnesses for the prosecution has been impugned it is proper for the Appellate Court to call for the record and look at the evidence and not to dismiss the appeal summarily—Padarath v Emp 24 Cr L J 477 (Pat) The summary dismissal of an appeal is not justified where there were disputed questions of fact in the case and the number of witnesses and documents were large and the Court of first instance had discussed the evidence and come to certain findings—Rahimaddi v Emp 22 Cr L J 349 (Cal)

An order of summary rejection of appeal under this section is final such an order is not open to review and it is immaterial whether such order is made before or after the papers have been called for—4 Bom 101 O F v Bhimappa 19 Bom 732 1887 P R 14 But the Madras High Court holds that if the appeal has been dismissed for default of the pleader s appearance and it is proved to the satisfaction of the Appellate Court that there is a reasonable excuse for the non appearance of the pleader the Appellate Court may rehear the appeal on the merits—7 M H C R App 29 In re Kunhammad 46 Mad 382 (403) and, in cases of appeals under Section 417, the Appellate Court shall cause a like notice to be given to the accused.

1136. Restrictive order for admission : —A restrictive order for admission of a criminal appeal is not contemplated by this section and must be deemed to be ultra vires Therefore where a crimi

1137. Notice :—Notice to the appellant of the time and place of hearing is obligatory and it is a material error in procedure to dispose of an appeal without giving such notice—2 Weir 475 Where a criminal appeal filed through a counsel is admitted it cannot be dismissed summarily without giving notice to the accused for after an appeal is admitted the Court cannot act under sec 421—Ta Pu v Emp, 3 Bur L J 18 25 Cr L J 933

To whom to be given —Notice may be given to the appellant or his pleader But the attention of the pleader should be directed to the notice, when notice is given to the pleader only the mere fact that the pleader of the appellant is present in Court when an order is made admitting an appeal is not sufficient—10 C L R 57

1138. Powers and duties of Appellate Court :—It is the duty of the Appellate Court, in dealing with an appeal preferred to it, to consider the evidence both oral and documentary, and to apply its mind to the case before recording a judgment therein. Where the Appellate Court fails to do this, the judgment cannot be said to be a judgment in accordance with law—1 P L T 716. The rule by which a Criminal Appellate Court is to be guided in dealing with a criminal appeal is that it has to come to a conclusion for itself upon the evidence on the record assisted so far as it might be by such reasons or arguments as it might elicit from the conclusions and reasons contained in the judgment of the original Court. If the Appellate Court entertains any doubt about the correctness of the conviction or the commission of the offence, it should discharge the accused—23 Cal 347, 1898 P R 6, 4 L. B R. 340. It is the duty of the Appellate Court in every case to examine the evidence for itself and to give to the accused person the benefit of any reasonable doubt which it may entertain after such examination. Doubtless, an Appellate Court should not lightly disturb the conclusion of a Court of First Instance, and should give due weight to the fact that the witnesses received credit from the Court before which their depositions were given but in every case it is the duty of an Appellate Court to arrive at an independent opinion—Yacoob, 2 Weir 535. If the Appellate Court is unable even with the aid of the Magistrate's finding of fact, to form an independent judgment as to whether the prisoners had committed the offence or not the accused ought to be acquitted—20 W R 13. In an appeal from a conviction and sentence, it is for the Appellate Court to be satisfied affirmatively that the prosecution case is substantially true and that the guilt of the accused has been established beyond all reasonable doubt. It is not for the appellants to satisfy the Appellate Court that the first Court had come to a wrong finding—Kanchan v Emp, 42 Cal 374.

It is the duty of the Appellate Court to look into the evidence of both sides in order to come to a decision. Where the Appellate Court did not think it necessary to deal with the evidence adduced by the defence in the case, because no reference to that evidence was made by the counsel for the appellant, and that evidence was practically ignored by him, held that the Appellate Court acted illegally in doing so—40 Cal 376.

The power of an Appellate Court to pass sentence is measured by the power of the Court from whose judgment or order the appeal has been made. Therefore, an Appellate Court when passing a sentence on appeal cannot pass a sentence which the original Court was not competent to pass—Sitaram v. Emp, 7 N L R 109, 2 Weir 487, Emp v Muhammad Yakub, 45 All 594. Mehi Singh v Mangal, 39 Cal 157, Q E v Subbaya, 12 Mad 451. Thus, where a second class Magistrate passed a sentence of 4 months imprisonment but the District Magistrate on appeal altered the sentence into a fine of Rs 400 held that the sentence passed by the Appellate Court was ultra vires because the second class Magistrate could not have awarded a fine of Rs 400 (sec 32)—Emp v Muhammad Yakub 45 All 594

When an inspection of the scene of the occurrence is material either to the case for the prosecution or for the defence it is desirable that the Appellate Court should inspect the spot—1911 P W R 16

When an Appellate Court does not dismiss an appeal summarily it must dispose of it in the manner provided by this section It has no power to refer to the High Court for decision a question of law arising in an appeal—7 L B R 251

The Appellate Court must peruse the whole record and not merely the judgment of the Lower Court A decision based upon a perusal of the judgment alone is not valid and the appeal must be reheard—14 Cr L J 182 (Cal) If the records of the case are lost it is the duty of the Appellate Court to order a new trial—1889 A W N 55 1885 A W N 117

If the appeal is not dismissed summarily under sec 421 the Appellate Court is bound to peruse the record and consider whether there is any ground for interference with the acquittal or conviction even though the appellant does not appear The Appellate Court must dispose of the appeal on the merits and is not entitled to dismiss an appeal for default of appearance of the appellant An order for dismissal of an appeal for non appearance is not contemplated by this section—20 Cr L J 744 5 N L R 76 Q E v Pappi 13 All 171 50 Cal 972 Ramchandra v Emp 21 A L J 100 14A L J 327 Shiam Behary v Emp 20 Cr L J 271 (Pat) Baldeo v Emp 24 Cr L J 4 5 (Pat) Newa Lal v Emp 4 P L T 552 Trimbak v Emp 50 Bom 673 27 Cr L J 116, Kuldip v Emp 6 Pat 16 28 Cr L J 351

In dealing with a case under this section there is no restriction on the powers of the Appellate Court to dispose of the case in any of the manners provided by this section It can acquit the accused or order a retrial or order the accused to be committed etc,—Taru Pramanik v Q E 25 Cal 711 Ramprasad v Emp 26 Cr L J 1090 (Nag)

Sufficient ground for interference —An appellant is not precisely in the same position before an Appellate Court as he is before the Court trying him but must satisfy the Court that there is sufficient ground for interfering with the order of conviction If no sufficient ground has been shown it is the duty of the Appellate Court not to interfere—5 All 386

1139 Dismiss the appeal —Where an appeal is admitted and dealt with under this section the Appellate Court can dismiss the appeal only on the merits and has no power to dismiss it summarily—Q E v Gopala 1 Bom L R 225 Ram Hari v Santosh 23 Cr L J 733 (Cal) Newa Lal v Emp 4 P L T 552 Ta Pu v Emp 3 Bur L J 18 25 Cr L J 933

In dismissing an appeal under this section on the merits the Appe Court is bound to write a judgment and the judgment must comply

The indications of error in a judgment of acquittal ought to be clear and more palpable and the evidence more cogent and convincing in order to justify its being set aside than would be necessary in the case of a judg ment of conviction—1904 P R 7 21 Cr L J 349 See Note 1120 under section 417

The High Court in exercising jurisdiction in the matter of appeals against acquittals should confine its exercise to the particular acquittal complained of by the Government At the same time it would not be proper for the High Court to consider the appeal on grounds not contained in the objection urged on behalf of the Government—Q F v Kangowda 19 Bom 51 17 C P L R 75 In 12 B H C R 1 it has been held that a ground of objection not taken in the petition of appeal may be allowed if it has not prejudiced the accused and sufficient time has been given to the other side to be prepared for the same

Acquittal —This clause confers a power to direct further inquiry only in respect of a case of an appeal from an order of acquittal and not in a case in which an order of discharge or dismissal may have been passed—Charoobala v Barendra 27 Cal 126

1142 Clause (b) —Appeal from conviction '—In an appeal from a conviction the Appellate Court may if it likes take further evidence (section 428) but cannot direct further inquiry—19 A L J 961

'Reverse the finding and sentence —Before an Appellate Court can set aside a conviction it must be satisfied that the conviction is wrong It seems a logical consequence of this that when without finding the con viction to be wrong the Appellate Court sets it aside the appellate order would be ultra vires—Emp v Sheikh Rasul 17 C P L R 97

An Appellate Court is not competent to set aside a conviction merely on the ground that all the witnesses cited for the defence have not been examined The proper course in such a case is to have the evidence taken of the other witnesses before disposing of the appeal—? Weir 481 A conviction ought not to be reversed unless the admission of the rejected evidence would have affected the result of the trial—Imp v Pitambar, 2 Bom 61

The proper procedure on appeal in a case where the Lower Court had refused to take the defence of the accused is to set aside the conviction and sentence passed by the Lower Court and order the Magistrate to begin the proceedings anew against the accused from the stage when his evidence was refused—Gohar v Emp 1884 P R 28

After reversing the finding and sentence the Appellate Court can order the accused either to be retried or to be committed for trial The Appellate Court cannot itself frame a charge against the accused and hold a regular trial—G C Sircar v K F 3 Rang 68 4 Bur L J 79 26 Cr L J 1119 A I R 1925 Rang 230

Power to acquit —When an Appellate Court sets aside a verdict of the jury on the ground of misdirection it is open to that Court to acquit the accused At the same time as a matter of practice the proper cour[illegible] in such cases is to direct a retrial It is only in special that an appellate Court would be justified in acquitting—Dhiraji v Akasi 24 A L J 506 27 Cr L J 785

1143. Re-trial —A Sessions Judge has power to order a new trial when the case comes before him in appeal This power should however be sparingly exercised and a retrial should not be ordered unless there are grave reasons for doing so—13 A I J 477

Before quashing a conviction and ordering a new trial on the ground that though the accused was shown by the evidence to have committed some offence he has been convicted under a wrong section the Appellate Court must come to a certain conclusion as to the offence which the accused was shown by the evidence to have committed and it ought to consider whether if the evidence showed that the accused should properly have been convicted of another offence than that he was charged with he would be prejudiced by amending the conviction Before ordering a retrial the Appellate Court is bound to see what possible object could be served by a fresh trial—2 Weir 480

When retrial may be ordered —(1) A retrial may be ordered where the trial is held to be illegal on the ground of want of jurisdiction of the Court that tried the case—1885 A W N 295 3 Bur L T 9 Thus where an offence triable by a Magistrate of the 1st class or Court of Session was tried by a second class Magistrate the Appellate Court may order the accused to be tried by a 1st class Magistrate or by the Court of Session—Q E v Sukha 8 All 14 2 Weir 482 2 Weir 484 In Abdul Gani v Emp 29 Cal 412 it has been held that where a trial was void for want of jurisdiction it is not necessary for the Appellate Court to order a retrial and therefore where the Appellate Court in such a case merely discharged the accused and did not order a retrial the omission to order retrial would not prevent the Magistrate from taking further proceedings against the accused (2) If in an appeal from a conviction the Judge finds that the evidence discloses the commission of a more serious offence he may set aside the conviction and sentence and order the accused to be retried by a Court of competent jurisdiction or committed for trial according to the nature of the evidence against him—11 C W N 1 (3) A retrial would be proper where the accused was rightly acquitted of one offence but the Appellate Court comes to the conclusion that he ought to have been tried for another—36 Mad 457 (4) If the Appellate Court is of opinion that the appellant ought to have been convicted of an offence different from that with which he was charged in the Lower Court the Appellate Court ought to annul the conviction and order a retrial—1882 A W N 112 (5) A retrial may be ordered in a case in which the Appellate Court sets aside the conviction on the ground of misdirection to the jury—Sadhu Sheikh v Emp 4 C W N 576 (6) An Appellate Court in discharging the accused on the ground of misjoinder of parties has power to add a direction that the accused should be retried—28 Cal 104 (7) A retrial ought to be ordered if it is found that the accused has not been properly convicted—Abdool v Khatir 3 C W N 332 (8) An Appellate Court may order a retrial if it is of opinion that the proceedings before the Magistrate have been irregular—1883 A W N 99 (9)

Where the Lower Court has committed an error in procedure in convicting the accused upon evidence which was not given in their presence the Appellate Court is competent to order a retrial—2 Weir 481 so also a retrial may be ordered where the conviction is reversed on account of an irregularity in the procedure by which material evidence was excluded —Ratanlal 938 36 Mad 457 (10) A Sessions Judge has power to direct a retrial to be had upon a charge framed in whatever manner he thinks fit on the ground that the accused has been misled in their defence by the absence of a charge or by a defect in the charge—Sarat Chandra v Emp 7 C W N 301 see also 9 N L R 42 (11) Where the trial Court has failed to record a judgment in conformity with section 367 the proper procedure for the Appellate Court is to reverse the order of the Court below and to remand the case for a trial de novo—(1920) M W N 120

Where the Sessions Judge on appeal annuls the conviction of the accused on the ground of want of jurisdiction of the Magistrate who tried the case but omits to order a new trial the Judge is not precluded from passing such order subsequently The order of retrial does not amount to an alteration of the judgment annulling the conviction within the meaning of sec 369—In re Ram Reddi 3 Mad 48

Where the High Court on appeal set aside the verdict of the jury who convicted the accused and observing that it would be open to the Crown to proceed further with the case if so advised directed the petitioner to be released on bail until fresh trial if any it was held that the order amounted to an order of retrial—Beni Madhab v Emp, 46 Cal 212 23 C W N 94 20 Cr L J 225

Scope of retrial —Where an Appellate Court reverses the verdict of a jury and orders a retrial such retrial unless the Appellate Court has limited the scope must be taken to be one upon all the charges originally framed—2? Cal 377 13 Cr L J 497 (Cal) Where an order of remand is passed by an Appellate Court under section 423 the Court cannot restrict the evidence to be taken to that mentioned in its order but it should order the case to be retried in view of the instructions contained in its order The accused is entitled to adduce such additional evidence as he may desire—3 C L J 303 Thus where in an appeal from a conviction the Sessions Judge set aside the conviction and ordered a retrial but at the same time directed that the evidence already on the record should be treated as evidence in the case it was held that the direction was contrary to the provisions of secs 423 and 428 of the Code and was therefore illegal—3 P L W 224 19 Cr L J 77

When retrial should not be ordered —The mere fact that the Appellate Court finds the decision of the Lower Court not so satisfactory as it should have been does not authorise the Appellate Court to pass an order remanding the case to the Lower Court with instructions to write out a proper judgment—Tara Chand v Emp 32 Cal 1069 Where a Sessions Judge on appeal thinks that the evidence of some more witnesses who were not examined in the Lower Court is necessary he should proceed under sec 428 (1) and cannot order retrial on that ground—Emp v Luchman 31 Cal 710, 16 A L J 325 Where the evidence recorded the Magistrate is as full as the law requires and there is no irregularity in the procedure it is not competent to a Sessions Judge on appeal to order a retrial He must consider the case on the evidence before him and proceed to judgment—Ratanlal 530 1 Bur L J 32 the mere fact that an inadmissible or irrelevent evidence has been admitted by the Lower Court does not justify a retrial Such evidence may be left out of consideration—1 Bur L J 32 Where there is no evidence on the record to warrant a conviction for the offence charged an order for re trial is not justified—Ramprasad v Emp 26 Cr L J 1090 (Nag) A I R 1926 Nag 53

By a Court of competent jurisdiction —Under this section when an Appellate Court orders a retrial it can specify the Court by which the appellant is to be retried There is nothing in this section which prevents such specification of the Court—Ratanlal 367

If the Appellate Court finds that the accused had committed an offence which the Lower Court was not competent to try the Appellate Court ought to order a retrial by a Court competent to try the offence—8 All 14 2 Weir 484 Even if the Lower Court was competent to try the offence the Appellate Court may order the retrial by another Court of competent jurisdiction—L B R (1893—1900) 238

Under the provisions of this section the retrial if ordered must be by a Court of competent jurisdiction subordinate to the Appellate Court and therefore an Appellate Court cannot direct a case to be retried by itself—Ratanlal 982 Dhiraji v Akasi 24 A L J 506 27 Cr L J 83 But in 30 Mad 328 and 2 Weir 481 it has been held that the words Court of competent jurisdiction subordinate to such Appellate Court are not to be taken as words of limitation and do not exclude the Appellate Court from itself trying the offender when the offence is within the jurisdiction of the Appellate Court.

The Appellate Court may order the retrial to be held by any Court of competent jurisdiction The High Court has power under this section to order a retrial of the appeal by the Lower Appellate Court—1913 P. L R 7

1144. Order of commitment —If the Appellate Court finds that the accused has committed an offence which the Lower Court was not competent to try the Appellate Court may order retrial by a Court of competent jurisdiction and if there is no Court of competent jurisdiction subordinate to the Appellate Court it ought to direct the committal of the accused to the Sessions—2 Weir 484 Where the accused has committed an offence triable exclusively by the Sessions Court and has been tried by a Magistrate the Appellate Court is competent to direct a committal to the Sessions—O E v Sukha 8 All 14 Hasan Raza v Emp 20 A L J 568 Even if the offence be not exclusively triable by the Court of Session the Appellate Court is still competent to direct a committal to the Sessions—Misri Lal v Lachmi 23 Cal 350 This section gives the Appellate Court the power to order an accused to be committed to the Sessions when it considers that that is the procedure which should have been adopted by the Magistrate in the case—16 Bom 580, Q E v Maula Buksh, 15 All 205 Thus, a commitment may be ordered by the Appellate Court if it is of opinion that the Magistrate, though of competent jurisdiction to try the case, was not competent to punish the accused adequately—1895 P R 16

Where the Appellate Court directs a commitment to the Court of Session an investigation preliminary to commitment is not necessary—2 Weir 479

An order of commitment passed by the Sessions Judge on appeal under this clause can be revised by the High Court under sec 439—Ram Samujh v Emp 11 O L J 748 1 O W N 525 25 Cr L J 1375

Commitment to itself —This section does not authorize a Sessions Court to commit a case to itself but only empowers it as a Court of Appeal to direct a competent Magistrate to make a commitment to itself Reading this section with section 193 it is manifest that except in cases in which a Court of Session is expressly empowered to take cognizance of an offence as a Court of original jurisdiction it has no power to do so unless a commitment has been made by a Magistrate duly empowered in this behalf —1907 A W N 178.

1145 Alteration of finding —Where the accused were charged by the lower Court with several offences and were convicted of the graver offences and acquitted of the minor charges the Appellate Court can alter the finding of the lower Court and convict the accused of the minor charges and acquit them of the graver offences—35 Mad. 243 But in convicting an accused of an offence with which he was not charged in the lower Court the Appellate Court can act only in accordance with the provisions of secs 237 and 238 of the Code—7 M L T 79 Emp v Sakharam 8 Bom L R 120 G C Sircar v Emp 3 Rang 68 4 Bur L J 29 Mahabir v Emp 49 All 120 24 A L J 998 27 Cr L J 1118 Thus where on an appeal from a conviction of murder the Appellate Court comes to the conclusion that the offence of murder is not proved but that there is evidence on the record to support a conviction for an offence against property the Appellate Court ought to acquit the accused of murder but it cannot alter the conviction of murder into a conviction of an offence against property because the latter offence is so widely different from the former that it is illegal under sec 237 or 238 to convict the accused of the latter offence when he is charged only with the former—Wallu v Crown 4 Lah 373, Ghans v Emp 7 Lah 561, 27 P L R 610 27 Cr L J 1004 Q E v Yusuf, 20 All 107 Where the Court of Session had convicted an accused of an offence under sec 409 I P C and the High Court on appeal found that the conviction was not sustainable under that section, the Court refused to alter the finding into a conviction for some other offence (e g an offence under sec 161 I P C) for which the accused had not been charged or tried and which was of an entirely different nature from the offence with which he was charged—8 All 120 When the accused was charged with and convicted of an offence under secs 457 I P

The Appellate Court may order the retrial to be held by any Court of competent jurisdiction The High Court has power under this section to order a retrial of the appeal by the Lower Appellate Court—1913 P. L R 7

1144. Order of commitment —If the Appellate Court finds that the accused has committed an offence which the Lower Court was not competent to try the Appellate Court may order retrial by a Court of competent jurisdiction and if there is no Court of competent juris diction subordinate to the Appellate Court it ought to direct the com mittal of the accused to the Sessions—2 Weir 484 Where the accused has committed an offence triable exclusively by the Sessions Court and has been tried by a Magistrate the Appellate Court is competent to direct a committal to the Sessions—O E v Sukha 8 All 14 Hasan Ta v Emp, 20 A L J 568 Even if the offence be not exclusively triable by the Court of Session the Appellate Court is still competent to direct a committal to the Sessions—Misri Lal v Lachmi 23 Cal 350 This section gives the Appellate Court the power to order an accused to be committed to the Sessions when it considers that that is the procedure the accused under sec 148 I P. C. and convicted him under sec 325 I P C, it was open to the Sessions Judge to alter the conviction under sec. 325 into one under sec. 148 I P C—34 Mad 545 Similarly, where in such a case the Lower Court has found only one of the accused guilty of murder and acquitted the others of murder but convicted them of other offences, an appeal against the conviction of murder opens out the entire case and the Appellate Court may find all the three persons guilty of murder—Dulli v Emp, 16 A L J 918 Where in the trial Court the accused was charged with murder (sec 302 I P C) but was convicted of culpable homicide (sec 304), the appellate Court can convict the accused of murder—On Shwe v Emp 1 Rang 436

In the Appellate Court finds that the sentence is illegal or inadequate, and does not think it expedient to order a new trial he may alter the conviction in order to legalise the sentence—K E v Kyaw Hla 3 L B R 112

In altering the finding of the Lower Court the Appellate Court is not bound by any preliminaries of complaint under sec. 198 Thus, on an appeal from a conviction under sec. 182 I P C the Appellate Court is competent to alter the conviction to one under sec. 500 I P C notwithstanding that there was no complaint by the aggrieved party—Emp v Gur Narain, 25 All 534

The word 'finding is not limited to a finding upon a point of law, as distinct from a finding upon a point of fact—3 P L J 565

1146. Alteration when improper :—(1) It is improper for the Appellate Court to alter the finding so as to convict the accused of an offence of an entirely different character Thus, under the provisions of sec 237 and 238, it is illegal to alter a conviction under sec. 376 I P C into one under sec 366 I P C because the charge under the latter section involves different elements and different questions of fact from the former—Emp v Sakharam 8 Bom L R 120 G C Sircar v K E, 3 Rang 68 4 Bur L J 29 26 Cr L J 1119 so also, it is illegal to alter a conviction under sec 379 I P C into one under sec. 143 I P C—27 Cal 660 So also it is improper to alter a conviction under secs. 211 and 100 I P C into one under sec. 193 I P C—3 C W N 367 or to alter a conviction under sec. 468 I P C. into a conviction under sec. 471 I P C—Akbar v Emp, 8 N L J 87, 26 Cr L J 1358, or to alter a conviction under sec. 147 into one under secs. 448 and 323 I P C.—Yakub Ali v Lethu, 30 Cal 288, or to alter a conviction for wrongful confinement into one for assault—5 C W N 296 See Note 1145

(2) It would be improper and unfair to the accused for the Appellate Court to convict him of a more serious offence to which he had never pleaded at the trial, especially if the new offence was not cognate to the offence for which he was tried and convicted and if there were circumstances of aggravation to which he had not pleaded guilty—Lala Ojha v. Q E, 26 Cal 863, K E. v Po Yin 3 L B R 232

(3) An Appellate Court is not competent to alter the

Magistrate so as to convict an accused person of an offence which the Lower Court is not competent to try—7 All 414

(4) When a person has been charged with a certain offence and has been convicted of that offence the Appellate Court cannot on finding that the conviction is not sustainable convict the accused of abetment of that offence—Mahabir v Emp 24 A L J 908 49 All 120 27 Cr L J 1118 33 Mad 264 Reg v Chand Nur 11 B H C R 240 See Note 771 under sec 238

Notice to appellant—If a Judge on appeal finds that the evidence recorded discloses a different offence he may alter the finding of the Court below but in doing so he ought to give intimation to the accused or to his pleader of what he proposes to do and thus give him an opportunity of showing cause against the new conviction—Mi Mo Da v Emp 3 L B R 283 The powers conferred by this section on an Appellate Court are not intended to be used in such a way as to spring up a new case on the accused without giving him any notice of the charge he has to meet—16 Cr L J 599 (All)

Alternative conviction—The Appellate Court is not competent to alter a conviction for an offence into one for that offence or another offence in the alternative Thus it is improper to alter a conviction under section 411 I P C into a conviction under either sec 379 or 411 I P C in the alternative the accused not having been charged under sec 379 I P C in the Lower Court and having had no opportunity of meeting such a charge—Ratanlal 368

1147 Reduction of sentence—Where the Lower Court passes only a single sentence on a conviction for two offences the Appellate Court if it acquits the appellant of one of the offences ought not to maintain the sentence in its entirety but must make some reduction of sentence unless it thinks that the sentence ought not to be reduced in which case it should refer the matter to the High Court for enhancement of the sentence—30 Mad 48 2 Weir 487A But no reduction of sentence by the Appellate Court is necessary if the inference can be drawn that the trying Magistrate did not intend to pass any sentence on the conviction which is set aside on appeal—7 M L T 81

Where a Magistrate in convicting a person of two offences passed a single sentence of imprisonment and fine it was held that separate sentences ought to have been passed and that the Appellate Court in reversing the conviction for one offence cannot regard the imprisonment as imposed for one offence and the fine for the other and reduce the sentence by eliminating the fine—Ratanlal 409

1148 Clause (b) (3)—Enhancement of sentence—So as not to enhance the same—No Appellate Court can enhance the sentence passed by the Lower Court—Ratanlal 618 4 W R 20 The Code of 1872 gave power to Appellate Courts to enhance the sentence but that power has been taken away by the Codes of 1882 and 1898 and is now vested only in the High Court in the exercise of its power of revision See sec 439 and 6 All 622 And therefore if the Appellate

Court finds the appellant to be guilty of a graver offence, the Court has no power to enhance the sentence; and the proper course would be to let the conviction stand as it is, or to have the case referred to the High Court—2 Weir 486

The test of enhancement of sentence must be found not among the technicalities of penal definition, but by answering the broad question: 'For this man's offence has the Appellate Court inflicted punishment more severe than that originally awarded?' —In re Rangasuami, 39 M L T 20, 28 Cr L J 824

What amounts to enhancement of sentence —(1) Where an accused is convicted and sentenced by the Lower Court on two separate charges, and the Appellate Court reverses the conviction on one of the charges, the Appellate Court cannot retain intact the whole sentence but must reduce the sentence the retention of the sentence has virtually the effect of an enhancement of sentence—Q E v Harma, 22 Bom 760, Ratanlal 618, 1887 P R 45, 24 Cal 310 1916 P R 31 Paramasiva v Emp, 30 Mad 48, Ramanujam, 2 Weir 487a In re Somasundaram, 3 M L T 312, 7 Cr L J 361, In re Prola Narasimham (1911) 2 M W. N 97, 12 Cr L J 454, Emp v Varadan, 8 M L T 117, 11 Cr L J 483, 3 N L R 67. Thus, where a person was convicted by a Magistrate of rioting and theft and was sentenced for the first offence to four months and for the latter offence to two months rigorous imprisonment, and the District Magistrate on appeal acquitted the accused of rioting but upheld the conviction for theft and the sentence of six months rigorous imprisonment, it was held that the effect of the order was to enhance the sentence for theft, which he had no authority to do under this section—Ramzan v Ram Khelawan 24 Cal 316 But where only one offence has been committed and the Magistrate erroneously splits it up into two offences, and passes two sentences, the Appellate Court can join the two offences into one offence and maintain the whole of the original sentence such maintaining of sentence does not amount to an enhancement of sentence (because no conviction has in fact been reversed)—3 N L R 67

(2) Where the accused was convicted of robbery and hurt, and sentenced to 10 months imprisonment for robbery and one day s imprisonment for hurt, and the Sessions Judge on appeal set aside the conviction for robbery, but confirmed the conviction for hurt and sentenced the accused to six months imprisonment it was held that the Sessions Judge had no power to pass such sentence but the High Court could confirm such sentence if it would meet the ends of justice—24 Cal 317 (Note)

(3) Where an Appellate Court reduced a sentence of 4 months' rigorous imprisonment into one of 3 months, but added a sentence of fine or in default six weeks rigorous imprisonment such sentence amounted to an enhancement of the original sentence and was in excess of the powers of the Appellate Court—Q E v Ishri, 17 All 67; Empress v Meda 1887 A W N 100 So also, where the first Court passed a sentence of six months' imprisonment but the Appellate Co altered it to a sentence of four months' imprisonment and a

Rs 100 or in default 2 months' imprisonment held that the sentence of the Appellate Court amounted to an enhancement because the accused even after he had undergone the two months' imprisonment in default of payment of fine would still be liable to pay the fine—K E v Sagwa 23 All 497, 3 N L R 90, so also, where one week's imprisonment awarded by the first Court was altered by the Appellate Court into a fine of Rs 50 and in default one week's imprisonment it was held that it amounted to an enhancement of sentence—1916 P W R 5 Where the Court of first instance sentenced the accused to rigorous imprisonment for 2 months and to a fine of Rs 50 or in default one month's rigorous imprisonment and on appeal the Appellate Court changed the sentence to one of one month's rigorous imprisonment and a fine of Rs 200 or in default 2 months rigorous imprisonment held that the Appellate Court's sentence amounted to an enhancement of the sentence passed by the trial Court for supposing the fine was not paid the accused would still have to undergo three months rigorous imprisonment and still be liable to pay the fine—Bir Singh v K E, 3 Pat 638 (639), 5 P L T 612, 25 Cr L J 1156 A I R 1924 Pat 563 Contra—Q E v Chagan, 23 Bom 439 [But now see the proviso to section 386 which lays down that if the accused has undergone the full term of imprisonment awarded in default of payment of fine the fine will not be levied.] [If the aggregate sentence of imprisonment (i e, the substantive sentence of imprisonment plus the imprisonment in default of fine) imposed by the Appellate Court is less than the period of the original sentence the imposition of fine does not amount to an enhancement of sentence—Bhatha castalu v Emp, 30 Mad 103 27 Cal 175, 36 All 485 1915 P R 7

(4) A sentence of fine is always considered lighter than a sentence of imprisonment—Q E v Chagan 23 Bom 439, therefore the alteration of a sentence of fine into one of imprisonment is an enhancement of the sentence within the meaning of this clause, and the Appellate Court has no power to alter a sentence in this way—18 All 301, 18 Bom 731

(5) Where the Lower Court imposed fine and imprisonment and the Appellate Court in lieu of imprisonment, imposed an additional fine thus increasing the amount of fine imposed by the Lower Court it amounted to an enhancement of sentence—Ramasami 2 Weir 487

(6) The addition of imprisonment by the Appellate Court to a sentence of fine only imposed by the Lower Court is an enhancement of sentence The appellant was convicted of causing simple hurt and was sentenced to fine only, on appeal the Appellate Court altered the conviction to one of causing grievous hurt (which is punishable with imprisonment and fine) under section 325 I P C and in order to make the sentence legal under that section recorded a sentence of one day's rigorous imprisonment It was held that the Appellate Court had no power to so enhance the sentence—Chardalavada Ramasappa 2 Weir 486.

(7) The addition of a sentence of whipping by the Appellate Court, although the sentence of imprisonment is reduced amounts to an enhancement of the sentence—Appu, 2 Weir 487 But in 15 W R 7 it has been held that the alteration of a sentence of whipping into one of imprisonment may amount to an enhancement of punishment In this case their Lordships expressed a doubt as to which sentence was the more severe The Legislature has not supplied us with any data from which the comparative severity of the two sentences of whipping and rigorous imprisonment can be determined and it is impossible to say how many lashes would be equivalent to a sentence of rigorous imprisonment for a specified period —Mitter J The two sentences are of so dissimilar a nature that they do not admit of comparison and it is advisable for the Appellate Courts not to substitute the one for the other

(8) Where in a criminal appeal the terms of imprisonment are reduced but a punishment of solitary confinement is imposed such an imposition of solitary confinement though the imprisonment is lessened is an enhancement of the sentence—1890 A W N 170

(9) The substitution of rigorous imprisonment in place of simple imprisonment amounts to an enhancement of sentence—Emperor v Muhammad Yakub Ali 45 All 594

(10) The Appellate Court in altering a sentence cannot award a sentence which the original Court could not have passed If it does so it will amount to an enhancement of sentence See Note 1138 ante

What does not amount to enhancement —(1) An additional order passed by the Appellate Court directing the accused to furnish security to keep the peace does not amount to an enhancement of sentence—1905 P R 21 20 Cr L J 302 (All) 20 Cr L J 760 (Nag) Such power has been expressly conferred on a Court of Appeal by section 106 (3) and a Judge is competent in appeal to demand such security—Ibid

(2) An order passed by the Appellate Court directing the accused person to pay the costs of the complainant under sec 31 of the Court Fees Act (now 546A of this Code) does not amount to an enhancement of sentence because the order of costs is not a penalty or sentence passed in the case but is an incidental order under clause (d) of this section—Emp v Karuppanna 29 Mad 188 Thimiah v K L 47 Mad 914 (915) Although the fees ordered to be paid are to be recovered as if they were fines still there is no warrant for treating the same as part of the fine imposed as punishment for the offences—In re V [illegible] Seshanna 26 Mad 421, Thimiah v K E 47 Mad 914 (915)

(3) Where an Appellate Court adopts the view taken by the original Court as to the acts committed by the accused and only differs from it in its application of the law and maintains the sentence neither the letter nor the spirit of sec 423 is broken by the Appellate Court in maintaining the sentence There is no enhancement Thus where the accused was convicted by the trial Court for voluntarily causing hurt with a dangerous weapon under sec 324 I P C and was sentenced to 2 months imprisonment and in appeal the Appellate Court altered the conviction into one for simple hurt under sec 323 I P C, but sentence was maintained held that it did not amount to an e[illegible] of sentence—In re Rangaswami 39 M L T 20 28 Cr L [illegible]

If conviction is confirmed some sentence must be passed —If the Court of appeal affirms a conviction it should if it disapproves of the sentence passed by the Lower Court pass some other sentence even though a nominal one It cannot reverse the sentence absolutely while upholding the conviction Every conviction must be followed by sentence—Ratanlal 515

1149 Clause (d)—Amendment:—Under this clause the Court can make any amendment that may be just or proper Thus where the accused was convicted under sec 3-5 I P C and on appeal the parties applied to compromise the case the High Court acting under sec 423 (d) amended the order of conviction by substituting for it an order that the offence should be compromised—3. All 153 Where the Sessions Judge had directed certain property to be handed over to the Magistrate as unclaimed property the High Court amended the order by directing that the Magistrate should dispose of the property according to law—1897 A W N 6 The Sessions Judge can amend the order of the Magistrate by directing a greater amount of property to be restored to the complainant than the amount restored by the Magistrate—G [illegible] v Emp 3 A L J 770

Amendment means amendment of the main order of the Court below, and the Appellate Court cannot make any amendment when there has not been an appeal against the main order of the Lower Court Thus where the Magistrate in passing a judgment of acquittal has made some unfavourable remarks about the credibility of certain witnesses the High Court cannot amend the judgment by directing those remarks to be expunged from the judgment when there has been no appeal to the High Court against the main order of acquittal—44 All 401 But this is no longer good law in view of sec 561A which empowers the High Court to pass any orders that may be just and thus to expunge remarks from the Lower Courts judgments irrespective of the fact whether there has been an appeal against the main order or not See Note 1214 under section 4 0 But the ruling in 44 All 401 would apply to lower Appellate Courts and those Courts would have no power to expunge remarks from the Lower Court's judgment unless there be an appeal from the main order in the case

1150 Incidental or consequential orders —(1) An order under sec 106 demanding security from the appellant is an incidental order Sec 106 (3) gives the Appellate Court power to pass such order in appeal even where the original Court was not competent to do so

(2) An order under sec 106 passed by the Original Court may be set aside in appeal and the appellate order setting aside the order for security is an incidental order within the meaning of this section—Abdul Wahed v Emperor 30 Cal 101

(3) On an appeal against an order binding over a person to keep the peace under section 106 the Appellate Court can reverse the order of security and order a retrial The order of retrial is an incidental order under clause (d) of sec 423 It does not fall under clause (b) because th

(4) An order under sec 471 (1) directing the accused to be committed to a lunatic asylum is clearly an order which the acquitting Court whether original or appellate not only has the power to make but is bound to make under sec 423 (d)—8 L B R 290

(5) An order under sec 517 520 or 522 of the Code is a consequential or incidental order within the meaning of this clause and can be passed by the Appellate Court—29 Cal 724 46 Mad 162 (164) Therefore an order in a case of criminal misappropriation directing restoration of property which is found to have belonged to the complainant is clearly a consequential or incidental order and one which is under the circumstances just and proper—Gopi Nath v Emp 3 A L J 770

An order of the Appellate Court setting aside an order passed by the Lower Court under sec 522 is an incidental order within the meaning of this clause—19 C W N 990 See also 29 Cal 724 Where the accused was convicted under secs 352 and 448 I P C and the convicting Magistrate passed an order under sec 522 of this Code restoring possession of the property (which was the subject matter of the offence under sec 448 I P C) to the complainant but the accused was afterwards acquitted on appeal it was held that the Appellate Court had power, under sec 423 (d) and sec 522 read together to order restitution of the property to the accused—Manki v Bhagwanti 27 All 415

(6) Under this clause the Appellate Court can exercise the powers conferred by sec 562 of the Code—24 All 306 The Court before which he is convicted in sec 562 is not limited to the Court of first instance but includes the Court of appeal—29 Mad 567 This is now expressly provided by sub section (2) of section 562

(7) An order by the Appellate Court directing the accused to pay the costs of the complainant under sec 31 of the Court Fees Act (now 546A of this Code) is no part of the penalty or sentence passed in the case and therefore not an enhancement of sentence but is an incidental order under this clause—Emp v Karuppana 29 Mad 188, Thimiah v K E, 47 Mad 914 (915) The contrary view taken in Q E v Tangavelu 22 Mad 153 decided under the Code of 1882 which did not contain clause (d), is no longer correct

Orders which cannot be passed —The only consequential or incidental orders which fall within the purview of this clause are orders which follow as a matter of course being the necessary complements to the main orders passed without which the latter would be incomplete and ineffective (such as directions as to the refund of fines realised from

If conviction is confirmed, some sentence must be passed —If the Court of appeal affirms a conviction, it should, if it disapproves of the sentence passed by the Lower Court, pass some other sentence, even though a nominal one It cannot reverse the sentence absolutely while upholding the conviction Every conviction must be followed by sentence—Ratanlal 545

1149. Clause (d)—Amendment :—Under this clause the Court can make any amendment that may be just or proper Thus where the accused was convicted under sec. 325 I P C, and on appeal the parties applied to compromise the case the High Court acting under sec. 423 (d) amended the order of conviction by substituting for it an order that the offence should be compromised—32 All 153 Where the Sessions Judge had directed certain property to be handed over to the Magistrate as unclaimed property, the High Court amended the order by directing that the Magistrate should dispose of the property according to law—1897 A W N 26 The Sessions Judge can amend the order of the Magistrate by directing a greater amount of property to be restored to the complainant than the amount restored by the Magistrate—Gopi Nath v Emp, 3 A L J 770

'Amendment' means amendment of the main order of the Court below, and the Appellate Court cannot make any amendment when there has not been an appeal against the main order of the Lower Court Thus where the Magistrate in passing a judgment of acquittal has made some unfavourable remarks about the credibility of certain witnesses, the High Court cannot amend the judgment by directing those remarks to be expunged from the judgment, when there has been no appeal to the High Court against the main order of acquittal—44 All 401 But this is no longer good law in view of sec. 561 A which empowers the High Court to pass any orders that may be just, and thus to expunge remarks from the Lower Courts' judgments, irrespective of the fact whether there has been an appeal against the main order or not See Note 1214, under section 439 But the ruling in 44 All 401 would apply to lower Appellate Courts, and those Courts would have no power to expunge remarks from the Lower Court's judgment unless there be an appeal from the main order in the case

1150. Incidental or consequential orders :—(1) An order under sec. 106 demanding security from the appellant is an incidental order Sec. 106 (3) gives the Appellate Court power to pass such order in appeal even where the original Court was not competent to do so

(2) An order under sec 106 passed by the Original Court may be set aside in appeal, and the appellate order setting aside the order for security is an incidental order within the meaning of this section—Abdul Wahed v Amiran 30 Cal. 101.

(3) On an appeal against an order binding over a person to keep the peace under section 107, the Appellate Court can reverse the order of security and order a retrial The order of retrial is an incidental order under clause (d) of sec 423 It does not fall under clause (b) because the case is not one of appeal from conviction, the person proceeded against under sec. 107 not being a person convicted of any offence—Bhagavat Singh v Emp, 48 All 501 24 A L J 566 27 Cr L J 945

(4) An order under sec 471 (1) directing the accused to be committed to a lunatic asylum is clearly an order which the acquitting Court whether original or appellate not only has the power to make but is bound to make under sec 423 (d)—8 L B R. 290

(5) An order under sec 517 520 or 522 of the Code is a consequential or incidental order within the meaning of this clause and can be passed by the Appellate Court—29 Cal 724 46 Mad 162 (164) Therefore an order in a case of criminal misappropriation directing restoration of property which is found to have belonged to the complainant is clearly a consequential or incidental order and one which is under the circumstances just and proper—Gopi Nath v Emp, 3 A L J 770

An order of the Appellate Court setting aside an order passed by the Lower Court under sec 522 is an incidental order within the meaning of this clause—19 C W N 990 See also 29 Cal 724 Where the accused was convicted under secs. 352 and 448 I P C and the convicting Magistrate passed an order under sec 522 of this Code restoring possession of the property (which was the subject matter of the offence under sec 448 I P C) to the complainant but the accused was afterwards acquitted on appeal it was held that the Appellate Court had power, under sec 423 (d) and sec 522 read together to order restitution of the property to the accused—Manki v Bhagwanti 27 All 415

(6) Under this clause the Appellate Court can exercise the powers conferred by sec 562 of the Code—24 All 306 The Court before which he is convicted in sec 562 is not limited to the Court of first instance but includes the Court of appeal—29 Mad 567 This is now expressly provided by sub section (2) of section 562

(7) An order by the Appellate Court directing the accused to pay the costs of the complainant under sec 31 of the Court Fees Act (now 546A of this Code) is no part of the penalty or sentence passed in the case and therefore not an enhancement of sentence but is an incidental order under this clause—Emp v Karuppana 29 Mad 188, Thimiah v K E, 47 Mad 914 (915) The contrary view taken in Q E v Tangavelu, 22 Mad. 153 decided under the Code of 1882 which did not contain clause (d), is no longer correct

(8) Where a case was tried by a Bench of Honorary Magistrates and the judgment was signed by one of them only, the District Magistrate on appeal, without in any way interfering with the order of the Bench of Magistrates sent back the case so that the judgment might be signed by the other Magistrates—41 All 217

Orders which cannot be passed —The only consequential or incidental orders which fall within the purview of this clause are orders which follow as a matter of course being the necessary complements to the main orders passed, without which the latter would be incomplete and ineffective (such as directions as to the refund of fines realised from acquitted appellants, or on the reversal of acquittals, any direction as to the restoration of compensation paid under sec 250) for which no separate authority is needed Therefore where the Magistrate in acquitting the accused has made certain remarks in his judgment about the credibility of certain witnesses, the High Court cannot expunge those remarks from the record such expunction not being consequential or incidental to the main order viz, the order of acquittal of the Court below, especially where there has not been an appeal against the order of acquittal of the lower Court—44 All, 401 But see Note 1149 above and Note 1214 under sec. 439 An Appellate Court cannot award compensation under sec 250 because such order is not a necessary complement of the main order of acquittal, only the Magistrate by whom the case is heard in the first instance can pass such order—28 All 625, 39 Cal 157 An order of confiscation under the Indian Forests Act VII of 1878 cannot be regarded as an order incidental on a conviction under that Act, under sec 54 of that Act the confiscation is regarded as a punishment in addition to any other punishment prescribed for the offence Therefore an Appellate Court cannot pass such order—Ainuddi v Q E, 27 Cal 450 The High Court cannot award the costs incurred in a revision petition filed against an order passed under Ch XII—Veerappa v. Avudayammal, 48 Mad 262 See this case cited in Note 478 under sec 148

1151. Sub-section (2) :—Interference with verdict of jury :— The High Court cannot alter or reverse the verdict of the jury unless it is of opinion that the verdict is erroneous owing to a misdirection by the Judge or to a misunderstanding on the part of the jury of the law as laid down by the Judge—32 Mad 179, Emp v. Smither, 28 Mad 1, 10 Bom L R 565, 27 Bom 626. When the Court is of that opinion it can reverse the verdict, but the power ought not to be exercised lightly especially when the verdict is one of acquittal and unanimous—10 Bom L. R. 565 The High Court cannot, on an appeal from the unanimous verdict of the jury, interfere with it, in the absence of a misdirection by the Judge when there is some circumstantial evidence of the guilt—45 Cal 635

'Erroneous' —To enable the Appellate Court to interfere with the verdict of the jury, the verdict must be erroneous. The effect of this clause is to prevent the High Court from reversing the verdict of the jury on account of any misdirection by the Judge or misunderstanding of the law by the jury, unless such misdirection or misunderstanding is on points material to the verdict, so that the verdict may be said to be tained with error in the process in which it has been arrived at —Wafador v Q E, 21 Cal. 955 The word erroneous is not to be read as meaning 'wrong on the facts.' It must be read in connection with the words that follow, as meaning that the verdict has been vitiated and rendered bad or defective by reason of misdirection or misunderstanding of the law—Wafadar v Q E, 21 Cal 955, 27 Bom. 626, Ratanlal 452 It is the duty of the Appellate Court to ascertain whether the process or method which the Judge directed the jury to follow as to the acceptance or discarding of evidence, or as to the view taken of the law, was erroneous on any material point but it is not the duty of the Appellate Court to determine for itself whether the verdict as a conclusion of fact was right or wrong To hold the latter view would be tantamount to holding that an appeal would lie upon the facts from the verdict of a jury in the face of the provisions of secs 418—21 Cal 955 Moreover the High Court will not be justified in setting aside the verdict of a jury even though it be erroneous unless the Court is satisfied that the prisoner is prejudiced by the error and that there has been a failure of justice—5 W R 80 25 Cal 230 25 Cal 561 5 B H C R 85 When there is no error in matter of law and there was some evidence to go to the jury the High Court cannot interfere—5 W R 13 Jaspath v Q E 14 Cal 164

Misdirection —See notes under sec 297

Misunderstanding —There must be misunderstanding by the jury of the law as laid down by the Judge the verdict will not be set aside on the ground that the counsel for the accused (and not the jury) had misunderstood the expressions used by the Judge specially when it appeared that the expression used by the Judge was perfectly intelligible and could not have the meaning suggested by the counsel for the accused—Q E v Shib Chunder 10 Cal 1079

Verdict must be set aside in its entirety —The term verdict in this sub section means a verdict on all the charges and not merely the verdict upon each charge separately Therefore if in a trial there are several charges in which there is an acquittal on some and a conviction on the other charges and the verdict is found to be erroneous on appeal the Appellate Court must set aside the verdict in its entirety Where the Appellate Court in such a case reverses the verdict of the jury and orders a retrial the retrial unless the Appellate Court has limited the scope must be taken to be one upon all the charges originally framed—Krishna Dhone v Q E 22 Cal 377 16 C W N 909 1904 P R 12

1152 Power of High Court upon interference with verdict —The High Court on setting aside a verdict of the jury on the ground of irregularity has jurisdiction to order a retrial—Bani Madhab v Emp 46 Cal 217 Once the verdict of the jury is set aside under this sub section there is no restriction on the power of the Appellate Court to deal with the case of which it has complete seizin in any of the manners provided in this section Its power is not restricted to directing a retrial and it may also reverse the finding and sentence and acquit or discharge the accused or order him to be retried or alter the finding and maintain the sentence or without altering the finding reduce the sentence—Taju Pramanik v Q E 25 Cal 711 After reversal of the verdict of the jury, in an appeal against an acquittal the High Court may under clause (a) order a retrial or further inquiry or commitment or may find the accused guilty and pass sentence on him according to law—Emp v E H Smither, 26 Mad 1 It is open to the High Court to order a new trial of the accused by a new jury when it is found that the verdict of the jury is tainted with prejudice and is based on rumours as to the prisoner s previous conduct—2 Weir 384

itself When a case has been tried before a jury, and the conviction has been set aside on the ground of misdirection, the accused is entitled to have his case retried before a jury, and as a matter of procedure and in justice to the accused this course should be adopted—Sadhu v Emp, 4 C W N 576 Where a verdict is erroneous owing to a misdirection by the Judge, the Appellate Court has no option but to set aside the verdict and order a retrial Were the Appellate Court to go into the facts in such a case, it would be substituting the decision of the Judges of that Court for the verdict of the jury, who have the opportunity of seeing the demeanour of the witnesses and weighing the evidence with the assistance which this affords whereas the Judges of the Appellate Court can only arrive at a decision on a perusal of the paper evidence—Wafadar v Q E 21 Cal 955, 22 Cal 377, 39 All 348

Power to go into facts —From the above remarks it is evident that the High Court is not competent to go into the facts of the case, and the appeal must be limited as laid down in section 418, to points of law—39 All 348 Even the High Court is not competent to go into the facts to ascertain whether the verdict of the jury is actually erroneous on the facts—25 Cal 230 It is not competent for the Appellate Court to look at the evidence with a view to see whether another jury might not have arrived at a different verdict—39 All 348. Contra—26 Mad 1, where it has been held that in order to determine whether the verdict is erroneous it is absolutely necessary for the High Court to go into the facts and to consider the evidence in the case before passing orders on it

The powers of the High Court under section 307 are, however, wider than the powers under this section When a reference is made under sec. 307, the power of the High Court is not restricted, as under this section only to cases where there has been an error of law in the proceeding below, but the High Court is authorised under that section to go into the facts—see 21 Cal 955, 9 All 420

Judgment of subordinate appellate Courts

424. The rules contained in Chapter XXVI as to the judgment of a Criminal Court of original jurisdiction shall apply, so far as may be practicable, to the judgment of any Appellate Court other than a High Court:

Provided that unless the Appellate Court otherwise directs, the accused shall not be brought up, or required to attend, to hear judgment delivered.

1153. Appellate Judgment :—When an appeal is dismissed summarily under section 421, no judgment is required to be written See Note 1132 under Sec 421

But if the appeal is dismissed not summarily but under sec. 423 after notice given under sec 422, the Court must deliver a judgment that would fulfil the conditions laid down in sec. 367 Omission to write a judgment is not an irregularity cured by sec 537 (a) of the Code—17 Bom L R 1085

Contents of judgment —The judgment must fulfil the requirements of sec 367 that is it must contain the point or points for determination raised by the memorandum of appeal the decision thereon and the reasons for that decision—17 Bom L R 1085 37 Cal 91 4 N L R 84 See Note 1051 under sec 367 under heading Appellate Judgment

If the appellate judgment is not in accordance with law the High Court may remand the appeal for rehearing and delivery of a proper judgment—Bholanath v Emp 7 C W N 30 3 Cal 194 1912 P W R 43 Q E v Gopala 1 Bom L R 5

It is improper for an Appellate Court to record in its judgment grave imputations on the motives of the trying Magistrate when such imputations have no other foundation than suspicion If the Appellate Magistrate considers that the trying Magistrate is actuated by improper considerations in the performance of his judicial functions it is his duty to report his opinion to the District Magistrate but any imputations ought not to find a place in the judgment—Yacoob v Weir 535

425 (1) Whenever a case is decided on appeal by the High Court under this Chapter, it shall certify its judgment or order to the Court by which the finding, sentence or order appealed against was recorded or passed If the finding sentence or order was recorded or passed by a Magistrate other than the District Magistrate, the certificate shall be sent through the District Magistrate

Order by High Court on appeal to be certified to lower Court

(2) The Court to which the High Court certifies its judgment or order shall thereupon make such orders as are conformable to the judgment or order of the High Court, and, if necessary, the record shall be amended in accordance therewith

426 (1) Pending any appeal by a convicted person, the Appellate Court may, for reasons to be recorded by it in writing order that the execution of the sentence or order appealed against be suspended, and, also, if he is in confinement, that he be released on bail or on his own bond

Suspension of sentence pending appeal Release of appellant on bail

(2) The power conferred by this section on an Appellate Court may be exercised also by the High Court in the case of any appeal by a convicted person to a Court subordinate thereto

(3) When the appellant is ultimately sentenced to imprisonment, penal servitude or transportation, the time during which he is so released shall be excluded in computing the term for which he is so sentenced

1154 Pending an appeal —A sentence cannot be suspended until an appeal has been actually preferred and is pending Where a Magistrate postponed the execution of the sentence for a stated period at the request of the accused, to allow him to appeal it was held that the suspension of the sentence was bad in law—12 W R 47 A sentence can not be suspended in the absence of an appeal—Anonymous 5 M H C R App 1

"Appellate Court —The power conferred by this section to suspend the sentence can be exercised only by the Appellate Court—2 Weir 536 The sentence cannot be suspended by the Magistrate or Judge who passed it—12 W R 47, Anonymous 4 M H C R App 1 So also a Sessions Judge has no power to suspend the execution of a sentence passed by a second Class Magistrate, because the appeal from that Magistrate will not lie to the Sessions Judge—2 Weir 536

Sentence —An order of detention passed by a District Magistrate under sec 10 of the Reformatory Schools Act (VII of 1897) is not a sentence within the meaning of this section nor is it a punishment enumerated in sec 53 of the Penal Code A Sessions Judge has therefore no power to suspend its operation under this section—16 Cr L J 131 (Mad)

Release on bail —The Appellate Court can exercise the powers conferred by this Section and release the accused on bail, whether the offence is bailable or not—5 M H C R App 1.

Exclusion of time —It is only when the convicted person has been released (and not where his sentence has been illegally suspended) that the term during which the sentence is suspended shall be excluded in computing the sentence—2 Weir 536

Arrest of accused in appeal from acquittal

427. When an appeal is presented under Section 417, the High Court may issue a warrant directing that the accused be arrested and brought before it or any subordinate Court, and the Court before which he is brought may commit him to prison pending the disposal of the appeal, or admit him to bail

The warrant of arrest is not an order to the prejudice of the accused within the meaning of Sec 439 (2), and can therefore be issued without previous notice to him—8 L B R 290

Appellate Court may take further evidence or direct it to be taken.

428. (1) In dealing with any appeal under this Chapter, the Appellate Court, if it thinks additional evidence to be necessary, shall record its reason, and may either take such evidence itself, or direct it to be taken by a Magistrate, or, when the Appellate Court is a High Court, by a Court of Session or a Magistrate

(2) When the additional evidence is taken by the Court of Session or the Magistrate, it or he shall certify such evidence to the Appellate Court and such Court shall thereupon proceed to dispose of the appeal

(3) Unless the Appellate Court otherwise directs, the accused or his pleader shall be present when the additional evidence is taken, but such evidence shall not be taken in the presence of jurors or assessors

(4) The taking of evidence under this section shall be subject to the provisions of Chapter XXV, as if it were an inquiry

Powers of Civil and Criminal Courts compared —A Civil Court has ordinarily no power to take evidence of its own motion it has to decide the case on the evidence adduced by the parties But a Criminal Court stands on a different footing Section 540 enables the Magistrate at any stage of the inquiry or trial to examine any witness he may find necessary in order to come to a proper conclusion Section 428 also in general term empowers the Appellate Court to take additional evidence—8 M L T 418

1155 Object and scope of section —The object of this section is the prevention of a guilty man's escape through some careless or ignorant proceedings of a Magistrate or the vindication of an innocent person wrongfully accused where the Magistrate through the same carelessness or ignorance has omitted to record the circumstances essential to the elucidation of truth—18 W R 31 Akhtar v K E 6 P L T 431 26 Cr L J 1171 A I R 1925 Pat 526 The intention of the Legislature in enacting this section is to empower the Appellate Court to see that justice is done between the prosecutor and the person prosecuted and if the Appellate Court finds that certain evidence is necessary in order to enable it to give a correct finding it would be justified in taking action under this section—D lla v Emp Lah 148 27 Cr L J 463

The power under this section can be exercised only by the Appellate Court A Sessions Judge or a District Magistrate not acting as an Appellate Court is not authorised to take additional evidence or order it to be taken—6 C L J 251 But the High Court acting as a Court of revision under section 439 has the power of an Appellate Court to direct evidence to be taken—Ibid

A proceeding under section 125 is neither appellate nor revisional

diction to remand the case to the Magistrate for further evidence—10 Cr L J 221 (Pat)

Enquiry by Police —This section does not warrant an Appellate Court sending a case to the Police for investigation if it had been originally started by a complaint in Court—1900 A W N 130

1156. When additional evidence should be taken and when not —Additional evidence may be taken under this section only if the Appellate Court thinks it to be necessary, and the necessity for taking such evidence must be apparent from something on the record and cannot be derived from external information—3 L B R 114 The mere fact that some fresh evidence has been discovered after the filing of the appeal does not empower the Appellate Court to allow the fresh evidence to be adduced unless the Court thinks it necessary—Gurumurthi v Read 9 M L T 323 17 Cr L J 40 When the Original Court has taken all the evidence produced by the prosecution which had ample opportunities to do so and that evidence has failed to sustain the charge an Appellate Court will not, except in every exceptional circumstances direct that additional evidence should be taken—5 All 217 This section does not empower an Appellate Court to take additional evidence in a case where there is no evidence legally capable of sustaining the charge But where the conviction by the lower Court has been based upon some prima facie evidence which might legally sustain the charge but which in the opinion of the Appellate Court is not quite satisfactory the Appellate Court may under this section direct additional evidence to be taken—18 W R 31 Where the Lower Court has refused to examine certain witnesses for the defence and the accused has been prejudiced in his defence by such refusal, the Appellate Court may direct the Lower Court to take the evidence of such witnesses and to certify the same to it—19 Mad 375 Mahomed v K E, 3 P L J 632 Similarly, where the prosecution had wanted to adduce evidence and the Magistrate had prevented them from doing it, the Appellate Court could call for fresh evidence under this section—Jeremiah v Vas, 36 Mad 457, 22 M L J 75 12 Cr L J 585 Where the Appellate Court thinks that the evidence of some more witnesses who were not examined in the Lower Court is necessary, it cannot order a retrial on that ground, but should proceed under this section by summoning and examining those witnesses—16 A L J 325, 31 Cal 710 See also 1 P L J 99

The Appellate Court will take additional evidence to supply a defect in formal proof (e g, proof as to whether the sanction for the prosecution was granted by the proper authority) when the conviction for a serious charge as sedition, which is otherwise sustainable is likely to be upset for want of such proof—Varadarajulu Naidu v K E 42 Mad 885

Recording reasons —Before taking additional evidence the Court must record its reason for so doing—Varadarajulu Naidu 42 Mad 885 8 M L T 418 Dulla v Emp 7 Lah 148, 27 Cr. L J 463 But omission to do so is a mere irregularity curable by sec 531—9 M L T 406

Revision of order allowing additional evidence —The powers of an Appellate Court to take additional evidence should not be unduly restricted

The scope of sec 428 is prima facie not limited by any consideration save that the Appellate Court should be of opinion that additional evidence is necessary and should record its reasons In India the onus is placed upon the Court not merely to listen to the evidence but to inquire to the utmost into the truth of the matter and so to secure justice Accordingly, if any restriction is to be placed upon the power conferred on the Appellate Court by section 428, it certainly cannot be that negligence or inadvertence on the part of the prosecution is to be allowed to effect a miscarriage of justice on the contrary the enactment is directed to the attainment of justice even at a late stage of the proceedings by the introduction of further materials which the Court considers to be essential to a just decision of the case Consequently the Court of Revision will not always interfere with the order of the Appellate Court allowing additional evidence even where the Court of Revision might itself in the exercise of its discretion as an Appellate Court have declined to admit such evidence To justify interference in revision the Court must be satisfied that the Appellate Court committed an error of law which has prejudiced the accused on the merits —Akhtar v Emp 6 P L T 431 26 Cr L J 1171 A I R 1925 Pat 526

1157 Procedure —This section empowers an Appellate Court to merely call for additional evidence and not to call upon the Lower Court to give its finding upon such evidence Where the Appellate Court calls for such finding of the Lower Court the order of the Appellate Court will be set aside—K E v Karnari Benu 15 Cr L J 240 9 M L T 406 Muthu Karapan v Vellaya Kadamban 16 Cr L J 79 1914 M W N 778 When the subordinate Court is directed to take additional evidence it shall merely certify the evidence to the Appellate Court and is not entitled to give any finding on such evidence such duty being left to the Appellate Court—3 B L R A C 62 and if the Magistrate gives any finding on such evidence the Appellate Court cannot accept such finding but must form its own conclusion upon the evidence so taken—16 Cr L J 797 (Mad) Muthu Karappan v Vellaya 1914 M W N 778

The accused persons were convicted by the trial Court without any examination under sec 342 and the Appellate Court directed as follows The lower Court will examine the accused under sec 342 and call upon them to adduce any defence evidence if they choose to give any and after examination of the defence witnesses he will re submit the record to this Court The appeal will then be heard by me on the merits Held that the Appellate Judge s procedure was erroneous He appears to have followed the provision of the Civil P Code rather than of the Crim P Code He should have set aside the convictions and sentences and remanded the case to the first Court for that Court to deal with the case on the merits after compliance with section 342 as if it were before Court again for the first time—Md Abdus Samad v K E, 40 C 319 26 Cr L J 313 A I R 1925 Cal 172

be made even in the absence of the accused and the provisions of

do not apply to section 428—Mohiuddin v Emp, 4 Pat 288, 6 P L T 154 26 Cr. L J 811, A I R 1925 Pat 414

1158. Power of Appellate Court after additional evidence —The Appellate Court cannot consider and determine a new case disclosed by the additional evidence, except in so far as to affirm or modify or set aside the sentence under appeal or to act as otherwise provided by section 423 (b) An Appellate Court cannot under this section pass a fresh sentence, which may be subject to further appeal Under the 1898 Code the Appellate Court is directed to dispose of the appeal finally and not to pass a new judgment sentence, etc, (as under the old Code of 1861) which may be further appealed against—Q E v Ishak, 27 Cal 372 (over ruling 2 W R 13)

The Appellate Court can re hear the appeal after obtaining the additional evidence Both under the Criminal Procedure Code and under sec 107 of the Government of India Act of 1915, the High Court has full jurisdiction and power in criminal revision to direct the Lower Appellate Court to re hear an appeal after obtaining additional evidence certified by the trial Court—Mahomed v K F, 3 P L J 632, 19 Cr L J 902

1159. No further appeal —An appellant whose appeal is dismissed by an Appellate Court, after it has taken additional evidence under this section has no further right of appeal According to sec 430, except in certain cases, judgments and orders passed by an Appellate Court upon appeal are final—Q E v Ishak, 27 Cal 372, 8 W R 59, 15 W R 33 If additional evidence is taken it does not entitle a party to appeal from a finding upon such evidence to the High Court upon the merits treating it in substance as an original judgment—6 B H C. R 64

1160. Sub-section (3) —In only one instance is a Court of Session authorised to record evidence in the absence of the jury or the assessors and that is when additional evidence is called for by the Appellate Court But in no other cases can the presence of the jurors be dispensed with, and therefore where in a trial for murder the Sessions Judge relying on a statement made by the deceased convicted the accused and the necessary evidence to prove that statement was not recorded by the Judge until after the assessors had been discharged, it was held that the error vitiated the trial and it was not covered by the provisions of section 537—Q. E v Ram Lal 15 All 136

429 When the Judges composing the Court of Appeal are equally divided in opinion, the case, with their opinions thereon, shall be laid before another Judge of the same Court, and such Judge, after such hearing (if any) as he thinks fit, shall deliver his opinion, and the judgment or order shall follow such opinion.

Procedure where Judges of Court of Appeal are equally divided 1161. Scope of section —This section applies not only to appeals but to revision-proceedings as well Therefore, if two learned Judges differ in a Criminal Revision case, section 439 read with section 429 requires the case to be decided by a third Judge—40 Mad 976 27 Cal 892 (at p 910) 27 Cal 501 (at p 505) See sec 439 (1)

The principle of this section applies also to a reference under sec 307 In case of difference between the Judges on a reference under sec 307, the rule of this section is to be followed—Q E v Dada Ana 15 Bom 452

A third Judge to whom a case has been referred under sec 429 does not constitute a Division Bench and therefore he cannot make a reference to a Full Bench—Khan v Hriday 29 C W N 475 41 C L J 357, 26 Cr. L J 915

Case —Where upon a difference of opinion between two Judges, the case is laid before a third Judge the whole case is referred to the third Judge and not merely the point or points on which the Judges differed and it is the duty of the Judge to whom the case is referred to consider all the points involved before he delivers his opinion and it will be according to the opinion of such Judge that the judgment will follow—38 Cal. 202 But in a later case of the same High Court it has been held that the third Judge cannot differ from the referring Judges on a point on which both the referring Judges are agreed unless there are strong grounds for doing so—Venkataratnam v Corporation of Calcutta, 22 C W N 745 19 Cr L J 753 In other words it lays down that the third Judge can consider only the points on which the referring Judges have disagreed and not all the points To remove this conflict of opinion it was proposed by the Select Committee of 1916 to add the following proviso to this section Provided that if either of the Judges composing the Court of appeal so require the appeal shall be re heard before them and another Judge or if the Chief Justice so directs before three other Judges and the judgment or order shall follow the opinion of the majority of the Judges so re hearing the case But the Joint Committee of 1922 deleted this proviso as it was disapproved of by many Judges and also because the difficulty which the amendment intended to meet was of rare occurrence A similar proviso was intended to be added to section 378 and it was omitted by the Joint Committee for the same reason See clauses 98 and 113 of the Report of the Joint Committee of 1922

But there can be no question that where there are two accused and the Judges are agreed in opinion with regard to one of them but are divided in opinion as regards the other the case which is laid before the third Judge is only the case of the prisoner with regard to whom the Judges are divided in opinion—38 Cal 202

430 Judgments and orders passed by an Appellate Court upon appeal shall be final, except in the cases provided for in Section 417 and Chapter XXXII.

Finality of orders on appeal

See 27 Cal 372 and 6 B H C R 64 cited in Note 1159 under sec 428

1162 A sentence is said to be final when it cannot be set aside or interfered with by any Court or authority, whether on appeal or otherwise —Dular Dat v Nijabat 12 Cal 536

Where the Sessions Judge rejected a criminal appeal on the ground that it was barred by limitation the rejection was final and the Sessions Judge was not competent on a later representation by the prisoner to admit the appeal again—Q F v Bhimappa 19 Bom 732 1887 P R 24 An order of summary rejection of an appeal is final it is immaterial whether the order is passed before or after the papers are called for—Emp v Mahomed Yashin, 4 Bom 101 An order passed by a Sessions Judge declining to interfere with a sanction granted by the Lower Court is final and is not open to review or revision except in the manner laid down in Chapter XXXII—23 Bom 50 But an order rejecting an appeal summarily for non appearance of the appellant is an improper order and it is open to the Court to rehear the appeal and deal with it—7 M H C R App 29 46 Mad 382 (403) Ratan Chand v Emp, 5 N L R 76

431. Every appeal under Section 417 shall finally abate on the death of the accused, and every other appeal under this Chapter (except an appeal from a sentence of fine) shall finally abate on the death of the appellant.

Abatement of appeals

1163 The Code has made no provision for the continuance of the appeal by the heir or devisee or executor of the deceased convict or by any other person The appeal abates on the appellant s death—2 Bom 564, 19 Bom 714 But an exception is made as regards an appeal from a sentence of fine An appeal against a sentence of fine should not abate by reason of the death of the accused because it is not a matter which affects his person but one which affects his estate —Select Committee s Report (1898) See also Daulat Ram v Crown, 1919 P R 8

The principle of this section applies also to revisions, and therefore where a fine inflicted upon an accused was a heavy one and its recovery from the estate would entail hardship on the widow, it was held that the application for revision filed by the accused did not abate on his death as regards the sentence of fine and the High Court in revision remitted the fine—Daulat Ram v Crown 1919 P R 8, 20 Cr L J 214

Compensation awarded under section 250 is recoverable as if it were a fine therefore an application for revision against an order of compensation does not abate on the death of the applicant but can be prosecuted by his legal representatives—1908 P R 24

CHAPTER XXXII

OF REFERENCE AND REVISION.

432. A Presidency Magistrate may, if he thinks fit, refer for the opinion of the High Court any question of law which arises in the hearing of any case

Reference by Presidency Magistrate to High Court pending before him, or may give judgment in any such case subject to the decision of the High Court on such reference and, pending such decision, may either commit the accused to jail, or release him on bail to appear for judgment when called upon

1164 This section empowers only a Presidency Magistrate to refer a question of law No other Magistrate has power to make a reference A District Magistrate cannot refer he can only bring a case before the High Court by way of revision—1 S L R 4 A Session Judge has no power to refer a case to the High Court on a point arising in an appeal pending before him—13 A L J 477

Under this section there can be a reference to the High Court only on a question of law and not on a question of fact—Ratanlal 838 Ratanlal 539 And the High Court upon a reference under this section can deal only with the particular points of law referred to it it cannot deal with the facts of the case nor any other objection against the proceeding of the Court of the Presidency Magistrate—Emp v Molla Fa la Karim, 33 Cal 193

The Magistrate can refer a question which has arisen in the hearing of the case he cannot make a reference on a question of law where the accused has been merely placed before him and the hearing of the case has not begun—Q E v Vanu 1 Bom L R 521

433 (1) When a question has been so referred, the High Court shall pass such order thereon as it thinks fit, and shall cause a copy of such order to be sent to the Magistrate by whom the reference was made, who shall dispose of the case conformably to the said order

Disposal of case according to decision of High Court

(2) The High Court may direct by whom the costs of such reference shall be paid

Direction as to costs

1165 On a reference by a Presidency Magistrate to the High Court as to whether on the facts stated any offence has been committed by an accused person the prosecution has to make out that the accused has committed the offence and therefore the counsel for the prosecution has the right to begin—Q E v Haradhan 19 Cal 380

The order passed by the High Court on a reference under section 432 is conclusive both as to the merits of the case and as to the quantum of punishment—1800 A W N 275

The High Court sitting in appeal cannot review an order passed under this section—Ratanlal 638

434. (1) When any person has, in a trial before a Judge of a High Court consisting of more Judges than one and acting in the exercise of its original criminal jurisdiction, been convicted of an offence, the Judge, if he thinks fit, may reserve and refer for the decision of a Court consisting of two or more Judges of such Court any question of law which has arisen in the course of the trial of such person, and the determination of which would affect the event of the trial.

Power to reserve questions arising in original jurisdiction of High Court.

(2) If the Judge reserves any such question, the person convicted shall, pending the decision thereon, be remanded to jail, or, if the Judge thinks fit, be admitted to bail; and the High Court shall have power to review the case, or such part of it as may be necessary, and finally determine such question, and thereupon to alter the sentence passed by the Court of original jurisdiction, and to pass such judgment or order as the High Court thinks fit.

Procedure when question reserved.

1166 Reference discretionary —The words 'may reserve and refer' show that it is in the discretion of the single Judge whether or not he will reserve a point of law for the opinion of the High Court consisting of two or more Judges—10 B H C R 75, and this discretion of the single Judge is not reviewable under clause 26 of the Letters Patent —Ibid.

When reference can be made —A reference can be made when the point of law has arisen in the course of the trial, where a point is raised before the accused is called upon to plead, it cannot be referred to the Full Bench, because the point cannot be said to have arisen in the course of the trial—Q F v Dolegobind, 28 Cal 211

Right to begin —Where, on the application of the prisoner's counsel, a question of law has been reserved for the decision of the Court under this section, the counsel for the prisoner has the right to begin—Q. E v Appa Subhana, 8 Bom 200

1167 Sub-section (2) —High Court's power to review the case — The High Court in considering a point of law reserved under this section can review the whole case, if it is of opinion that any evidence has been improperly admitted or rejected, and can affirm or quash the conviction—Q v Hurribole, 1 Cal 207, 9 B H C. This is the only section which enables the Division or Full Bench of the High Court to review the judgment of a single Judge exercising original criminal jurisdiction The powers of a single Judge in a matter with which he has jurisdiction to deal are the powers of the Court and cannot be in any way controlled (expect as under this section) by a Division or Full Bench of the Court As no appeal lies no revision lies—1909 P R 1 In the absence of any reservation of a question of law by the trying Judge the High Court is precluded from re opening a question which has been decided by the single Judge presiding at the trial—Emp v Narayan 32 Bom 111

The High Court can review the judgment or order of a Judge passed in the exercise of his original jurisdiction A Division Bench of the High Court has no power to alter or review the order of a High Court pronounced in the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction—7 All 672 10 Bom 176 5 W R 61 23 Bom 50 Emp v Nagargouda 19 Bom L R 695

Power to call for records of inferior Courts

435 (1) The High Court or any Sessions Judge or District Magistrate or any Sub-divisional Magistrate empowered by the Local Government in this behalf may call for and examine the record of any proceeding before any inferior Criminal Court situate within the local limits of its or his jurisdiction for the purpose of satisfying itself or himself as to the correctness, legality or propriety of any finding sentence or order recorded or passed, and as to the regularity of any proceedings of such inferior Court and may when calling for such record direct that the execution of any sentence be suspended and if the accused is in confinement that he be released on bail or on his own bond pending the examination of the record

Explanation—All Magistrates whether exercising original or appellate jurisdiction, shall be deemed to be inferior to the Sessions Judge for the purposes of this sub-section and of S 437

(2) If any Sub divisional Magistrate acting under Sub section (1) considers that any such finding, sentence

(3) Omitted

(4) If an application under this section has been made either to the Sessions Judge or District Magistrate, no further application shall be entertained by the other of them

Change —The italicised words at the end of sub-section (1) and the Explanation have been added and sub section (3) has been omitted by sec 116 of the Crim Pro Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 Sub section (3) stood as follows —

"(3) Orders made under sections 143 and 144 and proceedings under Chapter XII and section 176 are not proceedings within the meaning of this section "

By reason of the omission of this sub section, the above orders and proceedings are now subject to revision under this Code See notes under secs 143, 144 145—148 and 176

In moving for this amendment i e the omission of sub-section (3) Dr Gour observed "The intention of this amendment is to preserve to the High Courts revisional jurisdiction in cases disposed of under sections 144 145, etc Honourable Members are aware that not only the Chartered High Courts but all the non chartered High Courts such as the Chief Courts and the Courts of the Judicial Commissioners do under various local Acts possess a statutory power of revision in such cases Now sir I ask the House a simple question If it is a fact that all the Courts chartered and non chartered possess this power then I say clause (3) of section 435 is superfluous nay misleading If it is a fact that they do not possess that power in that case I ask the House to endorse my opinion that this power is both salutary and necessary It will not be denied that this power has in fact been exercised under section 107 of the Government of India Act and other Local Acts If so this clause conflicts with the express provisions of section 107 of the Government of India Act It creates utter confusion If the High Courts have power under section 107 of the Government of India Act to exercise the general power of superintendence over the Subordinate Courts what object is served by inserting this clause that orders under sections 143 144 and 145 shall not be open to revision under section 435 ? I have therefore confidence that this House will vote for my amendment and place the powers of all the High Courts beyond any shadow of doubt and I hope that the Government out of sheer consistency will accept my amendment" —Legislative Assembly Debates 8th February 1923 pages 2076—2077

1168 To whom application should be made —The revisional jurisdiction of the District Magistrate and Sessions Judge is concurrent with that of the High Court but although the three tribunals have concurrent powers the aggrieved party should in the first instance seek his remedy before the lower tribunal and not in the High Court direct In the matter of applications in criminal revision to the High Court it is a recognised rule of practice that a previous application to the Lower Court (District Magistrate or Sessions Judge) should be considered an essential step in the procedure irrespective of whether such lower Court has or has not power to grant the relief claimed and that failure on the part of the applicant to submit his application to the Lower Court will operate as a bar to the application being entertained by the High Court—Sheriff Ahmed v Qubul 43 All 497 Q E v Rulah 14 Cal 887; Emp v Abdus Sobhan 36 Cal 643 48 Cal 531 Abdul Matlab v. Nanda Lal 50 Cal 423 Ratanlal 490 14 Bom 331 7 C P L R 47, 1887 A W. plaint under the provisions of section 203, the High Court will not entertain an application by the complainant asking for further inquiry under section 436 when no application for that object has been made to the Sessions Judge—Gullay v Bakar 28 All 268 But when an application to the High Court for revision has already been heard and the rule granted, the High Court will not afterwards discharge the Rule on the ground that the petitioner ought to have moved the Sessions Court in the first instance, but will proceed to dispose of the Rule on the merits—Abdul Matlab v Nanda Lal 50 Cal 423 So also the High Court will not allow a point to be raised for the first time before it when such point was not taken by the petitioner in his revision application presented to the Sessions Judge The object of requiring an application for revision to be presented first to the Lower Appellate Court is that the High Court in dealing with the matter may have before it the reasoned opinions of two Courts on the points at issue and this object will be largely defeated if applicants are allowed to take in the High Court points which they did not press in their application in revision in the Court below—Emp v Bhure Mal 45 All 526 (528)

1169 Call for record —The powers of a Sessions Judge to call for and examine the records under this section are powers which can be exercised at all times—2 Weir 538 Records may be called for even after the prisoner has served out his sentence—Q E v Sinha 7 All 135 Even after the death of the prisoner pending an appeal before the Lower Appellate Court the High Court has the right to call for the records and make such order thereon as it may deem to be due to justice—2 Bom 564 When records are called for under this section, the inferior Courts must forward the original records, and not merely copies thereof—Ratanlal 128

The Courts enumerated in this section have power to call for records of subordinate Courts for the purpose of satisfying themsel as to the correctness, legality or propriety of the orders passed by

The Allahabad High Court has laid down in a recent case that if a matter has once come before the High Court in revision not on the application of the accused but on the motion of the Sessions Judge who has referred the matter to the High Court and the High Court looks into the matter and comes to the conclusion that there is no ground for revision the accused is not thereby deprived of his right to apply to the High Court in revision—Emp v Kohira Ram 45 All 11 (12) The Burma Chief Court likewise holds that where a Sessions Judge of his own motion called for proceedings in which a Magistrate had discharged certain accused persons but finding on record no cause of interference returned the proceedings to the Magistrate without taking further action and where subsequently the complainant applied to him to have the case re opened, and the Sessions Judge holding himself to be barred from taking further action returned the application to be presented to the Chief Court it was held that the mere fact that the Judge had declined to interfere suo motu on a prior occasion did not preclude him from hearing the complainant and if the arguments led him to do so from altering his view—Tun Mying v Kauk San 8 L B R 377

1171 Inferior Criminal Court —Inferior —The term inferior must be construed to mean judicially inferior i e a Court over which the Court proceeding under section 435 has appellate jurisdiction—10 Cal 268 Inferior means one who is statutably incompetent to hold or exercise equal powers it carries with it the idea of subordination which means inferiority in rank —9 Bom 100 The term inferior in this section includes the term subordinate as used in section 436 The reason for the employment of the term inferior in Sections 435 and 437 is that in both these sections the Court of Session and the District Magistrates are combined and the Magistrates other than the District Magistrate though subordinate to him are not directly subordinate to the Court of Session It was therefore necessary to employ a term applicable to the relation of the Magistracy both to the supervising authority and to the appellate tribunal—In re Padmanabha 8 Mad 18

The District Magistrate is competent under this section to call for and deal with the record of any proceeding before any Magistrate of whatever class in his own district—12 Cal 473 A first class Magistrate is subordinate to the District Magistrate for the purposes of this section —1894 P R 10 Q E v Laskari 7 All 853 The District Magistrate can call for and examine the record of any first class Magistrate within the district even though the latter has been appointed as an Additional District Magistrate—1908 P R 25 Contra—12 Bur L T 56 where it has been [illegible] the record of any proceeding [illegible] But now see the new sub se[illegible]dditional District Magistrate is deemed to be inferior to the District Magistrate

When an order is passed by a judicial officer in a matter coming within the purview of law and justice and within the scope of the authority of the Courts the mere fact that the officer passing the order states that he is acting not as a judicial officer but in his executive capacity does not oust the revisional jurisdiction of the High Court—1908 P R 4

Sessions Judges and District Magistrates when exercising their powers under this section should pay particular attention to the following points in the proceedings of the inferior Criminal Courts —(1) the rash issue of process (2) the dealing with disputed claims of right under colour of a charge of criminal trespass or mischief and convictions held of the former offence without a finding as to the criminal intent, (3) the indiscreet imposition of fines beyond the means of offenders (4) the light punishment by inferior Courts of offences requiring severe punishments in cases which ought to have gone up to a superior Court for enhanced punishment (5) the imposition of heavy fines in addition to imprisonment with a view in default of payment to extend the term of imprisonment beyond the ordinary powers of the Magistrate to inflict (6) the exaction of excessive bail or excessive security for keeping the peace or for good behaviour (7) unnecessary delay in the trial of cases—Mad H C Rul 17 12 1884 para 17

Suspension of sentence Release on bail —By the italicised words added at the end of Sub-section (1) power is given to suspend a sentence or to release an accused on bail pending the examination of the record thus avoiding the result should delay occur that the sentence may have been served before orders are passed —Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914)

1175 Sub-section (4) —The intention of the Legislature in enacting this clause is to prevent the Sessions Judge and the District Magistrate from simultaneously exercising their powers of revision and to prevent them from exercising their powers in such a way as would amount to one of them as it were hearing an appeal from or reviewing an order passed by the other—Debi Din v K E 4 O C 119

Under this section the District Magistrate and Sessions Judge have co ordinate powers and therefore after an application for revision has been made to the District Magistrate no further application can be entertained by the Sessions Judge even though the Sessions Judge was not asked to revise the order passed by the District Magistrate in revision but only to call for the record and report the Magistrate's order to the High Court—In re Karpurasundaram 17 M L J 153 nor can the Sessions Judge act suo motu to call for the records under this section after an application has been made to the District Magistrate—1912 P R 10 Where a complaint having been dismissed by the Dy Magistrate under sec 203 a fresh complaint was made before the District Magistrate in revision who again dismissed the complaint it was not open to the Sessions Judge to order further inquiry into the complaint—Sheik Siddiq v Sheikh Chakuri 17 C W N 451 Similarly the District Magistrate is prohibited by this sub-section from entertaining an application for a direction to commit the accused after a similar application to the Sessions Judge has been refused the reason for the prohibition being the avoidance of a conflict between the orders of the two District authorities having co-ordinate powers in the matter—Kalimuthu v Emp 26 Mad 477 But where an application for revision preferred to the Sessions Judge has been dismissed for want of prosecution the District Magistrate is competent to entertain a second application for revision and exercise his powers under this section—Debi Din v K E 4 O C 119

Where a District Magistrate called for the record of a case in which the accused had been discharged and where the complainant subsequently presented an application to the Sessions Judge to have the order of discharge of the accused set aside and the Sessions Judge sent f proceedings and after a perusal of them ordered the committal of the accused for trial it was held that the Sessions Judge's action was not illegal since no application was made to the District Magistrate, and as the District Magistrate's action in calling for the record was not equivalent to entertaining an application—8 L B R 361

436 On examining any record under section 435 or otherwise, the High Court or the Sessions Judge may direct the District Magistrate by himself or by any of the Magistrates subordinate to him to make, and the District Magistrate may himself make or direct any subordinate Magistrate to make, further inquiry into any complaint which has been dismissed under section 203 or sub-section (3) of Section 204, or into the case of any person accused of an offence who has been discharged:

Power to order inquiry.

Provided that no Court shall make any direction under this section for inquiry into the case of any person who has been discharged, unless such person has had an opportunity of shewing cause why such direction should not be made.

Change —This is the old section 437, and the old section 436 has been renumbered as sec 437 The reason is that the words 'instead of directing a fresh inquiry' occurring in the old section 436 (now 437) refer to the inquiry which can be directed under the old section 437 (now 436), and it is therefore necessary to put the latter section first

The words "person accused of an offence' have been substituted for the words 'accused person" occurring in the old section 'There have been different rulings as to whether the expression accused person in this section means any person accused of an offence, and it is now made clear that it does' —Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914) The proviso has been newly added "We have added a proviso to this section to give effect to the rule laid down by the Courts that a fresh inquiry should not be made into the case of a person who has been discharged unless he has had an opportunity of showing cause —Report of the Joint Committee (1922)

1175A Scope —This section does not speak of Presidency Magistrates, and the High Court has no power under this section to direct further inquiry into a case of dismissal of complaint or discharge of accused by a Presidency Magistrate—Kedar Nath v Khetranath 6 C L J 705, Debi Bux v Jutmal 33 Cal 1282, Charubala v Barendra 27 Cal 126 But the High Court can exercise such power under sec 439, see 36 Cal 994 28 Cal 652 and 26 Cal 746 cited in Note 682 under sec. 203.

A Sessions Judge can revise an order of discharge passed by a Magistrate, in a case instituted under section 476, even though he is moved by a private person to do so There is nothing in this Code to limit the persons who can bring the matter (i e, the order of discharge) to the notice of the Sessions Judge, and it is immaterial how these facts are brought to his notice—Peary Lal v Sagar Mal, 49 All 230 25 A L J 42, 27 Cr L J 1130

1176. Who can direct further inquiry —The mention of the three tribunals together, the High Court, the Sessions Judge and the District Magistrate, shows that the Legislature intended them to have the same power with regard to the matter dealt with under this section—15 Cal 608 32 Mad 220 But though the powers of the three tribunals are co ordinate, still as a matter of procedure the application should be made at first to the lower tribunal Thus where a District Magistrate has dismissed a complaint under sec 203 the High Court will not entertain an application for revision under this section unless a previous application has been made to the Sessions Judge The High Court will interfere only as a Court of last resort—Gullay v Bakar Hussain 28 All 268 1904 A W N 232 So also where the District Magistrate and Chief Court have concurrent jurisdiction an order under this section will be more conveniently made by the District Magistrate than by the Chief Court—1888 P R 7

Since the District Magistrate and the Sessions Judge have co ordinate powers under this section to direct further inquiry it follows therefore that where a District Magistrate has directed an inquiry into a case and decided upon it the Sessions Judge is not competent to order further inquiry under this section—Shaik Siddiq v Shaik Chakuri 17 C W N 451 See Note 1175 under sub-sec (4) to Sec 435 In like manner, when the Sessions Judge has made an order for further inquiry under this section the District Magistrate cannot make a contrary order but should submit the matter to the High Court through the medium of the Public Prosecutor—Q E v Prithi 12 All 434 When a further inquiry has been refused by one of the officers it should not be ordered by the other if the Sessions Judge is of opinion that the order of the District Magistrate for further inquiry is wrong it is open to the Judge to refer the matter to the High Court under sec 438 but he has no power to review the order passed by the District Magistrate under this section—22 Cal 573

A District Magistrate can make or can direct a subordinate Magistrate to make further inquiry into a case in which an order of discharge may have been passed by himself or by a subordinate Magistrate—Bidhu v Mati Sheikh 28 Cal 102 1902 P R 9

A Deputy Magistrate placed in charge of the current duties of the District Magistrate is not thereby invested with the jurisdiction of a District Magistrate under this section—11 Cal 236

Further inquiry after prior refusal —When a District Magistrate has once decided under this section that there is no case for further inquiry, he cannot subsequently order further inquiry, such an order would be an order reviewing the earlier one and is prohibited by sec 369—5 Bo L T 37 So also where a District Magistrate refused to direct f inquiry, it is not competent to his successor in office, in the face of his predecessor's order, to direct a further inquiry—Ralla Singh v Hari Singh, 4 C W N 100 But a District Magistrate, who has once declined to order further inquiry on the ground that there was no cause for interference, is competent to order further inquiry on a new information being brought to his notice—Q E v Krishnaji, Ratanlal 522 (523)

1177. Who can be directed to make further inquiry —The District Magistrate may be directed to make further inquiry, even though he exercises enhanced powers under section 30 of the Code—1904 P R 15 The District Magistrate may direct a subordinate Magistrate to make the further inquiry under this section For the purposes of this section a first class Magistrate is subordinate to the District Magistrate—Q E v Laskari, 7 All 853, 8 Mad 18 The District Magistrate has a discretion in selecting the particular Magistrate who is to make the further inquiry under this section, and this discretion is vested in the District Magistrate and not in the Sessions Judge—10 Cal 207

The further inquiry should ordinarily be made by the same Magistrate who held the first inquiry, except in case of death or removal of such Magistrate, in which case it may be conducted by another Magistrate—Q E v Erramreddi, 8 Mad 296, 8 Mad 336, see also 36 All 129 and 36 All 53 Where the further inquiry involves the taking and weighing of additional evidence, the function will generally be best performed by the same Magistrate who made the previous inquiry, but it is desirable that the further inquiry should be entrusted to a different Magistrate because it is quite possible that the Magistrate who held the first inquiry might have been prejudiced against the accused—Ratanlal 328, 4 L B R 233 Thus, where the Magistrate who held the first inquiry had already expressed an opinion that it was impossible to affix the guilt to the accused, the High Court ordered the further inquiry to be made by another Magistrate—Ratanlal 926 Where the Magistrate who had held the first inquiry had dealt with the case in a most unsatisfactory way, it was held to be a good ground for directing the further inquiry to be made by a different Magistrate—32 Mad 220

But the District Magistrate cannot direct the further inquiry to be held by a Magistrate inferior to the Magistrate who held the first inquiry Where a case has been tried by a Magistrate specially empowered under section 30, and has ended in a discharge, the District Magistrate should order the further inquiry to be made by the same Magistrate or by another Magistrate equally empowered, but not by a Magistrate who is not empowered under sec 30 and who is therefore in a sense a Court of inferior jurisdiction to the Court which ordered the discharge—Yaib v Emp, 12 N L R 91

When the District Magistrate has sent the case to a subordinate Magistrate for further inquiry under this section the Sub-divisional Magistrate cannot withdraw the case to his own file from that of the subordinate Magistrate—Ratanlal 315 But when a case is sent to the Sub-divisional Magistrate for further inquiry he can transfer the case to a 2nd class Magistrate subordinate to him—2 Weir 563

1178 In what cases can further inquiry be ordered —Dismissal of complaint —Further inquiry may be ordered when a complaint is dismissed under sec 203 or 204 (3)—Sahib Kaur v Md Kasim, 1891 P R 14 2 Weir 563 11 O C 261 Makhalambi v Hassan Ali 1 N L R 18 But if a complaint was made in respect of one offence and the accused was convicted further inquiry cannot be directed in respect of another offence for which no charge was made in the complaint—27 Cal 658 Where a case was taken up not upon a complaint but upon a police report a Magistrate s order directing the case to be struck off is not a dismissal of complaint and cannot be revised by the Sessions Judge—Ratanlal 521 No further inquiry can be directed when no complaint was made against a person and no regular process was issued against him—39 Cal 238 Where a complaint has been dismissed under sec 203 the revisional jurisdiction of the District Magistrate may be exercised even though there may have been some irregularity on the part of the officer taking cognizance upon the complaint This section also contemplates that where a complaint has in fact been dismissed under sec 203 the revisional jurisdiction of the District Magistrate may be invoked irrespective of the consideration whether the dismissal is legal or illegal—3 P L J 346 Where a complaint which contained several charges was dismissed in respect of one of the charges and the complaint was dismissed merely on the report of the President of a Pan chayet without giving the complainant any opportunity to substantiate his case it was held that there should be a further inquiry into the complaint—23 C W N 575 When a complaint has been dismissed under sec 203 by a Magistrate a fresh complaint can be entertained by the same Magistrate or by some other Magistrate even though the order of dismissal has not been set aside nor a further inquiry has been directed by a Superior Court See Note 681 under sec 203

When ordering a further inquiry in respect of a complaint which has been dismissed under sec 203 the Sessions Judge cannot direct that the accused be summoned but his power is restricted to making an order for a further inquiry of the same nature as that which has been already made i e a further inquiry under sec 202—Bechu Mian v Anwar, 30 C W N 312 26 Cr L J 305

1179 Discharge of accused —The District Magistrate may direct further inquiry where the accused has been discharged But it is not in every case of discharge that a further inquiry may be directed Where the order of discharge is not perverse or foolish and where the Magistrate has dealt at length with the evidence and recorded what appear as sound reasons for the discharge interference under this section is illegal—1902 P L R 394 1916 P W R 20 3 Lah L J 97 21 Cr L J 571 (Lah) Khan Zaman v Emp 26 Cr L J 1357 (Lah) Although the word improperly which occurs before the word 'discharged' in sec 437, is omitted in this section still it is illegal to direct a further inquiry unless the order of discharge was improper i e manifestly perverse or foolish or was based upon a record of evidence which was obviously incomplete—Emp v Kirl, 1911 P R 10, 12 Cr L J 364 1916 P W. R 20; Sawan v Crown, 26 P. Where a person has been improperly discharged no reference to the High Court is necessary the District Magistrate can himself order a fresh inquiry—Ratanlal 213 988 The intention seems to be to give revisional jurisdiction to the Sessions Court or District Magistrate in cases of improper discharge concurrently with that of the High Court, and thereby to obviate the expense and inconvenience which the necessity to resort to the High Court might in some cases entail—Q E v Balasinrazamti 14 Mad 334 (338) Contra—8 Mad 336

No formal order of discharge is necessary, to enable the District Magistrate to direct further inquiry When an order is one of discharge in substance, though not in form, the Sessions Judge or District Magistrate is competent, upon motion being made by the complainant to make an order for further inquiry—Nagendra Nath v Korb 8 C W N 456 Where after the issue of warrant against certain persons, the Magistrate does not think it proper to proceed further and stops further proceedings the termination of the proceedings is in effect an order of discharge and is therefore subject to revision under this section—Moul Singh v Mahabir 4 C W N 242 Where an accused was charged with offences under sections 323 and 307 I P C, and the Magistrate framed a charge under section 323 only and said nothing about section 307, held that this was equivalent to saying that there was no evidence against the accused of an offence under section 307 I P C, and that in effect the accused was discharged of that offence The Court of revision could therefore order further inquiry in respect of that offence—42 All 128

This section applies where the accused has been discharged, i.e. discharged under sec 209, 253 or 259 of the Code—33 Mad 85, and not where he has been acquitted No further inquiry can be directed when the accused has been acquitted by a Magistrate—20 Cal 633 8 Mad 296 4 C W N. 346, 3 C. W N 72, 7 C W N 491 Thus, where a complaint in a summons case has been dismissed for default the order is one under sec 247 acquitting the accused Such an order does not fall within the purview of section 436—Bindra v Bhagwania 25 Cr L J 359 (Oudh) Even if an order of acquittal was passed in a warrant case without any charge having been framed or evidence for the defence taken, still it cannot be a subject of revision under this section—Sayid Khan v K F 1 A L J 415 If the order is in substance one of acquittal though the Magistrate styles it an order of discharge no further inquiry can be ordered—1900 P L R 31 17 Cr L J 95 (Mad) Thus where in a summons case the Magistrate follows the procedure of a warrant case and discharges the accused the order of discharge is one of acquittal and no order under this section can be passed—8 M L T 78 Similarly after a charge has been framed in a warrant case the accused can only be acquitted under section 258 and not discharged and if the Magistrate erroneously passes an order of discharge still there can be no order for further inquiry—38 Mad 585 Where after a full trial the accused persons were discharged the discharge was for all practical purposes as good as an acquittal and there should be no order for further inquiry—4 Lah L J 331

No further inquiry can be directed where the proceedings have been stopped under sec 249 and the accused has been released—1913 P R 9

No further inquiry can be directed in a case where the accused has been convicted If in fact in such a case the Sessions Judge thinks that further inquiry is necessary he must report the matter to the High Court which alone can direct further inquiry in such a case—Ratanlal 407

Where the order is neither one of dismissal of complaint nor one of discharge of accused no order for further inquiry can be passed Thus where on the acquittal of an accused the other accused against whom processes of arrest had been issued surrendered before the Deputy Magistrate and he passed an order directing that the accused should not be proceeded against and that the warrant and other processes issued against him be withdrawn the order was neither one of dismissal of complaint nor one of discharge of the accused and the District Magistrate had therefore no jurisdiction under this section to set aside the order and direct the retrial of the accused—12 C W N 68

1180 No further inquiry where no accusation of 'offence' — Further inquiry can be directed only in the case of an accused person the term accused means a person accused of an offence and not a person against whom proceedings are taken under Chapter VIII —27 Cal 662 33 Cal 8 Therefore section 436 does not enable a Court to order further inquiry to be made in a case of discharge of a person against whom security proceedings were taken under Chapter VIII, because such a person was not in the position of an accused person and could not be said to have committed an 'offence'—Q E v Imam Mandal 27 Cal 662 33 Cal 8 Emp v Roshan Singh 46 All 23 1905 P R 42 Maung Than v K E, 2 Rang 30 (31) 33 M 85 2 Bur L J 285 1911 P R 6 (Contra—Q E v Mutsaddi, 21 107 K E v Izzuddin 24 All 148 Khargav Emp 36 All 147, 46

661 35 Bom 401 2 L B R 80) The word discharged in section 119 means only permitted to depart and does not mean the discharge of an accused as contemplated by this section therefore further inquiry cannot be directed in a case of discharge under section 119—33 Mad 83 U B R (1914) 1st Qr 3 (Contra—36 All 147 1899 A W N 203 1903 P R 24 20 Cr L J 704) This is now made clear by the present amendment by the use of the words accused of an offence The contrary rulings cited above within brackets are now rendered obsolete If a District Magistrate on examining the record of a security case is of opinion that the person discharged by the subordinate Magistrate ought to be proceeded against, he can under section 438 report the result of his examination of the record to the High Court which will then pass the necessary orders But he cannot direct further inquiry under section 436—Emp v Roshan Singh 46 All 235

This section also does not apply to proceedings under sec 133 of the Code since the person proceeded against under that section is not said to have committed an offence A Sessions Judge or District Magistrate acts without jurisdiction if he directs further inquiry into proceedings under that section—24 Cal 395 25 Cal 425 Prithipal v Emp 2 O W N 549 26 Cr L J 1251 The only action which a Sessions Judge or District Magistrate can take in such case will be under sec 438—Prithipal v Emp 2 O W N 549 Similarly proceedings under sec 144 do not refer to any offence and no further inquiry can be directed in a case under that section—27 Cal 658 So also this section does not authorise a Magistrate to direct further inquiry into a case under sec 145 as that section has no reference to any offence at all—20 Cal 7 9 So again the District Magistrate cannot direct further inquiry into cases under sec 488 since refusal of maintenance is not an offence and the application for maintenance is not a complaint of an offence—Parbati v Choley 17 C P L R 127 5 Cal 536

1181 When further inquiry may be directed —A Sessions Judge or District Magistrate has jurisdiction under this section to direct further inquiry or a re hearing upon the same materials which were before the subordinate Magistrate though there is no further evidence forthcoming—Haridas v Saritulla 15 Cal 608 Q F v Balasinnatambi 14 Mad 334 10 Bom 131 Q E v Chotu 9 All 52 (F B) Dayanand v Emp 23 A L J 20 26 Cr L J 736 1891 P R 14 5 C P L R 20 Haider Khan v K E 25 Cr L J 66 (Oudh) 3 L B R 97 The expression further inquiry in this section does not mean that additional evidence must be forthcoming Any mistake of law or irregularity in the proceedings will justify the District Magistrate in setting aside an order of discharge—Emp v Debidas 14 C P L R 161 Further inquiry under this section does not in all case mean taking of additional evidence but may mean re hearing and reconsideration of the evidence already taken —Dulla v Q E 1901 P R 2 1901 P L R 32 Sheocharan v Emp— 21 N L R 88 26 Cr L J 1537 10 S L R 68 But in 1887 P R 63 and 8 Mad 336 it has been held that further inquiry in this section means the taking of additional evidence and not a mere re hearing of the same evidence, which is the same thing as retrial, and therefore where there has been a full inquiry by a competent Court and the accused has been discharged, the Sessions Judge has no power under this section to direct a further inquiry, unless further evidence has been disclosed—Dodd v Emp, 1900 P L R 31 And in a recent case the Calcutta High Court has also held that in cases where the trying Magistrate has discussed the evidence carefully and has given sufficient reason for the discharge of the accused and no fresh evidence is likely to be produced on further inquiry, the superior Court should hesitate before exercising its powers under this section to order further inquiry, unless there are palpable errors in the decision of the lower Court—Abdul Rashid v Momtaz, 38 C L J 206

The District Magistrate is not competent to direct further inquiry in any and every case falling under this section This section is limited by the words 'on examining the record under sec 435 and that section lays down that a Court may call for and examine the record for the purpose of satisfying itself as to the correctness legality or propriety of any finding sentence or order recorded or passed and as to the regularity of any proceeding of such inferior Court And therefore a District Magistrate cannot set aside an order of discharge and direct further inquiry, if he finds no irregularity illegality or impropriety in the proceedings—Pran Khan v, K E, 16 C W N 1078 13 Cr L J 764

Where a Magistrate has discharged the accused without considering the necessary evidence the Sessions Judge ought to direct further inquiry in the case—Dhania v Clifford 13 Bom 376

Mere lapse of time is not a sufficient ground for refusal to order further inquiry, if the Court feels that an offence has been committed which should be inquired into—Birjbhukhan v Jaurao, 23 Cr L J 745 (Nag)

The power of ordering further inquiry under this section should be used sparingly and with great circumspection Therefore where an accused person has been three times subjected to a Magisterial inquiry, it would be an oppression on the accused to send him a fourth time before the Magistrate for inquiry on the same evidence which has been thrice pronounced to be insufficient and untrustworthy—Ratanlal 328 Where a complaint has been dismissed by the Magistrate after fully considering the police report and the evidence of the complainant and his witnesses and after finding that no offence has been made out and the Sessions Judge ordered further inquiry and upset the order of the Magistrate, held that the Judge should not lightly set aside the order of dismissal but should do so only when it is clear that there has been miscarriage of justice—Jatgal v Radha Kishen, 26 Cr L J 866 A I R 1925 Pat 447 Sessions Judges and District Magistrates should use the powers under this section sparingly and with great caution and circumspection, especially in cases where the questions involved are mere matters of fact—1886 A W N 281, Q E. v. Chotu, 9 All 52 The Revisional Court ought not to ordinarily interfere with an order of discharge passed by the trying Magistrate, unless it is possible to come to only one conclusion on the evidence, viz that the accused is guilty—10 L. W. 630 3 Lah L. J 07 Further inquiry cannot be directed on the bare possibility of an offence being disclosed on further evidence being taken. There must be something on record to indicate that such an offence was committed or there must be something to show that further evidence is available which has not been taken and which would support a charge for that offence—In re Aramuga, 4 M L J 141 Further inquiry ought not to be directed where there is no prospect of any public advantage from the case being reopened—In re Arukya Pi ... (1913) M W N 56 The powers conferred by this section are not to be exercised from scrutiny in all cases wherever the District Magistrate who has not seen the witnesses forms a different opinion of the value of the evidence from that which was formed by the Magistrate who has seen them —10 Bom L R 330 , Lah L. A District Magistrate is not authorized to direct further inquiry under this section, when the essence of the matter between the parties is of a civil nature and the question is in reality one which ought to be fought out in a Civil Court—Q E v Ishan 1 Bom L. R 83

1182 Powers of Courts directing further inquiry — This section does not authorize a Sessions Judge or District Magistrate to take evidence or direct it to be taken supplementing the evidence given in the Lower Court. He is authorized to direct further inquiry but not to take evidence or direct evidence to be taken. Under section 428 an Appellate Court dealing with an appeal may direct additional evidence to be taken and itself record such evidence The High Court under section 439 has all the powers of an Appellate Court and can direct evidence to be taken. But no such powers are given to the Sessions Judge or the District Magistrate under the present section—6 C. L. J 271

(ii) The District Magistrate directing further inquiry cannot direct that the accused be put on his trial All that he can do is to direct further inquiry leaving it entirely to the inquiring Magistrate to determine whether or not the evidence justifies the accused being charged and put on his trial—Q E v Ganu Khan 2 Bom L R 585 1905 P L R p. 63 An order for retrial should not be made in the guise of an order for further inquiry— C. P L R 84

(iii) The District Magistrate directing further inquiry cannot direct that the accused be committed to the Sessions he must leave it to the judgment and discretion of the Sub-Magistrate who is to make the inquiry and cannot fetter the Sub-Magistrate's judicial discretion by any expression or direction—15 Mad 39 The District Magistrate is wholly wrong in directing a Subordinate Magistrate that he should pass such and such order in a case pending judicially before him—1918 P W R 10 In making an order for further inquiry it is improper for the Superior Magistrate to write a judgment which is practically a mandate to the Subordinate Magistrate—12 N L R 94

(ii) The Sessions Judge or the District Magistrate cannot when directing further inquiry under this section himself frame a charge or order the Sub-Magistrate to frame the charge and try the accused He might of course make the inquiry himself and frame a charge in course of it—Narayanaswami v Emp 32 Mad 220

(iv) When further inquiry is ordered into a complaint dismissed under sec 203 the Magistrate cannot again act under sec 203 but must proceed under sec 204 and inquire into or try the case—11 C W N 316 After an order of further inquiry is passed the complainant is entitled to produce and the Magistrate is bound to receive the whole evidence for the prosecution and he is not authorized to again dismiss the complaint under section 203 simply on a Police report—1918 P W R 10 But in a recent case of the Calcutta High Court it has been held that a Magistrate holding a further inquiry into a complaint which has been once dismissed under sec 203 can again dismiss the complaint under sec 203—25 C W N 312

(v) The Magistrate making the inquiry has jurisdiction to enquire as to whether a prima facie case has been made out against the accused and having been satisfied that a prima facie case has been made out he has jurisdiction to try and dispose of the case himself—5 P L J 47

Notice is necessary only where the accused has been discharged i e discharged under sections 209 253 and 259 No notice would be necessary under this section where further inquiry is directed into a complaint which was dismissed under section 203 since the order under section 203 dismissing the complaint was not passed with a notice to the accused person or in his presence and therefore would probably be unknown to him—Haridas v Saritulla 15 Cal 608 29 Cal 457 3 Cal 1090 3 C L J 44 20 All 339 30 All 52 K E v Gajanlhan 2 Bom L R 586 5 A L J 74 Angan v Ram Pirbhan 35 All 78 Gujraj v Emp 47 All 7? 23 A L J 451 26 Cr L J 1176 Emp v Liaqat Hussain 40 All 138 Appa Rao v Janakiammal 49 Mad 918 26 Cr L J 129 (F B) But where the accused person was given an opportunity of being heard before the complaint was dismissed under section 203 a further inquiry ought not to be directed without giving notice to him As he was present from the very commencement of the proceedings it is proper that he should be given an opportunity of being heard before an order is made under this section—Jogesh Chandra v Nikunja Behari 27 C W N 552

ordering further inquiry because the High Court in the absence of such reasons cannot exercise supervision over the Magistrate's or Judge's proceedings and also because it is fair to the person against whom the order is made that the reasons for directing such inquiry should be made explicit to him and that he should have notice of the grounds on which the further inquiry has been directed—U B R (1917) 2nd Qr 16 Wahed Ali v Emp, 32 Cal 1090 Where the order of the Sessions Judge for further inquiry does not state any proper grounds it is liable to be set aside by the High Court—8 C W N 456 3 S L R 7

It is not ordinarily desirable that a District Magistrate in ordering a further inquiry should make a detailed examination of the evidence and give elaborate reasons because that might prejudice the trial afterwards but it is desirable that he should give enough in the shape of reasons to show that his order is proper—32 Cal 1090 In a Burma case however where in an order for further inquiry the Sessions Judge simply stated I have translated and considered the whole of the record and the conclusion I have arrived at is that there should be a further inquiry it was held that it contained ample reasons for the order—4 L B R 233

1186 Interference by High Court —An order of a Sessions Judge or a District Magistrate setting aside an order of discharge is liable to be reviewed by the High Court as a Court of Revision If in any case the High Court were to find that the District Magistrate or Sessions Judge had set aside an order of discharge on insufficient grounds or that while there were good grounds for setting it aside the District Magistrate or Sessions Judge had made an order inappropriate to the facts of the case the High Court would be acting properly in revising the order—15 Cal 608 Where the order of the Sessions Judge did not state any proper grounds for directing a further inquiry it was set aside by the High Court in revision—8 C W N 456 But where the Sessions Judge after going carefully through the evidence was of opinion that the finding of the trying Magistrate was either perverse or in all probability wrong or manifestly at variance with the evidence which he has recorded and directed further inquiry held that the order of the Sessions Judge was not illegal or improper and the High Court would not interfere with the considered opinion of the Sessions Judge—Karhley v Jagannath 11 O L J 611 1 O W N 302 26 Cr L J 959

(b) that, if such Judge or Magistrate thinks that the evidence shows that some other offence has been committed by the accused such Judge or Magistrate may direct the inferior Court to inquire into such offence

This is the old section 436 The old section 437 has now been renumbered as section 436 For reason of this transposition see notes under the previous section

1187 Application of section —The words or otherwise do not mean in any other way whatsoever but in any other way provided by the Code —Nobin v Russik 10 Cal 268 The reason for exercising the powers under this section must arise upon materials to be found on the record and not upon extraneous matter—1890 A W N 147 15 Cal 608

1188 Who can order commitment —The Sessions Judge and the District Magistrate have co ordinate powers to order a commitment under this section—28 Cal 397 Ratanlal 837 A Sessions Judge may take action under this section though the District Magistrate has refused to call for the record and to direct a committal of the case—43 Mad 330

The District Magistrate may act of his own motion quite independent of an order from the Court of Session—8 W R 61

The word District Magistrate in this section includes a District Magistrate specially empowered under section 30 of this Code—1904 P L R 234 Also a District Magistrate can under this section revise an order of discharge passed by a subordinate Magistrate of the First Class invested with powers under sec 30 of the Code in a case which is triable exclusively by the Court of Session—12 N L R 94

The Joint Sessions Judge cannot exercise the powers of a Sessions Judge under this chapter and cannot order a committal to the sessions in a case discharged by a Magistrate—In re Musa 0 Bom 164

Sections 436 and 437 do not apply to Presidency Magistrates a Presidency Magistrate can himself revive the complaint after he has discharged the accused without any order of the superior authority—1 C W N 47 28 Cal 652

1189 'Exclusively triable by Court of Session —To give jurisdiction to the Sessions Judge or District Magistrate the accused must have been charged with an offence triable exclusively by the Court of Session—Arjan Singh v Emp 1903 P L R 234 1 ALL 413 7 C L R 168 1897 P R 3 Therefore a Sessions Judge cannot direct commitment or order fresh inquiry in a case where the accused is discharged of

an offence within the Magistrate s jurisdiction—Ratanlal 42 1882 A W N 105 20 Cal 633 1 All 413 42 Mad 561 15 M L J 373 3 B L R 65

In a Burma case it has been held that the term triable exclusively by the Court of Session means either a case where the District Magistrate considers that the facts constitute an offence which is triable exclusively by the Court of Session or it might mean a case in which the District Magistrate considers that the sentence which the Magistrate could pass might not be sufficient and therefore it was a case which should be tried by a Court of Session—9 L B R 208 But the Allahabad High Court holds that a case does not come within this section merely because the offence could not in the opinion of the District Magistrate be adequately punished by a Magistrate—1908 A W N 189 Similarly, the Madras High Court holds that the words are to be construed strictly and that it is not competent to the Sessions Judge to direct a commitment under this section if the offence is not exclusively triable by the Court of Session—42 Mad 561 This is also the view of the other High Courts See Ratanlal 42 20 Cal 633

Where an accused is discharged of an offence exclusively triable by a Court of Session a Sessions Judge can commit him on a charge not exclusively triable by a Sessions Court if it is intimately connected with a charge exclusively triable by the Sessions Court and forms part of the same transaction But he has no power to commit for such an offence if it is of an entirely different character Thus where an accused is discharged of an offence under sec 436 I P Code he may be ordered to be committed by the Sessions Judge for trial for an offence under sec 427 I P C but not for an offence under sec 380 I P C which is totally different from the category of offences under secs 427 and 436 I P C—Bijoy Gopal v Isuar 53 Cal 645 27 Cr L J 1139 Where the accused was charged with two offences under sections 477A (triable exclusively by the Court of Session) and 408 I P C (not so triable) of which the principal offence was the latter one and the other was merely secondary and the subordinate Magistrate refused to commit the accused to the Sessions and discharged him held that the District Magistrate was competent under this section to direct the commitment of the accused even though the primary offence was not triable exclusively by the Court of Session because the two offences were intimately connected and formed part of the same transaction—Gendhal Chimanbha v Emp 16 Bom L R 80 15 Cr L J 292 So also where an accused person appears to have committed culpable homicide his conviction by a Magistrate of a minor offence does not prevent his trial for murder, etc The Sessions Judge if he thinks there is a prima facie case may call on the accused to shew cause why a commitment should not be ordered and may thereafter order his commitment under this section if satisfied that there is sufficient cause for it—Ratanlal 337

1190 "Improperly discharged" —A Sessions Judge may direct a commitment even where the District Magistrate himself discharges the accused—Q E v Laskari 7 All 853

The mere fact that a Magistrate has discharged the accused in a case triable exclusively by the Court of Session without committing him to the Sessions is not a ground of interference under this section— W r 260 The District Magistrate or Sessions Judge before ordering the committal of the accused to the Sessions Court must come to a finding with reference to the evidence that the accused has been improperly discharged—1 P L J 97 The mere fact that the charge is in the opinion of the District Magistrate of such an important character that it should be considered by a Court of Session is not a sufficient reason for interfering with the order of discharge—1 P L J 97

It is the duty of the Sessions Judge in considering whether the accused person has been improperly discharged to consider all the grounds upon which such order of discharge has been passed including a consideration of the evidence which has not been believed or held to be sufficient to establish a prima facie case Then only can he pass an order for the commitment of the accused or for further inquiry— C W N 77 The Sessions Judge has to consider whether it was open to the Magistrate to come to the conclusion to which he did come on the materials before him That a different view could be taken on the evidence would not justify the Sessions Judge in ordering commitment he must come to the conclusion that the finding of the Magistrate is not only wrong but perverse—Rubhanjan v Emp 6 P L T 570 6 Cr L J 886 A I R 1925 Pat 599

The Sessions Judge can direct the committal of an accused person improperly discharged by the Sub-Magistrate though no express order of discharge has been recorded by that Magistrate—10 L W 5[?]

The section applies where the accused person has been discharged and not where he has been acquitted—Baij Nath v Gauri 20 Cal 633 Q E v Hanumantha 23 Mad 225 where the Magistrate has in fact discharged the accused though he has used the expression acquitted and released the Sessions Judge is competent to order a committal under this section—8 W R 41 Where on a complaint in respect of a sessions offence the Magistrate finding that no sessions offence had been committed tried the accused of a non sessions offence and acquitted him it was held that this section did not apply even the acquittal of the accused in respect of the minor offence could not be construed to amount to a discharge in respect of the grave offence and no order under this section could be passed by the Sessions Judge—Baij Nath v Gauri 20 Cal 633 Where the accused was tried and acquitted by a competent Magistrate on a charge of simple forgery under sec 465 I P Code but the Sessions Judge by an order under sec 437 Cr P Code directed the commitment of the accused on a charge of forgery of a valuable security under section 467 I P Code (a sessions offence) with which he held the accused should have been charged held that sec 437 contemplated a case of discharge and the accused not having been properly or improperly discharged in respect of an offence under sec 467 I P Code the Sessions Judge had no power to direct his committal under section 437—Abdul Hakim v Bajruh Ali 22 C W N 117 (1917)

(per Richardson J) 18 Cr L J 834 But in Krishna Reddi v Subbamma 24 Mad 136 it was held that the acquittal of the accused in respect of the minor offence was in substance a discharge of the accused in respect of the graver offence and the Sessions Judge was therefore justified in having made an order for further inquiry in respect of the graver offence and for committal to the Sessions Similarly in a recent Sind case where a Magistrate of the first class acquitted certain persons who were charged under secs 424 and 506 of the I P Code whereupon the complainant made applications to the Magistrate to frame a charge under sec 395 I P Code but the Magistrate declined to entertain them and then the District Magistrate being moved by the complainant and acting under sec 437 Cr P Code framed a charge against the accused and committed them to take their trial before the Sessions Court held that the Magistrate s order was in substance one discharging the accused in respect of an alleged offence under sec 395 I P Code and the District Magistrate had jurisdiction to pas the order in question—Khanu v Emp 19 S L R 353 25 Cr L J 1368 A I R 1925 Sind 190 (following 24 Mad 136)

This section applies not only where the accused has been expressly discharged but also where he has been impliedly discharged Thus where on a complaint for an offence under sec 302 I P C the Magistrate dis believing the evidence did not frame any charge under sec 302 or 304 I P C but framed only charges under secs 147 323 325 held that the action of the Magistrate amounted to an implied order of discharge in regard to secs 302 and 304 I P C and an order directing committal in regard to sec 304 can be made by the Sessions Judge—43 Mad 330 But the Oudh Court holds that the word discharge means absolute discharge and not a partial discharge Therefore where the police chalan mentioned offences under secs 147 and 304 I P C but the Magistrate after hearing the evidence for the prosecution framed a charge under secs 147 and 325 the accused could not be said to have been discharged and the Sessions Judge was not authorised to order commitment for an offence under sec 304 I P C—Bilodar v K E, 3 O W N 201 7 Cr L J 417

By an inferior Court —For the meaning of inferior see Note 1171 under sec 435

A Subordinate Magistrate of the First Class invested with powers under sec 30 is inferior to the District Magistrate and the latter can revise an improper order of discharge passed by the former in a case triable exclusively by the Court of Session—12 N L R 94

1191 Order for commitment —Under this section the Sessions Judge can himself commit the accused The words order him to be committed do not mean more than pass an order for his committal and the intervention of a Magistrate for making the commitment is not necessary—Q E v Krishnabhat 10 Bom 319 There is nothing in this section to shew that when a District Magistrate or Sessions Judge directs a discharged person to be committed for trial the commitment must be made by the discharging Magistrate—Ibid But of course is not wrong to call upon the discharging Magistrate to make the commitment—Q E v Pirva Gopal 9 Bom 100, 28 Cal. 397

This section enables the Sessions Judge or District Magistrate to commit the accused person for trial only for the offence with which he was substantially charged in the complaint—10 W R 30. When the accused has been discharged by the subordinate Magistrate of one offence the Sessions Judge is not competent to direct the accused to be committed for trial for another offence—2 Weir 540. Thus where the police charge-sheet on which the subordinate Magistrate took cognizance of a case charged the accused with a minor offence and the grave offence of rape was not mentioned in it, nor did the prosecution pray for the framing by the Magistrate of a charge in respect of that offence and the Magistrate framed a charge only of the minor offence it was held that the District Magistrate had no jurisdiction to direct the subordinate Magistrate to commit the accused to the Sessions for the higher offence—41 Mad 952. If on the evidence it appears that some other offence has been committed by the accused, the proper course is to order an inquiry under proviso (b)

Under this section, the Sessions Court has no power to commit when there is no legal evidence against the accused—24 W R 79

A Sessions Judge, while directing a Magistrate under this section to make a commitment, has no power to direct the Magistrate to take the accused's defence or ask the accused to make a defence—4 N W P 31

In ordering commitment, the Sessions Judge or District Magistrate should specify the offence for which the accused is to be committed for trial—21 W R 41

1192 Further inquiry, whether can be ordered —A District Magistrate proceeding under this section is not restricted to ordering commitment of the accused who may have been discharged by a subordinate Magistrate, he can also direct a further inquiry prior to making an order for commitment—K E v Moniruddin 18 Cal ...

Where, after the discharge of an accused person, fresh evidence comes to light the District Magistrate should not direct a subordinate Magistrate to commit the accused, for it will amount to a commitment for trial on the evidence of witnesses whom the accused has not had an opportunity of cross-examining. The proper course for the District Magistrate is to direct a fresh inquiry—2 Weir 539.

When commitment should be ordered and not further inquiry —Where in a case triable exclusively by the Court of Session the inferior Court has considered the whole of the prosecution evidence and there is no defect of procedure, and the Magistrate discharges the accused because in his opinion the evidence is insufficient or incredible, then if the District Magistrate comes to a different conclusion upon the evidence, his proper course is to make an order of commitment and not to direct further inquiry—12 N L R 94. Where in a case triable exclusively by the Sessions Court, the Sessions Judge or District Magistrate is satisfied that on the evidence taken there is a clear case for committal, and there is no reason for desiring a further consideration by the Magistrate it would ordinarily be his duty to commit under this section without ordering a further inquiry—Haridas v Sanitulla, 15 Cal 608

1193 Proviso (a) —Notice to accused —It is an essential condition precedent to an order under this section that the accused should have an opportunity of showing cause against his commitment An order made without issuing such notice is bad in law and not maintainable—1888 A W N 236 1 C L R 93 24 W R 70 6 M L J 372 Thammanna v K E 15 M L J 373 Where some of the accused were not made parties to the revision petition to the District Magistrate against the order of discharge and no notice had been ordered to be served upon them and they had no opportunity of showing cause against the order of commitment made by the District Magistrate held that the order of commitment made by the District Magistrate was clearly wrong and must be set aside so far as these accused were concerned—In re Mania, 48 Mad 874 40 M L J 155 26 Cr L J 1570 Where however a District Magistrate ordered the subordinate Magistrate to make a committal to the Court of Session without giving the accused any notice but the committing Magistrate issued a notice before doing so the defect was cured by sec 537—Ratanlal 899 Also where no objection was taken to the want of notice and the omission has not occasioned a failure of justice, the High Court will not interfere—Emp v Khamir 7 Cal 662

The opportunity to shew cause mentioned in this proviso does not mean any opportunity but that the accused must have a special opportunity Where the Sessions Judge who was trying a case of false evidence suddenly asked a witness in the course of his examination to explain why he should not be again committed for a trial for murder in respect of an act for which he had been previously discharged and on answers given by the witness to the above question ordered his commitment for trial for murder held that the order was illegal since the accused had not been properly called upon to shew cause—Ratanlal 588

If a notice is given to the accused under this proviso he is not under any obligation to appear and shew cause He may or may not avail himself of the opportunity as he chooses—Ka war v Q E 1893 P R 15

1194 Interference by High Court —Under sec 439 the High Court has power to revise an order of commitment passed under this section by the Sessions Judge or District Magistrate—Rash Behari v Emp 12 C W N 117 In the exercise of the powers of revision, the High Court can on the merits of the case cancel an order of commitment passed by the Sessions Judge under this section, as for instance, where the order setting aside a discharge and directing commitment is made on insufficient or unreliable evidence—7 C W N 327 or where there is no prima facie case for commitment—Sheobux v Emp, 9 C W N 829

The order of a Sessions Judge or District Magistrate under this section directing commitment can be quashed by the High Court in the exercise of its revisional powers under sec 439 and not under s

215—27 Mad 54 Sec 215 refers only to a commitment actually made, and not to an order directing commitment contemplated by section 4 Therefore the High Court, in considering the order of a Sessions Judge or District Magistrate passed under section 437, may consider the fact as well as the question of law involved and is not limited to points of law only as under sec 215—30 Mad 224, Rash Behari v Emp 11 C W N 117, Tin Kouri v Emp, 1 P L T 153 Munshi Mander v Karu, 6 P L T 146 25 Cr L J 1089

But though the High Court possesses the powers to revise orders of commitment, it should exercise those powers most sparingly and only where it is manifest that the Sessions Judge's order is improper e.g. where there is no evidence to prove the offence charged—30 Mad 2 4 In re Mania Manicka, 48 Mad 874, 49 M L J 155 It is evident from this section that the fullest and widest discretion has been given to District Magistrates and Sessions Judges and when an order of commitment has been duly made, the High Court should be most unwilling to interfere except upon strong grounds and under exceptional circumstances—Fattu v Fattu, 26 All 564; 13 A L J 111

Report to High Court.

438. (1) The Sessions Judge or District Magistrate may, if he thinks fit, on examining under section 435 or otherwise the record of any proceeding, report for the orders of the High Court the result of such examination, and, when such report conteins a recommendation that a sentence be reversed or altered, may order that the execution of such sentence be suspended, and, if the accused is in confinement, that he be released on bail or on his own bond.

(2) An Additional Sessions Judge shall have and may exercise all the powers of a Sessions Judge under this Chapter in respect of any case which may be transferred to him by or under any general or special order of the Sessions Judge.

Change —The italicised words have been added by section 115 of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 "In order to provide for the absence of a Sessions Judge, we think it is necessary to empower him to make a general order authorising the additional Sessions Judge to exercise all his powers We have provided for it specifically by this amendment" —Report of the Select Committee of 1916.

1195. Who can report —The only Courts which can make a reference to the High Court are the Court of Session and District Magistrate. An Additional Sessions Judge has jurisdiction to exercise the powers of a Sessions Judge only in respect of cases transferred to him by the Sessions Judge—1903 A W N 28 In the absence of such transfer, an Additional Sessions Judge has not the powers of a Sessions Judge under this section—1 L B R 119 A Joint Magistrate cannot exercise the powers of the District Magistrate—14 W R 25

If he thinks fit —These words indicate that the District Magistrate or the Sessions Judge is not bound to refer every case in which he may detect an error—20 W R 40

1196 When reference may be made —A District Magistrate should refer all cases in which he considers the order of the Subordinate Court as illegal—2 Weir 564 When a Sessions Judge considers that the judgment or order is contrary to law or that the punishment is severe he may report the proceedings to the High Court —10 W R 60 Emp v Khubi 1881 A W N 12 Where a District Magistrate is of opinion that a subordinate Magistrate has no jurisdiction to try a particular case the District Magistrate has no power to quash the proceedings of the Sub Magistrate but must report the case for proper orders to the High Court—Kandaswami v Soli Goundan 23 Mad 240 So also if a Sessions Judge is of opinion that an order of a District Magistrate directing a further inquiry under sec 436 is wrong, a reference to the High Court may be made under this section—Durbari v Jagoo Lal 22 Cal 573 A Sessions Judge cannot upon examining the monthly criminal return of a Magistrate order further inquiry under sec 436 into the case of a person who has been convicted If he thinks any further inquiry necessary he should refer the case to the High Court under this section—Ratanlal 407

1197 When reference cannot be made —(1) This section allows a reference only when the Court of Session is of opinion that the judgment or order is contrary to law or that the punishment is too severe or inadequate but not on the ground of the insufficiency or incredibility of the evidence—1881 A W N 12 Emp v Ukhud Ali, 17 C P L R 36 18 W R -

(2) A necessity for altering a conviction from one section to another for a cognate offence when the accused has not been prejudiced by any such error is not a sufficient ground for a reference to the High Court under this section—Emp v Ishan Chandra ? Cal 847

(3) When a District Magistrate or Sessions Judge has himself the power to make the order which he proposes in his letter of reference, a reference under this section is unnecessary—28 Cal 102 Thus a case which regularly comes to the Sessions Judge on the appeal of a prisoner, cannot be referred to the High Court under this section but must be disposed of by the Sessions Judge—9 W R 5 11 W R 24 1914 P W R 7 13 A L J 477 15 Cr L J 472 (Mad) 2 Weir 565 Where the accused was charged with theft and discharged by the first class Magistrate and the District Magistrate referred the case to the High Court, it was held that the High Court need not interfere in a case of a mere discharge, the District Magistrate being competent to take steps himself should he deem it necessary—Ratanlal 290

(4) Where an appeal is preferred to the Sessions Judge he cannot without disposing of the appeal under sec 423, make a reference to the High Court under this section—1884 A W N 130

(5) A reference can be made if the District Magistrate is of opinion that there is a case for revision, upon examining the record of the Sub Magistrate s proceedings and not merely on the representation of the complainant against the Subordinate Magistrate s decision—Ratanlal 3[illegible] nor a reference can be made merely on the report of a Jail Daroga—1[illegible] A W N 80

Reference in cases of acquittal —In the case of an acquittal by a Subordinate Magistrate, if the Government does not appeal the proper course for the District Magistrate if he is dissatisfied with an order of acquittal would be to move the Local Government for exercising its powers under sec 417 and not to make a reference to the High Court under this section—1902 A W N 89 Ganga Singh v Ramzan 6 Cr L J 337 (Lah) The High Court will not ordinarily entertain a reference from the District Magistrate in such cases—In re Sheikh Amiruddin 24 All 346 Emp v Madar 25 All 1[illegible]8 1907 P W R 11 Crown v Achhar Singh 5 Lah 16 (19) 25 Cr L J 931 [illegible] Cal [illegible] Q E v Ranga Row 15 Mad 3[illegible] 19 W R 55 1910 M W N 51 1[illegible] A L J 255 35 M L J 665 38 Mad 1028

Reference in Police Proceedings —This section does not empower a District Magistrate to refer to the High Court the proceedings of a Superintendent of Police, as the latter is not a Court subordinate to the Magistrate—Ratanlal 133

1198 Power to refer proceedings of Superior Court —The powers of the Sessions Judge or District Magistrate under this section are limited by section 435 which speaks of proceedings of an inferior Criminal Court (as to which see notes under section 435) and therefore the District Magistrate has no power to question the propriety of an order of the superior Court (Sessions Judge s Court) and to refer the matter to the High Court—Emp v Jamnadas 28 All [illegible] Crown v Biesawi 5 Lah 11 (14) 25 Cr L J 9[illegible]8 Emp v [illegible] [illegible] Bom 47 18 Bom L R 796 6 C I R 245 Q E v Jaha [illegible] [illegible] Cal 249 Q E v Karamdi 23 Cal 250 18 Cal 186 [illegible] O C [illegible] 2 N L R 149 Emp v Ganga 36 All 3[illegible]8 46 All 851 (855) Emp v Daulat [illegible] A L J 224, 27 Cr L J 327 [illegible] All 146 Emp v [illegible] Dad 24 Cr L J 573 (Lah) Emp v Kasim 17 S L R 6[illegible] 26 Cr L J 177 The Magistrate s power of making a reference is restricted to the records and proceedings of a Court subordinate to him and so a Magistrate cannot ask a Sessions Judge to report a case to the High Court in which he thinks that the acquittal on appeal by the Sessions Judge was wrong—1882 A W N 135 It is never intended that a Subordinate Court should have the power of questioning the propriety of an order passed by an Appellate Court for revision, simply on the ground that it considers that the original sentence was a proper sentence and should not have been reduced—Emp v Ram Lal 8 Cal [illegible] If the District Magistrate thinks that there has been a miscarriage of justice in an appeal heard by the Sessions Judge or if he is dissatisfied with a sentence passed by the Sessions Judge he should not report the case to the High Court for orders under sec 438 but should communicate with the Public Prosecutor and invite his attention to it—9 All 362 46 All 831 (855) 1 S I R 40 Hiraman v Ram Kumar 18 Cal 186 6 Bom L R 1099 24 Cr L J 573 (Lah) Ratanlal 601 Ratanlal 6 3 Imp v Kassim 17 S I R 268 26 Cr L J 177

1199 Power to refer question of law —This section empowers the Sessions Judge and District Magistrate on examining the record of any proceeding under section 435 to report to the High Court for order the result of such examination which means that the Sessions Judge or District Magistrate is to report the incorrectness or illegality of the sentence or order and not that he should refer abstract points of law to the High Court —Chouri v Putai 5 O C 316 There is no provision of law which enables a Judge to stop a trial already commenced and to refer to the High Court any questions of law arising on the merits in the case—Ratanlal 214 Where a Sessions Judge after having asked the opinions of the assessors in a case tried before him made a reference to the High Court on a question whether he had jurisdiction or not the High Court held that the Sessions Judge ought to have disposed of the question himself and that this section was never intended to be used for the purpose of sending questions to the High Court for opinion—2 All 771 see also O S C 71 The reference by the Sessions Judge in the Bombay and Allahabad cases cited above was contrary to law for another reason viz that it was not made in respect of any proceeding of a Subordinate Court but in respect of a proceeding of his own Court

Where the Sessions Judge or District Magistrate does not really dissent from the actual decision arrived at by the trial Court, a reference to the High Court merely with the object of obtaining a ruling on a question of law ought not to be made—Emp v Madho Singh 47 All 409 23 A L J. 189 26 Cr L J 865

Power to take evidence —Neither section 435 nor this section enables the District Magistrate or Sessions Judge to take further evidence with a view to report the case—3 Bom L R 637 12 A L J 461

1200. Contents of the reference —(1) A Sessions Judge before he refers the case to the High Court is bound to call upon the inferior Court for an explanation of the order passed and should submit such explanation to the High Court together with the record—8 Cal 644

(2) The reasons for the reference should accompany the record—1891 A W N 80

(3) The order of reference should set forth the points on which orders are required—O S C 64

(4) The reference should contain a recommendation that the sentence be revised or altered—Emp v Mohan Lal 27 All 25 and the District Magistrate should also give a brief abstract of the case and the grou upon which he recommends that the order or sentence he conside be incorrect should be set aside by the High Court—9 Cr L J ... (Mad)

But the report should not contain any representation of the complainant protesting against the Subordinate Magistrate's decision—Ratanlal 340

1201. High Court's power in dealing with reference.—Where a District Magistrate referred a case tried by a Subordinate Magistrate and recommended the setting aside of the order of the Sub-Magistrate being of opinion that the Sub-Magistrate in conducting the trial did not honestly and impartially apply his mind to the actual evidence before him and took a grossly biassed and distorted view of the case it was held that it would not be right for the High Court to take the expression of opinion of the District Magistrate and to rely upon the opinion, without satisfying itself upon the evidence and upon the course of the proceedings generally that the District Magistrate's opinion was right that is, the High Court would have to investigate the whole of the facts before it would come to the conclusion whether it ought to interfere in revision—44 Cal 703 Where the trial Court has fairly considered the evidence and discharged the accused the High Court will not interfere on a reference by the District Magistrate, unless it is shown that the order of the trial Court was either perverse or unreasonable—Emp v Jagdamba 11 O L J 331 1 O W N 45 25 Cr L J 1026

High Court's powers of revision comes to its knowledge cretion exercise any of of Appeal by sections* *423, 426 427, and 428 or on a Court by section 338 and may enhance the sentence and when the Judges composing the Court of Revision are equally divided in opinion, the case shall be disposed of in manner provided by section 429

(2) No order under this section shall be made to the prejudice of the accused unless he has had an opportunity of being heard either personally or by pleader in his own defence.

(3) Where the sentence dealt with under this section has been passed by a Magistrate acting otherwise than under section 34, the Court shall not inflict a greater punishment for the offence which, in the opinion of such Court, the accused has committed than might have been inflicted for such offence by a Presidency Magistrate or a Magistrate of the first class

(4) Nothing in this section applies to an entry made under section 273, or shall be deemed to authorize a High Court to convert a finding of acquittal into one of conviction.

(5) Where under this Code an appeal lies and no appeal is brought, no proceedings by way of revision shall be entertained at the instance of the party who could have appealed

(6) Notwithstanding anything contained in this section, any convicted person to whom an opportunity has been given under sub section (2) of showing cause why his sentence should not be enhanced shall in showing cause be entitled also to show cause against his conviction

Change —This section has been amended by section 119 of the Cr P C Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 In sub-section (1) the figure 195 has been omitted this is consequential to the amendment made in section 195 Sub section (6) has been newly added for reasons see post

1202 Scope of section —The series of sections 435 439 must be read together Of these section 435 is the principal section dealing with the grounds upon which revisional jurisdiction may ordinarily be exercised—Haridas v Saratulla 15 Cal 608 Sections 435 438 prescribe the method by which the records of any Criminal case come to the High Court and the power of the High Court to deal with the record is in section 439 Sections 435 438 provide the machinery and section 439 gives the power to dispose of the record —36 Mad 275 The words the record of which has been called for by itself refer to section 435 and the words which has been reported for orders refer to sec 438

Section 439 must be read along with and subject to section 435 if a case is outside the scope of section 435 section 439 cannot apply to it—47 Cal 438

'Any proceeding —Under the old Code of 1872 the words used in this section were judicial proceeding instead of the words any proceeding and the High Court could call for and revise the record of a judicial proceeding only but under the Code of 1882 (as well as under the present Code) the High Court can call for and examine the record of any proceeding e g an order by a Magistrate under section 517 below—2 Weir 538

High Court should not be moved in the first instance —See Note 1108 under section 435 under heading To whom application should made

1203 Grounds of interference —The controlling power of revision of the High Court in criminal cases is an extraordinary power and it must be exercised with due regard to the circumstances of each particular case anxious attention being given to the said circumstances which vary greatly This discretion ought not to be crystallized, as it would become in course of time by one Judge attempting to prescribe definite rules with a view to bind other Judges in the exercise of the discretion which the Legislature has committed to them. This discretion like all other judicial discretions ought as far as practicable to be left untrammelled and free, so as to be fairly exercised according to the exigencies of each case—Emp v Bankatram 28 Bom 533 No hard and fast limitation should be placed on the exercise of the powers of superintendence of the High Court over the proceedings of inferior Courts There is no species of injustice which the High Court would be powerless to correct where its interference is called for—14 M L T 200 12 C W N 678 The circumstances which will justify the interference of High Court have not been and cannot be laid down with precision While the Judges have repeatedly held that only when exceptional grounds exist the High Court ought to interfere the decided cases shew that no hard and fast rule can be laid down but that when in the interests of justice the High Court s intervention becomes necessary it ought not to be refused—Ramanathan v Subrahmanya 47 Mad 2 (725)

(1) Sections 435 and 439 give the High Court power to control the propriety as well as the legality of a finding sentence or order of any inferior Criminal Court That necessarily imports a power to regulate or revise the proceedings leading up to any such finding sentence or order If therefore a sentence has been passed or confirmed by a Court which could not legally try or should not properly have tried the case the High Court has a discretion to interfere—9 N I R 81

(2) When an illegal order is passed and action taken by a Magistrate officer but in his executive capacity and the High Court can interfere in revision—S N v K F 1908 P R 4

(3) The High Court can interfere in revision on the ground of misreading of documentary evidence and fundamental errors in principle which vitiate the conduct and disposal of the case—Emp v Bal Gangadhar Tilak 28 Bom 479

(4) The High Court will interfere with an order of a Magistrate passed without jurisdiction under a certain Act, even though that Act provides that the conviction under it shall not be open to appeal or revision—2 S L R 20 Thus although section 15 of the Extradition Act ousts the jurisdiction of the High Court to inquire into the propriety of a warrant issued under Chapter III of that Act yet where the order was made clearly without jurisdiction, it is open to revision by the High

(5) The High Court can exercise its power of revision even after the expiry of the sentence and though it is not possible to interfere with the sentence because it has expired the law does not prevent the High Court from interfering with the conviction—7 All 135

(6) The High Court has the power and the right to call for the record of a case and make such order thereon as it deems just even though the applicant is dead—2 Bom 564 [Contra—1893 P R 6 where it is held that an application for revision abates on the death of the applicant] Section 431 (as amended in 1898) allows an appeal from a sentence of fine after the death of the appellant and similarly the High Court can exercise its power of revision even after the death of the applicant in a case where compensation has been awarded under section 250 such compensation being in the nature of a fine—Prem Singh v Bhola 1908 P R 24 see also 1919 P R 8 (cited under sec 431)

(7) The High Court has ample power to interfere should it see fit to do so in any case in which the Magistrate has either refused to exercise a discretion vested in him by the law or has exercised that discretion in an improper manner or on improper grounds—19 Cal 57 2 Cal 110 So also where the Magistrate acted in his character as Magistrate believing he had power to do so whereas in fact he had no such power his act is liable to be set aside in revision upon the application of the party aggrieved—1866 P R 21 Crown v Tokha 1870 P R 4

(8) The High Court can in revision reverse the proceedings of a Magistrate on the ground of disqualification of the Magistrate in a particular case owing to personal or pecuniary interest or bias—Chanle v Emp, 1884 P R 40

(9) The High Court can interfere in revision where the procedure followed by the Magistrate has been improper and faulty e g where the Magistrate based his decision not upon the evidence recorded but on unrecorded evidence taken verbally subsequently on the spot—24 W R 14 or where the Magistrate negligently omitted to record the evidence of previous conviction and convicted and sentenced the accused—1874 P R 12 1879 P R 28 or where the inquiry in the Lower Court has been faulty—12 Bom 377

(10) The High Court will interfere in revision when there is a material error in the proceedings which means not an error in decision upon the facts but some error in law or procedure which affects the decision—20 W R 41 Thus where there is a substantial doubt as to the guilt of the accused it is a material error not to give the accused the benefit of the doubt, and the High Court can interfere and acquit the accused—1916 P W R 27 1915 P W R 34 1875 P R 6 Where the Court has taken a wrong view of the facts through an error of law, e g, where it places the burden of proof on the accused contrary to the principles laid down in section 101 of the Evidence Act, the High Court will interfere—Ratanlal 794 Where the evidence for the prosecution was weak and biased and it was possible that the accu

the act complained of (theft) under a bona fide belief that he had the r, to the property it was an error of law of the Magistrate not to have acquitted him and in revision the Chief Court set aside the conviction—1916 P W R 27 18 Cr L J 732 (Cal) An improper summing up by the Sessions Judge in which the Judge omitted to charge the jury as to the degree of credit to be given to a particular witness is an error of law which is a good ground for revision—5 W R 80 It is a material error to convict a person of being in possession of stolen property in the absence of evidence showing dishonest possession on the part of the accused especially where the theft is not recent—Sohna v Crown 15 P R 1. Omission to take a very material evidence offered by the accused is a material error which prejudices the accused and the High Court can interfere—24 W R 60 Laxity and indifference on the part of the Sessions Judge in weighing and sifting the evidence is a material error which calls for revision—Emp v Murli 2 All 336 A defective investigation by the Magistrate is a material error which justifies interference of the High Court in revision—2 Weir 5 0

(11) The High Court will interfere where the order of the Lower Court was passed without recording sufficient evidence Where the evidence on record was insufficient to support a conviction, the High Court in revision set aside an order of the Sessions Judge summarily rejecting the appeal and remanded the case for rehearing on the merits—10 C W N 416 The High Court will also interfere where the Lower Court has failed to consider important evidence and has accepted certain other evidence without any critical examination—23 C W N 488

(12) The High Court can interfere with an order in a criminal case on the ground that inferences unfavourable to the accused and not warranted by the evidence had been drawn to the prejudice of the accused—18 Cr L J 116 (Bur)

1204 How powers of High Court can be invoked —The High Court will interfere either by calling for the record under section 435 or when the case has been reported to it for orders under section 438 or when the case otherwise comes to its knowledge The High Court may interfere in revision upon information in whatever way received —In re Aurokiam 2 Mad 38 The powers conferred by this section are at all times to be exercised and they may be put in force not merely on matters coming before the Judge in Court but also on matters coming to his knowledge on reliable information— Weir 533 An official communication from Government for revision of a case is covered by the terms of this section and the High Court can exercise its revisional powers when a case comes to the knowledge of the Court through an official communication direct from Government—188 A W N 141 The High Court has power to interfere in revision on a matter being brought to its notice in any manner whatever not necessarily by means of an application on the part of the person convicted It can interfere on information contained in a newspaper or a placard on a wall or an anonymous post card if it considers that sufficient grounds have been established to justify its so doing But where the convicted persons was

might have appealed did not appeal or apply in revision because they (being non co operators) refused to recognize the authority of any Court established by British authority in India the High Court should be loath to take action on an application for revision presented by a third party on his own responsibility and without authority from the convicts on whose behalf it was presented—In re Narain Prasad 45 All 128 (129)

Although the Court has power under sec 439 of the Code to call for cases not only on judicial information but also to deal with a case which 'otherwise comes to its knowledge' yet in most circumstances it is a right practice that the Judges should be moved in open Court—Ratanlal 577 Q E v Abdul Rahiman 16 Bom 580

The High Court can go into the facts when the Lower Court has totally misconceived the evidence and come to an obviously wrong conclusion—14 Bom 115 The High Court in revision does not decide the balance of credibility between two conflicting sets of witnesses or two conflicting issues of fact, but it may be compelled to dissent from a finding of fact which is either perverse or has been arrived at contrary to well established principles of law—Umed Singh v Emp, 21 A L J 765 The High Court will interfere where the finding of fact is contrary to the mass of unrebutted evidence, and there is a clear case of carriage of justice—Emp v Sarju Prasad, 27 O C 290, 11 O L J 25 Cr. But though the High Court has power to revise findings of fact arrived at by the Lower Courts and the law imposes no limits to this jurisdiction (14 Bom 331 10 Cal 1047 10 Bom 131) still it is not bound to do so if it does not think fit and will not exercise such a discretionary power unless there appears on the face of the judgment or order complained of or on the record some ground to induce the Court to think that the evidence ought to be examined in order to see that there has been no failure of justice—22 Cal 998 The High Court is always averse to interfering on facts by way of revision as it would tend to remove the difference specifically laid down by the statute between appeal and revision—Hafiz Khan v Emp 1 O W N 878 It is unusual in revision to disturb a finding of fact unless it is so manifestly erroneous that a miscarriage of justice would result from its being uncorrected—Emp v Buranshahib 6 Bom L R 1096, Md Zahur v K E, 9 O L J 488 Hiranand v Emp 17 S L R 243 25 Cr L J 134 The High Court has the power to go into evidence in revision but it is the practice of the High Court not to go into evidence as a rule and the Court will not interfere unless there are special circumstances or unless there is an error of law—28 Bom 533 Ratanlal 244 Ordinarily the High Court will not in revision go behind the concurrent findings of the Courts below on a question of fact—24 Cr L J 476 (Mad) Tabu v Emp 26 Cr L J 393 6 Lah L J 326 When the Appellate Court has dealt with the evidence carefully and has not omitted to consider any relevant or important portion of the evidence the High Court will not inter

1212. Power to order restoration of property —The High Court in its revisional jurisdiction has the power under section 423 (d) of making any amendment or any consequential or incidental order that may be just and proper An accused person may upon his acquittal by the High Court in revision be restored to possession of the property of which he has been deprived in favour of the complainant—27 All 415 The High Court may in the exercise of its revisional powers pass an order under sec 517 to refund the money received by false pretences—15 Cr L J 555 (Bur)

1213. Power to consider case of non-appealing accused — Where two or more persons have been convicted by the Sessions Judge and one of them has appealed, the High Court has power under section 439 to deal with the case of the accused persons not appealing against their conviction while considering and trying the appeal preferred by the other accused clause (3) of this section does not in way affect the jurisdiction of the High Court to deal with the case of the non appealing accused—5 C W. N 330, 31 C L J 305, 1893 A W. N 51, Raghu v. K E, 5 P. J. 435 (Lah) Where four persons were convicted and three of them were awarded non appealable sentences and on appeal by the other the conviction of all of them is found to be wrong, the High Court has power under this section to deal with and set aside the conviction even as regards those who have not appealed—1891 A W N 149, 39 All 549, 31 C L J 305 Similarly, where there are several convicted persons and one only of them has applied for revision, the High Court has power to deal with the convictions of all offenders who were tried together and convicted, though only one person has applied for revision—1909 P R 9, (1911) 2 M W N 170

1214. Power to expunge remarks from Lower Courts' judgment —In a Bombay case, a Sessions Judge in convicting the accused passed certain remarks about the complainant, a police officer as a result of which he was dismissed from service He thereupon applied to the High Court to delete the remarks from the judgment of the Sessions Judge It was held, dismissing the application that it would be an extraordinary exercise of the powers of the High Court, to expunge from the Lower Court s judgment the remarks complained of—19 Bom L R 912 In a recent case of the Allahabad High Court it has been held that the High Court cannot do so even under section 423 (d) read with section 439 because the 'amendment mentioned in section 423 (d) means an amendment of the main order, and the incidental or consequential order means an order incidental to and consequential upon the main order that is, the High Court can make an amendment or pass an incidental or consequential order only when there has been an appeal or revision petition against the main order, but where the main order passed by the Lower Court has not been appealed against, the High Court cannot entertain any application for expunging certain remarks made by the Lower Court in its judgment—44 All 101 But where there has been an appeal or revision petition against the order of the Lower Court the High Court in dealing with the whole evidence of the case and considering the judgment can expunge any improper remarks made in it by the Court below This will be evident from 2 C W N cclvi, 15 Cr L J. 420 (Oudh) and 5 Bur L T 20 In 4 Bur L T 173 the Chief Court held that it had power to expunge the objectionable passage from the Lower Court s judgment, though it refused to do so

But section 561A (newly added by the Amendment Act of 1923) gives inherent power to the High Court to make any order to secure the ends of justice, and thus to expunge any objectionable remarks from the Lower Court s judgment, irrespective of the fact whether there has or has not been an appeal or revision petition against the main order Thus, in Amar Nath v Crown, 5 Lah 476 (481), 26 Cr L J 463, where a Sessions Judge made certain unwarranted remarks about the testimony of a Police witness, and that witness applied to the High Court in revision to expunge those remarks from the judgment of the Sessions Judge, the High Court directed those remarks to be expunged, although there was no revision petition in the main case in which that witness gave his evidence So also, where one of two accused tried together by a Magistrate was acquitted, and the Sessions Judge, in an appeal preferred by the other accused against his conviction, passed certain remarks about the acquitted person impugning the correctness of the acquittal, and that person applied to the High Court to expunge those remarks, the High Court ordered the remarks to be expunged although no revision petition was made in the main case—Abdul Aziz v Emp 25 Cr L J 1245 (Lah) The Bombay and Allahabad cases cited above must be deemed as overruled by section 561A See also, Benarsi Das v Crown 6 Lah 166 26 P L R 315, 26 Cr L J 1326 where the High Court expunged certain remarks in a Magistrate s judgment about a person who was not a party or a witness in the proceedings

1215. Power to interfere in a pending case —Under section 435, the High Court can call for and examine the records of any proceeding of an inferior Criminal Court not only to satisfy itself as to the correctness legality or propriety of any finding sentence or order of such Court, but also as to the regularity of any proceedings of that Court Thus, section 435 does not deal merely with the finding, sentence or order but with proceedings generally and the power of the High Court extends to calling for and examining the record of any proceedings for satisfying itself as to the regularity of such proceedings and for that purpose it has power to interfere at any stage of the proceedings in a pending trial Thus it can interfere when the proceedings before the inferior Court have not proceeded any further beyond the issue of summons—Ramanatham v Subrahmanya 47 Mad 722 (725) 47 M L J 373 25 Cr L J 1009 Q E v Nageshappa 20 Bom 543 (545) The High Court can interfere with a case while it is still pending in the subordinate Court, and can quash the proceedings if the materials before the Magistrate disclose no offence and no useful purpose would be served by continuing the proceedings—Hari Charan v Girish Chandra 38 Cal 68 (74) 13 C L J 43 11 Cr L J 5-5 Emp v Krishna Rao 6 N L J 119 The High Court can interfere at as early a stage as when the accused has been summoned to show cause why sanction (under sec 195) should not be granted for his prosecution—Q E v Jagan Singh, 1892 A W N 102 Chadha v Emp 14 N L J 851 The High Court can interfere with the proceedings of a Magistrate while they are in the interlocutory stage pending investigation and may suspend such proceedings even without having the record before it—20 W R 23 The High Court can pending trial interfere with the interlocutory order of a Magistrate refusing to summon certain witnesses for the defence—1901 P L R 130 The High Court can interfere pending trial when the Subordinate Magistrate improperly declines to record any evidence tendered—1904 P L R 257 The High Court can interfere and set aside an interlocutory order of a Magistrate refusing to let in evidence—8 S L R 238 The High Court interfere when the case has reached the stage when a charge has framed and only the defence of the accused remains to be heard

But though the High Court has power to interfere with pending proceedings at any stage, it will not do so except only under rare and exceptional circumstances—Choa Lal v Anant Parshad, 25 Cal 233 1 S L R 30 39 Mad 561 Mahomed v Muhammad Idris, 26 Cr L J 1101 (Sind) Madhab v Emp 26 Cr L J 1093 (Nag), and unless there is some manifest and patent injustice apparent on the face of the proceeding and calling for prompt redress—Jagat Chandra v Q E, 26 Cal 786 20 Cr L J 764 21 Cr L J 343 (Nag) The High Court will allow the proceedings in the Subordinate Court to go on and take their course and will not interfere with a pending proceeding (even though it is irregularly conducted) unless there is exceptional ground for interference—25 Cal 233 20 Cr L J 30 (Cal) In re Sami Goundan, 20 L W 937 26 Cr L J 421 Thus the High Court will not interfere with the conduct of a case on the ground that the written complaint did not fully describe the offence, if the complainant stated in his deposition the description of such offence—1899 A W N 212 The High Court will not interrupt the course of a trial by interfering in interlocutory matters Thus, it will not interfere with a decision of a Magistrate that he has jurisdiction in a case If the High Court has to decide in the midst of the trial held in a Magistrate's Court as to whether he has jurisdiction or not, it would be interfering in a most improper manner on a point which may conclusively have to be decided on appeal—Kashi Ram v Dikshit, 3 O W N 104 27 Cr L J 191 The High Court will rarely interfere in the midst of a trial and order commitment, unless it is shown that the failure on the part of the Magistrate to commit is extremely improper—Bilodar v K E 13 O L J

490 3 O W N 201, 27 Cr L J 417 The High Court will interfere with a pending trial only when it is satisfied that an interference is necessary and that any delay in the rectification of the error will cause waste of time or a miscarriage of justice—1904 P R 8

1216 Power to enhance sentence —This is a power which is not conferred by section 423 and the High Court can exercise this power not as an Appellate Court but only in revision Thus in an appeal against a conviction by a prisoner the High Court dismissed the appeal as an Appellate Court but enhanced the sentence as a Court of Revision—11 Cal 530

A private party is not entitled to apply to the High Court to enhance a sentence passed by a subordinate Court A District Magistrate or Sessions Judge or the Government Pleader may draw the attention of the High Court to a sentence with a view to its being enhanced The High Court may also of its own motion send for the record and take action with a like object But it is not for a private complainant to apply to the High Court for this purpose If he considers a sentence unduly lenient he should draw the attention of the Government to the fact—In re Nagji Dula 48 Bom 358 (360) 26 Bom L R 181 25 Cr L J 966 Lakhi v Raja 19 S L R 64 Nga San v Nga Ye 5 Bur L J 1 27 Cr L J 818

Where an accused's revision petition from his conviction has been dismissed the High Court can entertain a second revision petition from the complainant or a reference from a District Magistrate (sec 438) for enhancement of the sentence The disposal of the first revision petition is no bar to the disposal of the second revision petition or reference though arising out of the same original trial because the Judge disposing of the revision petition filed by a convicted person against the propriety of his conviction cannot be said to be adjudicating on the question of enhancing the sentence so that the matter of the second proceeding cannot be said to be of the nature of res judicata It cannot be accepted as a sound principle that once the High Court has passed any order in a criminal revision it is functus officio and is precluded from entertaining any further revision petition or reference in the same case or from proceeding suo motu—In re [illegible] 26 Cr L J 583 A I R 1925 Mad 933

The High Court has power to enhance a sentence so as to alter its nature—6 All [illegible] The effect of secs 423 and 439 read together is that the High Court when hearing an appeal against a conviction may alter the finding under section 423 and then as a Court of Revision may enhance the sentence under this section so as to make the sentence appropriate to the altered finding—Kannam Bali v Emp 37 Mad 119 Thus where a Sessions Judge convicted the accused of culpable homicide not amounting to murder and sentenced him to seven years rigorous imprisonment the High Court in revision altered the conviction to one of murder and sentenced him to transportation for life—1871 P R 11

An enhancement of sentence is a serious proceeding and the High Court will not interfere as a Court of Revision in order to enhance sentence if the sentence passed by the Lower Court involves su punishment and should interfere only if the sentence is manifestly inadequate—1889 P R 7 1898 P R 17, Sitaram v Emp, 12 O L J 41 2 O W N 550 26 Cr L J 1,64 10 S L R 207 And for this purpose the High Court should see whether there is matter on the record of the case showing that the sentence passed is clearly inadequate to the offence —Emp v Mahalo, 26 Cr L J 821 (Nag) The mere fact that the High Court would have inflicted a heavier punishment if the case had come before it for trial is not a proper ground for enhancement of sentence —1919 P R 7, Sitaram v Emp, (Supra) It is not merely because circumstances occur to the High Court which would render necessary a more severe sentence or a different charge that the High Court will interfere there must be matter on the record of the case showing that the charge has been improperly framed or that the sentence passed is clearly inadequate to the offence—10 W R 22

Where evidence of previous conviction was not adduced at the trial but was discovered after the conviction the High Court will not interfere and order a retrial in order to enable the prosecution to supplement the record by producing fresh evidence bearing on the question of punishment —1905 P R 19 1884 P R 36 1905 P R 43 Similarly, a valid conviction arrived at by the Magistrate will not be set aside simply because subsequent to the trial and conviction fresh evidence has been discovered which may tend to convict the accused of an offence other than that for which he was convicted—11 W R 47

The High Court will not interfere in revision to enhance the sentence when the convicted person has undergone the full term of his imprisonment or has paid the fine imposed upon him, even though the order of the Court below is clearly wrong in law—1913 P W R 29, 1909 P W R 14 1 Lah 453 The High Court is slow to interfere in cases where interference would involve the imprisonment of persons already discharged from jail—1889 P R 7 The power of enhancement under this section should not be exercised in cases where the Magistrate's order was proper on the materials before him and it is not fair to the accused to reverse the conviction and direct him to be committed to the Sessions after he has undergone the full term of imprisonment inflicted by the Magistrate merely because his previous convictions were not known at the time of his trial by the Magistrate—9 S L R 95

but lays down that in cases of sentences passed by Magistrates not empowered under section 34, the limit of enhancement shall be the sentence that might have been inflicted by a Presidency Magistrate or a Magistrate of the first class Therefore the High Court has power to enhance the sentence of imprisonment to two years—9 S L R 8. The High Court has the power to inflict any punishment which might have been inflicted for the offence by a first class Magistrate and is not limited to the powers of the trying Magistrate—1 Lah 453 The words enhance the sentence presuppose that a sentence has been imposed by the Lower Court The [illegible]

fore where no sentence has been passed by the trying Magistrate but the accused has been released on probation under sec 562 of the Code the High Court cannot substitute a sentence of imprisonment or whipping in revision—20 Cr L J 99 (Oudh) 37 All 31

Lastly the power of enhancement of sentence can be exercised under this section where the sentence passed by the Magistrate is a legal one A retrospective sentence of imprisonment for the period already passed by the accused in the lock up is not a legal sentence—1919 P R 27

1217 Procedure if two Judges differ —If two learned Judges of the High Court differ in a Criminal Revision case section 439 read with section 429 requires the case to be decided by a third Judge and precludes any further appeal under the Letters Patent or any reference to a Full Bench under the rules of the Court—40 Mad 976 But where an application is made to the High Court not under section 435 of the Criminal Procedure Code but under sec 107 of the Government of India Act Section 439 of the Code cannot apply and consequently section 429 (which is referred to in section 439) is also not applicable and therefore if in such a case there is a difference of opinion between the Judges the provisions of section 36 of the Letters Patent will apply and the decision of the senior Judge will prevail—47 Cal 438

1218 Sub-section (2)—Notice to accused —The language of this sub section is mandatory and it is clearly enacted as an exception to section 440 An order of enhancement of sentence is an order to the prejudice of the accused and if such an order is passed without giving the accused an opportunity of being heard it s more than an irregularity and the order so passed is without jurisdiction—In re Sona Naidu 47 Mad 428 (432) K E v Romesh Chandra 22 C W N 168 Ratanlal 179 Where a case comes to the knowledge of the High Court by an appeal having been filed against a conviction it is not desirable if the appeal is admitted to issue a notice at the same time to enhance the sentence It seems to be absolutely incongruous that the High Court in the same breath should admit the appeal of the accused and issue notice calling upon him to show cause why the sentence should not be enhanced The notice should issue after the appeal has been dismissed after being dealt with on the merits—Margal Naran v Emp 49 Bom 450 27 Bom L R 355 26 Cr L J 968 A I R 19 5 Bom 68 Where notice has been issued to the accused to show cause why his sentence should not be enhanced and at the hearing neither the accused nor his counsel is present the High Court cannot pass an order enhancing the sentence—Parasram v Emp 26 Cr L J 543 (Oudh)

Where a complainant applied to the High Court under sec 439 to revise an order of a first class Magistrate ordering payment of compensation (under section 250) to the accused the High Court refused to pass any order where it appeared that the accused was dead and could not therefore be served with notice—Ratanlal 634

A High Court may by virtue of section 423 issue a warrant of arrest without previous notice to the accused, because a warrant of arrest

not an order to the prejudice of the accused within the meaning of this sub section—8 L B R 290

1219 Sub-section (4)—Interference with orders of acquittal — As to the powers of the High Court to revise orders of acquittal at the instance of a private prosecutor or on a reference under section 438, see Note 1204 under heading 'How powers of High Court can be invoked

an order of acquittal passed by the Lower Court where the judgment of that Court is very summary and contains no discussion of the case or distinct findings on the questions involved—Nabin Chandra v Rajendra 18 Cr L J 519 (Cal) The High Court will exercise its power to set aside an acquittal where there has been no trial or where there has been a denial of the right of fair trial—Siban Rai v Bhagwant 5 Pat 25 6 P L T 833 27 Cr L J 235 Where there were grave irregularities in procedure and the trial was conducted in an atmosphere of prejudice the High Court interfered with an order of acquittal—25 C W N 609 (Khoreal shooting case) The High Court will interfere in certain exceptional circumstances where a matter of public importance is involved—24 O C 57 An application for revision against an order of acquittal may appropriately be allowed when legal points alone are involved—Cr au v Thamman 1918 P R 8 The High Court ought to interfere with an order of acquittal at the instance of a private complainant when the offence is of so personal a character (e g defamation insult) that the Local Government will seldom be willing to appeal from the acquittal—20 Cr L J 708 (Nag) 11 C L J 113 But the mere fact that the High Court if it were sitting as a Court of Appeal would have come to a different conclusion of fact is no ground for exercising revisional jurisdiction upon a petition against an order of acquittal—39 Mad 505 35 M L J 518 Bindi Prasad v Ripusudan 5 N L R 4 9 Cr L J 211 Damodar v Jujharsingh 26 Cr L J 1348 (Nag) The High Court should not interfere with an order of acquittal when the question is merely as to the appreciation of doubtful evidence and there is no patent error or defect in the order of acquittal passed by the Lower Court resulting in grave injustice—39 Mad 505 35 M L J 518 When the acquittal of an accused is based on a finding of fact, the High Court will not interfere in revision—Crown v Har phul 7 Lah L J 42 6 P L R 38 6 Cr L J (S) Where the trial Court has acquitted the accused after giving due weight to all the evidence on the record the High Court will not interfere—M h Nur Md v Nur Md 7 Lah L J 367 6 P L R 644 26 Cr L J 1596 Where the Magistrate took one view of the oral evidence and the Sessions Judge took the opposite view and there was no legal point or question of jurisdiction involved held that there was no ground for interference with the order of acquittal—Kheri Chai l v Lali 3 Bur L J 3·3 26 Cr L J 511 A mere error of procedure is not by itself a good ground for setting aside an acquittal—25 Cr L J 1206 (Pat) thus an omission by the Appellate Court to serve the notice of appeal on the complainant or on the officer appointed under section 422 is not a ground for setting aside the order of acquittal passed by the Appellate Court—Parakarakkai v Amir 20 L W 327 26 Cr L J 249 The High Court will not interfere in revision with an order of acquittal passed by a Magistrate of competent jurisdiction who has taken a correct view of the law e g an order of acquittal passed by a Magistrate on a prosecution for an alleged offence under section 225B I P Code irregularly instituted on a report sent in by a Munsif which was treated as a complaint—Emp v Madho Singh, 47 All 400 23 A L J 189 26 Cr L J 865

The above remarks equally apply to cases of revision against an order of discharge under sec 253 and the High Court would be unwilling or very reluctant to interfere with an order of discharge based on a consideration of all the prosecution evidence when no evidence has been shut out and there is no illegality or irregularity in the procedure adopted by the trying Court, even if the High Court should on the materials on the record consider that it was a fit case for the framing of a charge and putting the accused on his defence—35 M L J. 518

The High Court has power in revision to reverse an order of acquittal but cannot convert a finding of acquittal into one of conviction—9 All 134 Emp v Sheo Darsan, 44 All 332 5 W R 2 When the Lower Court has acquitted the accused when it ought to have convicted him the High Court cannot convert the order of acquittal into one of conviction After reversing the order of acquittal the proper order of the High Court must be one remanding the case to the Lower Court and directing the retrial of the accused person—Rameshwar v Gobind 23 A L J 433 26 Cr L J 970, Q E v Balwant 9 All 134 22 Cr L J 97 (All) Nand Ram v Khazan, 19 A L J 589 22 Cr L J 337 Though the High Court in exercising revisional powers against orders of acquittal, can go into the questions of fact still it cannot then and there convict but can only order a retrial—1908 P W R 22

The only way of securing conviction in a case of acquittal is by an appeal by the Local Government against the order of acquittal—Emp v Sheo Darsan 44 All 332

An order under section 471 is not an order of conviction Therefore where the accused was acquitted by the Lower Court on the ground that he was insane, the passing of an order under sec 471 by the High Court in revision does not amount to an alteration of an order of acquittal into one of conviction within the meaning of this sub-section—42 M L J 72

The High Court is precluded from converting the finding of acquittal into one of conviction in the absence of a Government appeal But the High Court can convict the accused person of an offence under another section of the Penal Code upon which he has not been acquitted by the Lower Court Thus, in a trial for an offence under section 302 I P C the trial Court acquitted the accused under section 302 I P C. but convicted him under section 323 I P Code Held that the High Court can in revision convict the accused of an offence under section 325 I P Code, inasmuch as the trial Court had not considered the applicability of section 325 I P C and there was no acquittal under section 325 I P Code—Dali v Mangli, 24 A L J 414, 27 Cr L J 564 into conviction—Bhola v Emp, 1904 P R 12, 1 Cr L J 912 Thus, where the accused was charged under sec 302 I P Code but was convicted under section 304 I. P C, the High Court is competent to alter the conviction under sec 304 I P C into a conviction under sec 302 I P C—Fazal Khan v Emp 8 Lah 136 28 Cr L J 508 (following 1904 P R 12) Subsection (4) of sec 439 refers to a case where the trial has ended in a complete acquittal and not to a case where the trial has ended in a conviction but the Court has wrongly applied the law or has wrongly found some fact not proved and has in consequence held that the conviction should be under some section of the Code other than the section properly applicable—Kambam Balli v Emp 37 Mad 119 Emp v Shahu 27 Cr L J 1121 (Sind) Thus where the accused was convicted by a Magistrate under secs 420 and 507 I P Code but on appeal the Sessions Judge held that secs 420 and 507 were not the proper sections applicable on the facts and altered the conviction to one under sections 385 and 508 I P C the High Court can convict the accused under secs 420 and 511 I P Code (attempt to cheat) Such an order would not amount to an alteration of acquittal into conviction because the Sessions Judge has not considered whether the accused was guilty of an attempt to cheat and has not recorded any finding of acquittal on such a charge, and the prohibition in this clause did not apply to this case The case is one in which it was difficult to say what the offence committed by the accused was on the facts proved In such a case it was doubtful whether the alteration of one section into another by the Sessions Judge could be said to be a case of acquittal under the former section within the meaning of this clause—In re Doraiswamy, 48 Mad 771 48 M L J 190 26 Cr L J 755 A I R 1925 Mad 480 An accused person was convicted by a Magistrate of an offence under secs 205 and 109 I P C but on appeal the Sessions Judge altered the conviction to one under sec 419 I P C The High Court being of opinion that the offence was one under secs 205 and 109 I P C and not under sec 419 I P C altered the conviction into one under sections 205 and 109 I P Code and held that the substitution of the conviction under sec 419 I P C for one under secs 205 and 109 I P C by the Sessions Judge did not amount to an acquittal of the accused with regard to the offence under the latter sections and that sec 439 (4) was no bar to the High Court re altering the conviction from one under sec 419 to one under secs 205 and 109 I P C—Ganpat Lal v Emp 6 Pat 21[illegible] 28 Cr L J 5[illegible]9 But the Bombay High Court dissents from this view and holds that if the Lower Court acquits the accused of one offence and convicts him of another the High Court cannot convert the finding of acquittal into one of conviction by convicting the accused of the offence of which he has been acquitted Thus where the accused was convicted by a Magistrate under sec 326 I P C but the Sessions Judge on appeal altered the conviction to one under sec 323 and the Local Government applied in revision for restoration of the conviction under sec 326 held that the order of the Sessions Judge must be taken as an acquittal of the offence under sec 326 I P C and the High Court could not convert that finding of acquittal into one of conviction—Emp v Shi[illegible] 48 Bom 510 (511) 2[illegible] Bom L R 438 26 Cr L J [illegible] (dissenting from Bhola v Emp 1904 P R 12) In a very recent Madras case where the ac was charged with murder (sec 302 I P C) but the Sessions Judge convicted him under the second part of sec 304 I P C, held that the High Court had no power to convict the accused of murder The order of the Sessions Judge amounted to an order of acquittal in respect of the charge of murder and the High Court has no power to do what is tantamount to converting a finding of acquittal into one of conviction Moreover the finding of acquittal referred to in sec 439 (4) does not mean complete acquittal It includes cases where there has been an acquittal in respect of a particular offence and a conviction in respect of another—In re Subba Chukki, 50 Mad 259 52 M L J 407 28 Cr L J 31 (dissenting from 37 Mad 119)

This sub-section does not limit the powers of a Court of Appeal It is intended to limit in certain respects the revisional powers of the High Court which would otherwise have been competent in revision to convert a finding of acquittal into one of conviction A Court of Appeal has no such restriction—Kambam Balli v Emp 37 Mad 119 Q E v Jaanulla 23 Cal 975 Thus where a man charged with murder has been convicted by the Sessions Judge for a minor offence the question whether the High Court can convict the man of murder depends on whether the High Court is dealing with the case both as an Appellate and a Revisional Court or whether it is merely acting in its revisional capacity If the High Court is acting both as an Appellate and a Revisional Court it can convict the appellant of murder and sentence him to death (On Shae v Emp, 1 Rang 436 25 Cr L J 247) But if it is acting solely as a Court of revision it cannot convert the acquittal of murder into conviction—Emp v Kan Thein 4 Rang 140 5 Bur L J 80 7 Cr L J 1393

1220 Sub section (5)—No revision where right of appeal exists —Under this sub-section the High Court is precluded from exercising the powers of revision at the instance of the accused who had a right of appeal but did not exercise it—8 Bom L R 851 3 Cal 573 1 C L R 352 2 All 276 1904 P L R 1 44 M L J 306 35 Bom 253 8 S L R 229 14 S L R 173 And therefore it is impossible for an appeal filed beyond limitation to be treated as an application for revision as far as criminal procedure goes—Germal v Shewa Ram 9 S L R 90 27 Cr L J 780 (781) Where the accused who had a right of appeal to the Sessions Judge did not appeal but came in revision before the High Court, the High Court would be precluded from hearing the applicant and in such a case the High Court cannot even interfere suo motu for that would be an evasion of the statute, which the Court cannot permit —Nuran v Emp 18 S L R 262 25 Cr L J 1362 Jumo v Emp 8 S L R 229 19 Cr L J 252 Thus in an application by an accused person for revision of an order of a Magistrate refusing to allow a private vakil to appear on his behalf it was held that the case was not one for interference in revision because the accused could have appealed from his conviction and made it a ground of appeal that he was improperly deprived of legal assistance at the trial—In re Sarayya 44 M L J 306 But there is no inflexible rule that where the accused has a right of appeal and does not exercise it, the High Court cannot exercise its revisional powers under this section, but such powers should be sparingly used and in very exceptional circumstances—6 All 484 Ordinarily when an accused has a right of appeal but has not exercised the same, the High Court will not permit him to apply in revision instead But where the effect of not allowing the revision is to make him suffer long periods of imprisonment when under the law a sentence of only a few months could be imposed on him, the High Court will interfere under the general powers of revision—In re Pavanar, 20 L W 914 26 Cr L J 747 In as much as this sub-section directs that where an appeal lies and no appeal is brought no proceedings by way of revision shall be entertained at the instance of the party who could have appealed it is clearly desirable that District Magistrates should not place difficulties in the way of persons entitled to appeal by calling for the proceedings and taking action upon them within the period allowed for appeal—U B R (1916) 3rd Qr 124

This sub-section prohibits the High Court from exercising its power of revision at the instance of the party who could have appealed but it is no bar to dealing in revision with a case reported under sec 438 by a Sessions Judge or District Magistrate—1904 L B R 209 So also where an accused convicted by the Magistrate appealed to the Sessions Judge and the latter upheld the conviction but referred the question of sentence to the High Court recommending enhancement which the High Court declined to do held that the High Court was not thereby debarred from subsequently entertaining a revision petition preferred by the accused—Emperor v Kohna Ram 45 All 11

No appeal after revision —Where a case has been heard in revision and orders have been passed after the High Court fully went into the facts of the case the Court cannot afterwards hear an appeal in the same case —1890 A W N 225

No revision after appeal —Although the High Court is competent to interfere in revision as well as to interfere on appeal still it could not have been the intention of the Legislature that a person who had appealed and had the opportunity of advancing any objection he desired to take to the proceedings of the Lower Court should again have the opportunity of raising any points of law he may have omitted to raise in the appeal by an application for revision—. Weir 573 But the High Court after it has acted as a Court of Appeal may act as a Court of revision on special grounds e g to correct an error which cannot be set right by appeal For instance if a man should be found guilty of murder and sentenced to 7 years transportation then if the prisoner should appeal on the facts the High Court might uphold the finding of guilty of murder on appeal and afterwards as a Court of revision might set aside the sentence of 7 years transportation and pass a legal sentence for murder —5 W R 45

1221. Sub-section (6) —This sub-section did not exist in the Bills or Reports but has been added during the Debate in the Legisl Assembly on the motion of Mr Rangachariar It is intended to g person, who has been brought to the bar of the High Court to a

why a sentence passed upon him should not be enhanced, the right of showing by arguments a fortiori not only that the sentence should not be enhanced but that the whole conviction is wrong and should be set aside This amendment enables the High Court not only to refuse an enhancement of sentence but also to set aside a conviction if the High Court finds that not only the sentence but the conviction also is equally unjustifiable

The object of the amendment was thus stated by the mover Under the Code as it stands, the High Court has been given the power to enhance the sentence in case of persons who have been convicted by Lower Courts Now, suppose the accused person takes the conviction and he does not care to appeal Rather than undergo the expense of going to the High Court and appealing against the sentence, he rather suffers the sentence and keeps quiet But the police are not satisfied with the sentence imposed by the Magistrate or Sessions Judge who tried the case They say, he should have been given a longer sentence or a longer punishment, and therefore they drag the poor man to the High Court When he appears before the High Court, it stands to reason that he should be able to say, Well, I have been wrongly convicted, but you want to impose a heavier penalty now I was content to let things alone, but here the police won't leave me alone, they have dragged me to the High Court, now let me establish my innocence, the case is not proved against me, the evidence is false, I want to establish that' Sir there are Judges and Judges Here the luck of the accused depends upon the particular Judge who hears the particular case If he is a Judge who is leniently disposed, he will say, If you are not guilty, I am prepared to hear it', but there are other Judges who will say, No no the conviction stands, you have not appealed, or the time is up, you have got 30 or 60 days for you to appeal, you have allowed the conviction to stand, now show cause why I should not inflict the heavier penalty which the police want I have to ask you to show cause against enhancement' Sir, it is an injustice to do that We must not leave it to the sweet will and discr[illegible]

[illegible] basis, see Emp v Chinto, 32 Bom 162, 7 Cr L J 119 10 Bom L R 93 But this is no longer possible, the amendment is intended to give the accused person, who has been brought to the bar of the High Court to answer why a sentence passed upon him should not be enhanced the right of showing by argument a fortiori not only that the sentence should not be enhanced but that the whole conviction is wrong and should be set aside—Emp v Mahadeo, 26 Cr L J 821 (Nag) The effect of the enactment of this sub-section is that the High Court when adjudicating upon an application for enhancement of sentence, is converted into a

Court of Appeal against conviction—Emp v Tej Ram 27 P L R 112 27 Cr L J 380 But where an accused's revision petition from his conviction has been dismissed, and then the District Magistrate makes a reference under sec 438, for enhancement of sentence, it seems that the accused would be precluded, in the proceeding of the reference from re agitating the question of the legality of the conviction because the Court cannot decide again what it has decided once—In re Saiyed Asif 26 Cr L J 583 (Mad)

An accused person when showing cause why his sentence should not be enhanced, is entitled to show that the whole trial was illegal (e g, as contravening the provisions of sec 234) though the question of illegality was not raised at the trial—Emp v Manant 49 Bom 892 27 Bom L R 1343 27 Cr L J 305 A I R 1926 Bom 110

Where a High Court has given a finding on appeal or in revision as to the guilt of the accused person and subsequently a notice is served upon that person to show cause why his sentence should not be enhanced, the right which he would have had under sec 439 (6) to re open the question of his guilt had no such finding been given vanishes because of the inherent incapacity of a Judge of the High Court to reconsider a decision given by another Judge—Emp v Sher Singh 8 Lah 521 28 Cr L J 266 Emp v Jorabai 50 Bom 78, 28 Bom L R 1051 27 Cr L J 1173

1222. Miscellaneous —Limitation —According to the practice of the Calcutta High Court an application for revision in criminal cases must be presented within 60 days from the date of the order complained of, exclusive of the time necessary for obtaining copies This is not however an inflexible rule and in exceptional circumstances the rule may be departed from—13 Cal 1029 Although there is no law of limitation applicable to revision application still it is the settled practice of the Allahabad High Court not to admit them unless they are made within a reasonable time after the order complained of An application for revision preferred 5 months after the order complained of was passed was therefore rejected—Emp v Ram Narain [illegible] Cr L J 101 (All)

Finding of fact —It is the practice of the High Court (Allahabad) in revision unless very strong ground for an opposite conclusion is found to exist to take the findings of the Lower Appellate Court and not of the first Court, as the facts of the case—18 Cr L J 435 (All)

New plea in revision —An accused cannot be heard to urge a new plea entirely inconsistent with the one already raised by him during the trial unless he could establish that the case for the prosecution would not be believed and there is an element of doubt in it, in which case the benefit of doubt must be given to the accused—18 Cr L J 435 (All)

Loss of record —The loss of a record after conviction is no ground for the acquittal of the accused in revision In serious cases where the accused has been convicted and sentenced to a substantial punishment it may be that a retrial may be ordered—15 Cr L J 737 (Pat)

Rule to show cause —A rule which is issued by the High C[illegible] revision should be read with the judgments which were before [illegible]

at the time it was granted, and should be read reasonably in favour of the accused—2 C W N 81

How to shew cause —A Magistrate who is called upon by the High Court to show cause against a rule issued by the High Court must ask the Legal Remembrancer to appear for him, and must not address the Registrar of the High Court by letter—4 Cal 20

Duty of Magistrate showing cause —Though it is open to a Magistrate called upon to shew cause to submit his remarks in answer to the ground urged by the petitioner who obtained the rule, it is not open to him to submit observations with a view to supplement or add to his judgment—7 C W N 859

Optional with Court to hear parties.

440. No party has any right to be heard either personally or by pleader before any Court when exercising its powers of revision:

Provided that the Court may, if it thinks fit, when exercising such powers, hear any party either personally or by pleader, and that nothing in this section shall be deemed to affect section 439, sub-section (2).

1223. Scope of section —The rule in this section is the same

tion whether the District Magistrate has properly exercised his power under sec 437, without giving notice to the accused or allowing him an opportunity of being heard—Nobin v Russik, 10 Cal 268

The provisions of this section apply only to revision and do not apply to the summary rejection of an appeal under sec 421 of this Code—6 C W N 48 This section does not apply to sec 439 (2) that is if an order is passed to the prejudice of the accused, he must be heard either personally or by pleader

1224. No right to be heard —The revisional power of the High Court is exercised at its own discretion and no petitioner has a right to be heard—In re Ranga Rao, 23 M L J 371 The accused is not entitled to be heard when an order under sec 436 is made directing a further inquiry into a summary rejection of complaint—15 Cal 608 (see also the other cases cited in Note 1184 under Sec 436) The High Court refused to hear counsel who appeared to support a petition for the revision of an acquittal—14 Mad 363 Where an accused person applied in revision to the High Court, and pending the revision he was let off on bail and thereafter he absconded, held that the High Court would not hear his pleader in the revision application—Har Narain v Emp, 24 Cr L J 240 (All) In a reference under Sec 438 a counsel is not entitled to appear against the report—Reg v Dhama 1 Bom 64 A private prosecutor cannot be allowed to appear on a reference to the High Court under sec 438 If he is heard at all he can be heard only with the permission of the Court—14 W R 51

But by virtue of the discretionary power given by the proviso the High Court always hears counsel in matters of importance—19 Cal 380, 6 A L J 237

Statement by Presidency Magistrate of grounds of his decision to be considered by High Court

441 When the record of any proceeding of any Presidency Magistrate is called for by the High Court under section 435, the Magistrate may submit with the record a statement setting forth the grounds of his decision or order and any facts which he thinks material to the issue, and the Court shall consider such statement before overruling or setting aside the said decision or order

1225 A statement filed under this section takes away any irregularity in the proceedings of a Magistrate caused by the omission to record reasons before referring a case under sec 202 or dismissing a complaint under sec 203—5 M L T 79

A statement submitted by a Presidency Magistrate under this section must be regarded as a completion of the record and possesses a conclusive character as against affidavits—Bhawoo v Malu 1 Bom 377

This section does not abrogate the terms of section 263 or 370 It merely allows the Presidency Magistrate to supplement the reasons which have been already stated under sections 263 and 370 It does not apply where no reasons whatever have been recorded by the Presidency Magistrate A Bench of Presidency Magistrates imposing a sentence of imprisonment for an offence must record their reasons for the conviction The omission to do so in a case where no record of the evidence was taken is a grave irregularity But having regard to the reasons for conviction disclosed in the record submitted by the Presidency Magistrate under this section the High Court in this case did not set aside the order of the Bench on the ground of the irregularity—In re Dervish Hossain 46 Mad 253

High Court's order to be certified to lower Court or Magistrate

442 When a case is revised under this Chapter by the High Court it shall, in manner hereinbefore provided by section 425 certify its decision or order to the Court by which the finding, sentence or order revised was recorded or passed and the Court or Magistrate to which the decision or order is so certified shall thereupon make such orders as are conformable to the deci certified; and if necessary, the record shall be amended in accordance therewith.

1226 Scope of section —This section deals with every case which is revised under this Chapter by a High Court, in other words it applies to all revisions, whether under sec 435 or sec 439, and it provides that it shall certify its decision or order to the Lower Court, but it contains no such provision that it will certify its decision to itself This shows that the High Court cannot revise any judgment passed by itself—1909 P R 4

SPECIAL PROCEEDINGS

CHAPTER XXXIII

Special Provisions Relating to cases in which European and Indian British Subjects are Concerned

This Chapter has been added by the Criminal Law Amendment Act XII of 1923

'The procedure for the trial of cases in which racial considerations are involved is included in a new chapter which takes the place of the old Chapter XXXIII of the Code

'As regards the new Chapter XXXIII it will be observed that it applies to offences punishable with imprisonment which are alleged to have been committed outside a presidency town The first step to be taken to secure that such a case shall be tried under the provisions of the Chapter is a claim to be made by the accused person before the Magistrate Unless such a claim is made at one of the stages indicated for the trial of a summons case or of a warrant case or for the inquiry preliminary to commitment the provisions of the Chapter will not apply The Magistrate then makes such inquiry as he thinks necessary As a guide to the Magistrate in coming to a finding as to whether the case should be tried under the provisions of the Chapter or not it is provided that if the complainant and the accused persons or any of them are respectively European and Indian British subjects or Indian and European British subjects he shall find that the case should be tried under the provisions of the Chapter For other cases with which both European British subjects and Indian British subjects are connected the Magistrate must be satisfied that it is expedient for the ends of justice that the case shall be so tried This it is observed is the same criterion as that now contained in clause (e) of sub-section (1) of section 526 of the Code of Criminal Procedure relating to the powers of a High Court to transfer criminal cases If the Magistrate rejects the claim the person has a right of appeal to the Sessions Judge whose decision is final and if the claim is rejected by the Magistrate the Magistrate is required to stay the proceedings until the expiration of the period allowed for the presentation of the appeal or if an appeal is presented until it has been decided The period allowed for the presentation of an appeal is fixed by Article 156A of the Indian Limitation Act 1908, at seven days [illegible] persons who will be included within the term complainant for the purpose of these provisions are then defined by the proposed section 444 Incidentally public servants and officers and servants of companies associations or bodies to which the Local Government by general or special order may declare the provisions of the section to apply will not be included within the definition merely because they have made a complaint or given information in their official or quasi official capacity The procedure in summons cases punishable with imprisonment is then laid down For warrant cases which would normally be triable under the provisions of Chapter XXI of the Code if it is found that the case ought to be tried under the provisions of this Chapter a Magistrate is required if he does not discharge the accused to commit the case for trial to the Court of Session whether the case is or is not exclusively triable by that Court Normally in the Court of Session the case will then be tried by a jury of mixed nationality the majority of the jurors being either Indians or Europeans and Americans according as the accused person is an Indian or a European subject of His Majesty"

—Statement of Objects and Reasons Para 11

443 (1) Where, in the course of the trial outside a presidency town of any offence punishable with imprisonment, the accused person, at any time before he is committed for trial under Section 213 or is asked to show cause under Section 242 or enters on his defence under Section 256, as the case may be, claims that the case ought to be tried under the provisions of this Chapter, the Magistrate inquiring into or trying the case after making such inquiry as he thinks necessary, and after allowing the accused person reasonable time within which to adduce evidence in support of his claim, shall, if he is satisfied—

Determination regarding applicability of this Chapter

(a) that the complainant and the accused persons or any of them are respectively European and Indian British subjects or Indian and European British subjects, or

(b) that in view of the connection with the case of both an European British subject and an Indian British subject, it is expedient for the ends of justice that the case should be tried under the provisions of this Chapter, record a finding that the case is a case which ought to be tried under the provisions of this Chapter, or, if he is not so satisfied, record a finding that it is not such a case

(2) Where the Magistrate rejects the claim, the person by whom it was made may appeal to the Sessions Judge and the decision of the Sessions Judge thereon shall be final and shall not be questioned in any Court in appeal or revision

(3) Where the Magistrate rejects the claim, he shall stay the proceedings until the expiration of the period allowed for the presentation of the appeal or, if an appeal is presented, until it has been decided

This s ction has b e i framed o i the lines recommended in Para 27 of the Racial Distinctions Committee Report

1226A. The mere fact of the a cused person being an European British subject does not entitle him to the benefit of Chapter XXXIII He must claim before the committing Magistrate to be tried under the special procedure and the Magistrate must find that the necessary ingredients are present If any such claim is made prior to commitment but there is no finding by the Magistrate the question cannot be raised in the Sessions Court If a claim is made and the Magistrate finds favourably to the accused the order is final and the Sessions Court cannot go behind it If the finding of the Magistrate is adverse the party should appeal, and the decision of the Sessions Judge would be final The intention of the legislature is clear that the point should not be raised in the High Court—Hay v Emp 28 O C 230 2 O W N 469 26 Cr L J 1217

A claim to be tried under the provisions of Chapter XXXIII is wholly different from a claim to be tried as an European British subject etc, under sec 528A So far as the former claim is concerned the question of the status of the claimant does not always arise as is evident from the provisions of clause (b) of sec 443 Whereas in a claim to be dealt with as an European or Indian British subject (sec 528A) the claimant has to prove his own status in a claim to be tried under the provisions of Ch XXXIII the claimant may or may not have to do so—Martindale v Emp, 52 Cal 347 29 C W N 44 26 Cr L J 401

This chapter does not apply to Presidency Towns There is no provision in the Code for enabling a person to put forward a claim to be tried under Chapter XXXIII either before a Magistrate holding an inquiry or trial in a Presidency Town or before the High Court during the trial of a case It is unreasonable to suppose that the Legislature ever intended that when there was no knowing whether there would be a conviction or an acquittal (and both are open to appeal under sec 449) an inquiry might be asked for and the Court required to decide on the question as to whether if tried outside a presidency town the case would have been triable under the provisions of Chapter XXXIII The only object of an inquiry is that the result of it may be availed of for the purposes of appeal by the accused in the case of a conviction and by the C the case of an acquittal The proper time to raise the question is leave to appeal is applied for under sec 443 (c)—Martindale v Emp, (supra)

444 For the purposes of Section 443, "complainant" means any person making a complaint, or in relation to any case of which cognizance is taken under clause (b) of Section 190 sub section (1), any person who has given information relating to the commission of the offence within the meaning of Section 154

Definition of 'complainant'

Provided that a Public Prosecutor, a public servant a member, officer or servant of any local authority a railway servant as defined in Section 3 of the Indian Railways Act, 1890, or an officer or servant of any company, association or other body to which the Local Government may, by general or special order published in the local official Gazette, declare the provisions of this section to apply, shall not, by reason only of the fact that he has made a complaint of, or given information of an offence in his capacity as such Public Prosecutor, public servant, railway servant, member, officer or servant, be deemed to be a complainant within the meaning of this section, nor shall a police officer be so deemed by reason only of the fact that a report under Section 173 relating to a case has been made by or through him

This section has been added by the Bill and did not exist in the Report of the Racial Distinctions Committee

Where a public servant (who is a European British subject) makes a complaint under the orders of the Government as a public servant this Chapter does not apply—Emp v Saiyid Zahir 7 P L T 36 , Cr L J 1041

445 (1) Where a Magistrate or a Sessions Judge decides under Section 443 that a case ought to be tried under the provisions of this Chapter and the case is a summons case the Magistrate trying the same shall direct that the case be referred to a Bench of two Magistrates and shall send a copy of such order to the District Magistrate who shall forthwith provide for the constitution of a Bench of two Magistrates of the first class, of whom one shall be an European and the other an Indian, for the trial of the case

Procedure in summons cases

(2) Where the Magistrates constituting the Bench by which a case is tried under this section differ in opinion, the case together with their opinions thereon shall be laid before the Sessions Judge, who may examine any party or recall and examine any witness who has already given evidence in the case, and may call for and take any further evidence, and shall thereafter pass such judgment, sentence or order in the case as he thinks fit and as is according to law

(3) Any person convicted by a Bench under this section shall have the same right of appeal as if he had been convicted by a Magistrate of the first class, and any person convicted by a Sessions Judge under sub section (2) shall have the same right of appeal to the High Court as if he had been convicted by the Sessions Judge at a trial held by the Sessions Judge under this Code

(4) In any case in which it is impracticable to constitute a Bench in accordance with the provisions of sub section (1) in any district, the District Magistrate shall transfer the case for trial by a like Bench to such other district as the High Court may by general or special order direct

(5) Notwithstanding anything contained in this section, the Local Government may by notification in the local official Gazette direct that all summons cases tried under the provisions of this chapter in any district specified in the notification shall be tried as if they were warrant cases in accordance with the provisions hereinafter in this Chapter laid down for the trial of warrant cases

Sub sections (1) to (4) of this section embody the recommendations contained in para 28 of the Racial Distinctions Committee Report

As regards sub section (5) the reason is thus stated by the framers of the Bill The Local Government and High Courts were consulted on these proposals of the Committee (i e as regards the new section 445) from the opinions received it is clear that in many areas in India these proposals will be impracticable and it is considered that in any case the adoption of the procedure proposed for similar warrant cases (sec 446) namely commitment to and trial in a Court of Session by jury would not be more expensive than the proposals of the Committee Accordingly, it is proposed (in analogy with the powers given to Local Governments by sec 269) to permit Local Governments to direct that in particular districts such cases shall be triable according to the provisions laid down for the trial of similar warrant cases —Statement of Objects and Reasons Para

446 (1) Where a Magistrate or a Sessions Judge decides under Section 443 that a case ought to be tried under the provisions of this Chapter and the case is a warrant case the Magistrate inquiring into or trying the case shall, if he does not discharge the accused under Section 209 or Section 253, as the case may be, commit the case for trial to the Court of Session, whether the case is or is not exclusively triable by that Court

(2) Where an accused is committed to the Court of Session under sub section (1), the Court shall proceed to try the case as if the accused had required to be tried in accordance with the provisions of Section 275, and the provisions of that section and the other provisions of Chapter XXIII, so far as they are applicable, shall apply accordingly ·

Provided that where the trial before the Court of Session would in the ordinary course be with the aid of assessors, and the accused, or all of them jointly, require to be tried in accordance with the provisions of Sec 284 A the trial shall be held with the aid of assessors all of whom shall, in the case of European British subjects, be persons who are Europeans or Americans, or, in the case of Indian British subjects, be Indians

This section embodies the recommendation of the Racial Distinctions Committee contained in Para 27 of their Report

1227 Trial to be by jury —When an European British Subject is committed to the Court of Session under the provisions of section 446 (2) the trial must be in accordance with section 275 that is to say the accused must be tried by a jury the majority of whom shall if before the first juror is called and accepted the accused so requires consist of persons who are Europeans or Americans But when the trial before the Court of Session would in the ordinary course be with the aid of assessors the accused has the right under the proviso to sec 446 to be tried with the aid of assessors all of whom shall be of the category within which the accused comes By ordinary course is here meant the course which would be followed in the absence of a claim by the accused to be dealt with under the provisions of Chapter XXXIII or in the absence of a Notification by the Local Government under the provisions of section 269 — Bray v Crown 5 Lah 515 (517 518)

447 If at any stage of an inquiry or trial under this Code it appears to the Magistrate that the case is or might be held to be a case which ought to be tried under the provisions of this Chapter he shall forthwith inform the accused person of his rights under this Chapter

Court to inform accused persons of their rights in certain cases

The omission by the Magistrate to inform the accused of his rights to be tried under this chapter is curable by the provisions of sec 534—Zagriya v Emp 3 Rang . o 4 Bur L J 44

448 For the purpose of the trial in Rangoon of any person under the provisions of this Chapter, references to the Sessions Judge shall be construed as references to the High Court of Judicature at Rangoon

References to Sessions Judge to be construed as references to High Court in Rangoon

Special provisions relating to appeal

449 (1) Where—

(a) a case is tried by jury in a High Court or Court of Session under the provisions of this Chapter or

(b) a case which would otherwise have been tried under the provisions of this Chapter is under this Code committed to or transferred to the High Court and is tried by jury in the High Court, or

(c) a case is tried by jury in the High Court in a Presidency town and the High Court grants leave to appeal on the ground that the case would, if it had been tried outside a presidency town, have been triable under the provisions of this chapter, then, notwithstanding anything contained in Section 418 or Section 423, sub section (2), or in the Letters Patent of any High Court, an appeal may lie to the High Court on a matter of fact as well as on a matter of law

(2) Notwithstanding anything contained in the Letters Patent of any High Court, the Local Government may direct the Public Prosecutor to present an appeal to the High Court from an original order of acquittal passed by the High Court in any such trial as is referred to in sub-section (1)

(3) An appeal under sub section (1) or sub-section (2) shall, where the High Court consists of more than one Judge, be heard by two Judges of the High Court

See Para 7 (b) and (c) of the Statement of Objects and Reasons

1227A. Appeal —Matter of fact matter of law —The accused on appearing before the Magistrate who held the inquiry preliminary to commitment asserted his right to be tried as an European British subject and upon that the Magistrate, being satisfied that he was one passed an order that he was to be dealt with under sec 443 of this Code In the trial before the Sessions Judge the prosecution did not take any steps to have the Magistrate s order set aside but had him charged and tried in the ordinary way On appeal from the conviction held that the appeal lay on a matter of fact as well as on a matter of law under this section and the accused could question the legality of the conviction even though there might not be any foundation for his claim to be tried under this chapter—Singleton v Emp 29 C W N 260 41 C L J 87 26 Cr L J 662

This section lays down that in cases tried by jury an appeal lies to the High Court on a matter of fact as well as on a matter of law; therefore in a case tried under this chapter the finding of a jury on a question of fact is no longer final, according to the present Code and therefore to justify an interference by the High Court under sec 307 the finding of the jury need not be manifestly wrong or perverse—Crown v Bimal Purshad 6 Lah 98 26 P L R 263 26 Cr L J 1241 A I R 1925 Lah 401

Leave to appeal —It is desirable that an application for leave to appeal under clause (c) should be made to the Judge who tried the case The right of appeal depends upon extraneous circumstances which have nothing to do with the guilt of the accused and the trying Judge is better qualified than any one else to decide whether these circumstances exist or not—Martindale v Emp 52 Cal 347 29 C W N 44, 26 Cr L J 401 A I R 1925 Cal 14 But in another Calcutta case it has been held that it is desirable that the application for leave to appeal should be heard by a Division Bench rather than by a Single Judge who tried the case since no appeal would lie against the decision of the Single Judge refusing leave to appeal it is better in the interests of justice that the application should be heard by a Division Bench—Turner v Emp 52 Cal 636 29 C W N 458 41 C L J 325 26 Cr L J 833

Application for leave to appeal should be made with notice to Crown, but once the leave is granted without such notice it cannot be revoked on the ground of want of such notice—Martindale v Emp (supra)

This section gives the right of appeal against the decision of a High Court in three classes of cases The first class are the cases tried by jury in a High Court under the provisions of this chapter and can only apply to High Courts outside a Presidency Town The second class of cases are those which would otherwise be tried under the provisions of this chapter but are under the Code committed or transferred to the High Court and tried by jury in the High Court In these two classes of cases an absolute right of appeal is given But in classes of cases referred to in clause (c) the right of appeal is dependent on the condition of granting of leave to appeal The necessity for the insertion of the condition of granting leave to appeal in clause (c) appears to be due to the fact that in cases which come under clause (b) the question whether Chapter XXXIII is applicable or not has been decided before the case is committed or transferred to the High Court But in cases which come under clause (c) this question has not arisen, and it was necessary for the legislature to provide for a decision of the question This question is to be decided by the High Court before leave to appeal is granted, and if that is decided in accused s favour he is entitled as of right to an appeal —Turner v Emp (supra)

Sections 453, 454 455 and 459 are now re enacted as sections 528A, 528B 528C, and 528D, respectively Sections 456 458 are incorporated in secs 491 and 491A, section 460 is included in section 284A, sub-section (2), Section 462 is now merged in section 326 The remaining sections (450 451, 452, 461) are omitted

1227B. Under the old Code, a European British subject had a right to claim to be tried by jury that right was a substantive right and not a mere matter of procedure, and therefore where the commitment was made prior to the coming into force of the new Code of 1923, but the trial in the Sessions Court was held after its coming into force, held that the accused's right to be tried by jury was not lost, and he was not to be tried by the Judge with the aid of assessors—Emp v Fitzmaurice, 6 Lah 262, 26 P L R 415 27 Cr L J 421

CHAPTER XXXIV.

LUNATICS.

464. (1) When a Magistrate holding an inquiry or a trial has reason to believe that the accused is of unsound mind and consequently incapable of making his defence, the Magistrate shall inquire into the fact of such unsoundness, and shall cause such person to be examined by the Civil Surgeon of the district or such other medical officer as the Local Government directs, and thereupon shall examine such Surgeon or other officer as a witness, and shall reduce the examination to writing.

Procedure in case of accused being lunatic.

(1A) Pending such examination and inquiry the Magistrate may deal with the accused in accordance with the provisions of Section 466.

(2) If such Magistrate is of opinion that the accused is of unsound mind and consequently incapable of making his defence, he shall record a finding to that effect and shall postpone further proceedings in the case.

Change :—Sub-section (1A) and the italicised words in sub-section (2) have been added by sec. 120 of the Cr. P Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 "The first amendment is consequential on the amendment in section 466 The second requires the Magistrate to record a finding if he is of opinion that the accused is of unsound mind and in capable of making a defence"—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914).

1228. Application of section :—The provisions of this Chapter are incidental provisions for dealing with exceptional classes of persons This Chapter is not to be so construed as to override the rules of general procedure, except in so far as the special provision contained in it is clearly incompatible with the general provisions—1894 P. R 11. When a charge of an offence to which Chapter XVIII applies is made before a Magistrate, he ought in the first place to make an inquiry into the truth of the charge, it is only when he is satisfied after such inquiry that there is a prima facie case against the accused that he can make the inquiry prescribed by this section into the question of the unsoundness of mind of the accused person—Ibid

The question involved in this section is whether the accused is of unsound mind at the time of the trial, and therefore incapable of making his defence ; and this question should not be confused with the question raised under sec. 84 of the Indian Penal Code as to whether the accused was or was not of unsound mind at the time when he committed the offence with which he is charged—1900 A W. N 47 The question whether the accused was of unsound mind at the time of the alleged offence is an entirely separate one to be inquired into in an entirely separate manner (see secs 469-471)—Santokh v. Emp, 7 Lah 315, 27 Cr. L J. 552 When an issue is raised as to the soundness of the mind of the accused person, the Court is bound to inquire, before it begins to record evidence, whether the accused is or is not incapacitated by unsoundness of mind from making his defence If it fails to do so, the subsequent inquiry about the soundness or unsoundness of mind does not cure the defect—42 All 137.

Examination by Civil Surgeon —A Magistrate cannot consign a lunatic to an asylum or jail on his own unprofessional opinion He must have before him the deliberate statements of the Medical Officer reduced into writing—1 Bur L. R 87

A mere certificate of a Medical Officer of the District that the prisoner is of unsound mind and incapable of making his defence is not sufficient evidence of the prisoner's insanity The Medical Officer should be called as a witness and carefully examined—3 W R 23 2 Weir 580

When the evidence of the Medical Officer cannot be considered as decisive on the point of the prisoner's state of mind evidence must be let in regarding his ordinary habits and behaviour and his demeanour both before and after the commission of the alleged offence—5 Cal 826

Postponement of further proceedings —Where the Magistrate is of opinion that the accused is of unsound mind and therefore incapable of making his defence he cannot try the accused—2 Weir 581 Nor can he legally acquit him But he is bound to postpone further proceedings in the case and either release him on security or detain him in custody and report the case to the Government (sec 466)—2 Weir 581 10 W R 37 1882 A W N 106 1900 A W N 47 1 W R 11 If on examination the accused person appears to be insane and unable to understand questions and to return intelligible replies the Magistrate should act under secs 464 and 466 of the Code and not under Section 341—Ratanlal 832

465 (1) If any person committed for trial before a Court of Session or a High Court appears to the Court at his trial to be of unsound mind and consequently incapable of making his defence, the jury or the Court with the aid of assessors, shall, in the first instance, try the fact of such unsoundness and incapacity, and if the jury or Court, as the case may be, is satisfied of the fact, the Judge shall record a finding to that effect and shall postpone further proceedings in the case and the jury if any shall be discharged

Procedure in case of person committed before Court of Session or High Court being lunatic

(2) The trial of the fact of the unsoundness of mind and incapacity of the accused shall be deemed to be part of his trial before the Court

Change —The italicised words at the end of sub section (1) have been added by section 121 of Cr P C Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 This amendment provides for the discharge of the jury in the event of the Court of Session or the High Court being satisfied that the accused is of unsound mind and incapable of making his defence —Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914)

1229 Fact of insanity must be tried —The provisions of this section are mandatory and their non-compliance vitiates the trial. Where a Sessions Judge's mind is in doubt as to the mental state of the accused at the time of trial it is incumbent upon him to hold an inquiry on the question whether the accused is capable of making his defence when he comes before him on commitment and to take the opinion of the assessors on that question and to come to a decision before proceeding further with the trial—Santokh v Emp 7 Lah 315 27 Cr L J 552

The question of unsoundness of mind must be tried by the Judge and jury, and not by the Judge himself personally—19 W R 15 Where after a trial has been once adjourned on account of the prisoner's insanity the Zillah Surgeon reports that the prisoner is capable of making his defence, the Judge should find with the aid of assessors whether the prisoner is capable of making his defence and cannot act merely on the letter of the Zillah Surgeon—2 Weir 582

Again, the question of the unsoundness of mind must be tried in the first instance The issue as to the unsoundness of mind of the accused is a preliminary issue and must be submitted to the jury first before proceeding with the trial—19 W R 26, 42 All 137 Where in the course of his examination under sec 364 the accused said that he was not in his senses when he tried to rob it was held that the Court of Session should have acted under this section and tried the fact whether on the date the accused was called upon to plead he was or was not of unsound mind and capable or incapable of making his defence—Jagdeo v Emp 15 A L J 239 When the accused committed to the Sessions appears to be of unsound mind, the Sessions Judge is bound to try the fact of insanity first and should not try it along with the trial for the offence—1905 A W N 2

If in a case committed to the Sessions objection is taken on behalf of the accused that he is of unsound mind and the Civil Surgeon when examined as a witness on behalf of the accused states that the accused is a person of unsound mind and therefore not in a fit state to understand the proceedings and to stand his trial the onus lies on the prosecution to prove that the accused is of sound mind In such a case it is imporper for the Sessions Judge to charge the jury that it is for the defence to satisfy the Court that he is of unsound mind But such a charge to the jury, though improper, does not amount to a misdirection so as to make the verdict of the jury on this point unacceptable specially if the verdict is unanimous—Shib Das v Emp, 51 Cal 584 (586 587)

In a trial at the Sessions if a plea is taken on the prisoner's behalf under this Section, that he is of unsound mind and incapable of making his defence it is for the Crown to establish the soundness and capacity of the accused The inquiry as to the soundness or unsoundness of the mind of the accused is a preliminary inquiry which is conducted for the satisfaction of the Court, and in that view the prosecution ought to commence and give their evidence—Emp v Gopi Mohan Saha 51 Cal 827 (828) (Day Murder Case) 26 Cr L J 276

Where a Court entertains doubts as to the sanity of the accused the Court should not merely put questions to the accused but should try the fact of such unsoundness of mind by examining the Civil Surgeon or some other Medical Officer and by taking such evidence as might have been procurable from the village at which the accused resides with the view of ascertaining whether the accused had at any time prior to the commission of the crime exhibited symptoms of sanity—1 B H C R

Where the Sessions Judge did not comply with the provisions of this section but convicted the accused, held that the trial was vitiated, and the High Court set aside the conviction and ordered the Sessions Judge to hold an inquiry under this Section before retrial on the charge—Pala Singh v K E, 1905 P R 54, 3 Cr L J 80 Santokh v Emp, 7 Lah 315 27 Cr L J 552 Where on a reference for confirmation of a sentence of death, the High Court entertained doubts as to the accused's sanity, the case would be referred to the Sessions Judge for further inquiry—2 W R 33

1230. Postponement of trial —Where the prisoner is found to be insane, the Sessions Judge should postpone the trial and proceed under sections 466 and 467, instead of proceeding with the trial and acquitting the accused—9 W R 23 1 W R 11 3 W R 70 3 W R 57

A Sessions Judge has no power to stay proceedings and direct an inquiry to be made into the state of the accused s mind where it appears to him problematic whether the accused is capable of making his defence The proper procedure to be followed is that prescribed by Secs 465 and 466—2 Weir 582

1231. Sub-section (2) —The preliminary inquiry held under this section is not a trial in the sense of ascertaining whether the accused is guilty or not of the offence charged—3 P L J 291

466 (1) Whenever an accused person is found to be of unsound mind and incapable of making his defence, the Magistrate or Court as the case may be, whether the case is one in which bail may be taken or not, may release him on sufficient security being given that he shall be properly taken care of and shall be prevented from doing injury to himself or to any other person, and for his appearance when required before the Magistrate or Court or such officer as the Magistrate or Court appoints in this behalf.

Provided that no order for the detention of the accused in a lunatic asylum shall be made otherwise than in accordance with such rules as the Local Government may have made under the Indian Lunacy Act, 1912.

Change.—This section has been amended as shown by the italicised words by Sec 122 of the Cr P C Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 This section is so amended as to allow bail to be granted at the discretion of the Court, in any case in which the accused is a lunatic and the amendment also permits the accused to be kept in custody The object in view is to delegate the power of the Local Government, and to do away with the existing distinction in procedure between bailable and non bailable cases —Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914)

When the accused is confined in a lunatic asylum or jail or some other place of safe custody according to the order of the Government the Magistrate s power over the accused ceases from such confinement and he cannot release him on security later on He can deal with the accused only if the accused is sent back to him under sec 473 on a certificate that the accused is capable of making his defence—2 Cal 356 But under the present section as amended the Court itself will have power to detain the insane accused in a place of safe custody, and in such a case it will not cease to have control over the accused, but will be able to release him afterwards on sufficient security being given

Resumption of inquiry or trial

467. (1) Whenever an inquiry or a trial is postponed under Section 464 or Section 465, the Magistrate or Court, as the case may be, may, at any time, resume the inquiry or trial and require the accused to appear or be brought before such Magistrate or Court

(2) When the accused has been released under S 466, and the sureties for his appearance produce him to the officer whom the Magistrate or Court appoints in this behalf, the certificate of such officer that the accused is capable of making his defence shall be receivable in evidence

A Magistrate can commit an accused to the Sessions, whom he finds to be sane at the time of the preliminary investigation although at the time of committing the offence he was insane—9 W R 23

Whenever a Magistrate acting under this section shall send for trial before the Court of Session an accused person regarding whose sanity at the time of committing the offence he entertains any doubt he shall at the same time inform the jail authorities of the supposed state of the accused, in order that he may be placed under careful surveillance prior to his trial before the Court of Session—Bom H C Cr Cir p 18

Presumption —The law presumes every person who has attained the age of discretion to be sane unless the contrary is proved and where a lunatic has lucid intervals the law presumes the offence to have been committed during such interval unless it is proved that the act was committed during mental derangement —Ratanlal 172

470 Whenever any person is acquitted upon the ground that, at the time at which he is alleged to have committed an offence, he was, by reason of unsoundness of mind, incapable of knowing the nature of the act alleged as constituting the offence, or that it was wrong or contrary to law, the finding shall state specifically whether he committed the act or not

(2) The Local Government may empower the officer in charge of the jail in which a person is confined under the provisions of Section 466 or this section, to discharge all or any of the functions of the Inspector General of Prisons under Section 473 or Section 474

1234 Change —The word finding has been substituted for the word judgment and the word detained for the word kept the words and shall report the action taken to the Local Government and the proviso have been newly added by sec 124 of the Cr P C Amendment Act XVIII of 1923

Previously the words at the end of sub section (1) were and shall report the case for the orders of the Local Government so that the Court could not itself send the accused to a lunatic asylum or jail but had to report the case to the Local Government and the latter gave orders for sending the accused to an asylum or jail See 43 Bom 134 But those words have been omitted by the Repealing and Amending Act X of 1914 and its effect is that Magistrates and Courts are no longer required to report cases for the order of the Local Government but are themselves competent to direct the detention of the accused in an asylum or jail or some other place prescribed for the reception of criminal lunatics—Emp v Nga 8 L B R 290 Emp v Maiku, 22 O C 269 But it does not deprive the power of the Government to detain the accused in some other place of custody, under the provisions of the Indian Lunacy Act (IV of 1912) The Government have powers inspite of this section, to decide the future fate of the lunatic—Emp v Imam Hasan, 25 Bom L R 286 26 Cr L J 348

1235. Application of section —This section should be appl not only where the accused are insane persons but also where accused persons though not insane, labour under defects which render their trial impossible In such cases they should be treated as insane persons and confined during the King's pleasure in accordance with English practice—1889 P R 37 Thus where a deaf and dumb person who is unable to understand the proceedings of the trial is found guilty of murder the proper course to be taken is to treat him as a lunatic and to proceed under section 471—Crown v Dost Mahammad 1911 P R 13 This section does not compel the Court to send the accused to the lunatic asylum all that is necessary is to see that such safe guards are taken as would keep him from mischief—In re Malanmad 42 M L J 72

Where the Court below while acquitting an accused on the ground of insanity omitted to pass orders under section 471 the High Court in revision can pass the necessary orders The passing of an order under sec 471 by the High Court after an acquittal by the Court below does not amount to an alteration of a finding of acquittal into one of conviction within the meaning of sec 439 (4)—42 M L J 72

If a person is acquitted under section 470 he ought not to be made over to his relatives for safe custody but should be detained in custody under this section—. Weir 580 But the Local Government can deliver the lunatic to the custody of his relatives under sec 475

without danger of his doing injury to himself or to any other person, the Local Government may thereupon order him to be released or to be detained in custody, or to be transferred to a public lunatic asylum if he has not been already sent to such an asylum and in case it orders him to be transferred to an asylum, may appoint a Commission, consisting of a judicial and two medical officers

(2) Such Commission shall make formal inquiry into the state of mind of such person, taking such evidence as is necessary, and shall report to the Local Government, which may order his release or detention as it thinks fit

The word detained has been substituted for confined and the word released for discharged by sec 126 of the Cr P C Amendment Act XVIII of 1923

475 (1) Whenever any relative or friend of any person detained under the provisions of Section 466 or Section 471 desires that he shall be delivered to his care and custody, the Local Government may, upon the application of such relative or friend and on his giving security to the satisfaction of such Local Government that the person delivered shall

PROCEEDINGS IN CASE OF CERTAIN OFFENCES AFFECTING THE ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

476 (1) When any Civil, Criminal or Revenue Court is of opinion that there is ground for inquiring into any offence referred to in Section 195 and committed before it or brought under its notice in the course of a judicial proceeding, such Court, after making any preliminary inquiry that may be necessary, may send the case for inquiry or trial to the nearest Magistrate of the first class and may send the accused

(3) Where it is brought to the notice of such Magistrate, or any other Magistrate to whom the case may have been transferred, that an appeal is pending against the decision arrived at in the judicial proceeding out of which the matter has arisen, he may, if he thinks fit, at any stage adjourn the hearing of the case until such appeal is decided.

Change —The whole section has been redrafted by section 128 of the Cr P C Amendment Act XVIII of 1923, but no important change has been introduced Sub-section (3) is new. "The changes that we have made are not of great importance We have provided that a Court can act on application made to it or suo motu and after such preliminary inquiry, if any, as it thinks necessary For the words 'committed before it or brought under its notice in the course of a judicial proceeding' we have substituted the phraseology used in clause (b) of section 195. We have substituted 'may make a complaint" for 'shall make a complaint" and, in view of the criticism of the words 'nearest first class Magistrate" we have provided that a complaint should be sent to a first-class Magistrate having jurisdiction In order to give effect to our decision that proceedings under section 476, etc, should be subject to revision, we have introduced words which will make it necessary for the Court to record an order.' —Report of the Joint Committee (1922) The proviso to sub-section (1) has been added recently by the Cr P Code Amendment Act II of 1926 For reasons, see Note 1240 From the third para of sub-section (1) the word 'Chief' has been omitted by the same Amendment Act : for reason of this omission see Note 1250

1236 Object and scope of Section —It is easy to imagine the inconvenience which might be caused if a Munsiff or a Subordinate Judge or a Judge were to appear before a Magistrate and make a complaint on oath in order to lay the foundation for a prosecution, and this section has been enacted to obviate the difficulty The Legislature thought it desirable that the procedure to be followed in cases of complaint by a Court should be different from that which has to be observed by an ordinary complainant—7 All 871 Under Section 195, it is open to the Court, before which the offence was committed, to prefer a complaint for the prosecution of the offender ; and sec. 476 prescribes the procedure as to how that complaint may be preferred—In re Lakshmidas, 32 Bom 184, 31 Mad. 140, 32 Mad 49, 7 All 871 The language of this section indicates that when a Court is acting under sec 195 a complaint in the strict sense of the Code is not required, and the procedure herein laid down constitutes the complaint mentioned in sec. 195 ante—7 All 871 The order of a Court under sec. 476 is in the nature of a complaint under sec. 195—9 C P L R. 26. Proceedings taken by a Court under this section operate of themselves to set a prosecution in motion without the necessity of any other complaint, the Court itself being the complainant—2 Weir 589

The words in sub-section (2) of this section and as if upon complaint made and recorded under sec 200, have been introduced into the Code in 1898 in order to give legislative effect to the Full Bench ruling in 7 All 871 in which it was held that the order of the Court under this section was a complaint within the meaning of sec 195—26 All 249 That one of the functions of sec 476 is to provide the machinery by which a Court is enabled without inconvenience to make a complaint is made very clear by these words introduced in the present section—31 Mad 140 (per Miller J) Under sub section (1) as now amended the Court will have to frame a complaint in writing

1237. Section 476 is supplementary to sec 195 —The words 'offences referred to in sec 195 mean not merely the offences covered by the sections of the I P C mentioned in section 195 but they mean the offences covered by those sections and committed under the qualifying circumstances mentioned in section 195 That is section 476 must be read along with section 195 and the qualifications mentioned in sec 195 are to be treated as incorporated in the provisions of section 476—19 Cr L J 638 (Cal) Govinda Iyer v Emp, 42 Mad 540 Thus an offence under sec 467 I P C does not come within the purview of section 195 unless it is committed by a party to the proceeding and therefore a Court is not competent to pass an order under sec 476 directing the prosecution of a person who is not a party to the proceedings for an offence under sec 467 I P C —Ramalingam v Subramayya 40 Mad 100 18 M L T 488 191, P R 10 [Nor is a complaint under this section necessary in order to proceed against such person—21 C W N 950] So also where certain documents were put in Court in a pending suit but not given in evidence, the Court was not competent to order the prosecution of the party who had put in the documents, for forgery—Abdul Khadir v Meera Saheb, 15 Mad 224, 1895 A W N 145 1920 P L R 3

But a different view has been taken in the following cases Thus in 32 Mad 49 Sankaran Nair J held that section 476 must be construed as entirely self contained and the power given to the Court under this Chapter to take action regarding the offences specified in sec 195 is not restricted by the qualifying circumstances mentioned in sec 195 And therefore it is competent to a Court to order prosecution for forgery of a person who was not a party to the proceeding in Court—In re Devaji, 18 Bom 581 In re Keshav 14 Bom L R 968 20 Cr L J 630 (Pat), 24 O C 367 It is competent to a Court to proceed under sec 476 against a party who has filed a forged document, whether such document has been actually given in evidence or not—1897 P R 12, Akhil Chandra v Q E, 22 Cal 1004 The words referred to in sec 195 are merely words descriptive of the class of offences with which a particular Court can deal They do not mean that sec 195 governs sec 476 to any extent other than this—Emp v Khushali, 40 All 116, Ganga Ram v Emp, 40 All 24, Narayanshaligram v Emp, 20 Cr L J 426 (P

Section 476 is a self contained section and the reference made to section 195 is only for the purpose of avoiding the enumeration of the sections of the Penal Code mentioned in section 195—Raj Kumar v. K. E. 1 P. L. J. 293

But the intention of the Legislature in making the present amendments is to make this section not independent of but supplementary to section 195. In submitting the Report of the Joint Committee to the Council of State in September 19 the Hon'ble Mr M said "One of the most weighty changes introduced by this measure (i.e. the Amendment Bill) is in respect of prosecutions for offences committed before or in relation to proceedings of the Court. A glance at any commentary on the Code will give some indication of the difficulties that have arisen in putting sections 195 and 476 into operation. After a long and careful thought Government have decided on a line of action which I may say has met with general approval. The two sections as they stand (under the old Code) provide an alternative procedure for the Courts in dealing with them. Sanction is given to proceedings under section 195 or action is directed by the Courts under section 476. The sanction proceedings are now omitted and the provisions of 476 in future supplement each other. Section 195 will contain the prohibition of prosecution except upon complaint by the Court. Section 476 will lay down the procedure to be followed. It has been suggested that it will be better to bring the two sections together. That is a matter to be considered when the consolidation of the Code will be undertaken."—Council of State Debates September 1923. See also Daurvi v. Mahadi 4 A. L. J. 1 (Cr L. J. 1 o

The recent amendments in sections 195 and 476 have resulted in connecting the two sections more closely together. Section 476 gives the Court power with respect to any offence referred to in section 195. The offence referred to in section 195 (c) is not merely an offence under certain sections but such an offence when committed by a party to the proceeding—per Brown J in C. T. Garasamy v. D. K. S. Ebrahim ... 374 (381, 38) 6 Cr L. J 95. By the recent amendment of the Cr P Code the words offence referred to in section 195 (c) in section 476 must be read in conjunction with the wording of section 195 (c). The only offence which section 195 (c) bars from the cognizance of the Magistrate without a complaint by the Courts is when such offence is alleged to have been committed by a party to any proceeding before the Court and it is not right to divorce these words or take only a part of the section in endeavouring to discover what the offence referred to in section 195 is —per Robinson C. J in Ibid (page 380). Therefore the Court has jurisdiction to file a complaint only against parties to the suit—Kasi Pae v. Ma Me Hmoke 3 Rang 49 3 Bur L. J 344 26 Cr L. J 500. So also where there is no evidence to suggest that a forged document was produced or given in evidence in a Court a complaint under section 476 Cr P Code by the Court is not justified—Bak ruddin v. Emp ... W N 880.

Power after transfer —A Magistrate who after trying a case has been transferred from the charge of the particular Court in which the case was tried to some other duty in the same district is not competent to make an order under this section in respect of a case which he tried as the presiding officer of that Court—Chunni Lal v Harlars 1 A L J 315 Emp v Baldeo 46 All 851 (854) In such an event the only officer who can order the prosecution is his successor in-office in that Court—46 All 851 (855) A Joint Magistrate after dismissing the complaint in a case became the District Magistrate, and then ordered the prosecution of the complainant for perjury under section 193 I P C It was held that the order of the Joint Magistrate as a District Magistrate was bad and should be set aside—Mallu Khan v K E, 1 A L J 355

But where a case has been transferred from one Court to another Court after it has been partly heard by the first Court, the second Court is not deprived of its jurisdiction to take proceedings against a witness in respect of a perjury committed before it nor is that jurisdiction taken away by the circumstance that the second Court may have formed a different view as to the veracity of the witness—44 All 645. But where a criminal case is transferred from the Court of one Magistrate to that of another and the second Magistrate dismisses the complaint under section it is the second Magistrate who can take action under section 476 for prosecution of the complainant for the offence under section 211 I P Code the Magistrate in whose Court the complaint was originally filed is not competent to proceed under sec 476 ... v Emp 53 Cal 4 ... 0 C W N 504 ... Moreover the new section 559 (as amended in 1923) expressly lays down that all powers of a Judge or Magistrate may be exercised by his successor in-office second para (newly added) of sub-section (1)

A High Court sitting to exercise the revisional powers under this Code can lay a complaint under section 476—Emp. v Syed Khan 3 Rang 303, 27 Cr L J 4

The proviso newly added in 1926 lays down that a complaint by a High Court need not be signed by the Judge himself but may be signed by an officer of the Court The Lahore High Court has represented that it is a needless waste of time of the Judges of a High Court that they should be required to sign all complaints under section 476 The proposed change enables any officer of such a Court whom the Court may appoint to sign the complaint —Statement of Objects and Reasons (Gazette of India, 1925, Part V, p 215)

The procedure of the new section 476 in its application to the High Court is open to serious objections It is hardly consistent with the dignity of a Judge of the High Court that he should have to make and sign a complaint which is to be inquired into by one of his subordinates of sec 200 Nor is it fair to the accused that he should be arraigned in a case which has been instituted on a complaint made by a Judge of the highest tribunal and is to be tried by a judicial officer who is subordinate to the complainant There can be little doubt that by reason of the circumstance that the complaint has been preferred by a Judge of the High Court, the accused person is likely to entertain an apprehension, not altogether without justification that his conviction is a foregone conclusion—Emp v Qadir Baksh, 6 Lah 34 26 P L R 158, 27 Cr L J 98, A I R 1925 Lah 312 The proviso has been added probably in deference to these remarks But it is curious to note that the Statement of Objects and Reasons (cited above) assigns a different reason for the addition of the proviso and makes no mention of the 'dignity' of the Judge of a High Court

A Judge of the High Court can grant a direction to prosecute, under sec 476, although the matter out of which the action arose was heard by another Judge of the Court, because any Judge of the High Court has power to exercise the powers of the High Court, But as a matter convenience the prosecution must be directed by the same Judge, unless it becomes impracticable by reason of that Judge ceasing to hold office—Bai Kasturbai v Vanmalidas, 49 Bom 710, 27 Bom L R 616, 26 Cr L J 1189.

1241. Duty of Court —The power given by this section should be exercised with care and due consideration It is not in every instance in which a party fails to prove his case that the Judge who has decided against him is justified in exercising the powers conferred by this section. Judges should bear in ... suggested by successfu... suit, and they should ... tions too readily The Judges should also recollect that when they proceed under this section, the responsibility for the prosecution rests upon them entirely—1 Cal 450 Where a Civil Court institutes a criminal prosecution of its own motion under this section, it should see that there is a ground for inquiry—2 Weir 587 The order should disclose a reasonably well-founded and deliberate judicial opinion that there was ground for inquiry, and the power given by this section should be used with care and consideration—1901 A W N 177 There must be a reasonable probability of conviction, because without that there could be no ground for another Magistrate to waste his time in holding the inquiry—31 M L J 410, 9 N L R 184, 24 Cr L J 823 There must be a reasonable foundation for the charge in respect of which prosecution is directed, before the criminal law is set in motion—Jadu Nandan v. Emp, 37 Cal 250 14 C. W N 330, and it would be an abuse of the powers vested in a Court of Justice if a complaint were made by it on the principle that though the conviction of the party complained against is a mere possibility, still it is desirable that the matter should be thrashed out, so that it may be decided whether or not an offence has been committed—Ibid The Madras High Court holds that it is not the duty of the Court to see that there is a reasonable probability of the prosecution ending in a conviction though the Court acting under this section should not act capriciously or without proper grounds—Seshamma v Venkamma, 22 L W 863 27 Cr L J 280

Before a Court is justified in making an order under this section directing the prosecution of any person, there must be some direct evidence fixing ... in ... inq ... some sort of suspicion that these persons have been guilty of an offence but there must be distinct evidence of the commission of an offence by such persons—16 Cal 730, 21 Cr L J 601 (Lah) On the other hand, it is not necessary for the purpose of a prosecution under this section that the Court should go minutely into the evidence recorded in the suit It is sufficient if that evidence discloses a reasonable foundation for a criminal charge—2 Weir 587 ... Court orders a prosecution, ... that the accused cann...

184 Under sections 195 and 476, all that a Court has to see is that a prima facie case has been made out upon the evidence before it for inquiring further into the question whether any of the offences punishable as set out in section 195 has or has not been made out—13 A L J 1111 (dissenting on this point from 37 Cal 13 and 37 Cal 250) and the authority which is called upon to take action under section 476 need not and should not decide the question of the guilt or innocence of the party against whom proceedings are to be instituted—37 Cal 250 Moreover, the Court taking action under this section must be prima facie satisfied that the offence has been committed by some definite individual or individuals against whom proceedings in the Criminal Court are to be taken —23 Cal 532 It must come to a finding as to which of the individuals sent for trial has committed the offence—2 Lah L J 63 Where a District Judge being of opinion that the forgery of a document produced before him was committed either by the plaintiff or by the defendant, sent both of them to a first class Magistrate so that the guilty party might be proceeded against it was held that the order was illegal and must be set aside in revision—1905 P L R 163

Is of opinion —The opinion must be the opinion of the Court taking action under this section the Court must form its own opinion and should not take opinion from others Where the High Court directed the Sessions Judge to take action under this section held that it was the duty of the Sessions Judge to apply his mind to the matter on the merits and then only decide whether a prosecution was necessary or not—Ghaisam v Emp 21 A L J 930 Where a Munsiff in making an order under this section purported to act not of his own accord but at the direction of the District Judge it was held that the order of the Munsiff was bad in as much as it was only nominally his while the opinion was the opinion of the District Judge—6 A L J 924 Contra—In 20 Cr L J 274 (Pat) it was held that the proceedings were not vitiated by the mere fact that the District Judge had directed the Munsiff to institute the proceedings

1242 Power to take action in a pending case or appeal —Proceedings under this section should not be taken until after the close of the case in which the false evidence was given or forged document was used as genuine etc Thus it is not competent for a Magistrate to order the prosecution of a witness for perjury while the proceedings in which the witness has given his deposition are pending before him—4 Bom L R 778 21 Cr L J 29 (L B) Kalu v Tukaram 20 Cr L J 1350 (Nag) Such a hasty proceeding as placing a witness on his trial as an accused immediately after he has given his evidence is bad because the necessary result of such a step would be to intimidate subsequent witnesses and defeat the object of the trial—9 S L R 176 Ratanlal 477, 8 B H C R 126, 21 Cr L J 29 But of course it is not illegal to take action under this section during the pendency of the suit or proceeding in which the offence has been committed The Court is not bound to wait until the substantive proceedings are over before it can initiate an action under this section and its failure to do so does not constitute any material irregularity in the exercise of its jurisdiction—

K E v Lextanna, 31 M L J 440 (F B) If there is a clear ... disposal of the suit in which the offence has been committed ... reason why the Court should delay proceedings under this section ... the suit is disposed of which disposal may not occur ... years later—In re Perumal a, 44 M L J 74

Since an appeal is a continuation of the trial, proceedings ... section should not be taken during the pendency of the appeal ... case in which the petitioner is alleged to have given false evidence ... produced a fabricated document—3 C L J ... 16 ... 1910 P R ..., Harnam Singh v Emp 7 Lah L J ... 1160 The new sub-section (3) now provides that if a proceeding ... already been taken it may be adjourned till the decision of the appeal

1243 Offences covered by this Section —Under the old law offences which fell under this section were those which were committed before the Court or were brought to its notice in the course of a judicial proceeding The wording of the present section is now changed

Where an affidavit containing a false statement was filed by a person before a Munsarim of Court, it was held under the old section that the Judge could not direct the prosecution of that person because the ... of perjury was not committed before the Judge himself—15 L L J ... But this is no longer correct and the above case would be covered by the present section which contemplates an offence committed ... to a proceeding in the Court The old section was wide enough to enable a Court to take action in respect of an offence committed in another ... (even in another province) and on some previous occasion, provided it was brought to the notice of the Court in the course of a judicial proceeding—6 A L J 92 40 All 110, 1 P L J ... Where a person gave false evidence before the committing Magistrate, and that evidence on account of his inability to attend the Sessions Court owing to illness, was read out as evidence at the Sessions trial, the Sessions Judge would be competent to direct the prosecution of that person for giving false evidence—1916 P R ... Where the offence is not committed in or in relation to a proceeding in Court this section does not apply Thus if a false complaint is made to the Police a Court cannot direct prosecution—Nar Bisk re v Emp 5 P L T 500

Proceedings which are irregular or illegal or without jurisdiction not proceedings under this section, and therefore no order for prosecution can be passed in such proceedings. Thus, where the order of a Magistrate, before whom a complaint was preferred, in making over the complaint to a Subordinate Magistrate for inquiry and disposal of the case was bad in law, the order of the Subordinate Magistrate under sec. 476 for the prosecution of the complainant passed after such inquiry would be illegal—18 C W N 95 See also 16 C. Where the complainant did not desire to take further proceedings and applied to withdraw the complaint, the Magistrate was not competent to order under this section the prosecution of the complainant under sec. 211 I. Where necessary —Where a Magistrate dismissed a complaint without calling evidence he should make an inquiry before charging the complainant with the offence of making a false charge—16 W R 44 Where a Subordinate Judge acting upon the report of a bailiff ordered the prosecution of persons who obstructed him in executing a warrant of attachment, without making an inquiry of his own it was held that the Subordinate Judge would have done well if he had complied with the requirements of this section—Ratanlal 701 Where in a civil suit settled without any evidence being gone into by confession of judgment the Court had grounds for supposing that an offence of false personation under sec 205 I P C had been committed before it the Court before directing a prosecution would be competent to hold a preliminary inquiry to satisfy itself whether a prima facie case has been made out for directing the prosecution—19 Cal 345 The Court directed the prosecution of a person under sec 174 I P C for the disobedience of summons to attend the Court and give evidence, and that person appeared and denied the service of summons on him held that before prosecution a preliminary inquiry should be held as to the service of summons, and the said person should be given an opportunity to cross examine the persons who had deposed to the service of summons on him—19 A L J 50

Who can hold the inquiry —The preliminary inquiry must be conducted by the officer who directs prosecution under this section and cannot be delegated to any other officer—20 Cr L J 243 (Pat)

This section contemplates that it is for the complaining Court to make any inquiry that is necessary, and then to make a complaint This section does not contemplate that the Court should send the case to a Magistrate for inquiry and the Magistrate should make the inquiry and prosecute if he is satisfied that the offence has been committed It is the complaining Court that must be satisfied that there is a prima facie case against the person sent to the Magistrate Therefore an order forwarding to the District Magistrate proceedings taken against the accused persons and requesting him to hold an inquiry with a view to the prosecution of those persons is bad in law—Chamari v Public Prosecutor, 4 Pat 4 6 P L T 225 26 Cr L J 170

1249 Effect of reversal of the order directing prosecution — If an order under section 476 (1) directing an inquiry by a Mags

trate of the First Class is set aside it is just and proper that proceedings under sub-section (2) before that Magistrate must also cease, the Magistrate cannot proceed with the inquiry any further—6 L B R 49 Thus where in a suit on a registered bond alleged to have been executed by the defendant the Munsiff held that the bond was genuine, and directed the prosecution of the defendant who had denied the execution of the bond for an offence under section 193 I P C and sent the defendant to the nearest First Class Magistrate to be tried for the offence but on appeal the judgment of the Munsiff was reversed by the Sub-Judge who held that the bond was not genuine and that the defendant had not executed it it was held that the result of the judgment of the Appellate Court must be taken to be that the order for the prosecution of the defendant was not maintainable and that the inquiry into the case of the defendant by the First Class Magistrate must be stopped and should proceed no further, and that if the defendant had been convicted by the Magistrate the conviction would be set aside by the High Court although the defendant did not move the High Court to quash the proceeding taken against him—12 C W N 1 But where a Magistrate dismissed a complaint and directed the prosecution of the complainant under this section and the Sessions Judge directed further inquiry setting aside the order of dismissal but passed no order in respect of the order of prosecution it was held that the order of prosecution remained good until it was quashed and the Magistrate to whom the case was sent was competent to continue the inquiry—21 M L J 795 If an order directing prosecution is set aside by the High Court as not being in proper form it does not debar the Court from instituting fresh proceedings by making a complaint in proper form—Durj dhan v Emp, 52 Cal 666 26 Cr L J 1439

1250 First Class Magistrate.—Under the old section the Court before which an offence was committed had to send the case for inquiry or trial to the nearest First Class Magistrate, and it was not necessary that such Magistrate should be a Magistrate having jurisdiction over the offence The order making the transfer was of itself sufficient to confer jurisdiction on such Magistrate—16 Mad 461, 20 Cr L J 202 (Pat) The power to send the case to the nearest Magistrate of the First Class was quite irrespective of the local jurisdiction of the Magistrate to whom the offender was forwarded section 177 in no way curtailed the power under this section—Ratanlal 88 See also 43 Cal 542 where the High Court sent the case to the nearest first class Magistrate who had no local jurisdiction over the case But in a Sind case however, it was held that the word nearest' was merely directory, it did not confer jurisdiction, and the Magistrate to whom an accused had to be sent under this section must be a Magistrate having local jurisdiction over the offence—1 S L R 84 To remove this conflict of opinion, it has now been expressly laid down that the Magistrate to whom the accused is to be sent must be a Magistrate having jurisdiction, thus adopting the view of the Sind case

If a High Court or Chief Presidency Magistrate takes action under this section he shall send the case to a Presidency Magistrate, see p 3 of sub-section (1) In this para, as originally framed by the Amend

Act of 1923, the words were "Chief Presidency Magistrate" but the word 'Chief' has been omitted by the Cr P C Amendment Act II of 1926 "This amendment proposes to make all Presidency Magistrates Magistrates of the first class for the purpose of section 476 (1) At present, if a Chief Presi- dency Magistrate wishes to take action, it is necessary for him to send the case to the first class Magistrate outside the Presidency town, because the other Presidency Magistrates are not first class Magistrates for the purpose of this section"—Statement of Objects and Reasons (Gazette of India, 1925, Part V, page 215) Such a difficulty arose in the case of Emp. v. Mackay, 53 Cal 350 (F B), 30 C W. N 276, 27 Cr L J 385 In this case the accused gave false evidence before the Chief Presidency Magistrate, whereupon he drew up a complaint for an offence under sec tion 193 I P Code This complaint he preferred in his own Court (i e, to himself), because the other Presidency Magistrates were not first class Magistrates, then he transferred the complaint under sec 192 Cr P Code to the Third Presidency Magistrate The Full Bench decided that the procedure adopted by the Chief Presideney Magistrate in making the complaint to himself was irregular, though not absolutely illegal The present amendment, however, has removed this difficulty

This section authorises the Court to send the accused to the First Class Magistrate, it does not permit the Court to commit him to the Sessions —3 Bom. L R 185

The Court should specify the Magistrate to whom the case is sent, an order that the case be sent to the Magisterial authorities for investi gation is not sufficient—4 N W P 86

1251. Power of the Magistrate :—The Magistrate to whom the case is sent under this section must proceed according to law, and dispose of the case—7 B H C R 29, 26 Bom 785; 31 Cal 664. He can not refuse to take cognizance of the offence—13 Bom 109, and cannot return the case to the Court which sent it—12 W R 41

The Magistrate receiving a case under section 476 cannot act under section 202 The latter section enables a Magistrate who is not satisfied as to the truth of the complaint to postpone the issue of process and to direct a local investigation. Now, section 476 presupposes that the Court (Civil, Criminal or Revenue) making the reference to the Magistrate must be of opinion that there is ground for inquiry into the offence in respect of which the case is sent to the Magistrate This shows that section 476 precludes the application of section 202, and that there can be no room for the investigation which is contemplated by that section—21 Cr L J 310 (Nag.)

The Magistrate is competent to proceed against persons not named in the order of the Court directing the prosecution under this section The Code provides for taking cognizance of offences and not of offenders and a Magistrate who has legally taken cognizance of an offence on an order under section 476 has jurisdiction to proceed against any one who may be proved by the evidence to be concerned in the offence whether he was mentioned in the order or not—21 C W N 950 1917 P R 34 43 Bom 300

Formerly when sec 195 enabled a private person to obtain sanction to institute a prosecution and when no appeal was provided for from an order by a Magistrate under sec 476 it was sometimes desirable for the High Court in revision to examine the prospect of successful prosecution, because sanction was frequently used merely as a means of blackmail, and orders under sec 476 were passed occasionally by inexperienced Magistrates Now after the change effected in 1923 the choice of instituting a prosecution is not placed in the hands of private persons No prosecution can be instituted for the offences specified in sec 195 which have been committed in or in relation to a proceeding in Court, unless the Court itself prefers a complaint, and the person who is the subject of the complaint has a definite right of appeal to a superior Court against the institution of the complaint This being the situation it does not seem to be the function of the High Court unless the circumstances are altogether outside the ordinary to examine in revision the merits of the complaint, with a view to discovering whether it is likely to result in a conviction Moreover, when a Magistrate presiding over a Court and a responsible Court of Appeal are agreed that a prosecution is necessary in the interests of justice and in accordance with public policy it would be extremely difficult for the High Court to interfere in revision and to declare that the prosecution is not in the interests of public policy—Behram v Emp, 7 Lah 108, 27 Cr L J 776

Proceedings of a Civil Court under this section cannot be interfered with by a Criminal Bench of he High Court in Revision. 1256 This section has been newly added by section 18 of the Cr P C Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 Under the old law there was a conflict of opinion as to whether a superior Court could take action in respect of an offence committed before a subordinate Court In 27 Cal 921 37 Cal 13 16 All 80 1913 P W R 13 9 C W N 1030 10 C W N 1091 and 1 P L J 206 it was held that the superior Court could not take action in respect of an offence which was not committed before itself but before a subordinate Court whereas in 21 C W N 755 and 20 Cr L J 630 (Pat) it was held that the superior Court had that power The present section adopts the latter view

Where an application under sec 476 is pending before an inferior Court and has not been rejected by that Court there is no objection to the superior Court taking such action as could be taken by the Court under sec 476—In re Prem das 26 Bom L R 713 Where a person instituted a false case before a Bench of (2nd or 3rd class) Honorary Magistrates

476B Appeals Any person on whose application any Civil, Revenue or Criminal Court has refused to make a complaint under Section 476 or Section 476A, or against whom such a complaint has been made, may appeal to the Court to which such former Court is subordinate within the meaning of Section 195 sub section (3), and the superior Court may thereupon after notice to the parties concerned, direct the withdrawal of the complaint or as the case may be, itself make the complaint which the subordinate Court might have made under Section 476, and if it makes such complaint, the provisions of that section shall apply accordingly

This section has been newly added by section 128 of the Cr P Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 Under the old law when an application was made to a Munsiff asking him to take action himself against a certain party, and to send him to a Criminal Court to be tried there for various offences and the Munsiff declined to take any action it was held that no appeal lay to the District Judge against the order of the Munsiff—12 A L J 684 This ruling is now rendered obsolete by the present section

1257 Scope —This section gives a right of appeal only when a Court has made or refused to make a complaint under sec 476 or sec 476A, and not when a complaint has been made by a Court on appeal from an order of a subordinate Judge refusing to make a complaint—Md Idris v Crown 6 Lah 56 26 P L R 199 26 Cr L J 1168 Ma On Khin v N K Firm 5 Rang 523 28 Cr L J 937 But the Patna High Court holds that an appeal lies under this section from an appellate order of the Appellate Court making a complaint which the first Court refused to make—Ranjit Narain v Ram Bahadur 5 Pat 262 7 P L T 114 (dissenting from 6 Lah 56), Foujdar v K L 7 P L T 199 26 Cr L J 1565

An appeal against an order of the Presidency Small Cause Court directing that a complaint under secs 193 and 196 I P C be made against the appellants lies to the High Court on its Appellate side For this purpose the original side of the High Court is not different from the Appellate side The words principal Court of original civil jurisdiction occurring in sec 195 (3) of this Code when applied to the High Court do not mean only the original side of the High Court but apply to the Appellate side also—Kalyanji v Ram Deen 48 Mad 395 48 M L J 290 26 Cr L J 801

This section indicates with sufficient clearness that the Court to which the appeal lies is one to which the Court making or filing the complaint is subordinate in other words if it is a Civil Court which has made an order under sec 476 the appeal against such an order must lie to and be heard by the authority or tribunal to which such Civil Court is subordinate Thus if the order is made by a Munsiff the appeal would lie to the District Judge and will be governed by the provisions of the C P Code—Nasaruddin v Emp 53 Cal 827 28 Cr L J 9?

No review of order refusing to make complaint —It is not desirable that a Court should review its order refusing to make a complaint under sec 476 in as much as an appeal is allowed under sec 476B and the Code generally has made no provision for review—Ram Prasad v Emp 25 A L J 639 28 Cr L J 543

Appeal from or revision of order under this section —No appeal lies against an order passed under this section by the appellate Court directing the withdrawal of the complaint So also the High Court will not ordinarily interfere in revision with an order of withdrawal of complaint passed under this section except in extraordinary cases The question whether a complaint should be made under sec 476 is almost invariably a matter of discretion and if the trial Court or the Court to which it is subordinate thinks that no complaint should be made or that the complaint should be withdrawn then it would not be desirable that the High Court shoud interfere—Somabhai v Adibhai 48 Bom 401 (403 404) 6 Bom L R 289 25 Cr L J 1123 A I R 1924 Bom 347

Section 477 which has now been repealed by sec 129 of the Cr P C Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 ran as follows,—

*477 (1) Subject to the provisions of section 444 a Court of Session may charge a person for any offence referred to in section 195 and committed before it or brought under its notice in the course of a judicial proceeding and may commit or admit to bail and try such person upon its own charge

(2) Such Court may direct the Magistrate to cause the attendance of any witnesses for the purposes of the trial

The reason of omitting this section has thus been stated by the Joint Committee (1923) Section 477 is inconsistent with section 476 as proposed by the Bill because the latter section made it obligatory on the Court to make a complaint and send it to a first class Magistrate This defect has been removed by one of the amendments we have made in section 476 but we are doubtful whether section 477 should stand We considered a proposal to enable a Court of Session to try a case committed to it after a complaint had been made by itself but we do not think it desirable that a Court which has instituted the proceedings should dispose of the case and we have therefore repealed section 477

Power of Civil and Revenue Courts to complete inquiry and commit to High Court or Court of Session

478 (1) When any such offence is committed before any Civil or Revenue Court, or brought under the notice of any Civil or Revenue Court in the course of a judicial proceeding, and the case is triable exclusively by the High Court or Court of Session, or such Civil or Revenue Court thinks that it ought to be tried by the High Court or Court of Session, such Civil or Revenue Court may, instead of sending the case under Section 476 to a Magistrate for inquiry, itself complete the inquiry, and commit or hold to bail the accused person to take his trial before the High Court or Court of Session, as the case may be

(2) For the purposes of an inquiry under this section the Civil or Revenue Court may exercise all the powers of a Magistrate, and its proceedings in such inquiry shall be conducte[illegible] with the provisions o[illegible] XXIII in cases where [illegible] eemed to have been held by a Magistrate

Change —In subsection (2) the words subject to the provisions of section 443 have been omitted after the word may, and the italicised words have been added by section 58 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act XII of 1923 As a result of this Amendment this secti has been made applicable to European British subjects

1258. Sections 476 and 478 —This section should be read as alternative to section 476, and not supplementary to it The procedure prescribed by this section, viz, of completing the investigation and committing the accused, is only alternative to section 476 (see the words instead of sending the case under section 476), and therefore if the accused, who had been sent by the Civil Court to the First Class Magistrate under section 476, has been discharged by the Magistrate, the Civil Court has no power to revive the case against the accused or adopt the procedure prescribed by this section—Ratanlal 959

This section deals with a more extended class of cases than section 476 and covers cases in which any Court, whether Civil or Revenue whether possessing power of committal or not, may take action and commit for trial—4 Bom 287 Section 476 merely lays down the procedure that may be followed in certain cases, and does not confer any new jurisdiction on a Court That section does not by itself give to the Civil Court the powers of committal in the cases referred to in that section and that is why section 478 has been enacted—Ibid

1259. Scope —The power of a Civil Court to commit a case to the Sessions is limited to cases triable exclusively by the Court of Session and to such cases only when the offence charged has been committed before the Civil Court or brought under its notice—4 Bom 287

This section, like section 476, must be taken as supplementary to section 195 in this sense that the Court can direct a committal under section 478 for an offence referred to under section 195 only when such offence has been committed under the circumstances mentioned in section 195 And therefore a Civil Court cannot direct a committal for offences under sections 463 and 471 I P C unless the documents have been given in evidence, as mentioned in clause (c) of section 195 If the documents have been merely [illegible] in evidence section 195 cannot apply, and [illegible] 224 But in 22 Cal 1004 and 4[illegible] 'any such offence' in this section simply mean an offence referred to in section 195 and not an offence qualified by the circumstances mentioned in section 195 But this view is no longer correct See this subject fully discussed in Note 1237 under section 476 under heading 'Section 476 is supplementary to section 195'

A Civil Court has no power to order the commitment of persons for offences referred to in section 195 without holding the preliminary inquiry required by this section—22 W R 52

The procedure referred to in sub-section (2), namely the procedure of Chapter XVIII, must be followed as nearly as possible Where notices were issued to the persons concerned and after recording very brief statements of the accused, charge sheets were drawn up and commitment order passed without examining any of the witnesses and without the charge being explained to the accused, it was held that the Court not having followed the procedure as laid down in Ch XVIII the order was illegal—40 All 32

1260 Revision —Though certain Magisterial powers have been given to the Civil Court under this section for the purpose of investigating cases of contempt of Court it still remains while exercising those powers a Civil Court and is not an inferior Criminal Court within the meaning of section 435 It is not therefore amenable to the jurisdiction of the Sessions Judge The Sessions Judge has no power to revise the proceeding of the Civil Court—5 M L J 226

(2) Nothing in Section 29 1 or in Chapter XXXVIII shall be deemed to apply to proceedings under this section.

Change —The words whether he is an European British Subject or not have been omitted in sub-section (1) and the words section 9A or in Chapter XXXVIII in sub-section (2) have been substituted for the words section 443 or 444 by section [illegible] of the Criminal Law Amendment Act XII of 1923

The provisions of this section must be applied then and there or at any rate before the rising of the Court in whose view or presence a contempt has been committed if it considers that it can be properly and adequately dealt with under this section Therefore where a Magistrate in whose presence a contempt was committed after taking cognizance of the matter, postponed passing final orders in order to afford the accused an opportunity of showing cause why such order should not be passed, and eventually fined him several days after it was held that the procedure adopted by the Magistrate was irregular, and that the proper procedure would have been to detain the accused and to deal with the matter at once or before rising—11 All 361 But rising for a short time in the middle of the day (for luncheon) does not amount to 'rising of the Court for the day—Emp v Venkat Rao, 46 Bom 97, (970) 24 Bom L R 386

Where the Court deals with the offence of contempt of Court under this section, it cannot pass the sentence prescribed by sec 228 I P C but should under this section limit the punishment to Rs 200 with imprisonment in default for 30 days—2 Weir 603 If it considers the fine of Rs. 200 too light a sentence for the offence it ought to refer the case under section 482 to some competent Magistrate—10 W R 47 6 M H C R App 16

A substantive sentence of imprisonment cannot be passed under this section in a case under section 228 I P C—10 W R 47 The imprisonment will be only in default of fine

1262 Contempt—An application for transfer of a case from a particular Court on the ground of probable miscarriage of justice is not a contempt of that Court—1869 P R 34 Emp v Venkat Rao, 24 Bom L R 386, 46 Bom 973 (976) Even if in such an application the accused uses certain unhappy remarks concerning the Magistrate from whose Court the case is sought to be transferred it cannot be presumed that the accused intended to insult that Court—38 All 284 1898 A W N 145 A refusal by a witness to affix his thumb-mark to the record of his deposition is not an offence under sec 180 I P C—Crown v Fateh Ali, 1912 P R 8 A witness on being asked the name of his grand father replied that he did not remember it Held that it did not amount to a refusal to answer a question (sec 179 I P C) and he could not be proceeded against under sec 480 Cr P C—Kallu v Emp 27 Cr L J 252 (Lah) But a refusal by an accused to sign a statement under sec 364 of this Code is punishable under sec 180 I P C—39 All 399 (contra —4 Bom 15 3 I B R 199) Walking with creaking shoes near the Court room does not ipso facto lead to the conclusion that the accused intended to insult or interrupt the Court in its work—5 M L T 286 Courts should not be unduly sensitive about their dignity, and a mere audible remark by the accused which interrupted the proceedings of a Court is not enough to sustain a conviction unless the accused intended to interrupt the Court—29 M L J 274, Dalip Singh v Crown, 2 Lah 308 (312) In the absence of any intention to insult the Court and of any interruption to the Court, a person accused of a scuffle in the verandah of a Court is not guilty of an offence under sec. 228 I P C—20 Cr L J 777 (All) Prevarication by a witness may, though it does not necessarily, amount to contempt of Court—10 B H C R 69 See also 15 W R 5, 4 B H C R 6, 4 B H C R 7. 1263 Appeal —A summary order under this section by a Sessions Judge for an offence under section 228 I P C imposing a fine on a person for intentional insult to the Judge when sitting in a stage of judicial proceeding, amounts to a trial, though by a summary mode and is therefore appealable—4 M H C R 146 A Sessions Judge cannot refuse to hear an appeal against an order under this section, because in his opinion the matter is a mere trifle He is bound to hear the appeal and come to a finding whether the conviction is legal or not—Ratanlal 978

Record in such cases.

481. (1) In every such case the Court shall record the facts constituting the offence, with the statement (if any) made by the offender, as well as the finding and sentence.

(2) If the offence is under Section 228 of the Indian Penal Code, the record shall show the nature and stage of the judicial proceeding in which the Court interrupted or insulted was sitting, and the nature of the interruption or insult.

1264 Record —The procedure prescribed by sec 480 for punishing a contempt committed in facie curiae is of a summary character, and the Court taking action under that section is therefore required to record certain particulars mentioned in sec 481 When the guilt or innocence of a person depends upon the exact words used by him, it is the duty of the Magistrate to record them with a reasonable degree of precision, and his omission to record the nature of the insult constitutes a great defect in the procedure—Dalip Singh v Crown, 2 Lah 308 (311). A Criminal Court inflicting a fine for contempt of Court should specifically record its reasons and the facts constituting the contempt, with any statements the offender may make as well as the finding and sentence —4 M H C R 2.9 The directions contained in this section are mandatory, and the omission to record the particulars as directed by the section is fatal to the proceedings—10 C W N 1062 No person can be punished for contempt unless the specific offence charged against him be distinctly stated and an opportunity given him of answering the charge. The omission to record the statement of a legal practitioner charged for contempt is a fatal defect to the prosecution—Krishna Chandra v. Emp, 37 C L J 535, 24 Cr L J 798

Where a person is charged with an offence under section 228 I P C, the record convicting him must show the stage of the judicial proceeding interrupted, and the evidence must establish that such interruption was intentional omission to do so is a vital irregularity in procedure not curable by sec 537 of this Code—In re Kukan, 15 Cr L J 621 (Mad); Khushal Singh v Emp, 1886 P R 36

482 (1) If the Court in any case considers that a person accused of any of the offences referred to in Section 480 and committed in its view or presence should be imprisoned otherwise than in default of payment of fine, or that a fine exceeding two hundred rupees should be imposed upon him, or such Court is for any other reason of opinion that the case should not be disposed of under Section 480, such Court, after recording the facts constituting the offence and the statement of the accused as hereinbefore provided, may forward the case to a Magistrate having jurisdiction to try the same, and may require security to be given for the appearance of such accused person before such Magistrate, or if sufficient security is not given, shall forward such person in custody to such Magistrate.

Procedure where Court considers that case should not be dealt with under s. 480.

(2) The Magistrate, to whom any case is forwarded under this section, shall proceed to hear the complaint against the accused person in manner hereinbefore provided.

1265. Scope :—Under section 480 the Magistrate can award a fine up to Rs 200, or a sentence of imprisonment in default of payment of fine If, however, the Magistrate considers that a substantive sentence of imprisonment or a heavier fine is demanded by the circumstances of the case, he ought to forward the case to another Magistrate under this section—6 M H C R. App 16; 10 W R. 47.

Section 482 need not be read along with section 480, and section 482 does not require a Magistrate to draw up proceedings on the same day that the offence is committed—Bepin Chandra Pal v Emp, 35 Cal 161

Procedure —If a Court considers a substantive sentence of imprisonment necessary, it should record a statement of the facts constituting the contempt and the statement of the accused, and forward the case to another Magistrate—11 W R 49

A Barrister in the course of the trial of a case in which he was the complainant, used insulting language to the Sub-Magistrate The Magistrate then recorded proceedings required by this section but failed to take any statement from the accused explanatory of his conduct, as the accused left the Court at once It was held that the omission to take such statement was not fatal to the proceedings, and the case ought not to be dismissed on that ground—2 Weir 604

When Registrar or Sub-Registrar to be deemed a Civil Court within Ss. 480 and 482.

483. When the Local Government so directs, any Registrar or any Sub-Registrar appointed under the Indian Registration Act, 1908, shall be deemed to be a Civil Court within the meaning of Sections 480 and 482.

1266. A Registrar or Sub-Registrar may be deemed to be a Court only for the purposes of secs 480 and 482, and it cannot be implied that he is to be deemed a Court for ordinary purposes A provision that a particular officer may for a particular purpose be deemed a Court does not warrant the extension of that provision so as by inference to produce a group of rules in conflict with the general system A provision such as that contained in this section is an excrescence on the general system, such an exceptional provision should not be drawn out into all its logical consequences—Q. E. v. Tulja, 12 Bom 36

Discharge of offender on submission or apology.

484. When any Court has under Section 480 or Section 482 adjudged an offender to punishment or forwarded him to a Magistrate for trial for refusing or omitting to do anything which he was lawfully required to do, or for any intentional insult or interruption, the Court may, in its discretion, discharge the offender or remit the punishment on his submission to the order or requisition of such Court, or on apology being made to its satisfaction.

1267. Discharge on submission or apology.—Too much notice should not be taken of a hasty language used by rustic litigants during a moment of excitement without any serious intention of insulting the Court If the offender offers an apology or adopts a submissive attitude, an admonition by the Court or at the most a petty fine, would be sufficient—Jit Singh v Crown 1912 P W R 23

Power of High Court to interfere —A pleader was tried and punished for contempt by a Munsiff for having used certain words which the latter thought to be derogatory to his position The pleader gave an assurance that the words in question had no reference to the Court but the Munsiff declined to accept the assurance The District Judge refused to interfere on appeal by the pleader The High Court on revision directed the Munsiff to consider whether it was not a case in which he himself should take action under section 484 of the Code Upon the Munsiff declining to do so because the pleader had not withdrawn the words in question, the High Court held that the assurance given by the pleader should be taken as sufficient and remitted the punishment—Ram Bali v K E., 11 A L J 955, 14 Cr L J 687

Imprisonment or committal of person refusing to answer or produce document

485 If any witness or person called to produce a document or thing before a Criminal Court refuses to answer such questions as are put to him or to produce any document or thing in his possession or power which the Court requires him to produce, and does not offer any reasonable excuse for such refusal, such Court may, for reasons to be recorded in writing, sentence him to simple imprisonment, or by warrant under the hand of the presiding Magistrate or Judge commit him to the custody of an officer of the Court for any term not exceeding seven days, unless in the meantime such person consents to be examined and to answer, or to produce the document or thing In the event of his persisting in his refusal, he may be dealt with according to the provisions of section 480 or section 482, and, in the case of a Court established by Royal Charter, shall be deemed guilty of a contempt.

1268. Witness —A complainant is not a witness and therefore not punishable under this section—In re Ganesh, 13 Bom 600

A witness cannot be punished for not answering a question which is irrelevant to the real issue or which he is not legally bound to answer —13 Bom 600 Where the question is asked with a view to criminal proceedings being taken against the witness, he is not legally bound to answer it and he cannot be punished for refusing to answer—10 Bo 185.

An application for the release of the accused should be made to the committing Judge—Ibid

486 (1) Any person sentenced by any Court under section 480 or section 485 may, not withstanding anything hereinbefore contained, appeal to the Court to which decrees or orders made in such Court are ordinarily appealable

Appeals from convictions in contempt cases

(2) The provisions of Chapter XXXI shall, so far as they are applicable, apply to appeals under this section and the Appellate Court may alter or reverse the finding or reduce or reverse the sentence appealed against

(3) An appeal from such conviction by a Court of Small Causes in a presidency town shall lie to the High Court, and an appeal from such conviction by any other Court of Small Causes shall lie to the Court of Session for the sessions division within which such Court is situate

(4) An appeal from such conviction by any officer as Registrar or Sub Registrar appointed as aforesaid may when such officer is also Judge of a Civil Court, be made to the Court to which it would, under the preceding portion of this section be made if such conviction were a decree by such officer in his capacity as such Judge, and in other cases may be made to the District Judge, or in the presidency towns, to the High Court

See 4 M H C R 146 and Ratanlal 978 cited in Note 1263 under section 480 under heading Appeal

487 (1) Except as provided in Sections * * 480 and 485, no Judge of a Criminal Court or Magistrate, other than a Judge of a High Court, shall try any person for any offence referred to in Section 195, when such offence is committed before himself or in contempt of his authority, or is brought under his notice as such Judge or Magistrate in the course of a judicial proceeding

Certain Judges and Magistrates not to try offences referred to in S 195 when committed before themselves

(2) Nothing in Section 476 or Section 482 shall prevent a Magistrate empowered to commit to the Court of Session or High Court from himself committing any case to such Court.

Change :—The word "477" has been omitted in Sub section (1) by section 130 of the Cr P C Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923 This is consequential to the repeal of sec 477

1269. General rule :—A Magistrate cannot convict a person for contempt of Court committed in respect of his own authority A commitment to another Magistrate is necessary in all such cases—Ratanlal 64 Emp v Kashmiri 1 All 625 Q E v Seshayya 13 Mad 24 The Court before which an offence was committed and by which the preliminary inquiry was held under sec 476 should not be the Court to try the case—15 W R 88 The fundamental rule in the administration of justice is that no man can be a Judge in a case wherein he is interested—12 W R 18

Thus, where a Sessions Judge has directed the trial of a person for the offence of giving false evidence committed before him in the course of a judicial proceeding of a criminal nature he cannot try the case himself—Q E v Makhdum 14 All 354 If the facts alleged to constitute the offence came to the knowledge of the Magistrate in the course of judicial proceedings he has no jurisdiction himself to try the case—Emp v Kunwar Bahadur 23 O C 138 21 Cr L J 696 A Magistrate whose summons was disobeyed has no jurisdiction to try the offence of disobedience of summons—_ Weir 612 16 A L J 43- A Magistrate who issued an order under section 144 of this Code cannot himself try the disobedience of that order—10 B H C R 424 Q E v Abdulla 24 Mad 262, Ratanlal 904 A Magistrate who makes an order under sec 133 for the removal of a nuisance cannot himself try and convict the person to whom such order was directed and who has disobeyed it—Emp v Hira Lal, 1883 A W N 272 The Rangoon High Court holds that although it is not desirable that a Magistrate whose lawful orders are disobeyed should, save in very exceptional circumstances try and dispose of the charge of disobedience himself still unless there has been a clear failure of justice, the High Court will not ordinarily interfere with the Magistrate s action—J R Das v Emp 1 Rang 549

1270. Scope of section —Section 487 which says that no Court shall try any person for the offence committed in contempt of its own authority is not limited to offences falling under Chapter X of the Penal Code It extends to all contempts of Courts—1 Bom 339 Moreover, the prohibition in this section extends to the abetment of the offences referred to in the section Therefore a Magistrate is not competent to convict a person of abetting the giving of false evidence in a judicial proceeding before himself—7 M H C R App 28

Where a District Magistrate (as the head of the Police) gave sanction to prosecute a person for giving false information to the police, the District Magistrate was not incompetent to try or hear an appeal from the conviction of such person, section 487 would not apply, because the offence was committed before the Police and not before the District Magistrate or in contempt of his authority or brought to his notice as Magistrate in the course of a judicial proceeding—Ramasory Lal v Q E, 27 Cal 45? 3 All 322 Karim Baksh v K E, 1905 P R 12 2 Cr L J 66

Magistrate —This section is wide enough to include a Presidency Magistrate A Presidency Magistrate has no jurisdiction to try a case under section 188 I P C when the order alleged to have been disobeyed was an order which he had himself passed—12 C W N 246

Prohibition to try the case —According to the Madras High Court this section prohibits the Judge or Magistrate only to try the case but a Sessions Judge before whom an offence was committed is not precluded by this section to hear an appeal in the case—2 Weir 607 But the Calcutta High Court holds that the words shall try a person in this section include the trial of an appeal Therefore where a Judge sanctions the prosecution of a decreeholder under sec 210 I P C for an offence committed before a Munsiff he is not competent to hear an appeal from the conviction of the decreeholder for that offence—Madhub Chunder v Novodeep 16 Cal 121 So also the Burma Chief Court holds that a Judge who has directed a prosecution should not hear the appeal of the accused, when convicted even though the appeal is not against the conviction but only against the severity of the sentence—2 L B R 302 Where a District Magistrate procured the initiation of a number of prosecutions against the same person and one of them which resulted in conviction came before him in appeal the High Court considering that it was not altoge

Krishnappa v Emp 25 Cr L J 713

1271 "As such Judge or Magistrate" —These ambiguous word have given rise to two sets of conflicting rulings which it is diffi cult to reconcile and there can be no doubt that the policy of the law ha been to some extent frustrated by the ambiguous language of the section Does this expression mean that the Judge or Magistrate is precluded from trying the case only when the offence was committed before him or brought to his notice while acting in his capacity as Judge or Magistrate In other words does this section empower the Magistrate or Judge to try an offence which was committed before him or brought under his notice in another capacity ? In Q F v Sarat Chandra 16 Cal 766 it has been held that a Sessions Judge may as Sessions Judge try an offence committed before him in another capacity as District Judge that is the prohibition is restricted to a Judge of a criminal Court, and that being so a strict construction must be placed upon the words as such Judge and it must be held that they do not include a Judge of a Civil Court or a District Judge The same view has been taken in 6 Bom 479 7 C W N 708, U B R (1897 1901) 127 18 Bom 380 Thus it is held that a Magistrate is not debarred from trying an accused person for disobedience of summons issued by him in his capacity as Mamlatdar—Q I v Rayi Daji 18 Bom 380 Where sanction is given by a Deputy Collector and

Magistrate in his capacity as Revenue Officer he is not debarred from trying the case himself as a Deputy Magistrate—2 Weir 613

But if this view be adopted does not this section run counter to the fundamental principle of law that no man ought to be a Judge in a case in which he is interested? The prohibition in this section is a personal one the mischief to be prevented being that the same person should not decide a matter which he may have already prejudged It does not refer to the office of the Magistrate or Judge before whom an offence of the class described in the section is committed but refers to the person of the Judge or Magistrate—Anonymous 1 Mad 305 An officer before whom while acting in a particular capacity an offence has been committed punishable under sec 228 I P C cannot in another capacity take up and try the offence—an offence committed against himself If he could do so it would be in violation of that fundamental rule in the administration of justice that no man can be a Judge in a case wherein he is interested —12 W R 18 When a Judge on the Civil side has already formed an opinion that a document has been forged or a perjury has been committed he should not try the case as a Sessions Judge and it is proper for the High Court to transfer the case to another Judge as a means of relieving the former Judge from a position which he himself would desire to avoid—5 M H C R 212

CHAPTER XXXVI

Of the Maintenance of Wives and Children

Sir James Fitz James Stephen describes this chapter as a mode of preventing vagrancy or at least of preventing its consequences The object of maintenance proceedings is not to punish a parent for his past neglect but to prevent vagrancy by compelling those who can do so to support those who are unable to support themselves and who have a moral claim to support—Sardar Md v Nur Md 191, P R 2 The scope of this chapter is limited and the Magistrate may not except as herein provided usurp the jurisdiction in matrimonial disputes possessed by the Civil Courts—16 Bom 269

488 (1) If any person having sufficient means neglects or refuses to maintain his [illegible] illegitimate [illegible] itself, the District [illegible] a Sub divisional Magistrate, [illegible] class may, upon proof of such neglect or refusal order such person to make a monthly allowance for the maintenance of his wife or such child at such monthly rate not exceeding one hundred rupees in the whole, as such Magistrate thinks fit, and to pay the same to such person as the Magistrate from time to time directs

(2) Such allowance shall be payable from the date of the order, or, if so ordered, from the date of the application for maintenance

Enforcement of order

(3) If any person so ordered fails without sufficient cause to comply with the order, any such Magistrate may, for every breach of the order, issue a warrant for levying the amount due in manner hereinbefore provided for levying fines, and may sentence such person, for the whole or any part of each month's allowance remaining unpaid after the execution of the warrant, to imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month or until payment if sooner made

Provided that, if such person offers to maintain his wife on condition of her living with him, and she refuses to live with him, such Magistrate may consider any grounds of refusal stated by her, and may make an order under this section notwithstanding such offer if he is satisfied that there is just ground for so doing

Provided further, that no warrant shall be issued for the recovery of any amount due under this section unless application be made to the Court to levy such amount within a period of one year from the date on which it became due

(4) No wife shall be entitled to receive an allowance from her husband under this section if she is living in adultery, or if, without any sufficient reason she refuses to live with her husband, or if they are living separately by mutual consent

(5) On proc
has been made that without sufficient reason she refuses to live with her husband or that they are living separately by mutual consent, the Magistrate shall cancel the order

(6) All evidence under this Chapter shall be taken in the presence of the husband or father, as the case may be, or, when his personal attendance is dispensed with in the presence of his pleader and shall be recorded in the manner prescribed in the case of summons cases

Provided that if the Magistrate is satisfied that he is wilfully avoiding service or wilfully neglects to attend the Court, the Magistrate may proceed to hear and determine the case ex parte Any order so made may be set aside for good cause shown on application made within three months from the date thereof

(7) (Omitted)

(8) The Court in dealing with applications under this section shall have power to make such order as to costs as may be just

(9) Proceedings under this section may be taken against any person in any district where he resides or is or where he last resided with his wife or as the case may be, the mother of the illegitimate child

This section has been amended by section 131 of the Cr P C Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 and the changes introduced are the following —First in sub-section (1) the words one hundred have been substituted for fifty in order to suit modern conditions in life Sec ndly in sub-section (2) the words fails without sufficient cause have been substituted for the words wilfully neglects owing to the difficulties which have been felt in the interpretation of the word wilfully (Statement of Objects and Reasons 1914) Thirdly a proviso has been added to sub section (3) to provide a period of limitation for the recovery of outstanding arrears Fourthly sub section (4) has been omitted it ran thus The accused may tender himself as a witness and in such case shall be examined as such This is now expressly provided by sub-section (6) of sec 340 Fifthly in sub section (9) the words any person have been substituted for the words the accused in order to make it clear that the person proceeded against under this section is not in the position of an accused person

1272 Section not affected by personal law —The right to maintenance conferred by this section is a Statutory right which the Legislature has created irrespective of the nationality or creed of the parties the only condition precedent to the possession of that right in the case of a wife being the existence of the conjugal relation—In re Din Mahomed 5 All 226 Thus a mutta wife is not under the Muhammedan Law of the Shia sect entitled to maintenance but this disability arising from her personal law is different from her statutory right to maintenance under this Code In other words, she is entitled to maintenance under this section irrespective of the fact that she is not entitled to maintenance under her personal law—Luldon Sahiba v Mirza Kamar

8 Cal 736 The right of illegitimate children to be maintained by their actual father is a statutory right and the duty is created by express enactment independent of the personal law of the parties—19 Mad 461 There is no text of Hindu law under which an illegitimate son of a Hindu by a woman who is not a Hindu can claim maintenance but under this section such illegitimate child is entitled to claim maintenance from his putative father—Lingappa v Esudason 27 Mad 13 Apart from the Hindu Law maintenance is awardable in such cases on general principles the defendant having begotten the child is bound to provide for its maintenance—32 Cal 479 The father of an illegitimate child cannot get rid of his statutory obligation under this Code to maintain that child by pleading that he is a Buddhist monk The Criminal Procedure Code must override his personal law if it conflicts with it—(19) U B R 2nd Qr 138

On the other hand the provision in the Cr P Code does not take away any right conferred by the Hindu Law Thus under this Code the illegitimate daughters are entitled to claim maintenance only from their father, but under the Hindu law they can claim maintenance not only from their father but also from his co parceners who took his property by survivorship—Natarajan v Muthia 22 L W 650 A I R 1926 Mad 261

1273 Who can be ordered —An undivided son living with his father can be ordered to maintain his wife under this section—13 Mad 17 The mere fact that the defendant is 16 years of age only and studying at school will not by itself be a sufficient cause for his being relieved of the liability imposed by this section of providing for his illegitimate child—4 N W P 123

The order may be passed only against the father or husband as the case may be This section does not authorise a Magistrate to order the father in law to pay maintenance to his daughter in law—Crown v Muan 1903 P R 26 1914 P L R 115

Of sufficient means —Before an order is passed under this section it must be proved that the person ordered has sufficient means to support his wife and children—1882 A W N 179 If he has sufficient means, he is not relieved of the obligation to maintain his wife on the ground that the wife has means of earning money by her own labour—1887 A W N 107 or that the wife has relations able and willing to maintain her—2 Weir 615 16 Cr L J 80 (Mad) or that the wife has sufficient earning of her own (including her husband s earnings)—10 Bur L R 160

A Magistrate is not justified in absolutely refusing to order maintenance to be paid to the wife on the ground that the husband is a man of slender means—2 Weir 617 In such a case only a small amount will be ordered So also the fact that the father is a professional beggar does not relieve him from his obligation to maintain his illegitimate child If a man is capable of labour, and the Magistrate is satisfied that the child is his child he should order the payment of a reasonable sum—2 Weir 616 The word means in this section does not signify only visible means, such as real property or definite employment If a man is healthy and able bodied he must be held to have the means to support his wife and he cannot be relieved of this obligation on the ground that he is only 19 years old and unemployed—In re Kardaram 50 M L J 44 27 Cr L J 350 So also the mere fact that the husband is a young boy of 16 is not a ground for granting merely nominal maintenance He must make serious endeavour to find work and must pay sufficient maintenance to his wife—Ma E Sin v Mg Hla 4 Bur L J 258 27 Cr L J 725 In a Burma case it has been held that in the case of a Pongyi or Buddhist priest the presumption is that he possesses no property except such as is necessary for his religious life and which is held under conditions which do not make it available for other purposes and a woman who allows herself to be seduced by a member of the priesthood cannot obtain any maintenance for her child she ought to have known beforehand that a priest has no money—1 Bur L J 9 But in another Burma case it has been held that a Buddhist monk cannot get rid of his statutory obligation under this Code to maintain his illegitimate child If he is an able bodied man the presumption is that he has sufficient means to maintain himself and his child and it is for him to prove the contrary If he cannot pay the maintenance ordered if he remains a monk it is his duty to throw off the yellow robe and work—(1902) U B R 2nd Qr 138

The onus is on the husband or father to show that he has no sufficient means to support his wife and children An able bodied man who is suffering from no physical infirmity will be presumed to have sufficient means to support himself and his family—1911 U B R 1st Qr 90

1274 Neglect or refusal to maintain The first essential for proceedings under this section is that the person proceeded against should have neglected or refused to maintain his wife or children If there is no evidence as to the neglect or refusal an order for maintenance passed by the Magistrate is bad in law—Intaar v Samidan 27 O C 271 1 O W N 150 26 Cr L J 128 16 W R 62 16 Bom 269 Where the evidence was that since the separation had taken place the husband was regularly paying Rs 9 for the maintenance of his wife and children it was held that the Magistrate was wrong in having entertained the petition at all—Graham v Graham 4 Bur L J 11 26 Cr L J 831

The neglect or refusal to maintain wife and children may be expressed or implied The Court may infer the neglect or refusal from the conduct of the husband—9 Bom L R 359 To give jurisdiction to a Magistrate it is not necessary to prove express refusal to maintain if the husband or father does not in fact maintain his wife or children he is said to neglect or refuse to maintain them—Inp v Ha Hun 8 Bur L R 96 Where the father has denied his paternity that is a fact from which the Court can infer neglect to maintain—6 S L R 208 But where the husband is willing to maintain his wife and the wife is willing to live with her husband i e where both parties are willing to live together, the fact that the wife deposes that though she is willing to live with her husband the latter refuses to maintain her will not lead the Court to infer that the husband is unwilling to maintain his wife—1914 P W R 46 When there is no proof of refusal or neglect to maintain the wife, the husband ought not to be ordered to pay maintenance on the ground that he has been guilty of cruelty to her—Ibid

A mere offer by the husband to maintain his children made at the trial is not sufficient to oust the Magistrate of his jurisdiction, if as a matter of fact the husband has paid nothing for the maintenance of his children for several years—Kent v Kent, 49 Mad 891, 49 M L J 335, 26 Cr L J 1597, Kambu Ammal v Ranganatham, 1924 M W N 465, 25 Cr L J 94 If in fact the father has neglected or refused to maintain his children, the Magistrate can make an order for the payment of monthly allowance for the maintenance of the children An offer to maintain the children in the future is not sufficient of itself to debar the Magistrate from making the order Otherwise in those cases where the children are very young, a man, knowing full well that no mother would part with such children has simply to make an ostensible offer to keep the children with him, and he can thus defeat an application for maintenance The Magistrate will be entitled to consider the circumstances in which the offer was made, and whether it is right and proper that the children, if not in the custody of the father, should be handed over to him—David Sasson v. Emp, 49 Bom 562, 27 Bom L R 359, 26 Cr L J 975; 1905 U B R (Cr P C) 39 But the Punjab Chief Court has held that if the father offers to maintain his children on condition that they should live with him, the Magistrate should refrain from passing an order against him—Sardar Muhammad v Nur Muhd, 1917 P R 22, 18 Cr L J 811, Ralla v Ali, 1911 P L R 115, 15 Cr L J. 529 Man Singh v Dharman, 1894 P R 18.

This section is based on the principle that there is a continuing obligation upon a father, who has sufficient means, to support his child If a man who is bound to maintain his child continuously does not do so, he is deemed to have neglected to maintain, and proof of actual refusal to maintain is not necessary The fact that the child is not in a starving condition is no answer to an application for maintenance—L B R (1900-1902) 189, Baran v Ma Chan, 2 Rang 682, 26 Cr L J 535, Emp v Ha Hun Bya, 8 Bur. L R 96

The fact that a lump sum has been paid to the wife in final settlement of all her claims is no answer to an application for maintenance, if in fact the money has been spent or lost or does not yield a sufficient income—Ma Le v Nga Paw Din, 1905 U B R (Cr P C) 45, L B R (1900-1902) 189 But where the father has given certain property to the mother for the maintenance of the child, which yields sufficient monthly income and furnishes means of support, he cannot be said to have neglected to maintain his child, and an order cannot be made under this section—U B R (1897-1901) 108, 2 Weir 648

A father's neglect to sue for the custody of a girl who has chosen to live with her mother who is living in adultery, cannot be deemed to be a neglect on his part to maintain the daughter—2 Weir 630 Where the father is entitled to the custody of children, and the mother who takes them away does not allow them to return to him, there is no such neglect or refusal to maintain them as is contemplated by this section—2 Weir

63. Where the children who were being properly maintained while in the custody of their father were dissuaded by their mother from his custody and went away to live with their mother the refusal of the father to maintain them unless they returned to his custody was not a refusal to maintain within the meaning of this section—Ma Shue v Mg Po Chat 8 L B R 105 16 Cr L J 217

Before passing an order under this section the Magistrate ought to ascertain whether the husband has been called upon to maintain his wife Where the husband has not been called upon to do so and the wife was living with her father who refused to allow her to live with her husband without a money payment from him the Magistrate cannot make an order for maintenance—22 W R 30

The neglect or refusal must be present neglect or refusal Where a wife subsequent to her application for maintenance came to live with her husband and compromised her claim but prayed for an order of the Magistrate to the effect that if her husband failed to maintain her in future he should pay her a certain allowance it was held that the Magistrate could not pass such order but must dismiss the application as no present refusal or neglect was established— Weir 630

1275 Right of wife to maintenance —To justify an order under this section it must be shown that the complainant is the wife of the defendant—16 Bom 69 The condition precedent to a right of maintenance in the case of a wife is the existence of a conjugal relation —In re Din Mahomed 5 All [illegible] It is only on proof of the relationship of husband and wife that an order for maintenance should be made but where such relationship has ceased to exist an order already made may be stayed—5 Cal 558 No order for maintenance can be passed under this section as against the husband in favour of the wife where there is no proof that the latter is the lawfully married wife of the former according to his personal law—7 Bur L T 71 7 L B R [illegible]0 Among Jats karoo marriage is a valid marriage and the woman is entitled to maintenance—4 N W P 128 A muta wife is entitled to maintenance under this section though she is not entitled under the Mahomedan law—8 Cal 736

Effect of divorce —A Muhammadan wife is entitled to maintenance up to the date of divorce—Shah Abu v Ulfat Bibi 19 All 50 Even after divorce she is entitled to maintenance during the iddat—1905 P R 5 2 Weir 617 20 M L J 1[illegible] But an order for maintenance subsequent to the expiration of the iddat is illegal unless pregnancy is alleged—2 Weir 617 1888 A W N 116 13 Bur L T 43

When a husband pleads non liability to maintain his wife on the ground of his having divorced her the Magistrate is bound to entertain and enquire into such plea If he finds the plea established he cannot order maintenance—1894 P R 21 2 Weir [illegible] 1915 U B R 1st Qr 53 Where a Magistrate makes an order under this section the order becomes functus officio on a subsequent divorce of the wife by the husband—17 O C 260

1276 Right of children to maintenance —The child must be born no order can be passed under this section for the maintenance of a foetus when it is believed that a woman is pregnant Until it is born it can hardly be regarded as a child—3 N W P 70 2 Weir 618

The word child in this section simply means son or daughter Reference to age is purposely omitted the object being that any son or daughter is entitled to maintenance so long as he or she is unable to maintain himself or herself—1910 P W R 28 In 37 Mad 565 and 5 N L J 247 it has been held that the word child means one who has not attained majority

The defendant may be ordered to pay maintenance for his own children whether legitimate or illegitimate but not for the child of another person e g for a daughter of his wife by her first husband—Abdul Rahim v Amir Begum 7 Lah 565 27 Cr L J 610

Legitimate children —A child born during the continuance of the form of marriage known as Sambandhan and prevalent among the Nayar community in Malabar, is entitled to maintenance under this section—2 Mad 216, 2 Mad 247 (foot note) Children of a Nikah wife are legitimate and entitled to maintenance—18 W R 28

Illegitimate children —An order under this section may be passed for the maintenance of legitimate as well as illegitimate children The basis of an application for the maintenance of a child under this section is the paternity of the child irrespective of its legitimacy or illegitimacy—Nur Mahomed v Bismulla 16 Cal 781 But before an order for the maintenance of illegitimate children is passed it must be proved that the man against whom the woman proceeds was the father of the children—18 All 107 Where maintenance is claimed for an illegitimate child from an alleged father it is not enough that the defendant may have been the father but the Magistrate must be able to find that in all reasonability no one else can have been the father—2 Weir 621 The Magistrate is not justified in holding that the child is the child of the defendant on the ground of the similarity of the features and the name of the child with those of the defendant—Nur Mahomed v Bismulla 16 Cal 781

Children in custody of mother —Where a mother has the custody of a child and has to maintain it she is entitled to claim maintenance on its account—2 Weir 630 And the father cannot refuse to maintain his children on the ground that they are living with their mother If he want to have them in his custody he must enforce his right, if any in the Civil Court—Murugesa v Sodiamma 8 Bur L T 134 16 Cr L J 636 A divorced wife is under the Mahomedan law entitled to the custody of her children and the father is not thereby relieved of his liability to maintain them—Imp v Ayshabai 6 Bom L R 53 19 Mad 4[illegible] But where a child has left its father and has chosen to live with its mother who is leading a life of adultery since she left her husband the father cannot be directed to pay an allowance to the child under this section—2 Weir 620 See also 2 Weir 632 and 8 L B R 105 cited in Note 1274 ante

obligation and the parties cannot contract themselves out of it—L B R (1900 1902) 126 The father cannot divest himself of his liability to maintain his child by an agreement with his wife—2 Weir 648 The language of this section is inconsistent with the capacity of a wife to make a contract absolving her husband from his statutory liability—U B R (1905) 45 But it has been held in 2 Weir 631 that where the mother of the illegitimate children renounced on their behalf all future claims of maintenance by a document on payment of a certain sum by the father the Magistrate was not competent to pass any further order for maintenance unless there was proof of fraud in the execution of the document or unless it was proved that there was a valid subsequent oral agreement in supersession of the document A compromise by the lawful guardian of a minor acting bona fide for his benefit cannot be set aside even at his instance, except upon proof of fraud—2 Weir 630

But there can be no doubt that when a compromise made by the guardian of a minor does not appear to be for his benefit and it is very likely that he would be materially injured by a manifestly inadequate adjustment of his maintenance claim under the section the compromise will not bind the minor nor any one acting as guardian after the mother's death—Hildephonsus v Malone 1885 P R 13

1277. 'Unable to maintain itself' —The words unable to maintain itself refer to the child and not to the wife—10 Bar L R 160

The father is bound to maintain the child if it is unable to maintain itself even though its mother may be able to maintain it The question as to the means of the mother is not to be taken into account the true criterion is the inability of the child to support itself—7 Bur L T 34 The fact that the child belongs to a well to do tarwad does not relieve the father from his liability to maintain it The inability referred to in this section relates to the absence of sufficient maturity of physical and mental development in the child rendering it in consequence unable to earn its living by its own efforts and does not refer to inability through poverty or absence of all means—In re Parathi Kuppel 25 M L J 355 14 Cr L J 59 But in 39 Mad 957 and 13 Mad 401 it has been held that this section has no application to cases where the children are being maintained by a tarwad which is bound by law to maintain them The words unable to maintain itself cannot be confined to the tender age of the child but have also reference to its financial position Therefore where from their tavazhi and if the tavazhi or tarwad has sufficient means to maintain them they are not entitled to an order of maintenance under this section—In re Bharata Iyar 40 M L J 3-4

A child who is deaf and dumb and unable to maintain itself is entitled to maintenance even though it may have attained majority—In re Fedd 5 N W P 237 A minor girl earning her living by prostitution will still be considered as unable to maintain herself because prostitution is not to be treated as a profession by which a girl can maintain her for the purpose of this section—37 Mad 565 But a minor married girl, whose husband is willing to maintain her, cannot be regarded as a person unable to maintain herself, and her father cannot be ordered to maintain her—2 Weir 650 But if in spite of her marriage the girl still remains unable to maintain herself either because her husband s too poor to maintain her or for any other good reason, the father s liability to maintain the child would still exist—Meenakshi v Karupama, 48 Mad 503, 48 M L. J 183 26 Cr L J, 732 The child is entitled to get maintenance until it is able to maintain itself, the Magistrate is not justified in ordering maintenance till the child attains the age of 14' a Magistrate has no power to fix an arbitrary age limit up to which the child will get maintenance—2 P L T 109 Where a boy is aged 17 or 18 and is able to work and earn his living, he cannot be said to be 'unable to maintain himself ' and he cannot compel his father to educate him in a college and thus better his prospects—1 Bur L J 123 But a boy of 11 years must be deemed to be a child 'unable to maintain itself,' and is entitled to maintenance, it would be contrary to public policy to encourage child labour by holding that a boy of 11 years should contribute towards his own support by work, when he should be in school—Baran Shanta v Ma Chan 2 Rang 682, 26 Cr L J 535

1278. Order for maintenance :—The only order that can be passed under this section is either an order allowing maintenance or an order dismissing the application for maintenance He cannot pass any other order Where a claim for maintenance is compromised by the consent of parties, the Magistrate is not competent to pass an order in accordance with the terms of the compromise He can only dismiss the petition and strike it off the file To pass a decree in terms of the compromise would be to assume the functions of the Civil Court—2 Weir 629 2 Weir 630

The order under this section must not be conditional and must not have reference to any future circumstances When the wife, after compromising the claim for maintenance, prayed for an order by the Magistrate that if her husband failed to support her in future, he should pay her a monthly allowance, it was held that the Magistrate could not pass an order of this nature he must dismiss the application—In re Kuppa Mudali, 2 Weir 630 An order directing the husband to take away his wife with him, and maintain her, and in the event of his failing to do so or turning her out, to pay a fixed sum to her for maintenance is a conditional order and hence illegal—Natha Singh v Harnam 7 Lah 313, 27 Cr L J 556 An order for maintenance passed on condition that the woman must reside in her husband s house is illegal—Emp v Jamiet 1917 P R 14 18 Cr L. J. 528.

Who can order :—Only the Magistrates enumerated in this section can inquire into the case and pass an order for maintenance An inquiry under this section cannot be delegated by a First Class Magistrate to a Magistrate of a lower rank—2 Weir 617. A First Class Magistrate cannot refer an application under this section to a Subordinate Magistrate of lower grade and act upon his report—1905 P R 29 Venkata v Paramma, 11 Mad 199

Monthly allowance —The law empowers a Magistrate only to direct payment of a monthly maintenance An agreement between a husband and wife whereby the husband agreed that he would furnish his wife with certain ornaments build a house for her deliver to her annually a certain amount of grain and pay her a certain sum in cash is not an agreement which can be made the basis of an order under this section and therefore cannot be enforced under its provisions—6 Mad 283 1 Cr L J 612 (Lah) The payment ordered must be a monthly payment An order for the payment of a certain sum annually for the value of clothes is not legal—2 Weir 627 But where a razinamah entered into between the parties contains an agreement for the payment of a certain sum annually for value of clothes the wife is entitled to ask the Court to give effect to the general intention of the parties as disclosed by the razinamah by allotting in the monthly allowance the value of the clothes agreed to be paid annually—2 Weir 634

The payment of maintenance must be in money an order for payment of maintenance in grain is not in accordance with this Code—2 Weir 626 2 Weir 627 1911 P R 13 1887 P R 3 Itru v Mabon 25 Cr L J 1271 (Lah) So also an order directing a mixed payment in kind and cash is contrary to the terms of this section—Mukta v Dattu Mahade 6 Bom L R 186

An order under this section fixing the duration of the period for which the maintenance is to be paid is illegal—2 Weir 634

1279 Amount of maintenance —In determining the amount of maintenance no luxury should be allowed but only the necessaries of life should be considered according to the station in life of the applicant and the means of the respondent—4 Bur L T 269 The maximum amount which can be awarded for the maintenance of each person is now Rs 100 under the old law it was Rs 50 The words in the whole mean that a sum of money not exceeding Rs 100 should be ordered to be paid and no other payment either in the shape of school fees or medical expenses etc should be ordered to be paid The words do not mean that when a woman makes an application for herself and for her children she can only be awarded Rs 100 for the maintenance of herself and of her children whatever be the number The Magistrate can order a sum not exceeding Rs 100 to be paid for the wife and for each of the children unable to maintain itself—Kent v Kent, 49 Mad 891 49 M L J 335 26 Cr L J 1597 Where a wife applied for maintenance of herself and her four children and the Magistrate ordered the husband to pay Rs 50 (under the old section) for maintenance of the wife and Rs 10 for each child every month it was held that the order was legal The husband was liable to maintain his wife and each of his children and the Magistrate might order him to pay as much as Rs 50 for each of them if each child was living with a different person And the fact that all the children were at the time in the custody of mother could not affect the question of what should be paid to [illegible]—4 Bur L T 139

A prospective order providing for increase being made in the amount awarded for the child's maintenance hereafter as the child grows older is not justified by law—2 N W P 154. A Magistrate cannot under this section make an order for maintenance at a progressively increasing rate. He may however under section 489 from time to time alter the rate of monthly allowance granted under this section as the child grows older—12 Cal 555, 14 Mad 398

The Magistrate shall order the amount to be paid to the wife or child as the case may be. An order for the payment of the amount of maintenance at the Taluk Kutchery is not authorised by law—2 Weir 6[illegible]

Order should specify amount payable to each person—An order under this section awarded Rs 40 for the maintenance of the wife and son but nothing was said as to what portion was to be for the wife and what portion for the son. At the time the wife applied for enforcement of the order the son was over 19 years of age and earning sufficient for him to live on. The Magistrate altered (under section 489) the monthly allowance into Rs 25 payable to the wife only. It was held that as regards the son the foundation of the order was taken away when he was able to maintain himself and it became spent so far as he was concerned and was not enforceable and that the Magistrate in the original order not having allotted any particular portion to the wife the order could not be partially enforced in favour of the wife but that she should make a fresh application for maintenance for herself alone—9 L B R 4[illegible]

Sub-section (2)—The maintenance allowance is payable only from the date of the order (or at most from the date of the application). A direction to pay maintenance from a date prior to such date is opposed to this section—2 Weir 635; Abdul Rahim v. Israr Begum 7 Lah 563, 27 Cr L J 610; Omree v. Elahi 1870 P R 5. But when an order for such retrospective payment was made with the consent of the parties the High Court did not interfere—2 Weir 635

1280 Sub-section (3)—Enforcement of order—In this sub-section the words "fails without sufficient cause" have been substituted for the words "wilfully neglects" because of difficulties which have arisen in the interpretation of the word "wilfully". Under the old law it was held that before an order for imprisonment could be made on default of payment of maintenance strict proof was necessary that the non-payment was due to wilful neglect on the part of the defendant and mere omission to pay the arrears was not sufficient—[illegible] Cal [illegible] 5 O C 110 [illegible] Cal [illegible]. Under the present law no such proof is necessary but simple non-payment without sufficient cause is sufficient to attract the provisions of this sub-section

When execution of a maintenance order is applied for and the counter petitioner files a counter petition setting out certain grounds on which he contends that the order should not be executed the Court is bound to consider the sufficiency of the cause alleged by the counter petitioner and to refuse the execution if the Court is satisfied that the cause is sufficient and to grant execution if the Court is not satisfied with the cause alleged The Legislature has used the expression sufficient cause obviously intending that the Magistrate before whom the matter comes up should be in a position to use his judicial discretion having regard to all the circumstances, and that such judicial discretion should not be fettered or limited by any definite rule The expression sufficient cause is wide enough to include all possible considerations that may be submitted to the Magistrate in the circumstances of the case—Teetharappa v Meenakshi 48 M L J 404 26 Cr L J 953

Under this section the Magistrate can imprison the person proceeded against after default is made but he cannot take security from that person in anticipation of default—24 W R 7.

Warrant —A warrant in respect of the breach of the order is a condition precedent to the inflicting of imprisonment—O I v Narain 9 All 240 A Police officer when executing a warrant for the levy of the amount of maintenance recoverable under this section can break open an inner door of the house of the person against whom it is executed—Ratanlal 431

The law contemplates only a single warrant of commitment regarding the arrears due at the time of issue Where six months arrears are due, a separate warrant of commitment for each month's arrears is bad in law—25 Cal 291 The levy of accumulated arrears of maintenance by a single warrant and in one proceeding is not illegal—7 M H C R App 38 6 M H C R App 2

The second proviso (newly added) to this sub-section provides a period of limitation (one year from the date of default) within which the application is to be made for the issue of the warrant for realisation of the outstanding arrears

1281. Imprisonment —The imprisonment may be awarded only after default is made Where it was provided in the order of maintenance itself that in case of the defendant failing to pay the monthly allowance he should be imprisoned for a term of 16 days for every breach of the order it was held that the order was in anticipation of the procedure to take place on a wilful default if such should occur and was therefore illegal—5 M H C R App 31 Imprisonment is a means of enforcing payment and an order for imprisonment can be passed only after there has been negligence to pay the amount of maintenance—Sitheswar v Gyanada 22 Cal 291

Release on payment —The imprisonment awarded under this section is not a punishment for contempt of the Court's order nor is it an absolute sentence It is passed only for the unpaid portion of the maintenance or in other words it is owing to default of payment of the unrealised portion of the maintenance Therefore, the imprisonment ought to cease upon payment of the amount of maintenance—Sitheswar v Gyanada 22 Cal 291 The words until payment if sooner made did not occur in the 1882 Code, and therefore it was held in 8 Mad , and L B R (1892 96) , so that a person committed to jail for nonpayment of maintenance was not entitled to be released even when the

were paid, because the imprisonment ordered in default of payment was held to be a punishment for breach of the order of the Court These rulings are no longer good law

Nature of imprisonment —The imprisonment under this section may be either simple or rigorous looking to the terms of sec 2 (18) of the General Clauses Act—9 All 240 In Form XL not only simple but rigorous imprisonment is provided for, but it would be safer to order the imprisonment to be simple—U B R (1892 1896) 70

Term of Imprisonment —It has been held in 9 All 240, 6 M H C R App 22 and 7 Bur L T 275 that the maximum term of imprisonment is one month, and that only one month s imprisonment can be awarded on the whole in default of payment of the aggregate of the amounts due In the Burma case the words for the whole or any part of each month s allowance remaining unpaid have been interpreted to mean for the whole or any part of every month s or all months allowance remaining unpaid Such an interpretation seems to be too laboured The more reasonable view has been taken in the following cases Thus a person who has wilfully neglected to pay the arrears of maintenance for several months may be imprisoned for more than one month—1877 P R 12 1919 P R 12 The imprisonment in default of payment of maintenance is not to be limited to one month The procedure contemplated by the Code appears to be to ascertain how many months arrears are due The maximum imprisonment that can be imposed will then be one month for each month s arrears and if there is a balance representing the arrears for a portion of a month a further term of a month s imprisonment may be imposed for such arrears—9 Mad 3 25 Cal 291

1282 When order cannot be enforced —Where a woman to whom maintenance has been ordered under this section subsequently voluntarily resides with her husband the original order becomes ineffectual and if the husband again refuses to maintain her fresh proceedings must be instituted under this section—1888 A W N 217

When the husband on summons appears and pays the arrears of maintenance into Court, the Magistrate cannot order imprisonment—1891 A W N 19

Where the husband has been adjudged an insolvent the order of maintenance cannot be enforced so long as the order of adjudication stands and he cannot therefore be imprisoned for default of payment—Halfhide v Halfhide 50 Cal 867

If the defaulter dies the order cannot be enforced against his estate —11 Cal 88

But the defendant s inability to pay is not a ground for the Magistrate s refusal to enforce the order for maintenance If the allowance granted is too excessive he may revise the rate of maintenance on further inquiry and the order will take effect from the date of such inquiry—2 Weir 636

1283 Offer to maintain wife —Where the husband offers to maintain his wife and the wife consents to live with him the Magistrate cannot make an order under this section unless the complainant (wife) satisfies him that notwithstanding such offer there is just ground for making such order—1 C L J 214

The offer to maintain must be a bona fide offer and not made with the object of escaping obligation—13 Cr L J 55 But the fact that in the past he has neglected to maintain should not be considered as sufficient by itself to lead to the presumption that the offer is not made in good faith—1917 P R 22 In .. Cr L J 149 (Lah) it has been held that if it is found that the husband had formerly turned his wife out of his house his subsequent offer to keep her in his house cannot be taken to be bona fide and he cannot escape his liability to maintain her under this section merely by such an offer because he may break his promise as soon as she gets home

The offer must be to maintain wife as wife It has been however held in 16 Bom 269 that where the husband offered to keep the complainant in his house not as wife but as a servant or dependant the offer was a sufficient offer within the meaning of this section But this decision does not seem to be just The Madras High Court rightly lays down that an offer to maintain wife must be one to maintain her with the consideration due to her position as wife—17 Mad 260 2 Weir 641 And therefore where a Hindu husband having two wives offered to maintain his first wife in his own house adding that he would not live with her but would supply grain for her to cook her own food and eat it separately in the house such an offer was not a sufficient offer within the meaning of this section—6 Mad 371 Sakrulla v Fatima 25 Cr L J 453 (Nag)

1284 Grounds of wife's refusal to live with husband —An order for separate maintenance in favour of the wife may be made under this section if the wife has just grounds for refusing to live with her husband Inability of husband and wife to agree to live together is not a ground for ordering separate maintenance for wife—6 W R 59 A Magistrate is not authorised to entertain an application for maintenance where the husband has neither ill treated his wife nor has refused or neglected to maintain her but she of her own accord left her husband s house and protection—6 N W P 205 When the wife voluntarily leaves her husband s house without sufficient justification she is not entitled to any order under this section unless the husband refuses to maintain her or turns her out or ill treats her so as to make it impossible for her to live with her husband —5 Bom L R 614

(1) Cruelty —If the husband so ill treates his wife (e g drives her out with blows) that she is compelled to leave his house she is justified in refusing to live with her husband and in claiming maintenance—Raipati v Deoli 46 All 877 (878) Under the Code of 1882 cruelty was the only ground on which a wife was justified in living separately from her husband and demanding maintenance But the words that he habitually treated his wife with cruelty which occurred in the Code of

1882 have been substituted by the words 'that there is just ground for so doing This alteration gives the Magistrate larger discretion in giving maintenance. The present Code does not restrict the payment of maintenance, when the wife is living separately, only to cases of cruelty—4 Bur L T 269 There are other grounds on which the wife may live separately and claim maintenance —

(2) If a Christian husband reverts to Hinduism and marries a second (Hindu) wife, the Christian wife may refuse to live with her husband and apply for maintenance—4 M H C R App 3

(3) Adultery on the part of the husband, although not punishable under the I. P C may nevertheless constitute sufficient cause for the wife living separately from her husband and enable her to claim maintenance under this section—Gantapalli v Gantapalli 20 Mad 470 (472) 13 All 348 Where the husband is living with a mistress in the house at the time of application the wife is entitled to refuse to live with him and a subsequent offer made by the husband in Court to give up his mistress does not deprive the wife of her right of refusal to live with her husband—14 Bur L R 240 But in such cases the Magistrate should take into consideration the social habits of the particular community to which the parties belong If that community does not completely disapprove of concubinage and tolerates it so far as to give kept women some status and rights the fact that the husband keeps a concubine ought not by itself to entitle the wife to claim separate maintenance—Gantapalli v Gantapalli 20 Mad 470 (475) The circumstance that a Hindu husband keeps a concubine in the house will not entitle a wife to an allowance for maintenance if her husband is willing to receive her and treat her with the consideration which is due to her position—2 Weir 641 O F v Mannatha, 17 Mad 260

(4) Where the breach between the husband and wife is irremediable and it is quite impossible for the latter to return to the former after many years separation without leading to fresh trouble and dispute she is entitled to maintenance by living separate from him—1914 P W R 26.

(5) The marriage of a Mahomedan with the step-mother of his wife is not valid under the Mahomedan law The wife is entitled in such a case that she would not live with her husband during the continuance of such marriage—2 Weir 647

(6) Where a Burmese Buddhist has taken a lesser wife without the consent of the chief wife the latter can refuse to live with her husband and at the same time can claim maintenance—4 L B R 340 Also according to Burmese Buddhist law, the fact that the husband took a second wife might be a good reason for the first wife's refusal to live with him, unless he provided her with a separate residence—11 Bur L T 105

The following are not sufficient grounds for the wife's refusal to live with her husband —

(1) The fact that the husband has married again does not entitle the first wife to separate maintenance if the husband is willing to maintain her in his house—7 Mad. 187, 1880 P. R. 27, 188- P R 31 1874 P R

2, 1877 P R 66 Ratanlal 7 1914 P R 13 Sufrulla v Fatma 25 Cr L J 453 (Nag) The existence of a co wife with whom the complainant had quarrels or the husband s want of affection for the complainant or his greater affection for the co wife is not a valid ground of the complainant s refusal to live with her husband—1901 P R 14 The fact that the younger wife will suffer annoyance from the elder wife and that the husband may not protect her from such annoyance is not a proper ground for the younger wife s refusing to live with her husband and claiming maintenance—1904 U B R 1st Qr (Cr P C) 10

(2) Minority of the wife is not a ground for her not living with her husband if the husband offers to maintain his wife in her house—1882 P R 1 though in such a case having regard to her tender age it might be better that she should live with her parents

(3) Where the husband is willing to maintain his wife the fact that the prompt dower has not been paid is not a ground for separate residence and maintenance—1888 P R 6 1880 P R 15

In the following cases past adultery of the wife was held sufficient to disentitle her to maintenance although she was not living in adultery at the time of the application Thus where a woman committed adultery with a man of low caste and was expelled from her caste thereby making it impossible for her husband to live with her she could not claim maintenance although at the time of application she was not living in adultery—Ponnammal v Peria Moopan 31 Mad 185 Ram Autar v Raghurai 3 O W N 717 27 Cr L J 1190 Where the wife deserted her husband many years ago and led a life of adultery and has not attempted to seek her husband s pardon for past misconduct the wife was not entitled to maintenance merely because she was not living in adultery at the time of making the application for maintenance—Ratanlal 506

There must be clear proof of adultery The mere fact that the husband considers the wife s conduct open to suspicion is not sufficient—2 Weir 647 A mere suspicion by the husband that the child of the wife was the result of her intimacy with another man is not a ground of refusing maintenance—1881 A W N 37 The mere fact that the panchayet of the brotherhood condemned the wife s conduct is not a gro for dismissing an application for maintenance and the Magis should have inquired whether the wife was living in adultery—1881 A W N 62

'Refuses to live with her husband' —See Note 1281 ante Where a Hindu wife leaves her husband's house without good cause, her right of maintenance is only suspended, and she has the right to return to her husband's house and claim maintenance—12 S L R 90

"Living separately by mutual consent" —A wife is not entitled to maintenance from her husband when both have entered into an agreement which provides for their living separately by mutual consent, and they are actually living separately in terms of that agreement—Ratanlal 570 Where it appeared that by mutual consent, the husband and wife had been living separately for a number of years, and that the maintenance of the wife was, by arrangement made at the time they began to live separately, provided for by the assignment to her of some land the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to make an order under this section—2 Weir 648

To bring the case within sub section (4) it must be shown that the husband and the wife are living apart by a definite contract mutually made between them A contract voluntarily and freely made and entered into between the parties is essential Where therefore a husband and wife are living apart in obedience to the decree of a Panchayet of their castemen by which the wife is awarded maintenance, it cannot be said that they are living apart by mutual consent—4 P L J 109

1286. Sub-section (5) :—Cancellation of order :—Under this sub-section, an allowance granted to the wife only can be cancelled an allowance granted to a child cannot be cancelled, though it may be altered under sec 489—1885 P R 17 An order for maintenance of the child of a divorced Mahomedan wife, who has married again, cannot be cancelled under this section Such an order can be cancelled only on the ground of change of circumstances mentioned in sec 489—27 All 11

'Is living in adultery' —An order granting maintenance to a wife can be cancelled under this sub section upon proof that the wife is living in adultery subsequent to the order—Ratanlal 353 8 B H C R 124, 5 All 224 But adultery previous to the order of maintenance is not admissible in evidence to cancel the order An order cancelling maintenance on the ground of facts antecedent to the order granting maintenance is illegal on the principle of res judicata—5 All 224 Evidence of past adultery is admissible under sub-section (4) before passing an order of maintenance but after an order is passed, such past adultery cannot be considered for the purpose of cancelling the order

There must be sufficient evidence of adultery The fact that the wife continually went to the bazar, or that men went to the house where she lived (especially when other people including the wife's mother lived in that house) is not sufficient evidence to lead to the conclusion that the wife was living in adultery—1893 A W N 56 The words 'living in adultery' mean a continuous course of misconduct, and unless this continuity is established it cannot be inferred from a single act of adultery that the woman is living in adultery. Therefore, where a woman is whom maintenance had been awarded under this section gave birth to an illegitimate child held that this single instance of misconduct did not show that she was living in adultery so as to enable the Magistrate to cancel the allowance—Jatindra v Gour Bala 29 C W N 647 26 Cr L J 1184 Where the husband alleges adultery the Magistrate should make an inquiry and adjudicate upon such allegation—1901 P R 36 1882 A W N 166

Living separately by mutual consent —Where after an order for maintenance has been passed both the husband and wife while temporarily living together presented a petition by which they agreed that the husband should pay his wife Rs 10 a month so long as she stayed at the house of her father and the petition asked for a decree on the said terms held that the intention of the parties was when they filed the petition, that the wife should abandon all claims for arrears due till then —Parul Bala v Satish 37 C L J 180

Where the wife denied the validity of an alleged deed of compromise by which the parties agreed to a reduction in the rate of the allowance ordered by the Magistrate it was held that the Magistrate was not competent to cancel the order for maintenance until the agreement had been declared by a competent tribunal to be binding on the wife—2 Weir 649

Other cases —Sub-section (5) is not exhaustive of the grounds on which an order for maintenance may be cancelled Thus an order can be cancelled on the ground of divorce Where the husband pleads in answer to an application for enforcement of the order of maintenance that he has lawfully divorced his wife and such plea is proved the Court will decline to enforce the order for the period subsequent to the date when the marriage ceased to exist—19 All 50 7 Bom 180 17 N L R 92 The apostacy of a Mahomedan wife ipso facto dissolves the marriage and the wife therefore is not entitled to maintenance from her husband—9 L B R 206 In case of Mahomedans the order becomes inoperative on the expiry of the period of iddat after divorce —13 Bur L T 43 Similarly where the father was ordered to pay maintenance to his daughter the marriage of the daughter makes her maintenance a charge on her husband and not on her father and the father may apply for cancellation of the order—2 Weir 650 But these grounds are neither mentioned in this sub section nor are they covered by Sec 489 which speaks only of alteration of allowance and not of cancellation of the maintenance order Therefore it is suggested that either this sub-section should be made more comprehensive or the language of Sec 489 should be so altered as to cover the above cases See Note 1295 under Sec 489

Application to whom to be made —An application for the cancellation of an order of maintenance must be made to the Magistrate who made the original order or to his successor in office—Bhagwanti v Sheo Charan 25 All 545

1287. Subsection (6) —Evidence —An order under this section must be passed on proof in the proceedings and not upon knowledge acquired by the Magistrate in some other case—8 W R 6

the various elements required to sustain an order under this section must be strictly proved by evidence recorded on oath—13 W R 19 An order for payment of maintenance without recording evidence and without examining any witnesses is illegal—2 Weir 628 Where a Magistrate, instead of examining the applicant at length and her witnesses got her only to verify on oath the truth and correctness of her application, and treating her application as legal evidence against the husband passed an order for maintenance, held that the order was bad—23 O C 237 Proceedings under this Chapter are judicial in their nature and should not be conducted as if they were ministerial matters The notes of evidence therefore should not be vague or inadequate and the order recorded must be issued on distinct findings of fact—5 All 224 If however an order is made with the consent of parties the necessity of evidence may be dispensed with—2 Weir 629

The evidence must be recorded as provided by Sec 355 Proceedings under this Chapter cannot be conducted as in a summary trial under Chapter XXII—20 Cal 351

Presence of the defendant —As directed by this sub-section, the inquiry should be conducted in the presence of the person proceeded against A proceeding under this section should not be conducted ex parte Evidence should be taken in the presence of the defendant or his pleader unless the Court is satisfied that the defendant is wilfully avoiding service of summons or neglecting to attend the Court, proceedings should not be taken ex parte—1 C L J 102 Proceedings can be conducted in the presence of the pleader only when the personal attendance of the defendant has been dispensed with Where his attendance has not been dispensed with, the Court is justified in refusing to hear the Mukhtear by whom he is represented, and the Court ought to insist upon the presence of the defendant and should not proceed ex parte—2 Bom L R 700

Under the proviso to this sub section the Magistrate may proceed ex parte, if he is satisfied that the defendant is wilfully avoiding service and neglecting to attend the Court But in every case of absence of the defendant the Court ought not to treat the absence as due to wilful neglect—2 Bom L R 700 A Court ought not to infer that the defendant was neglecting to attend the Court, when the inability to attend was due to the absence of specification in the summons of the place where he was to appear—7 M H C R App 43

Where, no notice having been served on the person against whom the proceedings were taken the order was passed ex parte, and within three months he applied to the Magistrate s successor to have the order revised, stating that he had no notice of the application such succeeding Magistrate had jurisdiction under sec 488 (6) to have the case re opened and disposed of according to law—2 Bur L J 61

Presence of complainant —This section does not require the personal attendance of the complainant. If the complainant be a pardanashin lady, her presence may be dispensed with—1903 P R 19 In 1 C L J 214 and U B R (1892 96) 61, however, the Magistrate dismissed an application for maintenance for default of appearance of the complainant

1288 Sub-section (9)—Forum —This sub-section did not occur in the 1872 and 1882 Codes and it was therefore held that the application must be heard by the Magistrate within whose jurisdiction the wife resided—13 All 348 5 N W P 237 These decisions are no longer good law Under the present Code the proper Court to take cognizance of a petition by the wife under this section is the Court within whose jurisdiction the husband or the father as the case may be resides—See 24 Cal 638 9 Bom 40 1885 P R 13 1893 P R 3 This sub-section does not give the wife or child to select a forum other than that where the husband or father is then residing or last resided with the complainant—1904 U B R 1st Qr (Cr C P) 10

Mere casual residence in a place for a temporary purpose with no intention of remaining is not residence so as to give jurisdiction to the Magistrate of that place—Ramdei v Jhunni Lal 1 Luck 343 3 O W N 231, 27 Cr L J 820 Flowers v Flowers 32 All 203 (F B) Where the husband pays only occasional visits to his wife who lives apart from him, he cannot be said to reside at the place where the wife resides so as to give jurisdiction to the Magistrate of that place—24 O C 249 5 S L R 220 Therefore where the husband who was a resident of Lahore for 11 years took his wife to Lucknow at her brother s house and left her there declaring that he would support her no longer and his stay at Lucknow did not exceed a week held that the application for maintenance should be made at Lahore and not at Lucknow—Ramdei v Jhunni (supra) But a man may be said to reside with the mother of the illegitimate child if he visits her only occasionally at her settled abode so long as he has the intention of continuing to visit her and where she has no permanent residence elsewhere two months stay at a place where she is occasionally visited by the father of the children is sufficient to constitute that place as his residence for the purpose of this sub-section—5 S L R 220 In 21 C W N 872 however temporary residence was held sufficient to give jurisdiction to the Magistrate of that place Thus where it appeared that the husband ordinarily resided outside Calcutta but was temporarily there on the date the application was filed and for some days previously it was held that this temporary residence gave the Calcutta Court jurisdiction under this sub-section

1289 Whether civil suit lies —Where the right to maintenance is conferred by this section as well as by the personal law of the parties the right can be enforced not only under this section but also by a civil suit for maintenance But where the right is not conferred by the personal law of the parties (e g the right of the illegitimate children of a Hindu by a non Hindu woman to get maintenance from their putative father) such right cannot be enforced by a civil suit, and the only remedy is that provided by this section The distinction between a remedy under the common law and a remedy under this section is that the right under the common law may be enforced not only against the father during his life time but also against his estate if his death but a right under this section does not survive the death of the father— 7 Mad 13

Order does not bar civil suit —An order under this section passed by a Magistrate does not take away the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts—D raji Mahuga v Maratikarin 30 Mad 100 A Magistrate s order for maintenance does not bar the jurisdiction of the Civil Court to make a declaration that the husband is not liable to pay separate maintenance to his wife—2 Weir 615 Inspite of an order for maintenance of illegitimate children passed by a Magistrate a civil suit is maintainable for a declaration that the children are not the children of the plaintiff—1 O C 331 1 Bur L J 82 Similarly, an order of a Magistrate refusing maintenance does not bar a suit in a Civil Court for maintenance—32 Cal 479 Contra—18 All 29 and 2 Weir 614 where it has been held that a Magistrate s order for maintenance of wife duly made under this section cannot be superseded by a decree of the Civil Court declaring that the wife is not entitled to any maintenance

1290 Effect of Civil Court decree —Effect of previous decree —A Civil Court s decree cannot be disturbed by an order of the Magistrate Where a decision for a monthly allowance for maintenance has been obtained in the Civil Court and is in force the Magistrate is not competent to order a further and separate maintenance—2 Weir 615 The jurisdiction vested in the Magistrate is auxiliary to that of the Civil Court and it is not open to a Magistrate to ignore a final decree of a Civil Court on the ground that it rests on reasons which do not appear to him satisfactory—2 Weir 615 Where the husband has obtained a decree for restitution of conjugal rights and the decree is in force no application for maintenance [illegible]
—U B R (1910) [illegible]
child is not the c[illegible]
decree as conclusive on the question of relationship and should refuse to pass any order for the maintenance of the child—3 M L J 419 But the weight to be attached to a decree must depend upon the particular circumstances of the case and no hard and fast rule can be laid down that a decree of a Civil Court is for ever binding on the Magistrate If, after the husband had obtained a decree for restitution of conjugal rights he ill treated his wife so much that she had to leave his house and she applied to the Magistrate for an order of maintenance and the Magistrate granted the application on the ground that she was justified in refusing to live with her husband held that the Magistrate was justified in ignoring the decree and in exercising his discretion in favour of the wife by absolving her from the condition that she must live with her husband Otherwise the husband can at first get a decree for restitution of conjugal rights and then turn his wife out without any allowance at all—Laipati v Dooli 46 All 8,7 (8,8)

The existence of an order of the Probate Divorce and Admiralty Division of the High Court in England whereby the husband is directed to pay his wife so much alimony per month is no bar to an application by the wife under sec 488 Cr P C if in fact the husband has neglected to maintain his wife The existence of the order is not sufficient to oust the jurisdiction of the Magistrate for a mere order for maintenance is not equivalent to maintenance Sec 488 gives jurisdiction to the Magistrate to award maintenance if he is satisfied that a person has neglected to maintain his wife—Kent v Kent, 49 Mad 831 49 M L J 335 6 Cr L J 1597

Effect of subsequent decree —Where an order is passed by a Magistrate under this section for maintenance against the husband and in a subsequent suit by the husband in the Civil Court for restitution of conjugal rights a consent decree is passed allowing the wife maintenance and residence held that the decree of the Civil Court will supersede the Magistrate's order—27 All 483 The decree of a Civil Court for restitution of conjugal rights supersedes any previous order of a Magistrate for maintenance if the wife should persist in refusing to live with her husband The Magistrate ought to cancel his order or rather to treat it as determined if the wife failing to comply with the decree for restitution refuses to live with her husband—In re Bulakidas 23 Bom 484 Maung Tha v Ma Mya 9 Bur L T 162 17 Cr L J 412 In re Chandulal 43 Bom 883 21 Bom L R 766 20 Cr L J 687 See the new sub-section (2) of sec 489 But a decree of a Civil Court ordering restitution of conjugal rights does not ipso facto cancel a maintenance order passed under the Cr P Code In considering any application for cancellation of a maintenance order the Magistrate is not necessarily bound to follow the order of the Civil Court but must consider it along with any other circumstances which may be brought before him—Maung Dun v Ma Sein, 3 Rang 150 26 Cr L J 1341 A I R 1925 Rang 268 Where a decree for restitution of conjugal rights imposing certain conditions on the husband is passed against a wife who had obtained an order for maintenance non compliance by the husband with the conditions of the decree would revive the right of the wife to claim maintenance and to have the order enforced—Devi Ditta v Ganga Devi 1906 P R 4 Cr L J 73 See also 3 P L T 51 A husband against whom an order for maintenance was passed obtained subsequently a decree for restitution of conjugal rights Two execution petitions filed by him were dismissed as he failed to prosecute the same diligently and it was clear from his conduct that he was not at all anxious to get back his wife to live with him on the ordinary terms of husband and wife Held that as the object in getting the decree for restitution of conjugal rights was merely to get the maintenance order cancelled and not a bonafide wish to live amicably with her the Court should not exercise its discretion under clause (2) of sec 489 and cancel the order for maintenance—Palakkal v Athappa 49 M L J 269 27 Cr L J 30

When the Civil Court finds that the relationship of husband and wife has ceased to exist the husband is entitled to ask the Magistrate who is enforcing the order of maintenance to abstain from giving further effect to the order—Ituil Ali v Fullon Sah ba 14 Cal 276 Where a Civil Court has decided any points which would disentitle the wife to maintenance the Magistrate who had passed an order for maintenance, bound in the interests of justice to take the judgment into consideration before passing a fresh order to enforce the former order—2 Weir 614 Similarly where the relationship on which the maintenance order is based has been declared by a final decree of a competent Civil Court not to exist it is open to the person adversely affected by the order to ask the Magistrate to abstain from giving any further effect to the order of maintenance Therefore a Civil Court decree declaring that A is not the child of B supersedes a Magistrate s previous order for A s maintenance and the Magistrate cannot enforce the Criminal Court s order after the Civil Court decree is passed—Venkayya v Padamma 46 Mad 721, 45 M L J 104 4 Cr L J 720 16 Cr L J 609 (Oudh) 13 Bur L T 104

1291 Miscellaneous—Fresh application —It is not competent for a Magistrate to hold a second inquiry into the same allegations which have once been already inquired into and dismissed by a competent Court—1916 P R 24 17 Cr L J 106 (Cal) But the Magistrate can entertain a subsequent application for fresh cause shown There may be change of circumstances which would enable the applicant to come in o Court again not on the same ground but on a new ground—U B R (1892 96) 64 2 Weir 033

But if the previous application has been dismissed for default of appearance and there was no adjudication regarding the merits a second application is entertainable—24 C W N 32, 30 C L J 128 Contra—1 C L J 214 where it has been held that if an application under this section is dismissed for default the law does not empower the Magistrate to rehear the application

Insanity of defendant —If the defendant in a proceeding under this section is alleged to be insane the Magistrate has no power to appoint a guardian ad litem but he should hold a judicial inquiry into his sanity and put him under medical observation if necessary If as a result of such inquiry he comes to the conclusion that the defendant is insane he must follow the procedure laid down in Ch XXXIV and postpone the proceedings until the Magistrate is satisfied that the defendant is capable of understanding the proceedings—Appichi v Kuthu Jammal 48 Mad 388 48 M L J 187 26 Cr L J 701

Further inquiry —When an application under this section is dismissed by a Magistrate the District Magistrate cannot order further inquiry under sec 436, because the defendant is not in the position of an accused—1 C P L R 127 25 All 545

Appeal —When a Magistrate orders maintenance under this section no appeal lies as there is no conviction of an offence—7 W R 10, 5 B H C R 81

No limitation —A wife does not lose her right of maintenance because she has delayed in making the application—2 Weir 016 The law has not fixed any time within which a claim of maintenance is to be made The fact that the wife has not advanced her claim immediately on her husband s desertion of her does not disentitle her to maintenance—2 Weir 015 The second proviso to sub-section (3) provides a period of limitation for an application for the issue of a warrant for enforcement of the order but not for an application for maintenance

1292 Nature of proceedings under this section —A proceeding under this section is of a criminal nature and therefore it is a criminal case within the meaning of Sec 528 and the District Magistrate may withdraw a case instituted under this section from the file of a first class Magistrate to his own file—1905 P R 5 No appeal lies under clause 15 of the Letters Patent against the order of a single Judge made on a revision petition against the order of a Magistrate under this section as the order is one passed in a criminal trial—17 M L T 330 If the parties to the proceedings compromise the claim for maintenance the Magistrate cannot pass an order in accordance with the terms of the compromise because to do so would be to assume the functions of a Civil Court—2 Weir 629

But though the proceeding under this section is of a criminal nature, still the person proceeded against under this section cannot be called an accused he can be examined as a witness and oath can be administered to him—17 C P L R 1-7 The Calcutta High Court holds that proceedings under this section are civil proceedings and the defendant there to may give evidence on his own behalf—16 Cal 81 This is now expressly provided by sub section (2) of sec 340 A proceeding under this section being a proceeding of a civil nature the parties can be examined as witnesses—18 Bom 468 The word accused was formerly inadvertently used in sub section (9) The Legislature has now corrected the error by substituting the words any person for the word accused This section is not intended to be punitive but a preventive one and hence the neglect or refusal to pay maintenance is not an offence within the meaning of section 4—1893 P R 15 and an application for maintenance is not a complaint of an offence—1885 P R 13 17 C P L R 127 Compensation cannot be awarded under section 250 to the person proceeded against if the complaint is dismissed as false and frivolous or vexatious—6 M L T 261

1293 Revision —The High Court has jurisdiction to set aside or modify the Magistrate s order if the rate of maintenance awarded appears to be excessive or to order further inquiry with a view to decide what amount should be allowed—Mad H C Pro 9—7—1887 The High Court can set aside in revision a previous order of a Criminal Court passed under this section in view of a subsequent decree of a Civil Court—16 Cr L J 609 (Oudh)

But the High Court does not interfere in revision when other issues are raised which should be settled in the Civil Courts and when nothing is to be gained by protracted litigation in the Criminal Court In such cases the persons aggrieved by Magisterial orders should take their case to the Civil Courts—In re Kandasami 50 M L J 44 -7 Cr L J 350

Alteration in allowance

489 (1) On proof of a change in the circumstances of any person receiving under Section 488 a monthly allowance, ordered under the same section to pay a monthly allowance to his wife or child, the Magistrate may make such alteration in the allowance as he thinks fit:

Provided that if he increases the allowance the monthly rate of one hundred rupees in the whole be not exceeded.

(2) Where it appears to the Magistrate that, in consequence of any decision of a competent Civil Court, any order made under section 488 should be cancelled or varied, he shall cancel the order, or, as the case may be, vary the same accordingly.

Change :—In sub section (1) the words 'one hundred' have been substituted for the word 'fifty', and sub-section (2) has been newly added by section 132 of the Cr P Code Amendment Act XVIII of 1923

1294. Scope :—This section furnishes the ground on which the Court passing an order under sec 488 can modify that order An order of a competent Court under sec 488 for the maintenance of a child can be modified under this section—27 All 11 When a maintenance order is made with reference to the means of the husband, he should apply under this section, if he is aggrieved, for reduction of the allowance—9 W R 1 The revision of an order of maintenance and the grant of it on a lower scale than that of the original order is not legal without an application under this section from one of the parties and without proof of change of circumstances—2 Weir 628

An application under this section can be made so long as there is a subsisting order under section 488 Thus an order awarding maintenance to the wife was passed in 1910, afterwards in 1912 the husband obtained a decree for restitution of conjugal rights, but he never executed it and went on paying the maintenance to his wife as before In 1915 the wife applied for increase of the amount of maintenance under sec 489 Held that this application could not be granted because there was no subsisting order under section 488, the same having been put an end to by the decree of 1912 The fact that the husband continued to pay the maintenance inspite of the decree of 1912 did not keep the order of 1910 alive—43 Bom 885

1295. Change of circumstances :—The expression 'change in the circumstances' in this section means not merely a temporary or accidental change in one of such circumstances (such as salary) but a change in all the circumstances connected with the condition of the person —1891 A W N 32

The change of circumstances in this section is a change of pecuniary or other circumstances of the party paying or receiving the allowance which would justify an increase or decrease of the amount of the monthly payment originally fixed, and not a change in the status of the parties which would entail stoppage of the allowance—19 All 50 The words 'alteration in the allowance' clearly indicate that the section refers to such change of circumstances as would necessitate only an alteration in the amount of allowance and not to circumstances (e g divorce) which entail the discontinuance of allowance altogether—5 All 226 (per Mahmood J) Circumstances which necessitate not merely an alteration in the allowance but a cancellation of the order of maintenance do not come under this section but should fall under sub section (5) of section 488 and that sub section should be made much more comprehensive in its terms so as to include those circumstances See Note 1286 under section 488 under sub heading other cases But the Madras High Court has held in a recent case that the word alteration includes cancellation The reduction of the maintenance allowance to nothing (which is the same thing as cancellation of the order granting maintenance) would come within the meaning of the word alteration Therefore a Magistrate can under this section cancel the allowance granted to the daughter if she has since been married and has thus become able to maintain herself by reason of her marriage—Meenakshi v Karuppani 48 Mad 503 48 M L J 183 26 Cr L J 73

The growth of the child or the birth of another child or the death of a child is a change in the circumstances—14 Mad 398 12 Cal 535 The fact that the children are grown up and are no longer unable to maintain themselves amounts to a change in the circumstances—19 Cr L J 160 (Bur) 9 L B R 49 Where a divorced Mahomedan wife has married again the fact that the second husband has merely undertaken to maintain her child by the first husband does not empower the Magistrate to cancel the order of maintenance passed against the first husband to maintain his child There is no such change of circumstances as is contemplated by this section—27 All 11 The second husband is not bound by law to maintain the child perhaps he may refuse to maintain it any day So the change of circumstances in this case is not such as can be relied upon

The change of circumstances must be actual and of such a nature that the law would recognise it The mere fact that the wife might possibly be able to earn something by her own labour is not a ground on which the husband may apply for reduction of the rate of allowance—1887 A W N 107 because the law does not compel a wife to work for her livelihood while her husband is living and has sufficient means to maintain her If the parties subsequent to an order under section 488 make an agreement modifying its terms such agreement would amount to a change in the circumstances and the party interested can apply under this section and get the order modified—25 All 165

1296 Alteration of allowance —As to whether alteration means cancellation see Note 1295 above

An order of alteration of allowance under this section cannot take effect retrospectively The Magistrate has no power to reduce the rate of maintenance which has already accrued due his order will take effect in respect of the allowance that will fall due after the date of the order—2 Weir 65 The arrears which have fallen due will be enforced at the rate originally fixed sioners acting under the authority of any commission from the Governor-General in Council for trial or to be examined touching any matter pending before such Court-martial or Commissioners respectively,

(e) that a prisoner within such limits be removed from one custody to another for the purpose of trial; and

(f) that the body of a defendant within such limits be brought in on the Sheriff's return of cepi corpus to a writ of attachment.

(2) The High Court may, from time to time, frame rules to regulate the procedure in cases under this section

(3) Nothing in this section applies to persons detained under the Bengal State Prisoners Regulation, 1818, Madras Regulation II of 1819 or Bombay Regulation XXV of 1827, or the State Prisoners Act, 1850, or the State Prisoners Act, 1858.

1298. Scope :—This section has been amended by section 30 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, XII of 1923 Under the old law, power under this section was given only to the High Courts at Calcutta Madras and Bombay, under the present section power is given to all High Courts Under the old law, the jurisdiction of the High Court in respect of proceedings under this section was confined to the limits of its original jurisdiction (41 Cal 76 and 46 Cal 52), under the present section the jurisdiction has been extended to mofussil places See 43 M L J 396 (F B) So also, the Criminal Appellate Bench of the High Court has power to dispose of applications under this section—Subodh Chandra v Emp, 52 Cal 319, 29 C W N 98 26 Cr L J 625

The investment of the extraordinary powers of habeas corpus in a High Court does not take away from the litigants their ordinary rights which they have under the Civil Law Therefore a refusal by the High Court to exercise the powers under this section to recover the custody of a child will not deprive the applicant of his right to seek his remedy either by means of an application under the Guardians and Wards Act or by means of a regular suit—Sua Lay v Yeo Boon, 4 Bur L J 260 27 Cr L J. 737

This section does not apply to a case where there has been a conviction and sentence Where there has been a conviction and sentence, the proper course, if there is a miscarriage of justice, is to take the matter to the Crown for remedy—44 Cal 723 (F B)

High Court's power not taken away by the Extradition Act—The High Court's power to issue a writ of habeas corpus has not been taken away from the procedure provided in the Indian Extradition Act, sec 1

sub-sections (6) and (7) —46 Cal 5 The High Court has power to issue an order and to examine whether a person detained in public custody under the Extradition Act is legally detained and this power is not taken away merely because the Government have already issued a warrant for surrender under sec 3 sub section (8) of that Act —Rudolf Sallmann 39 Cal 164

1299 Clause (b) —Custody of children —The High Court before passing an order in respect of a minor child ought to take into consideration the interest and welfare of the child —Zarabibi v Abdul 12 Bom L R 891 Saa Lay v Yeo Boon 4 Bur L J (?) 27 Cr L J 737 The Court will not ordinarily force a child to remain in a custody to which the child objects and before deciding as to its custody the Court will take account of the wishes of the child if it is old enough to form an intelligent preference—33 Mad 88 Where a mother had for eight years neglected her child who had been educated at a mission school the High Court refused her application for custody of the girl aged 15 years on the ground that if granted it would be detrimental to the welfare of the child —16 Bom 307 Where the father has delegated the guardianship of his children to another person the question whether the father is entitled to resume the guardianship depends on the children s interests and welfare—Annie Besant v Narayaniah 38 Mad 807 (P C)

The High Court of Judicature has under its Common Law powers jurisdiction to issue a writ for the production of a person outside British India provided it is satisfied that he is in the custody or control of a person within its jurisdiction Section 491 cannot be said to have affected this Common Law jurisdiction of the High Court—Mahomedali v Ismailji, 50 Bom 616 27 Cr L J 21

Appeal —When a petitioner obtains a rule calling upon the other side to show cause why a child should not be delivered to her and the rule is discharged the order discharging the rule is a judgment within the meaning of clause 15 of the Letters Patent and is therefore appelable—In re Narrondas 14 Bom 555 An order by a Judge directing a writ of habeas corpus to issue is not an order made in the exercise of criminal jurisdiction within the meaning of cl 15 of the Letters Patent and is open to appeal—Mahomedali v Ismailji (supra)

491A Any High Court established by Letters Patent may exercise the powers conferred by Section 491 in the case of any European British subject within such territories other than those within the limits of its appellate criminal jurisdiction, as the Governor-General in Council may direct

Powers of High Court outside the limits of appellate jurisdiction

This section has been newly added by sec 31 of the Cr Law Amendment Act 19 3 By this section European British Subjects even when outside the limits of British India will get the privilege of obtaining writ in the nature of Habeas Corpus from the High Courts

SUPPLEMENTARY PROVISIONS

CHAPTER XXXVIII

OF THE PUBLIC PROSECUTOR

492 (1) The Governor General in Council or the Local Government may appoint generally, or in any case or for any specified class of cases, in any local area, one or more officers to be called Public Prosecutors

Power to appoint Public Prosecutors

(2) * * The District Magistrate, or, subject to the control of the District Magistrate the Sub-divisional Magistrate, may in the absence of the Public Prosecutor or where no Public Prosecutor has been appointed, appoint any other person not being an officer of police below such rank as the Local Government may prescribe in this behalf to be Public Prosecutor for the purpose of any case

Change —This section has been amended by section 133 of the Cr P C Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 The following changes have been made —Firstly the words In any case committed for trial to the Court of Session in the beginning of sub-section ( ) have been omitted be-the rank of Assistant District Superintendent because as there is a variety of nomenclature of the Police officers we think it better to leave it to the Local Governments to prescribe the rank of police-officers who may be appointed Public Prosecutors for the purposes of a particular case —Report of the Joint Committee (19)

In U P all Joint Magistrates and Assistant Magistrates exercising first class powers have been empowered to prosecute in sessions trials—Coll Notification 31st December 18 0

But it is highly objectionable to appoint the Magistrate who in the first instance tried and convicted the accused to be Crown Prosecutor to conduct an inquiry subsequently directed in the same case To convert a Judge into an Advocate seeking to uphold his decision before another tribunal is quite unprecedented and most objectionable as he has an interest in the case which a Public Prosecutor should not have—8 B H C R 1

1300 Duty of Public Prosecutor —The purpose of a Criminal trial is not to support a theory but to investigate the offence and to determine the guilt or innocence of the accused and the duty of a Public Prosecutor is to represent not the Police but the Crown and this duty should be discharged by him fairly and fearlessly and with a full sense of the responsibility that attaches to his position The guilt or innocence of the accused is to be determined by the tribunals appointed by law and not according to the tastes of any one else—Ram Ranjan v Emp 42 Cal 422 There should be no unseemly eagerness on the part of the Prosecutor at securing a conviction His object must be the furtherance of justice and not to act as counsel for any particular person or party—Reg v Kashinath 8 B H C R 126

493 The Public Prosecutor may appear and plead without any written authority before any Court in which any case of which he has charge is under inquiry trial or appeal and if any private person instructs a pleader to prosecute in any Court any person in any such case, the Public Prosecutor shall conduct the prosecution and the pleader so instructed shall act therein under his directions

Public Prosecutor may plead in all Courts in cases under his charge Pleaders privately instructed to be under his direction

1301 Pleader privately instructed —The Counsel instructed and retained by a private individual can watch the case on behalf of his client but he cannot without being specially empowered by the District Magistrate conduct the prosecution—O S C No 31 Where in a criminal appeal pending before the Chief Court of Punjab the brother of the murdered man appointed a pleader to support the conviction held that the pleader so appointed was not a Public Prosecutor—Wazir v Emp 1886 P R 29

Where the Public Prosecutor has charge of the prosecution the pleader instructed by a private person must act under the directions of the Public Prosecutor and is not entitled to conduct the prosecution in preference to the Public Prosecutor—P N Ry Co Ld v Shaikh Mulla 7 P L R 343 7 Cr L J 313 The Public Prosecutor may always avail himself of the services of the counsel retained by a private individual but in long so he does not deprive himself of the management of the case—11 B H C R 102

494 Any Public Prosecutor appointed by the Governor General in Council or the Local Government may, with the consent of the Court in cases

Effect of withdrawal from prosecution

494 Any Public Prosecutor * * may with the consent of the Court, in cases tried by jury before the return of verdict, and in other tried by jury before the return of the verdict, and in other cases before the judgment is pronounced, withdraw from the prosecution of any person, and upon such withdrawal,—

(a) if it is made before a charge has been framed, the accused shall be discharged ,

(b) if it is made after a charge has been framed, or when under this Code no charge is required, he shall be acquitted.

before the judgment is pronounced, withdraw from the prosecution of any person either generally or in respect of any one or more of the offences for which he is tried, and upon such withdrawal,—

(a) if it is made before a charge has been framed, the accused shall be discharged in respect of such offence or offences ;

(b) if it is made after a charge has been framed, or when under this Code no charge is required, he shall be acquitted in respect of such offence or offences.

Change —This section has been amended by section 131 of the Cr P C Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 The reasons are stated below

1302. Scope of Section —Under the old law this section applied only to Public Prosecutors appointed by Government A Prosecutor especially appointed by the Magistrate, under sec 492 (2) to conduct a case had not the power to withdraw from the prosecution under this section—8 All. 291 , 2 Weir 653. A Government Pleader who was not appointed a Public Prosecutor under the provisions of sec 492 (1) could not withdraw from the prosecution under this section He could withdraw only under section 240, i e , only in cases where several charges had been preferred against the same person and he had been convicted on one of those charges—2 Weir 258 The present section as now amended will confer the power of withdrawal on all Public Prosecutors

No person other than the Public Prosecutor can withdraw from the prosecution , even a Vakil acting under the directions of the Public Pros [illegible]

[illegible]

This section (as well as section 495) does not apply to security proceedings It applies only to proceedings which can end in a discharge or acquittal of the accused ; but security proceedings do not contemplate the frame of a charge at all, and as a result of the proceedings neither an order of discharge nor one of acquittal is passed therein Hence sections 494 and 495 cannot apply to security proceedings—36 Mad 115

1303 Withdrawal from prosecution—The Public Prosecutor cannot withdraw a case on the ground that the complainant was keeping out of the way and could not be served with summons He should take steps to enforce his attendance—2 Weir 655

The complainant has no locus standi in the matter of withdrawal of a prosecution When a case has been started upon a police report and the Court Sub-Inspector (who is the Public Prosecutor) wants to withdraw the case, the Court cannot reject the application for withdrawal simply because the complainant wants to proceed with the case—1 P L T 400

Withdrawal of some of the charges—Under the old section a Public Prosecutor was not competent to withdraw only one of the charges If he withdrew at all he had to withdraw all the charges Where one of the charge was withdrawn and the accused was tried on the other charges the High Court ordered the trial on the charge withdrawn—2 C L J 18 (n) But the law has now been changed and this section empowers the Public Prosecutor to withdraw one or some of the charges

Record of reasons—When a Court acting under this section gives its consent to a withdrawal from a prosecution it should record its reasons in order that the High Court may be in a position to say whether the discretion vested in the Court has been properly exercised—22 C W N 69 48 Cal 1105 26 C W N 880 Sugan Chand v Chunnilal 6 N L J 177 Abdul Gani v Abdul Kadir 2 Bur L J 287 The Madras and Patna High Courts hold that it is not necessary that the reasons are to be recorded by the Judge—5 M L J 16 Gulli Bhagat v Narain Singh 2 Pat 708

1304 Acquittal—If the Public Prosecutor withdraws from the case after a charge is framed he must be acquitted under clause (b) and not discharged—12 Mad 35 Where therefore a prisoner the charge against whom was withdrawn by the Public Prosecutor was discharged instead of being acquitted and was again committed to the Sessions on a second charge for the same offence it was held that the conviction was bad in law—12 Mad 35 In a summons case an order of discharge under this section amounts to an order of acquittal Mul Singh v Emp, 24 Cr L J 433 (Lah)

Where a person is acquitted on the charge being withdrawn by the Public Prosecutor the acquittal should be recorded without taking the opinions of the assessors An acquittal is a matter of right to the accused whatever might be the opinions of the assessors—Ratanlal 307

Retrial—An order of acquittal under this section bars a retrial for the same offence by virtue of sec 403—A I R 20 40 Mad 270 18 Cr L J 320 (Mad) 23 Cr L J 305 (Sind)

Accused a competent witness against co-accused—When a prosecution against a person has been withdrawn under this section, he can be examined as a witness in the case against his other co-accused—25 Bo 422 33 Cal 1353 47 Cal 154

But the prosecution must be withdrawn and the accused disc under this section, before he can be examined as a witness ag co-accused, because so long as he is in the position of an acc oath can be administered to him under sec 342 (4), and he cannot therefore be examined as a witness Where the Court sanctions the withdrawal of a prosecution but omits to record an order of discharge and the accused continues to be kept in custody, his position is in no way changed from that of the accused, and he cannot be examined as a witness—33 Cal 1353 But if the accused was in fact discharged from custody by virtue of withdrawal from prosecution, the omission to record a formal order of discharge would be cured by sec 537, and the accused would be a competent witness against the other accused—7 A L J 86 18 C W N 1.13

1305 Revision —The High Court is in a position to consider whether the discretion vested in the Magistrate to give consent to the withdrawal of a prosecution has been rightly exercised—Rajani Kanta v Idris, 48 Cal 1105 25 C W N 615 26 C W N 880 1 P L T 400

But where good reasons have been shown by the Court below for allowing the withdrawal of a prosecution the High Court will be slow to interfere in revision against the order allowing the withdrawal—24 Cr L J 5 (Cal) Where the Sessions Judge has exercised his discretion in refusing permission to withdraw a case and he has not improperly exercised that discretion, the High Court would be very reluctant to interfere with his discretion—In re Kaliappa 23 L W 101, 27 Cr L J 334 Where a discretion has been exercised by a Court of competent jurisdiction, which is not on the face of it arbitrary the practice of the High Court is that as a revisional Court it will neither inquire into the reasons nor interfere Specially where the Court has acquitted the accused upon withdrawal of the charges the High Court would not be right in interfering except upon a properly constituted appeal preferred by the Local Government under sec 417—Gulli Bhagat v Narain Singh, 2 Pat 708 (710) 5 P L T 404 25 Cr L J 446, 5 M L T 216, Abdul Gani v Abdul Kadir 2 Bur L J 287

When a charge is withdrawn and the accused is acquitted it is not competent to the revisional Court to consider the question of the legality of the charge A number of persons were charged before the Magistrate with the offence of robbery The Public Prosecutor withdrew the charge and the Magistrate recorded an order of acquittal On revision it was contended that the charge of [illegible] than five persons were implicat[illegible] to have framed a charge of dac[illegible] charge of robbery was wrong [illegible] question as to the legality of the charge and held that the Magistrate's procedure was right There being a charge before him and that charge having been withdrawn he acted rightly in recording an order of acquittal—2 A L J 30 upon insufficient or improper grounds, and has passed an order of [illegible] the private prosecutor cannot be heard to object to it in revision. The Local Government is the only authority who can take a [illegible]

tion of that error—Gulli Bhagat v Narain 2 Pat 708 (711) 5 P L T 404 25 Cr L J 436

Further inquiry —Where the order of discharge under this Section is a proper one no further inquiry should be directed under section 436—Sitaramayya v Emp (1911) 2 M W N 74 But a fresh complaint can be made on fresh materials

495 (1) Any Magistrate inquiring into or trying any case may permit the prosecution to be conducted by any person other than an officer of police below a rank to be prescribed by the Local Government in this behalf, * * * but no person other than the Advocate

Permission to conduct prosecution

ed by the Local Government in this behalf shall be entitled to do so without such permission

(2) Any such officer shall have the like power of withdrawing from the prosecution as is provided by Section 494 and the provisions of that section shall apply to any withdrawal by such officer

(3) Any person conducting the prosecution may do so personally or by pleader

(4) An officer of police shall not be permitted to conduct the prosecution if he has taken any part in the investigation into the offence with respect to which the accused is being prosecuted

The words with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council have been omitted by the Devolution Act (XXXVIII of 1920)

1306 Permission to conduct prosecution —The permission of the Magistrate is discretionary and the High Court will not interfere with such discretion Where a Magistrate has after due consideration exercised the discretion and allowed counsel to appear on behalf of the prosecution the High Court cannot as a Court of Revision overrule the order of the Magistrate and direct him to refuse to allow counsel to appear—4 Weir 655 Similarly where the District Magistrate considers that the too frequent appearance of pleaders for the prosecution in petty criminal cases is detrimental to the interests of justice he can refuse to permit the prosecution to be conducted by a pleader and the Chief Court will decline to interfere with the order of the District Magistrate—1905 P R 6

Who can be permitted —The Magistrate is not precluded from exercising in exceptional cases his discretion by allowing private Vakils good character to conduct the prosecution—1 M L J 231 The w any person include persons other than certificated pleader

however discretionary with the Criminal Courts in each case to permit such persons to conduct the prosecution—Mad H C Pro .) 168

The fact that a certain person is also a Prosecuting Inspector does not deprive him of his right as a private citizen and he may in his private capacity ask for permission to prosecute in his case—10 Bur L T 213 So also, the fact that a particular person is a complainant is not a sufficient ground for not permitting him to prosecute the case—Ibid But it is doubtful whether the words any person would include an absolute stranger who had no connection in the remotest degree with the prosecution and whose desire to help the prosecution was based on a personal grudge only—11 N L J 313

If the offence be of a nature affecting the public (e g rioting or unlawful assembly) which the Crown alone in the interests of public peace and security has a right to conduct a private person should not be permitted to conduct the prosecution—18 Cr L J 329 (Mad)

Under a notification of the Madras Government all superior police officers above the rank of a first class Head constable in charge of a police station are generally empowered to conduct the prosecution without even the permission of the Magistrate under sub-section (1) such officers would be entitled under sub-section (2) to withdraw from the prosecution with the permission of the Court as mentioned in section 494—Ananthakarana v Muthia Thevan 1914 M W N 770

Sub section (2) — Any such officer—These words refer only to the Advocate General Standing Counsel etc mentioned in sub-section (1) If any person other than these officers (e g an Advocate privately engaged by the complainant and permitted by the Magistrate) withdraws from the prosecution, the effect provided in sec 494 does not follow in other words the trial will proceed—1908 U B R 1st Qr (Cr P C) 15 see also 1911 M W N 106

Sub section (3) — A person whether a private complainant or not when he is permitted to conduct the case as prosecutor, may instruct a counsel to appear—11 B H C R 102

It is not open to a Magistrate to decline to allow the complainant who is conducting the prosecution to have a particular pleader of his own choice This section does not authorise the Magistrate to take the prosecution out of the hands of the pleader of the complainant and to assign it to some other person who is not the Public Prosecutor—Ghadially v Emp 18 S I R 30 25 Cr L J 571

1307 Sub section (4) —Exclusion of Police officer —In all important cases and specially in cases of murder and dacoity, the police

1 such a procedure was highly improper but since in this case the accused were not prejudiced thereby, the irregularity did not vitiate the trial but was cured by section 537—26 Bom 533

CHAPTER XXXIX

Of Bail

496 When any person other than a person accused of a non bailable offence is arrested or detained without warrant by an officer in charge of a police station, or appears or is brought before a Court, and is prepared at any time while in the custody of such officer, or at any stage of the proceedings before such Court to give bail such person shall be released on bail Provided that such officer or Court if he or it thinks fit, may, instead of taking bail from such person discharge him on his executing a bond without sureties for his appearance as hereinafter provided

In what cases bail to be taken

Provided further that nothing in this section shall be deemed to affect the provisions of Section 107, sub-section (4), or Section 117, sub section (3)

Change —The second proviso has been added by section 135 of the Cr P C Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 For notes relating to this proviso see Note 240 under sec 10

1308 Grant of bail – This section is imperative in its terms and the Court is bound to comply with its provisions In every bailable offence bail is a right and not a favour Detention in the lock up is the alternative not the original order –32 Cal 80 6 C P L R 31 When a man who is arrested is not accused of a non bailable offence no needless impediments should be placed in the way of his being admitted to bail The intention of the law is that in such cases the man is ordinarily to be at liberty and it is only when he is unable to furnish such moderate security if any is required of him as is suitable for the purpose of securing his appearance before a Court pending inquiry that he should remain in detention—Emp v Mir Hashan ali 20 Bom L R 1-2 The Magistrate cannot refuse to pass an order of bail on the ground of expediency and of the inability of the accused s pleader to show a provision in the Code how he could claim a bail—6 C P L R 31

When the Police arrests a person under sec 55 he should be given the option of bail—14 All 45

Where a person arrested under Chap VIII claims a bail he is entitled to bail as a matter of right—6 C P L R 31 32 Cal 80 36 Mad 474, 20 Bom L R 1 1

Refusal of bail —If the Magistrate refuses to grant bail he must record his reasons for such refusal In the absence of any record of reasons the High Court in revision granted bail—14 C W N cxxx If the Magistrate improperly refuses bail no action is sustainable him for such improper refusal The duty of a Magistrate in accepting or refusing bail is not merely a ministerial but a judicial duty A mistake in the exercise of that duty, without malice will not sustain an action—2 M H C R 396

Court to decide sufficiency of bail —When the bail is ordered by the Court the duty of deciding as to the sufficiency or otherwise of the bail is with the Court itself, and not with the police If such duties are irregularly entrusted to police, two dangers are likely to arise first, a police officer may sometimes be unscrupulous enough to take advantage of the power entrusted to him, for the purpose of extortion and secondly, the bringing of false charges against the police But the Court, when it admits a man to bail, is at liberty to call for a report from the police as to the sufficiency of the bail—15 Cal 455

1309. Bond.—Bail means security with sureties, whereas the bond referred to in the first proviso is a simple recognizance of the principal without any surety

Bond of agent —Where the personal attendance of the accused is dispensed with a recognizance bond, if deemed necessary should be taken from him (and not from his agent) binding him to appear either in person or by agent A Magistrate has no legal authority to secure the attendance of the agent, by a bond taken from the agent—5 B H C R 64 The Magistrate wants the accused and not his agent, and therefore the bond is to be executed by the accused himself and not by his agent, although he may appear by agent

When bail may be taken in case of non-bailable offence.

497 (1) When any person accused of any non-bailable offence is arrested or detained without warrant by an officer in charge of a police station or appears or is brought before a Court, he may be released on bail, but he shall not be so released if there appear reasonable grounds for believing that he has been guilty of an offence punishable with death or transportation for life:

Provided that the Court may direct that any person under the age of sixteen years or any woman or any sick or infirm person accused of such an offence be released on bail

(2) If it appears to such officer or Court at any stage of the investigation, inquiry or trial, as the case may be, that there are not reasonable grounds for believing that the accused has committed a non-bailable offence, but that there are sufficient grounds for further inquiry into his guilt, the accused shall, pending such inquiry, be released on bail, or, at the discretion of such officer or

Court, on the execution by him of a bond without sureties for his appearance as hereinafter provided

(3) An officer or a Court releasing any person on bail under sub section (1) or sub section (2) shall record in writing his or its reasons for so doing

(4) If at any time after the conclusion of the trial of a person accused of a non bailable offence and before judgment is delivered the Court is of opinion that there are reasonable grounds for believing that the accused is not guilty of any such offence, it shall release the accused if he is in custody on the execution by him of a bond without sureties for his appearance to hear judgment delivered

(5) A High Court or Court of Session and in the case of a person released by itself any other Court, may cause any person who has been released under this section to be arrested and may commit him to custody

Change —This section has been amended by section 136 of the Criminal Pro Code Amendment Act XVIII of 19 3 In sub-section (1) the words an offence punishable with death or transportation for life have been substituted for the words the offence of which he is accused the proviso and sub sections ( ) and (4) have been newly inserted and the italicised words in sub-section (5) have been added It was pressed upon us that the provisions as to bail in non bailable cases are much too stringent One suggestion made to us was that in section 497 we should delete all words after may be released on bail in sub-section (1) and the whole of sub-section (2) The result would have been to give all Courts full discretion in the matter of allowing bail in non bailable cases and we felt generally that this was going too far What we have done is to allow the Court or police officer to release on bail in a non bailable case unless there appear to be reasonable grounds for believing that the accused has been guilty of an offence punishable with death or transportation, and, as some safe guard against this we have provided in sub-section (5) for a review by the Sessions Court or the High Court of any order admitting to bail in a non bailable case —Report of the Joint Committee (19-2)

1310. Principle —Under the old section the general rule was that bail was not to be taken in respect of non bailable offences—8 Bom. L R 4-0 30 Cal 166 10 S L R 08 2 Weir 657 Under the present section the Legislature by defining the offences under which bail is not to be granted (i.e. offences punishable with death or transportation) has practically laid down that bail should ordinarily be granted and that only in respect of heinous offences it will be refused This cannot but be regarded as the result of a liberalising influence on the policy of the Legislature and the discretion of the Courts will henceforth be less fet than before —In re Nagendra Nath 51 Cal 402 (317)

As the law stands now it is no longer the case that bail ought to be refused merely because the offence is a non bailable one That rule is now restricted to offences punishable by death or transportation for life The mere fact that the offence is a serious one is not a ground for refusing bail Where the accused is an old man of 70 and is a Government servant and it is found that if he is not released on bail there would be no body to instruct his counsel in going through the documentary evidence and that he would not be able to make a proper defence, held that bail should be granted—Abhram Bali v Emp 28 O C 20 12 O L J 331 26 Cr L J 1286

Reasonable grounds for believing etc —The section says nothing about taking into consideration the likelihood of the accused person absconding All that the Court has to consider is whether there are reasonable grounds for believing that the accused is guilty—6 L B R 172 Other considerations may arise in deciding the question as to granting bail and one of those considerations is whether there are any grounds for supposing that the accused would abscond But the main question for consideration in determining matters of bail is whether there are reasonable grounds for believing the accused to be guilty—James v K E 36 Cal 174 Whether there are reasonable grounds or not for believing that the accused is guilty must be decided judicially, that is to say, there must be tangible evidence on which if unrebutted the Court might come to the conclusion that the accused might be convicted—36 Cal 174

The phrase an offence punishable with death or transportation for life covers not only offences which are punishable with death as well as in the alternative with transportation for life but also covers an offence which is punishable with transportation for life but not in the alternative with capital punishment The phrase must be read disjunctively as if it ran offence punishable with death, or punishable with transportation for life —Emp v Nga San Htwa 5 Rang 276 (F B) 28 Cr L J 723 (overruling Md Eusoof v Emp 3 Rang 538 27 Cr L J 401)

The discretionary power of the Court to admit to bail is not arbitrary but is judicial and is governed by established principles. The object of the detention of the accused being to secure his appearance to abide the sentence of law the principal enquiry is whether a recognizance would effect that end In seeking an answer to this enquiry Courts have considered the seriousness of the charge the nature of the evidence the severity of the punishment prescribed for the offence and in some instances the character means and standing of the accused—In re Nagendra Nath 51 Cal 402 (416) 38 C L J 388

Magistrates are bound to consider the nature of the offence charged the character of the evidence against the prisoner and the punishment which the event of conviction is likely to be inflicted on the prisoner Again while mere vague allegations that the prisoner if released would tutor witnesses should not be taken into account the Magistrate may well refuse to enlarge on bail where the prisoner is of such a character that his presence at large will intimidate witnesses or where there are reasonable grounds for believing that he will use his liberty to suborn evidence—Md Eusoof v Emp, 3 Rang 538 (542), 27 Cr L J 401, followed in Emp v Nga San Htua, 5 Rang 276 (F B), 28 Cr L J 773

Proviso :—"This clause provides for the grant of bail in any case at the discretion of the Court if the accused is a minor female, sick or infirm person"—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914)

1311 Sub-section (2)—Bond for appearance :—When a Police officer takes a bond under this section he has power to make it a condition of the bond that the accused person shall appear before the police the law does not require that the accused person shall always be directed to appear before a Court When the law enables a Police officer to take bonds, that officer can certainly direct the accused to appear before the police To hold otherwise would be to render sections 499 and 514 meaningless—1913 P R 22 But in 11 Cal 77 it has been held that a bond for appearance before a Police officer is void

1312 Sub-section (4) :—This sub section did not occur in any of the Bills but has been added during the course of the Debate in the Legislative Assembly The reason has been thus stated by Mr Rangachariar on whose motion the amendment was carried "The reason for this amendment is this As Honourable Members are aware at the conclusion of the trial in the original Court oftentimes judgment is not ready for delivery at once but the Court has come to the conclusion, after taking the verdict of the assessors or the jury in a Sessions trial or the Magistrate has made up his mind, that the accused is not guilty and therefore proposes to acquit him As sections 366 and 367 stand a doubt has been expressed whether really the accused could be set at liberty before judgment is actually pronounced In fact an unfortunate client of mine was acquitted like this and judgment was delivered a week later The complainant took the matter up to the High Court and a Full Bench had to sit to consider the question whether the whole trial was not vitiated by such a procedure In order to avoid such things, this provision is necessary"—Legislative Assembly Debates, 12th February 1923 page 2206

The Full Bench case referred to by Mr Rangachariar is Sankaralinga v Narayan, 45 Mad 913 (F B) In this case a trial was held with the aid of assessors and they gave their opinions that the accused were not guilty The Sessions Judge then wrote a short note setting forth the findings of the assessors and adding his own finding agreeing with the assessors that the accused were not guilty, and they were acquitted At a later date he wrote a full reasoned judgment Held by the Full Bench that the procedure was a mere irregularity curable by section 537

The present sub section validates such procedure, making it conditional on the accused to execute a bond for his appearance when judgment is to be delivered

1313 Sub-section (5) :—Cancellation of bail —The Magistrate can cancel any bail allowed to an accused person and direct him to surrender, if it appears on the production of further evidence that a ca is made out against him—10 C W N 1093, 36 Cal 174 The High and the Court of Session can cancel a bail granted by the Sub Court which will necessarily guide the High Court in granting bail will be whether there are reasonable grounds for believing that the convicts committed the offences in question—Sh Karim v Emp, 27 Cr L J 319 (Nag)

The High Court and the Court of Session can exercise their power of granting bail, as soon as the Police have arrested the accused and even before the case is sent up to the Magistrate—7 Bur L R 86 They can admit a person to bail even where he has been convicted and has not appealed—5 A L J 419 Where the accused relies merely on a technical ground against the probability of his conviction, he should not be admitted to bail—Ratanlal 480 The High Court refused to grant bail, where the application for bail contained defamatory statements and allegations consisting of attacks on the trying Magistrate and on the public and private conduct of other officers of high rank in the service of the Government—15 Bom 488

Grant of bail pending appeal to Privy Council—Where the accused obtained special leave from the Privy Council to appeal to that tribunal and applied for bail to the Judicial Committee and the Judicial Committee expressed an opinion that the matter should be decided by the High Court, whereupon the petitioner applied to the High Court for bail held that the High Court had jurisdiction to make an order in the case releasing the accused on bail, pending the decision of the Privy Council—Q E v Subrahmania Iyyar, 24 Mad 161 But when in a case the petitioner has no right to appeal to the Privy Council, and the High Court has no power to give leave to appeal to that tribunal, the High Court cannot, after it confirms the conviction of the Court below admit the petitioner to bail, simply because he proposes to apply (but has not yet applied) to the Judicial Committee for leave to appeal to the Privy Council It cannot do so even under clause 41 of the Letters Patent. As soon as the High Court confirms the conviction on appeal or revision, it becomes functus officio and has no jurisdiction afterwards to grant bail in order that a petition for leave to appeal may be made to His Majesty in Council, or until the petition for leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council is disposed of—Tulsi Telini v Emp, 50 Cal 585, Dinan Chand v K E, 1908 P R 15 Hanmantha v Emp, 21 N L R 161 27 Cr L J 185 The High Court has inherent jurisdiction (under sec 561A) to grant bail to an accused who has filed an application to the Judicial Committee for special leave to appeal to the Privy Council, but has not yet obtained the leave but it would be proper for the High Court to wait till the Privy Council has granted the special leave, and then to grant bail on a fresh application being made—Ram Saroop v Emp, 49 All 247, 25 A L J [illegible] 27 Cr L J 1377.

1316. Power of Sessions Judge:—The Sessions Judge can grant bail to 'any person' who has been wrongly convicted by the Magistrate and whose case he can either deal with himself or can refer to the High Court. But the words 'any person' do not include a person convicted by the Sessions Judge himself When a Sessions Judge, after convicting the accused, released them on bail pending their appeal to the High Court, it was held that he had no jurisdiction to do so This section does not give him power to alter or vary his own order—4 Bom L R 55

The Sessions Judge has power to admit the petitioners to bail in any case, e g, on a reference under section 123 (2) It stands to reason that if in the case of a person who is convicted and who has preferred an appeal bail is allowable bail can similarly be allowed in the case of a person against whom an order has been made under sec 118 and which order is liable to be revised by the Sessions Judge under section 123 sub-section (2)—Ahmed Ali Sardar v Emperor 50 Cal 969

The admission to bail is a matter within the discretion of the Sessions Judge and where the Judge uses his discretion with proper care the High Court will decline to interfere—K E v Badri Prasad 5 A L J 419 8 Cr L J 19 Sh Karim v Emp 27 Cr L J 319 (Nag)

499 (1) Before any person is released on bail or released on his own bond, a bond for such sum of money as the police officer or Court, as the case may be thinks sufficient shall be executed by such person, and when he is released on bail by one or more sufficient sureties conditioned that such person shall attend at the time and place mentioned in the bond, and shall continue so to attend until otherwise directed by the police-officer or Court as the case may be

Bond of accused and sureties

(2) If the case so require the bond shall also bind the person released on bail to appear when called upon at the High Court Court of Session or other Court to answer the charge

1317 Time and place —A bail bond must contain the time and place of appearance—1885 A W N 44

There is nothing illegal in requiring the accused to bind himself to appear from the date of the execution of the bail bond on every day until the case is disposed of No notice is necessary before proceeding to enforce the penalty if default is made—6 M H C R App 38

Verbal direction to appear —By the terms of a bail bond the defendant bound himself to appear on the first inquiry or at other times required He appeared on the first day of the inquiry and was verbally directed to appear on a subsequent date but failed to do so It was held that the amount secured by the bond could be legally forfeited by reason of such non attendance—2 Weir 638

Omission of date by surety —In the bail bond, the accused person bound himself to appear on a specified date, and below his signature was the undertaking by the surety that he would cause the accused's appearance, but this declaration did not mention the date for the accused's appearance The accused having made default, the security was forfeited. It was held that the bail bond and the undertaking by the surety sho be read as one document, and the undertaking should be read as referring to the date mentioned in the portion of the bond signed by the accused, that the omission of date by surety was immaterial, and that therefore the security was rightly forfeited—19 Cr L J 687 (Mad)

Appearance before Police —The words 'until otherwise directed by the Police officer' shew that a bond under section 497 may require the accused to appear before the Police, the direction as to appearance is not limited to appearance before a Court—1913 P R 22

500. (1) As soon as the bond has been executed, the person for whose appearance it has been executed shall be released; and, when he is in jail, the Court admitting him to bail shall issue an order of release to the officer in charge of the jail, and such officer on receipt of the order shall release him.

Discharge from custody

(2) Nothing in this section, Section 496 or Section 497 shall be deemed to require the release of any person liable to be detained for some matter other than that in respect of which the bond was executed.

501. If, through mistake, fraud or otherwise, insufficient sureties have been accepted, or if they afterwards become insufficient, the Court may issue a warrant of arrest directing that the person released on bail be brought before it and may order him to find sufficient sureties, and, on his failing so to do, may commit him to jail.

Power to order sufficient bail when that first taken is insufficient.

1318 Scope —This section applies only to a case where there were sureties it does not apply where the accused was let out on his own bond without any surety—38 Mad 1088

Insufficient sureties —A Magistrate is justified in increasing the amount of bail if by further inquiry the case turns out more serious than he at first imagined—1912 P W R)

502. (1) All or any sureties for the attendance and appearance of a person released on bail may at any time apply to a Magistrate to discharge the bond, either wholly or so far as relates to the applicants.

Discharge of sureties

(2) On such application being made, the Magistrate shall issue his warrant of arrest directing that the person so released be brought before him.

(3) On the appearance of such person pursuant to the warrant, or on his voluntary surrender, the Magistrate shall direct the bond to be discharged either wholly or so far as relates to the applicants, and shall call upon such person to find other sufficient sureties, and, if he fails to do so, may commit him to custody

Where a surety has applied for cancellation of the bail bond and the Magistrate has received the application there is no other alternative left to the Magistrate than to cancel the bail bond There is no need to hear the application on the merits and the Magistrate cannot dismiss it because of the applicant's failure to attend and plead—9 Bom L R 1085

OF COMMISSIONS FOR THE EXAMINATION OF WITNESSES

When attendance of witness may be dispensed with

503 (1) Whenever, in the course of an inquiry, a trial or any other proceeding under this Code it appears to a Presidency Magistrate a District Magistrate, a Court of Session or the High Court that the examination of a witness is necessary for the ends of justice, and that the attendance of such witness cannot be procured without an amount of delay expense or inconvenience which under the circumstances of the case would be unreasonable, such Magistrate or Court may dispense with such attendance and may issue a commission to any District Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class, within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such witness resides to take the evidence of such witness

Issue of commission and procedure thereunder

(2) When the witness resides in the territories of any Prince or Chief in India in which there is an officer representing the British Indian Government, the commission may be issued to such officer

(3) The Magistrate or officer to whom the commission is issued, or, if he is the District Magistrate, such Magistrate of the first class as he appoint behalf, shall proceed to the place where the witness is or shall summon the witness before him, and shall take down his evidence in the same manner, and may for this purpose exercise the same powers, as in trials of warrant cases under this Code

(4) Where the commission is issued to such officer as is mentioned in sub section (2), he may delegate his powers and duties under this commission to any officer subordinate to him whose powers are not less than those of a Magistrate of the first class in British India

1319 Scope of section —This section provides for the issue of a commission to examine a witness in British India or in the territories of any Prince or Chief in India in which there is an officer representing the British Government This section does not provide for the examination of a witness residing outside India—5 Bom 338 Emp v Abdul 49 Bom 878 27 Bom L R 1373 10 Cr L J 571 (All)

This section relates to the issue of a commission and does not empower the trying Magistrate himself to go to the house of a witness to examine him—2 S L R 8

In the course of inquiry —A committing Magistrate is competent to examine a witness in the course of the inquiry before himself But after making the order of committal he has no jurisdiction to issue a commission for taking evidence so that it might be available at the trial before the Court of Session or High Court After a commitment is made, applications for the examination of witnesses on commission must be made to the High Court or to the particular Judge exercising original criminal jurisdiction in the High Court or to the Court of Session as the case may be—19 Cal 113 19 Bom 719

Witness —The section relates to commission for the examination of witnesses In the preliminary stage of a proceeding a complainant is not a witness and a commission cannot be issued for his examination But if a complainant calls himself to testify to matters within his knowledge he will as regards such testimony be a witness for the prosecution and the issue of a commission for his examination is perfectly legal—18 P R 10 1913 P W R 11 42 Cal 19

Expert witnesses —Where an expert in handwriting appears to be the principal witness in the case he ought not to be examined on commission but should appear before the Court—(1911) 2 M W N [illegible]

1320 Pardanashin ladies —A pardanashin lady has a right as a witness in a criminal case, to be exempt from personal appearance at Court and to be examined on commission—4 Cal [illegible] This section allows the examination on commission of a witness who is a pardanashin woman

although she is practically the complainant—2 W cir 659 Although parda nashin women are not of right exempted from personal appearance in Court The word inconvenience in this section empowers the Court to allow their examination by commission where according to the customs and manners of the country they ought not to be compelled to appear in public—5 All 92 See also 1 S L R 5 An application by a pardanashin woman to be examined on commission on the ground that her appearance in Court would cause social degradation to her was granted where she lived near the Court house and volunteered to pay the expenses of the commission and the opposite party did not insist on her examination in open Court—15 Cal 775 24 Cal 551 Even a daughter of a prostitute is entitled to be examined on commission if she is pardanashin and living a married life despite her lowly origin—1913 P W R 11

In an Allahabad case however it has been held that it would be weakness to surrender as a general principle to be adopted that pardanashin ladies whose evidence is required in criminal trials are in all cases to be allowed to compel the Court to examine them on commission at some other place than the Court house itself If it becomes imperatively necessary to take her evidence the Magistrate should make arrangements so as to take her evidence either in an empty Court room in the presence of himself the accused his pleader and the pleader for the prosecution if there be any or if no empty room is available in his own private room or some other room in the Court building—1 All 69 In another Allahabad case it was held that where the pardanashin woman was not merely a witness but was also the complainant in a case of defamation (which gave both a civil and a criminal remedy) the fact that she avoided the civil remedy and chose to set the criminal law in motion materially altered her position as regards the question whether she should be exempted from personal appearance and the accused had a right and a privilege to have her evidence taken in his presence in the Court—5 All 92

1321 Delay, expense or inconvenience —The taking of evidence on commission in criminal cases ought to be most sparingly resorted to Such a procedure may be adopted only in extreme cases of delay expense or inconvenience—5 All 92 If a witness is unable to attend the Court owing to illness (e g weak heart and a painful internal malady) the proper course for the Magistrate would be to first ascertain whether it would be possible for the witness to come to Court within a reasonable time and if not possible then the Magistrate will have to reluctantly come to the conclusion that his evidence should be taken on commission—Jimmura Singh v K I 3 Pat 591 (594) Where the evidence of two witnesses was a most material one in the case in as much as they deposed to the identification of the stolen property on which deposition the whole case depended the witnesses ought not to have been examined on commission but their attendance before the Court ought to have been procured and the expense of Rs 500 in procuring their attendance was not considered to be unreasonable or excessive having regard to the circumstances of the case—6 All 224

examination is entirely in the discretion of the Court In criminal cases, the issue of a commission would be a most unsatisfactory course of proceeding, and one dangerous to the interests of the community—8 Cal 896 The issue of commission is an unsatisfactory proceeding, because on the one hand the Court has no opportunity of noting the demeanour of witness and on the other hand, of controlling irrelevant and unnecessary or harassing cross examination of the witness The discretion to issue a commission should be sparingly exercised, and only in cases of real hardship and inconvenience, having due regard to the prejudice which is likely to be thereby caused to the opponent—Vishnoo v Dipchand, 20 S L R 28, 27 Cr L. 1322. Sub-section (4)—Delegation :—This sub-section has been newly added to the Code in 1898 Under the Code of 1882, when a commission was issued to an officer representing the British Indian Government for the examination of a witness residing in a Native State, he could not delegate his powers and duties under the commission to his subordinate, but had to personally execute such commission—1896 A W N 106 The present sub section provides for such delegation

Commissioner cannot make complaint under sec 195 —Although the commissioner appointed under this section may be a Court' for the purpose of issuing process against the witness and for recording evidence, still he is not a Court' within the meaning of sec 195 Therefore where a witness gives false evidence before such commissioner, the proper authority to make a complaint for the prosecution of the witness for perjury is not the commissioner but the Court which issued the commission—11 C W N 909

Commission in case of witness being within presidency town.

504. (1) If the witness is within the local limits of the jurisdiction of any Presidency Magistrate, the Magistrate or Court issuing the commission may direct the same to such Presidency Magistrate, who thereupon may compel the attendance of, and examine, such witness as if he were a witness in a case pending before himself.

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to affect the power of the High Court to issue commissions under the Slave Trade Act, 1876, Section 3

Change :—In sub-section (1) the word such' has been substituted for ' the said," and sub section (1A) has been newly added, by section 137 of the Cr P C Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 ' This clause enables a Chief Presidency Magistrate to delegate to a subordinate Presidency

Magistrate his powers and duties under any commission issued in his name —Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914)

505 (1) The parties to any proceeding under this Code in which a commission is issued, may respectively forward any interrogatories in writing which the Magistrate or Court directing the commission may think relevant to the issue and the Magistrate or officer to whom the commission is directed or to whom the duty of executing such commission has been delegated, shall examine the witness upon such interrogatories

Parties may examine witnesses

(2) Any such party may appear before such Magistrate or officer by pleader, or if not in custody, in person, and may examine, cross examine and re examine (as the case may be) the said witness

Change —The italicised words have been added by section 138 of the Cr P C Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 This amendment is consequential to the amendment made in sec 504

506 Whenever, in the course of an inquiry or a trial or any other proceeding under this Code before any Magistrate other than a Presidency Magistrate or District Magistrate, it appears that a commission ought to be issued for the examination of a witness whose evidence is necessary for the ends of justice, and that the attendance of such witness cannot be procured without an amount of delay, expense or inconvenience which, under the circumstances of the case, would be unreasonable, such Magistrate shall apply to the District Magistrate, stating the reasons for the application, and the District Magistrate may either issue a commission in the manner hereinbefore provided or reject the application

Power of provincial Subordinate Magistrate to apply for issue of commission

1323 Where a case is pending before a subordinate Magistrate the District Magistrate cannot issue a commission for the examination of a witness in that case without a reference by the subordinate Magistrate under this section—2 S L R 8 thereunder, to the Court out of which it issued; and the commission, the return thereto and the deposition shall be open at all reasonable times to inspection of the parties, and may, subject to all just exceptions, be read in evidence in the case by either party, and shall form part of the record.

(2) Any deposition so taken, if it satisfies the conditions prescribed by Section 33 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, may also be received in evidence at any subsequent stage of the case before another Court.

1324. Sub-section (2)—Admissibility of evidence taken on commission —This section has been enacted on the basis of the judgment in 19 Bom 749 Under the 1882 Code evidence taken under a commission issued by the Chief Presidency Magistrate during the course of an inquiry before him was held inadmissible at the trial of the same case at the High Court Sessions—Q E v Jacob, 19 Cal 113 This difficulty has been removed by this sub-section

Evidence taken on commission is admissible in a trial of a seaman for an offence committed on the High Seas—16 Cal 238

Adjournment of inquiry or trial

508 In every case in which a commission is issued under Sec 503 or Sec. 506, the inquiry, trial or other proceeding may be adjourned for a specified time reasonably sufficient for the execution and return of the commission

When a commission has been issued, the trial should be postponed till the return of the commission The trial and commission cannot go together The discretion given by this section to adjourn proceedings ought to be exercised in a reasonable manner The accused person should not be detained for an unnecessarily long time—See Q E v Jacob, 19 Cal 113

Deposition of medical witness.

509. (1) The deposition of a Civil Surgeon or other medical witness taken and attested by a Magistrate in the presence of the accused, or taken on commission under Chapter XL, may be given in evidence in any inquiry trial or other proceeding under this Code, although the deponent is not called as a witness

Power to summon medical witness

(2) The Court may, if it thinks fit, summon and examine such deponent as to the subject matter of his deposition

1325 Deposition —It is only the deposition of a Civil Surgeon that can be taken in evidence the only opinion of the Civil Surgeon which can be considered in judicially dealing with the case is an opinion expressed by him when examined as a witness under the usual tests to which witnesses are subjected The Civil Surgeon's letter addressed to the Sessions Judge expressing an opinion as to the nature of the wound inflicted upon the deceased is extra judicial matter and cannot be received in evidence—8 Cal 211 So also the certificate of a medical officer as to the cause of the death of a person and of the fatal character of the wounds is no evidence—2 Weir 659 The report of a Medical man on his post mortem examination cannot be treated as evidence though it may be used by him to refresh his memory when giving evidence—9 Cal 455 A paper which purports to be the substance of a report from a subordinate medical officer with an expression of concurrence by the Civil Surgeon cannot be used as evidence although the examination of a medical witness written in proper form may be so used—11 W R 2 A certificate granted by the Professor of a Medical College as regards the bones submitted to him for examination is not admissible in evidence He must be examined as a witness— 4 Bom L R 803

By a Magistrate —The deposition may be attested by a Magistrate, i e any Magistrate not necessarily by the committing Magistrate while holding the preliminary inquiry—1893 A W N 180

In the presence of the accused —To render it admissible in evidence, the deposition of a witness in a criminal case should be taken and attested by the Magistrate in the presence of the accused—18 Cal 1 9 8 Cal 739 The evidence of a Medical officer given before a committing Magistrate is not admissible in the Sessions Court where the committing Magistrate does not certify that the evidence was given in the presence of the accused —4 C W N 42 In the absence of proof that the deposition was taken and attested by the Magistrate in the presence of the accused it cannot be presumed under sec 80 or sec 114 Illustration (e) of the Evidence Act that the deposition was so taken and attested—18 Cal 129 10 All 174 The examination of a medical witness taken in the absence of accused is inadmissible in evidence When however there is s

prima facie evidence to warrant a commitment to the Sessions Court, and the evidence of the medical witness is likely to be only of a formal character, and great inconvenience would result from his being summoned to a Magistrate s Court, the examination need not be taken before a Magistrate, but his attendance before the Sessions Court must be secured Under all other circumstances the Magistrate should invariably record the evidence of the medical witness before himself—Ratanlal 81

In order to secure compliance with the provisions of this section, Magistrates are hereby directed to sign at the foot of the deposition of medical witnesses a certificate in the following form —' The foregoing deposition was taken in the presence of the accused (name) who had an opportunity of cross examining the witness The deposition was explained to the accused and was attested by me in his presence '—Cal G R & C O page 14, C P Cr Cir, Part II, No 55, N W P H C Cr Cir, Para 38, p 17

Deposition should be carefully recorded —The statement of a medical witness, if taken and attested by the Magistrate in the presence of the accused, is admissible as evidence in the Sessions Court, although the medical witness is not himself called It ought therefore to be recorded with the utmost care and accuracy—20 O C 61

1327. Value of medical evidence :—Mere theories of medical witnesses should not be accepted as against proved facts It would be improper for a Judge to reject facts which were proved by the evidence of certain witnesses, merely because a medical officer gave his opinion that what the witnesses deposed to could not be true—11 W R 25 A Judge is not entitled to discard the direct evidence of credible and unimpeachable witnesses who depose that with their own eyes they saw certain things done, merely upon the strength of the opinion of a medical witness that those things could not have been done—1889 A W N 71 On the other hand, in a case of murder, the medical evidence as to the cause of death should never as a matter of precaution be dispensed with, although the accused admits having killed the deceased and pleads extenuating circumstances—Agra N A 2nd January 1862, p 1

1328. Sub-section (2) :—Summoning of medical witness —The recorded deposition of a medical witness should be carefully scrutinized by the Sessions Judge, and if it appears that the deposition is essentially deficient or requires further explanation or elucidation, the Judge should summon and examine the witness—20 O C 61

In all cases of murder, the committing Magistrate should bind over the medical witnesses to attend at the Sessions, unless grave inconvenience will be caused thereby—Rule 204 of Mad Rules of Practice

' If Magistrates carefully and fully record the medical evidence, there will be no necessity for summoning the medical witness to attend before the Sessions Court, except for special reasons in particular cases The accused persons or their pleaders should be asked at the time of commitment whether they wish to have the medical witness summoned before the Sessions Court or whether they consider that the evidence recorded by the Magistrate which should be carefully attested in their presence, is sufficient If they desire the personal attendance of the medical witness, this should be regarded as a sufficient reason for summoning him'—Cal G R & C O p 14

510 Any document purporting to be a report under the hand of any Chemical Examiner or Assistant Chemical Examiner to Government, upon any matter or thing duly submitted to him for examination or analysis and report in the course of any proceeding under this Code, may be used as evidence in any inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this Code

Report of Chemical Examiner

1329 Report —The report must be the original report of the Chemical Examiner bearing his signature and not a copy of the report, and it must be signed by the Chemical Examiner—15 W R 49

Where a matter containing poison was submitted to the Chemical Examiner his report in order to be admissible in evidence must purport to be signed by the officer who detected the poison in the matter and who from personal knowledge could certify to the correctness of the result embodied in the report—2 Weir 661

Any Chemical Examiner —The word any includes an Additional Chemical Examiner The word any did not occur in the earlier Code, and it was therefore held in 10 Cal 1026 that the report of an Additional Chemical Examiner could not be received in evidence

Identity of articles examined —When committing cases a Magistrate must take care to send up evidence to prove that a body sent to the hospital for post mortem examination is really the body of the person referred to in the case under trial or that an article analysed by the Chemical Examiner was actually the article sent to him for analysis in the case under trial A Sessions Judge must insist upon being furnished with such evidence, and must not record either the chemical analysis report or the evidence of the medical officer until the connecting links requisite to render them admissible have been established—1 Bur S R 634, Q E v Tulal Mucht 10 Cal 1026 Chukkarpalli Ramayya v Emp, 20 M L J 657, 1 Cr L J 222 Ml Din v Emp 26 P L R 748, 26 Cr L J 1420 A Sessions Judge is bound to warn the jury that before using the Chemical Examiner's report they must be satisfied on the evidence that the substances examined were in fact what they were said to be—Ofel Molla v Emp, 18 C W N 180 15 Cr L J 147

511. In any inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this Code, a previous conviction or acquittal may be proved, in addition to any other mode provided by any law for the time being in force—

Previous conviction or acquittal how proved

(a) by an extract certified, under the hand of the officer having the custody of the records of the Court in which such conviction or acquittal was had, to be a copy of the sentence or order, or,

(b) in case of a conviction, either by a certificate signed by the officer in charge of the jail in which the punishment or any part thereof was inflicted, or by production of the warrant of commitment under which the punishment was suffered;

together with, in each of such cases, evidence as to the identity of the accused person with the person so convicted or acquitted.

1330 Proof of previous convictions —Before passing sentences, it is desirable and necessary that if there are previous convictions they should properly be proved—17 Cr L J 179 Magistrates are not absolved from the ordinary rules of evidence in taking proof of previous convictions Whenever it is required to prove a previous conviction against a man, whether it be for the purpose of enhancement of punishment under section 75 I P C, or in proceedings under Chap VIII of the Cr P C, such previous conviction must be proved strictly and in accordance with law Unless it is so proved, no Court can properly take such previous conviction into consideration—43 Cal 1128

Previous convictions should, regard being had to the provisions of this section, be proved by copies of judgments or extracts from judgments or by any other documentary evidence of the fact of such previous convictions, and the examination of the accused in respect of those convictions is, having regard to sec 342, without legal warrant or jurisdiction—28 Cal 689 28 Bom 129

When the previous conviction has been put to the accused and he denies it, the certified extract from the records of the Court in which he was convicted should be put in evidence, proof should be given that he and the person named therein are one and the same person and the Court should record a specified finding upon that point—1881 A W N 144, 15 W R 53 But a mere Kaifiat from the record office is not sufficient to prove a previous conviction—15 W. R 53

Finger-impressions —The manner in which a previous conviction may be proved is not limited to the method laid down by this section Any relevant evidence upon which the Court can properly base a finding that the accused was on a previous occasion convicted of an offence will do as well as the method indicated by this section Thus, a previous conviction may be proved by finger impressions See Emp v Sahadeo 3 N L R 1, 6 C P L R 3, 32 Cal. 759, 1 C. W N 33, 1906 P L R 3 If the identity of the accused is to be proved by a comparison of finger prints, the one taken in Court being compared with certain finger prints contained in the record of previous convictions there ought to be evidence to prove the similarity between the two and the identification of the last mentioned finger prints as those of the person who has been previously convicted—Ramdas v K E 21 C W N 469 The papillary ridges on the bulbs of the fingers and thumbs by means of which finger impressions are made while proved to be almost beyond change from birth to death are never wholly repeated in the case of the fingers of any other person and they therefore furnish a surer test of identity than any other comparable bodily feature Where two prints made on different occasions resemble one another in the minutiae and contain no points of disagreement an irresistible conclusion arises that they were made by the same finger—Emp v Sahadeo 3 N I R 1

512 (1) If it is proved that an accused person has absconded, and that there is no immediate prospect of arresting him, the Court competent to try or commit for trial such person for the offence complained of may, in his absence, examine the witnesses (if any) produced on behalf of the prosecution, and record their depositions Any such deposition may, on the arrest of such person, be given in evidence against him on the inquiry into, or trial for, the offence with which he is charged, if the deponent is dead or incapable of giving evidence or his attendance cannot be procured without an amount of delay, expense or inconvenience which, under the circumstances of the case, would be unreasonable

Record of evidence in absence of accused

(2) If it appears that an offence punishable with death or transportation has been committed by some person or persons unknown, the High Court may direct that any Magistrate of the first class shall hold an inquiry and examine any witnesses who can give evidence concerning the offence Any depositions so taken may be given in evidence against any person who is subsequently accused of the offence, if the deponent is dead or incapable of giving evidence or beyond the limits of British India

Record of evidence when offender unknown

1331 Scope of section —This section has been specially enacted for enabling the Magistrate to record evidence in the absence of an absconding accused and therefore a Magistrate cannot reject an application of the complainant to summon witnesses or to call on them to produce documents because the accused has absconded— Bom L R 707

'Except in case of bond for good behaviour' —The object of law in making this exception in good behaviour cases, is to secure the good conduct of the person bound over, not by means of money but by a bond and sureties, and by making the sureties responsible for the good behaviour of the person bound down See 2 N W P 295

1332. Deposit of money :—The deposit of money is in lieu of executing a bond Where a person was ordered to execute a bond for good behaviour, and also to deposit a certain sum in addition thereof, the order as to deposit was illegal, because it was not in lieu of but in addition, to, execution of bond, and also because it was a good behaviour case —Ratanlal 671

Where money has been deposited in Court as bail, the Magistrate is bound to return the amount, on the appearance of the accused, to the person who made the deposit It has no jurisdiction to attach this money in order to realise out of it the fine imposed on the accused—Raghunandan v Emp, 11 O L J 296, Gudhari Lal v Emp, 19 A L J 887

Procedure on forfeiture of bond.

514. (1) Whenever it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court by which a bond under this Code has been taken, or of the Court of a Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first class, or when the bond is for appearance before a Court, to the satisfaction of such Court, that such bond has been forfeited, the Court shall record the grounds of such proof, and may call upon any person bound by such bond to pay the penalty thereof, or to show cause why it should not be paid.

(2) If sufficient cause is not shown and the penalty is not paid, the Court may proceed to recover the same by issuing a warrant for the attachment and sale of the moveable property belonging to such person or his estate if he be dead.

(3) Such warrant may be executed within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court which issued it; and it shall authorize the attachment and sale of any moveable property belonging to such person without such limits, when endorsed by the District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such property is found.

(4) If such penalty is not paid and cannot be recovered by such attachment and sale, the person so bound shall be liable, by order of the Court which issued the warrant, to imprisonment in the civil jail for a term which may extend to six months

(5) The Court may, at its discretion remit any portion of the penalty mentioned and enforce payment in part only.

(6) Where a surety to a bond dies before the bond is forfeited, his estate shall be discharged from all liability in respect of the bond * * *

(7) When any person who has furnished security under section 106 or section 118 or section 562 is convicted of an offence the commission of which constitutes a breach of the conditions of his bond or of a bond executed in lieu of his bond under section 514 B a certified copy of the judgment of the Court by which he was convicted of such offence may be used as evidence in proceedings under this section against his surety or sureties, and, if such certified copy is so used the Court shall presume that such offence was committed by him unless the contrary is proved

Change —This section has been amended by section 139 of the Cr P C Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 In sub-section (3) the word attachment has been substituted for the word distress as the former word is more appropriate In sub section (6) the words but the party who gave the bond may be required to find a new surety have been omitted but a separate provision to the same effect is made in the new section 514 A Sub section (7) has been newly added the reason is stated below

514 (1) Whenever it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court by which a bond under this Code has been taken, or of the Court of a Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first class,

or when the bond is for appearance before a Court, to the satisfaction of such Court, that such bond has been forfeited, the Court shall record the grounds of such proof, and may call upon any person bound by such bond to pay the penalty thereof, or to show cause why it should not be paid

(2) If sufficient cause is not shown and the penalty is not paid, the Court may proceed to recover the same by issuing a warrant for the attachment and sale of the moveable property belonging to such person or his estate if he be dead

(3) Such warrant may be executed within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court which issued it, and it shall authorize the attachment and sale of any moveable property belonging to such person without such limits, when endorsed by the District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such property is found

(4) If such penalty is not paid and cannot be recovered by such attachment and sale, the person so bound shall be liable, by order of the Court which issued the

warrant, to imprisonment in the civil jail for a term which may extend to six months

(5) The Court may, at its discretion remit any portion of the penalty mentioned and enforce payment in part only.

(6) Where a surety to a bond dies before the bond is forfeited, his estate shall be discharged from all liability in respect of the bond * * *

(7) When any person who has furnished security under section 106 or section 118 or section 562 is convicted of an offence the commission of which constitutes a breach of the conditions of his bond or of a bond executed in lieu of his bond under section 514-B, a certified copy of the judgment of the Court by which he was convicted of such offence may be used as evidence in proceedings under this section against his surety or sureties, and, if such certified copy is so used, the Court shall presume that such offence was committed by him unless the contrary is proved

Change—This section has been amended by section 139 of the Cr P C Amendment Act XVIII of 19-3 In sub-section (3) the word attachment has been substituted for the word distress as the former word is more appropriate In sub section (6 the words but the party who gave the bond may be required to find a new surety have been omitted but a separate provision to the same effect is made in the new section 514 A Sub section ( ) has been newly added the reason is stated below

1333 What amounts to forfeiture—Bonds for appearance should be strictly construed If the bond requires the accused to appear on a day fixed and if he appears on that day the bond is complied with and the failure of the accused to appear on any other day on which the case is called does not entail a forfeiture of the bond—. Weir 663 4 M H C R App 44 30 Cal 741 Where bonds were taken from the accused and his sureties to appear on Sunday when the Court was closed and when on the next Monday the case was called on and the accused not being present the bonds were forfeited it was held that as the bond required the attendance of the accused on the day fixed i e on Sunday and not on the next day the failure of the accused to appear on Monday did not cause a forfeiture of the bond—. C W N 519 If however the bond requires the accused to appear from day to day until the close of the trial the bond is not illegal—6 M H C R App 38 and the accused will forfeit his bond if he fails to appear on any adjourned hearing Where a bond required the accused to appear on the first hearing or at other times required and the accused appeared on the first day as mentioned in th bond and was verbally directed to appear on a subsequent date on which he failed to appear it was held that the failure to comply with the verbal direction would entail a forfeiture of the bond—2 Weir 658 Where on a person being arrested under Sec 55 of this Code the usual security bond was taken for his appearance held that the bond was only with respect to the offence for which the person was arrested under Sec 55 and the failure of the surety to produce the person in connection with any other offence which he might be suspected of having committed susbequently did not entail a forfeiture of the bond—Mara v Emp 25 Cr L J 131 (Lah) A bail bond should not be forfeited for failure of the surety to produce the accused person where the failure to produce is due to an act of law, e g on account of the accused being arrested for another offence —Alauddin v Emp 4 Pat 259 6 P L T 397 26 Cr L J 833

Where a bond requires the accused to appear before a particular Court the failure of the accused to appear before another Court to which the case has been transferred does not work a forfeiture of the bond if no obligation to appear in the latter Court has been specified in the bond—Shamsuddin v Emp 30 Cal 107 36 Cal 749 18 A L J 631 Maung Nge v K E 2 Rang 581 (585) 26 Cr L J 389 But where a bond required the attendance of the accused in a particular Court and that Court had been abolished the bond can be enforced by its successor to which all the functions of the defunct Court have been transferred—Mustaqim uddin v Emp 24 A L J 327 27 Cr L J 377 (378)

As to the forfeiture of bond for keeping the peace or for good behaviour see Notes 297 and 298 under sec 121

Proof of forfeiture of bond —The words whenever it is proved' show that no person who has entered into a recognizance bond should be called upon to show cause why he should not have his recognizance declared forfeited without prima facie proof that the bond has been forfeited—11 B H C R 170 3 P L T 381 An order for forfeiture of recognizance or of a bail bond must be made upon evidence in the case and not upon evidence taken in other cases—10 C L R 571 12 W R 54

The Court must record the grounds of forfeiture Failure to do so will vitiate the proceedings—3 P L T 381

Illegal bonds cannot be forfeited —A bond which is null and void has no effect at all such a bond cannot be forfeited Thus where by mistake a bond under sec 110 was taken from a person ordered to execute a bond under sec 107 the bond is illegal and an order forfeiting the security furnished under the bond is illegal and will be set aside—1904 P L R 42 Where a warrant was issued to a woman in the first instance instead of a summons without recording reasons under sec 90 the warrant is wholly illegal and the bond given by the surety for the woman's appearance has no legal force and cannot be forfeited if the woman does not appear—1918 P W R 7 1907 P W R --

Death of accused —The death of the accused discharges the sureties from all liabilities 'The object of the surety bonds is to ensure that the accused person shall not evade justice by flying from the jurisdiction of the Court But if the accused elects to die sooner than face his trial that can hardly be a sufficient reason for forfeiting the bonds of sureties, it cannot impose upon them any moral obligation or responsibility to the Court —18 Bom L R 683 37 Mad 156

1334 What Court can proceed under this section —So far as bonds generally are concerned, action may be taken under this section by the Court by which the bond was taken or by the Court of a Presidency Magistrate or a Magistrate of the first class But in the case of a bond for appearance before a Court, the tribunal indicated is the Court and there is no other tribunal Where the bond is for appearance before a Sessions Court, a Deputy Magistrate cannot take action for the forfeiture of the bond The Sessions Judge cannot delagate that function to the Deputy Magistrate under sec 516 which deals with the levy of the amount only—14 C W N 259 Where a bail bond was executed for due appearance of the accused before a certain Court and no provision was made therein for his appearance before any other Court to which the case might thereafter be transferred held that after such transfer the former Court had no jurisdiction to forfeit the bond on the ground of the non appearance of the accused either before the Court to which the case was transferred or before itself—Maung Nge v K I 2 Rang 581 (586) A personal recognizance to appear was taken from the accused by the Magistrate of Karjat The accused having failed to appear on the day fixed the Magistrate at Karjat issued a notice to the accused under this section In the meanwhile the accused was transferred to the Court of the Magistrate at Khalapur who forfeited the bond and directed the accused to pay the penalty It was held that the Magistrate at Khalapur had no jurisdiction to make the order under this section as he was not the Magistrate who had taken the bond or before whom the accused had to appear on the date of default—In re Mir Husen 16 Bom L R 84 The Presidency Magistrate of Bombay has no jurisdiction under this section to order the forfeiture of a bond for appearance before the Police taken by the Police under sec 106 of the City of Bombay Police Act (Bom Act IV of 100)—4 Bom 100

1335 Notice to show cause —If an order of forfeiture is passed without any notice to the person whose bond is forfeited it amounts to a failure of justice and the defect cannot be cured by sec 537—Sarju v Jai Raj Kumar 25 Cr L J 415 A I R Oudh 51 Before a warrant can be issued for the attachment of his property the surety should be called upon to show cause why he should not pay the penalty mentioned in the bond and it should be clear on the face of the record that he was so called upon A mere verbal and unrecorded order to show cause is not sufficient —15 W R 82 A summary order for recovering the amount due on the security bond from a surety without serving upon him any notice to pay the same or to show cause why it should not be paid is invalid—7 W R 4 Where a Magistrate, in a proceeding to forfeit the surety bond for good behaviour issued notice to the surety and upon his non appearance did proceed to hold any inquiry as to whether the principal offender had mitted any offence, but relying on the evidence he had recorded giving notice, passed an order forfeiting the surety bond, held procedure was illegal in as much as the only evidence recorde recorded upon notice to the surety, and that the order must be set aside—Moslem Mandal v Emp, 44 C. L J 170, 27 Cr L J 1293

Procedure, if party appears to show cause —If the party appears to show cause, he should be allowed an opportunity to cross-examine the witnesses upon whose evidence the rule to show cause was issued—4 Cal 865, 25 Cal 440 If the accused appears and shows cause, and the Magistrate still considers that the recognizance should be fort . . . ; his duty to record has acted in such .
nizance There mu.. .. a regular judicial trial and legal inquiry before punishment can be inflicted—12 W R 51 Before it can be declared that a bond executed by a surety is forfeited, there must be a formal finding arrived at after taking evidence in the presence of such surety, which evidence must prove that the principal person has so acted as to necessitate or render it advisable that the surety should, by reason of the act of the principal, forfeit his bond—25 Cal 440

1336 Order when to be passed —If the accused's bond is forfeited, the Court may at once proceed to pass an order of forfeiture If the accused fails to appear on the day fixed, the order of forfeiture of the bond of appearance is not illegal if it is passed on the very next day—2 Bom L R 589 Indeed, a Magistrate ought to take action immediately, otherwise it will be deemed that the Magistrate has decided not to take action under this section Thus, where a person who is already bound over under Chapter VIII is charged with an offence before a Magistrate, and the Magistrate at the time of passing his sentence in the second offence knows that there is an outstanding recognizance, he should decide once for all whether he will proceed on it or not If he does not make any order for the forfeiture of the recognizance, it must be taken that he has decided not to forfeit the recognizance, and he cannot afterwards, in a subsequent and separate proceeding, reconsider his decision and direct forfeiture of the recognizance—Munshi v Emp, 25 Cr L J 4 (Lah), 1913 P R 13; 1904 P R 26, 1 C L R 134, 3 C. L R 406 But it is sufficient if the Magistrate passes an order of forfeiture in substantially the same proceeding in which he convicts the accused, though he does not pass such order immediately on conviction Thus, where the Magistrate did not pass an order of forfeiture of security at the time of conviction of the principals, but while convicting them he plainly wrote in his judgment that "in as much as the sureties would forfeit Rs 4,000 presently, I refrain from passing a heavy sentence on the accused," and then the Magistrate issued process to the sureties and confiscated the security in full it was held that the Magistrate having plainly showed in his judgment his intention to confiscate, the order of forfeiture of security though passed subse-

such action at a subsequent time, the Magistrate can wait till the time of appealing has expired or till the appeal has been dismissed, and then he can proceed under this section—26 All 202

[h] If a person is bound down to keep the peace, say for one year and the bond is forfeited, proceedings for forfeiture of the bond must be initiated within the term of the bond i e, within one year from the date of the bond and if the proceedings are started within that period the termination of the period of the bond before the proceedings are finished will not invalidate the subsequent order of forfeiture—20 A L J 692 44 All 657

Moveable property —During the surety s lifetime only moveable property can be attached and sold for recovery of the penalty—16 A L J 503 (see this case cited under sec 118) But a surety can offer house property as security under sec 118 though his moveable property alone can be attached and sold—Ibid

'His estate if he be dead —These words were introduced into the Code of 1898 to meet 1894 P R 22 where it was held that the legal representative of a deceased surety could not be proceeded against under the provisions of this section

1337 Liability of sureties —The bond executed by the principal and the bond executed by the surety are to be considered as one bond for one amount, and is discharged on forfeiture by the payment of the amount due by either the principal or the surety—Kaku v Q E 1894 P R 26 In no case can an amount in excess of the amount secured by the bond be demanded or recovered from the person bound or his sureties, individually or collectively—Ht Mahomed v Emp 1911 P L R 226 12 Cr L J 404 Where the principal accused was bound over (under sec 107) in the sum of Rs 500 and his surety in the same amount and on forfeiture of the bond the Magistrate ordered that the principal should forfeit the whole amount of his bond viz Rs 500 and the surety should forfeit Rs 250 held that the order was illegal the Magistrate could not demand a sum in excess of Rs 500 whether from the principal or from the surety or from both The High Court modified the order of the Magistrate by directing the principal to pay Rs 250 and the surety to pay Rs 250—Harnam v Crown 5 Lah 448 (449) When the amount of the bond has been recovered from the principal the sureties are not liable to any further amount The liability of the surety is only a joint and several liability with the principal and there is no warrant to collect the amount twice over—U B R (1905) 31 → L B R 135 1894 P R 26 4 Lah 462 But the Calcutta High Court dissents from this view and holds that when a person executes a bond for keeping the peace under sec 107 and another stands surety for him then on the breach of the bond both the surety and principal are liable to pay the penalty of their respective bonds and the surety is liable quite irrespective of the question whether the amount of the bond of the principal has been realised or not The liability of the surety is not co extensive with that of the principal as in the ordinary case of a surety for a debtor for the payment of his debt, where the surety is discharged as soon as the principal debtor pays the money d from him Here the surety is an additional safeguard against . bre the peace Therefore where the principal accused was bound down sum of Rs 100, to keep the peace under sec 107 and the surety

himself in the sum of Rs. 50 that the former would not commit a breach of the peace, and upon the bond of the accused being declared forfeited, both he and his surety were ordered to pay the amounts of their respective bonds (viz, Rs 100 and 50), held that the order was not illegal, and that the surety was bound to pay Rs 50 inspite of the fact that the accused had already paid Rs 100—Saligram v Emp, 36 Cal 562

As regards the liability of sureties per se, if three sureties sign a bond, they are jointly and severally liable to pay the amount of the bond, but every one of them cannot be called on to pay the whole amount, the sum named can only be recovered once—Mahomed Ibrahim v Crown 8 S L R 173, 16 Cr L J 100

Since sureties on a bond are required in order that the failure of the principal to appear may be at their peril, it follows that the object of this provision is defeated if the principal and surety are allowed to relieve the latter of the peril and confine it to the former by an arrangement among themselves Therefore, an agreement by an accused with his surety that he will indemnify the surety if the bail is forfeited on account of the accused s non appearance, is void—Jodhraj v Bishanlal, 20 N L R 166

Sub-section (4) —Imprisonment —When default is made in payment, the Magistrate cannot forthwith direct imprisonment He should order the attachment and sale of the defaulter's moveable property and if the penalty cannot be recovered from such attachment and sale, then and then only can he direct imprisonment—10 C L R 571

1338 Sub-section (5) —Remission of penalty —This sub section gives the Court power to remit the penalty or to reduce its amount Under the Codes of 1872 and 1861, neither the Magistrate nor even the High Court in revision had power to reduce the amount of the penalty under a recognizance bond which had been forfeited See 8 C. L R 72, 3 Cal. 757 19 W R 1 If the Magistrate thought that the amount of recognizance was excessive, he was to refer the matter to Government—Ibid

1339 Sub-section (7) —Admissibility of judgment of convictions —This sub-section has been newly enacted Under the old law there was a conflict of opinion among the High Courts The Allahabad and Punjab Courts laid down that where a person who had given a security bond with a surety for good behaviour, was convicted of an offence the production of the judgment of conviction and the proof, if necessary, of the identity of the principal was sufficient evidence upon which a Magistrate was competent to issue notice to the surety It was not incumbent on the Magistrate to prove that the principal was properly convicted, by re summoning the witnesses on whose evidence the principal was convicted—21 All 86 1903 P R 32, 1911 P W R 35 But in 25 Cal 440 and 11 Cal 77, it was held that the mere production of the original record or a certified copy of the trial in which the principal was convicted would not be conclusive evidence to show that the accused had really committed an offence, such fact must be proved by evidence taken in the presence of the surety, unless it was admitted by him. The present sub-section adopts the view of the Allahabad and Punjab decisions There has been a conflict of opinion whether a judgment convicting the principal in a bond taken under the Code and ordering the forfeiture of the bond is sufficient prima facie proof in proceedings under this section against the sureties The amendment permits the use of such a judgment as evidence in such proceedings and directs that the Court shall presume that such offence was committed unless the contrary is proved —Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914)

The judgment of conviction is undoubted evidence against the principal himself Thus where the bond is given by the person bound down to keep the peace the judgment convicting him of a breach of the peace is admissible in evidence against him and may form a sufficient basis for an order under this section he having had an opportunity of cross examining the witness on whose evidence the forfeiture is held to be established 25 Cal 440 4 Cal 865

Revision —The High Court can revise all orders made under this section See notes under section 515

1340 Nature of proceedings under this section —The proceeding to realise a penalty is of the nature of a civil proceeding (3 P L T 381) and the person against whom it is taken is competent to give evidence on oath in his own behalf—15 W R 87 It is not a criminal proceeding and no charge need be drawn up After the Magistrate has satisfied himself that the bond has been forfeited he can at once call upon the person concerned to pay the penalty The proceeding therefore cannot be held to be a trial in the sense of the Code—2 Mad 169

514A When any surety to a bond under this Code becomes insolvent or dies or when any bond is forfeited under the provisions of Section 514 the Court, by whose order such bond was taken, or a Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class may order the person from whom such security was demanded to furnish fresh security in accordance with the directions of the original order and if such security is not furnished such Court or Magistrate may proceed as if there had been a default in complying with such original order

Procedure in case of insolvency or death of surety or when a bond is forfeited

This section has been newly added by section 140 of the Cr P C Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 to make up the deletion of certain words in sub-section (6) of section 514 It also covers the case of a surety who becomes insolvent

514B When the person required by any Court or officer to execute a bond is a minor, such Court or officer may accept, in lieu thereof a bond executed by a surety or sureties only

Bond required from a minor

We have added a new section 514B to provide for the case of a being required from a minor"—Report of the Select Committee of 1916

Under the old law, where a person released on probation under sec. 562 and ordered to execute a bond for good conduct was a minor, the bond could not be executed by his sureties, see 4 L B R 12 This is no longer good law, having regard to the provision of this section

515. All orders passed under Section 514 by any Magistrate other than a Presidency Magistrate or District Magistrate, shall be appealable to the District Magistrate, or, if not so appealed, may be revised by him.

Appeal from and revision of orders under Section 514.

1341. Appeal and revision :—Under the old Codes of 1861 and 1872 there was no provision for appeal or revision of orders forfeiting a security bond under section 514, see 2 Mad 169 This section makes provision for such appeal or revision

Under this section, all orders passed by the subordinate Magistrates shall be appealable to the District Magistrate but not to any first Class Magistrate—Ratanlal 384

A bond for keeping the peace or for good behaviour is not given to any particular person but to the Court, and no private party is entitled to appeal against an order of a Magistrate refusing to forfeit the bond, but it is open to the District Magistrate to take action in revision—Sarju v. Jai Raj Kumar, A I R 1925 Oudh 51, 25 Cr. L. J 445

Orders passed by a District Magistrate under this section may be subject to revision by the High Court—1905 P. R 15

516. The High Court or Court of Session may direct any Magistrate to levy the amount due on a bond to appear and attend at such High Court or Court of Session.

Power to direct levy of amount due on certain recognizances.

This section empowers the Court of Session to delegate his power of levying fine to a Magistrate, but he cannot delegate his power of initiating proceedings for forfeiture of the bond—14 C W N 259 (cited in Note 1331 under sec 514)

CHAPTER XLIII.

OF THE DISPOSAL OF PROPERTY.

516A When any property regarding which any offence appears to have been committed, or which appears to have been used for the commission of

Order for custody and disposal of property pending trial in certain cases.

any offence, is produced before any Criminal Court during any inquiry or trial, the Court may make such order as it thinks fit for the proper custody of such property pending the conclusion of the inquiry or trial, and, if the property is subject to speedy or natural decay, may after recording such evidence as it thinks necessary, order it to be sold or otherwise disposed of

This section has been newly added by section 141 of the Cr P C Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 It is proposed to add to the chapter a new section to enable the Court to pass orders for the custody or disposal of property during an inquiry —Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914) Under the old law an order for disposal of property could be made only when the inquiry or trial was concluded (section 517) but no order could be made while the offence committed in connection with such property was still under inquiry and the trial was not yet ended—Ratanlal 957 5 C L J 229 24 M L J 1 This section enables a Court to make an order for disposal of property during the inquiry or trial

517 (1) When an inquiry or a trial in any Criminal Court is concluded, the Court may make such order as it thinks fit for the disposal, by destruction, confiscation or delivery to any person claiming to be entitled to possession thereof or otherwise, of any property or document produced before it or in its custody or regarding which any offence appears to have been committed or which has been used for the commission of any offence

Order for disposal of property regarding which offence committed

(2) When a High Court or a Court of Session makes such order and cannot through its own officers conveniently deliver the property to the person entitled thereto, such Court may direct that the order be carried into effect by the District Magistrate

(3) When an order is made under this section in a case in which an appeal lies, such order shall not (except when the property is live stock or is subject to speedy and natural decay) be carried out until the period allowed for presenting such appeal has passed,

(3) When an order is made under this section such order shall not, except where the property is live-stock or subject to speedy and natural decay, and save as provided by sub-section (4), be carried o for one month, or when appeal is presented,

or, when such appeal is presented within such period, until such appeal has been disposed of	such appeal has been disposed of.

(4) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to prohibit any Court from delivering any property under the provisions of sub section (1) to any person claiming to be entitled to the possession thereof, on his executing a bond with or without sureties to the satisfaction of the Court, engaging to restore such property to the Court if the order made under this section is modified or set aside on appeal.

Explanation —In this section the term "property" includes, in the case of property regarding which an offence appears to have been committed, not only such property as has been originally in the possession or under the control of any party, but also any property into or for which the same may have been converted or exchanged, and anything acquired by such conversion or exchange, whether immediately or otherwise

Change —This section has been amended by section 142 of the Cr P C Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 The following changes have been introduced —

(1) The italicised words have been added in sub-section (1) These words are added to elucidate the order for disposal of property produced before a Court by explaining that this means disposal by destruction confiscation or restoration to the person claiming to be entitled to the possession thereof —Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914)

(2) Sub-section (3) has been changed as shown in parallel columns It allows one month for the presentation of an appeal or an application for revision where this is allowed —Report of the Select Committee of 1916

(3) Sub-section (4) has been newly added By this clause the Court is enabled if it sees fit to restore the property to the possession of any person claiming to be entitled to it who is willing to execute a bond for its return if need be —Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914)

1342. Scope of section —Under the Code of 1882 the operation of this section was much restricted, and the Court could make an order under this section only with reference to property with regard to which any offence had been committed or which had been used for the commission of any offence otherwise not—24 Cal 449, 14 Cal 631, 3 C W N 501 2 Weir 665 666 668 669 8 Bom 630 10 Bom 177 18 Bom 748 22 Bom 844 and the order could be made only when that offence was actually under investigation or trial by the Court—Ratanlal 500 1888 P R 46

Under the 1898 Code the scope of the section has been enlarged, and an order can be made with regard to any property produced before the Court or in its custody even though it has not been used for the commission of any offence or though no offence in regard to it has been committed—34 Cal 347 In re Pyde Ramanna 42 Mad 9 21 Cr L J 414 (Nag) or though the offence actually under investigation is not in connection with the property or is not proved—2 Weir 666 The ruling in 2 Weir 665 is no longer good law The decision in 30 Cal 690 is erroneous as it did not notice the change in the law in the 1898 Code

1343 Property —Property produced in Court —When a portion of a property (e g a portion of salt or other article in bulk) is produced in Court and received in evidence as a sample the whole bulk is taken to have been produced before the Court and the Magistrate can make an order with respect to the entire bulk—2 Weir 670

Property in respect of which an offence has been committed —These words mean property which has been the subject of offences like theft or criminal misappropriation—34 Cal 986 Where the accused gave false information that his jewels were stolen and afterwards these jewels were found in his possession and the Magistrate after convicting him of an offence under sec 182 I P C confiscated those jewels under this section it was held that the order under this section was illegal because the jewels were neither produced before the Court nor was there any offence committed with regard to them—9 C W N 597

Cash is not strictly speaking property except in so far as it is capable of being possessed and identified in specie If however it is certain that the coins found on the person of thieves are the actual coins which have been the subject of theft then it is permissible to treat such coins as stolen property and the Magistrate can pass an order as to their disposal (e g an order to pay them to the complainant as compensation) But coins which have been put into circulation and passed on to other persons cannot be treated in the same way as stolen coins actually remaining in the possession of thieves—Parsu v Emp 18 S L R 218 26 Cr L J 1315 But in an Allahabad case where the accused embezzled some money from a Bank and sent part of the embezzled money to one of his creditors in notes under insured cover which was traced and seized by the police and the Magistrate after convicting the accused ordered the money to be handed over to the Bank held that the order was strictly justified under the provisions of this section as the money was property in respect of which an offence was committed and it was property to which the Bank was entitled —Bankey Lal v Allahabad Bank, 23 A L J 889 26 Cr L J 1-32 A I R 19-6 All 47

The Magistrate can dispose of property stolen in British territory, though the Police might have seized it in foreign territory—1878 P R 20

them, it was ordered that the axe and the knives with which he slaughtered the animals and which were found with the accused when he was arrested should be confiscated and sold—Bhura v Emp 6 Cr L J 1495 (1497) (Nag) But any instrument or thing which is too remotely connected with the commission of an offence cannot be confiscated under this section. Thus it is illegal to confiscate a press in which a seditious matter has been published, because the press is a too remote instrument and cannot be said to be property which has been used for the commission of the offence—34 Cal 986 1907 P. W R 37 A Magistrate convicting a person for gambling under section 6 and 7 of the Madras Towns Nuisances Act cannot confiscate the money found in his waistcoat pocket, when there was no evidence to show that the money was actually staked —41 Mad 644 So also, a boat which has been used by the accused in going to commit a theft or in escaping from pursuit cannot be said to be property used for the commission of an offence—8 C W N 887 see also Ratanlal 688 Similarly where the accused has been guilty of rash driving it is illegal to pass an order that the cart and pony of the accused should be sold and the sale proceeds paid over to the complainant as compensation —1904 P L R 9

Property must be moveable —This section has no application to immoveable property Where the accused dispossessed the complainant of his garden by breaking the pad lock of its gate and were convicted of the offence of criminal trespass the Court had no power to order the restoration of the garden to the complainant under this section as this section did not apply to immoveable property—Sheonandan v Bhola ath 18 C W N 1146 See also 36 Cal 44 1900 A W N 81 and 12 L W 7 Contra —4 L B R 229 where the word property was held to include immoveable property

Property must have been in existence —No order can be made under this section with respect to property which was not in existence at the time of the offence Thus an innocent purchaser of a stolen cow cannot be ordered to deliver up the calf which was not even in embryonic existence when the theft took place, but which was given birth to by the cow while she was in his possession—10 Mad 25

1344. Order, when can be made —According to the words of this section an order for disposal of the property can be made only upon the conclusion of the trial and not long after the conclusion of the trial—24 Cr L J 804 (All) An order for disposal of property passed 14 days after the date of the passing of the judgment in the trial is not invalid—Kishan Chand v Nanak Chand, 7 Lah L J 625 26 Cr L J 1453 But in another Lahore case it has been held that the order under section 517 and the judgment in the trial must be contemporaneous And so if no order is passed by a Court in respect of the disposal of the property on the conclusion of the trial of the accused the Court has no jurisdiction to pass order at any subsequent time directing delivery of the property to the complainant—Abdul v Ghulam Muhammad 4 Lah 460 (461) This case has been dissented from in 7 Lah L J 625 cited above

No order as to the disposal of property can be made under this section

if the trial is barred under sec 403 The words when an inquiry or trial is concluded cannot apply to a case in which the Court is prohibited from conducting a trial at all—4 L B R 229 Similarly an order directing delivery of property cannot be made by a Magistrate without any criminal proceeding before him or any other Magistrate but merely on the application of the person in whose favour the order is made—6 C L J 707

Where a person charged with criminal breach of trust in respect of certain jewels died before the day fixed for his trial and there was no trial no order could be made by the Magistrate under this section The jewels were ordered to be returned to the person from whom the Police recovered them—29 Mad 375

Order discretionary —Orders under this section are discretionary This section invests the Magistrate with a discretionary power and it is a rule of law that such power must be exercised judicially i e according to the sound principles of law and not in an arbitrary manner—11 Bom L R 16 This discretion is open to correction by the High Court where it has been exercised in violation of judicial principles—40 Bom 186

1345 Nature of order under this section —The old section stated that the Magistrate could make such order as he thought fit for the disposal of the property This is a general term and the nature of the order to be passed for disposal was not specified It depended upon the discretion of the Magistrate to say what order was to be passed having regard to all the facts of the case—11 Bom L R 16 Under the present section the word disposal has been elucidated by certain explanatory words

Order in a bribe case —When the accused was convicted of taking bribe and the money paid as bribe was deposited in Court by the complainant the Magistrate could order a portion of the bribe to be confiscated and the rest to be paid to the complainant—1873 P R 9

Order in respect of currency note —Where the accused stole a currency note from the complainant and changed it at the Government Treasury then on conviction of the accused for theft the currency notes should be delivered to the Treasury and not to the complainant Currency note is money and the ownership passes by mere delivery and the original owner cannot claim the amount as against the Treasury—19 Cal 52 The accused purchased some gold ornaments and handed to the jeweller a currency note which he had stolen The jeweller not having had adequate cash took the note to a neighbouring shopkeeper who cashed it in good faith Afterwards during the prosecution of the accused the note was attached from the shopkeeper and on conviction of the accused the Magistrate ordered it to be returned to the Crown whose property it was found to have been Held that the currency note should be returned to the shopkeeper for property in it had passed to him by mere delivery—40 Bom 186 See also 7 M H C R 233 3 Cal 379 1 N W P 98

So is the rule in respect of current coins But Badashahi coin is not current coin in British India and it is to be delivered to the complainant from whom it is stolen like any other common article or property—Bom 70

Order of confiscation —An order of disposal under this section includes an order of forfeiture or confiscation—Ratanlal 492 This is now expressly provided for in the present section In 5 N L R 59 it was held that the 'disposal' of property could not be held to include confiscation or forfeiture, as the penalty of confiscation or forfeiture having been expressly provided for in secs 62, 121 etc of the Indian Penal Code and in numerous other sections of other Acts, it could not be included in the general word 'disposal' used in this section The same view was taken in Secretary of State v Lown Karan 5 P L J 321, 34 Cal 986, 1907 P W R 37 These rulings are no longer correct in view of the express words of the present section

An order for the confiscation of property which is the subject matter of an offence cannot be made without first giving notice to and hearing the person to whose prejudice the order would be Want of notice would be a good ground for setting aside the order—17 Cr L J, 207 (Bur).

Order of destruction of counterfeit coin —If the accused is convicted of an offence under sec 241 I. P C, and counterfeit coin is found in his possession, the Magistrate can order the destruction of the coin—2 Weir 669

Order of restoration of property —If no offence is proved to have been committed in respect of any property produced before the Court, and the accused is acquitted, the Magistrate should restore the property to the person from whom it was last taken—(i e, to the accused)—14 C. P L R 60, 1897 A W N 26, 2 Weir 669, Sattar Ali v Afzal, 54 Cal 283, 28 Cr L J 546, 18 C W N 959, 22 Bom 844, 1 C W N 561, 2 Weir 668, 1 Bom 630, 10 Bom 197, 17 Bom 748, 9 Mad 448, 14 Cal 834, 5 W. R 55 In such a case, an order of confiscation is not proper—16 Cr. L J 811 (Mad). See also 17 Bom L R 79, 42 Mad 9 The property should be restored especially when there is no finding in the case that it belongs to some one else—3 M I T 334

But if a case of theft fails, because the dishonest intention of the accused is not proved, the property can be restored to the complainant, and need not be given back to the accused—16 M L J (Sh N) 4 So also, where the Magistrate, though he discharges the accused, believes that the property in his custody is the subject of some offence, he is not bound to restore the property to the person from whom it was taken, but can make an order of disposal under this section—9 Mad 448

A Magistrate cannot, on dismissal of a complaint, restore the property to the accused, if he disclaims the property In such a case the Court should retain the property until one or other of the parties has established his right in the Civil Court—1913 P W R 37

If a complaint of theft of a certain property is dismissed on the ground of there being a bona fide dispute about the ownership of the property, the Magistrate should take custody of the property, sell it (if it is perishable) and retain the sale proceeds until they are shown to be payable to one or other of the parties either by virtue of a decree of Court, or of an agreement between themselves—16 Bom L R 951; 16 Cr L J 104 (Mad) In 2 Weir 667, it has been held that in such a case, the Magistrate may deliver the property to the person from whose possession it was last taken with a condition that the property, or its value, must be forthcoming in case the rival claimant establishes a title But if it is found that the property belongs partly to the accused and partly to another person it is not illegal to deliver the property to both of them on their joint receipt—34 Mad 91

1346 Order when rights of third parties are concerned :—A property with regard to which an offence has been committed should not be delivered to the owner of the property when it has been pledged to another person (see 19 Cr L J 788) without allowing the pledgee an opportunity of being heard But when the evidence discloses that the property was obtained by fraud from the owner and subsequently pledged, the property should be delivered to the owner and the remedy of the pledgee was to bring a suit in the Civil Court to enforce his lien on the property—4 L B R 13 But where certain jewels were given to the accused to sell, but the accused instead of selling them gave them to another person who pledged them to a third person, it was held that the jewels should be restored to the pledgee and not to the owner, because the owner, having parted with the jewels to be disposed of for money, was not entitled to the assistance of a Criminal Court in recovering them from a pawnee to whom they were so disposed of—3 Bur L T. 111, Stephen Ioiet v K E 4 L B R 25, 6 Cr L J 135, Annamalai v. Mis, Basch 11 L B R 217, 23 Cr L J 216 But if in such a case the pledgee was not a bona fide pledgee and knew that the pledgor had no authority to pledge the articles, held that the articles should be delivered to the owner and not to the pledgee—Emp v Nga Po Chit, 1 Rang 199, 24 Cr L J 858 Where a pledged property was stolen from the possession of the pledgee by the pledgor who was thereupon convicted of theft, the Court should pass an order restoring the property to the pledgee and not to the person to whom the pledgor had sold it for value after the theft—Gour Mohan v Bansidhar, 24 Cr L J 238 (Cal) A goldsmith was entrusted with a certain quantity of gold and diamonds for making a comb for the complainant When the article was nearly completed, the goldsmith pledged it to a diamond merchant who had no knowledge that the property was the property of the complainant. The Court ordered the jewel to be returned to the complainant Held that the order was justifiable—Changanlal v Maung Po Kauk, 2 Bur L J 152 Where certain jewels were given to a broker for sale and the broker sold the jewels and misappropriated the sale proceeds, and was convicted of criminal breach of trust, the jewels ought to be restored to the purchaser and not to the owner, because the offence was committed not with respect to the jewels but with respect to the sale proceeds, and therefore the Magistrate was not competent to make any order with respect to the jewels which validly belonged to the purchaser—4 Bur L T 170.

Notice :—In a case in which the question of the right to possession is not one between the complainant and the accused, but one between the complainant and a third person, an order for the restoration of the property should not be made without giving the opposite party an opportunity of being heard Thus where the complainant entrusted certain jewels to the accused who committed criminal breach of trust in respect of them and pledged them to another person the Court should not order the jewels to be restored to the complainant without giving any notice to the pledgee—Shwe Wa v C I Mehta 5 Rang 553 28 Cr L J 937

1347 Question of title —An order under this section does not decide the question of ownership of the property It merely decides the question of the right to possession till a Civil Court decides the question of ownership—11 Bur L T 267 Where a question of bona fides and of title by purchase or otherwise clearly arises the duty of the Criminal Court is not to pass any order under this section but to leave the complainant to his remedy in the Civil Court if he thinks he has one—Naini Mall v Emp 24 Cr L J 804 (All) If conflicting claims are put forward to the property by different parties the Magistrate cannot give a decision as to the ownership of the property the proper procedure would be to keep the property in Court pending any order which may be made by a competent Civil Court—Ram Khelawan v Tulsi 28 C W N 1094 Where the property in dispute was a certain quantity of wood the proper order would be to sell the property and retain the sale proceeds in Court until they were shown to be payable to one or other of the parties either in virtue of a decree or in virtue of an agreement among themselves—16 Bom L R 951

1348 Improper orders —(1) Disposal in charity —The section does not place the property at the disposal of the Magistrate in the sense of enabling him to bestow it in charity He is to make such legal disposition thereof as seems right i e, to direct its restoration to some one to whom it seems to belong or permit it to continue in the possession in which it is found or otherwise—2 Weir 666

(2) Order regarding custody of children —Orders regarding custody of children cannot be passed under this section—1 Weir 348

was illegal—1900 A W N 81

(4) Order demanding security —The Magistrate cannot take a bond from the accused to produce the property (with respect to which an offence is alleged to have been committed) in Court whenever required There is

(5) Detention of property —If no offence is proved in respect of the property produced in Court the proper order that the Court may pass is to restore the property to the person from whom it was originally taken

It cannot detain the property until the title of the rightful owner is declared by a Civil Court—22 Bom 844

Sub-section (4) —If no offence is proved to have been committed, the Magistrate may restore the property to the accused, and at the same time demand security from him for its production whenever required —2 Weir 668

1349 Explanation —The words conversion and exchange used in the Explanation to the section must be taken in their ordinary sense They apply to such acts as melting down of gold and silver into ornaments or the exchange of notes for cash When therefore a person fraudulently obtained a decree upon a forged promote and in execution of that decree purchased a garden and was subsequently convicted of cheating it was held that the convicting Court could not direct restoration of the garden to its owner because it could not be said that the garden was acquired by the conversion of the forged promissory note into a decree—4 Bur L T 211 A gold ornament was stolen from the complainant and sold by the thief for Rs 184 to the applicant who converted it into gold and sold it in pieces to different persons In the course of the trial of the theft case the applicant was made to produce Rs 184 and at the end of the trial the Magistrate ordered the sum to be paid over to the complainant It was held that the money could not be paid over to the complainant since it merely represented the sum which the applicant paid to the accused as the price of the gold bangles and it could not be treated under the Explanation to this section as the exchanged property with reference to which an offence had been committed—20 Bom L R 604

In view of this Explanation the objection that the coins directed to be returned are not the identical coins stolen cannot be sustained—4 S L R 255

Appeal —See section 520

1350 Revision —The High Court has jurisdiction to interfere with an order of the Magistrate passed under this section—2 Weir 669 40 Bom 186 An order made under this section may be revised by the High Court either under section 520 or by virtue of the powers conferred on it by sec 439 read with secs 435 and 423 (d) of the Code—18 C W N 959 But where the case is one in which an appeal lies any party aggrieved by an order as to the disposal of property must go to the Court of appeal In such a case a Court of revision has no jurisdiction to interfere with an order as to the disposal of property It is only when there is neither an appeal nor a confirmation that a Court of revision or reference can interfere—35 Bom 253 The High Court will not exercise its revisional powers against an order under this section except as a Court of last resort—14 C P L R 107 11 C P L R 47

1351 Power of Appellate Court to make orders under this section —Under clause (d) of section 423 the Appellate Court is competent to make any incidental or consequential order that may be just or proper An order directing the disposal of property is a 'consequential or incidental order' within the meaning of section 423 (d) Therefore where such order was not passed by the Court of first instance 1

Appellate Court is entitled to do so—3 A L. J 770, 35 All 374 See notes under sec 423 (d). Contra—2 Weir 674, where it is held than an Appellate Court cannot pass an order under this section when the Subordinate Court has not done so

Since the High Court in Revision possesses all the powers of an Appellate Court, the High Court can in revision pass an order under this section See Note 1212 under sec 439

Orders may take form of reference to District or Sub-divisional Magistrate.

518. In lieu of itself passing an order under Section 517, the Court may direct the property to be delivered to the District Magistrate or to a Sub-divisional Magistrate, who shall in such cases deal with it as if it had been seized by the police and the seizure had been reported to him in the manner hereinafter mentioned.

Scope of section —An order under this section can be made only in respect of property regarding which an offence appears to have been committed or which has been used for the commission of an offence, —Ratanlal 496

Payment to innocent purchaser of money found on accused.

519. When any person is convicted of any offence which includes or amounts to theft or receiving stolen property, and it is proved that any other person has brought the stolen property from him without knowing or having reason to believe that the same was stolen, and [illegible] stolen property to the person entitled to the possession thereof, order that out of such money a sum not exceeding the price paid by such purchaser be delivered to him.

'Any money has been taken out of the possession, etc' —The Magistrate can give compensation to an innocent purchaser only out of any money found on the person of the accused, when no money was found in the possession of the person convicted, the Magistrate cannot grant compensation to the innocent purchaser out of the fine imposed on the accused—2 Weir 671, 3 Bom L R 449, 3 Bom L R 764 See also Ratanlal 631

The Magistrate cannot call upon the owner to pay the purchase money of the stolen property to the bona fide purchaser, and an order delivering the property to the purchaser from the thief because the original owner would not pay him the purchase money, is illegal—1896 A. W. N 91.

Stay of order under section 517, 518 or 519

520. Any Court of appeal, confirmation, reference or revision may direct any order under Section 517, Section 518 or Section 519 passed by a Court subordinate thereto, to be stayed pending consideration by the former Court, and may modify, alter or annul such order and make any further orders that may be just.

1352. "Any Court of appeal or revision" :—The words "any Court of appeal' are not necessarily limited to a Court before which an appeal in the main case is pending The orders under sections 517—519 are appealable quite independent of the fact whether an appeal has been preferred or not from the main order of conviction or acquittal—3 Cal 379 9 Mad 448 Therefore where a second class Magistrate restored certain property to the complainant when no offence was found to have been committed, the District Magistrate was competent to annul the order and restore the property to the person from whose possession it was taken, although there was no appeal pending before the District Magistrate—2 Weir 673 So also even where no appeal has been preferred from a conviction by a subordinate Court the District Magistrate has got jurisdiction to interfere as a Court of revision under section 520 with an order passed by the trial Court under section 517—Emp v Nga Po Chit, 1 Rang 199

But the Sessions Judge is not a Court of appeal or revision in respect of an order passed by a second class Magistrate So also a Sessions Judge is not a Court of appeal in respect of an order passed by a sub-divisional Magistrate on appeal from the decision of a second class Magistrate because there can be no second appeal to the Sessions Judge Moreover the Sessions Judge has no revisional powers over the order of a sub-divisional Magistrate passed on appeal—Somu Pillai v Krishna Pillai, 47 M L J 481 25 Cr L J 1247 20 L W 521 But see Explanation to Sec 435

Moreover the words Court of Appeal imply the Court to which an appeal lies in the particular case and not the Court to which appeals would ordinarily lie from the Court deciding the particular case And therefore where a 1st class Magistrate in acquitting the accused person charged with theft of cattle ordered the cattle to be restored to him, but the complainant appealed to the Sessions Judge as regards the order relating to the disposal of property, whereupon the Sessions Judge revised the order and held that the complainant was entitled to the cattle, held that the Sessions Judge had no jurisdiction to act under section 520 since he was not a Court of appeal in this particular case, because no appeal could lie to him against a judgment of acquittal, the appeal ought to have been preferred to the High Court—In re Khema 42 Bom 664 The trying Magistrate acquitted the accused who was charged with theft of a drum, and under section 517 directed the drum to be returned to the accused On appeal the District Magistrate set aside the order under section 517 and directed the drum to be delivered to the complainant Held the District Magistrate had no jurisdiction to do so, because he was

Court of appeal within the meaning of sec 520, since no appeal could lie to him against an order of acquittal The District Magistrate was also not a Court of confirmation, reference or revision, the only Court which could pass orders on a reference or revision being the High Court—Emp v. Devi Ram, 46 All 623 (624), 22 A L J 505, 25 Cr L J. 1168 An appeal from an order of a second class Magistrate ordinarily lies to the District Magistrate, but if the District Magistrate has directed an appeal or a certain class of appeals to be heard by a Sub divisional Magistrate, the Court of the Sub-divisional Magistrate, and not that of the District Magistrate is the Court of Appeal under this section Therefore where an appeal in the main case lies to the Sub-divisional Magistrate, that Magistrate has jurisdiction to pass an order as to the disposal of property under this section—In re Arunachala Thevan, 46 Mad 162

But when no appeal is preferred against the main order in the case (i e. against the acquittal or conviction), but the appeal is confined entirely to the question of disposal of property, the appeal would lie to the Court to which an appeal ordinarily lies, i e, to the District Magistrate (from an order of a second class Magistrate) and not to the Subdivisional Magistrate—In re Arunachala, 46 Mad 162 (165), Jogi Venkiah v Station House officer, 42 M L J 534 But see 42 Bom 664 (cited above) where the appeal was not against the main order of acquittal, but against the order as to disposal of property, but still the High Court held that the Court of Appeal was not the Sessions Judge to whom the appeal would ordinarily lie, but the High Court to which the appeal would lie against the main order in the particular case (i e against acquittal)

But when an appeal has been preferred to a particular Court from the main order of conviction or acquittal, no appeal or revision against an order as to the disposal of property can be preferred to any other Court The jurisdiction of the other Courts as to the revision of the order is suspended owing to the seizin of the whole case by the Court of Appeal—17 C P L R 107 But where the Appellate Court in dealing with an appeal has left untouched the order passed by the Original Court under Secs 517—519, there exists no bar to an application for revision fo that order being made in any other Court having jurisdiction to revise that order—17 C P L R 107

Where a Magistrate disposing of a criminal appeal fails to pass an order under section 520, it will be open to his successor to do so—In re Subba Naidu, 43 M L J 87 See sec 559

Notice —An order under this section should not be passed without giving notice to the opposite party—35 Bom 253, 4 Lah 49 (51) Although there is no rule of law which requires that such a notice is absolutely necessary, still if there is some interval between the date of the main order in the appeal and the order as to disposal of property, it is desirable that notice should be given to the opposite party before passing the second order—In re Arunachala, 46 Mad 162

1353. "And make any further orders that may be just" :— These words did not occur in the old Codes and were for the first time introduced into the Code of 1898, Under the old Codes it was

doubted whether the Appellate or Revisional Court could direct restitution of property when setting aside the order of the Lower Court But now the addition of the words and make any further order that may be just in this section gives such power to the Superior Court beyond any doubt See 46 Mad 162 (at p 167) 18 C W N 959 and 19 Cr L J 995 (Pat) Owing to this change in the section the following rulings are no longer good law —9 W R 57 14 Cal 834 1 Bom 630 8 Bom 575 22 Bom 434

The fact that an order for delivery of property under section 517 has been carried out, does not deprive the High Court of its power to order restoration of the property to the rightful owner—Shwe Wa v C I Mehta 5 Rang 553 28 Cr L J 931 It is clearly just that when a subordinate Court has made over property to a person who is not entitled to its possession the High Court should remedy the error by restoring the property to the person properly entitled to its possession—Ibid

It is not necessary that an order as regards the property should be passed under this section by the Appellate Court simultaneously with the disposal of the appeal Thus where a conviction for theft of bulls was set aside by the Appellate Magistrate but at that time he forgot to pass any order as to the bulls and some time after the disposal of the appeal he passed an order for restoration of the bulls to the accused held that the second order was not illegal as it could be treated as part of the proceedings of the main appeal (the interval being a short one)—In re Arunachala 46 Mad 162

When an application is made to the Superior Court to make any further order as may be just such application should not always be deemed as an appeal and need not be presented within the period of limitation prescribed for filing an appeal from the order of a Magistrate Thus a person was convicted by the Magistrate in June 19 0 for dishonestly receiving stolen currency notes to the value of Rs 400 and was ordered by the Magistrate to make over the money to the complainant On appeal the Sessions Judge in July 1921 reversed the conviction and acquitted the accused but passed no order as regards the amount of Rs 400 Subsequently in January 1922 the accused made an application to the Sessions Judge for the restoration of this money The Sessions Judge rejected the application as barred by limitation Held that the application for the return of Rs 400 was in no sense an application by way of an appeal against the order of the trying Magistrate but an independent application to the Sessions Judge with a view to his taking action under section 520 and passing any order that may be just No period of limitation is prescribed for such an application and it can be made within a reasonable time from the date on which an accused person is acquitted of the crime with which he is charged—Kanshi Ram v Crown 4 Lab 49 (51)

1354 Revision —When an order of the Lower Court has been set aside by the Sessions Court under this Section the order of Sessions Court is not appealable, the remedy is by way of revision to High Court—1898 A W. N 40 The words any proceeding in are wide enough to empower the High Court to revise an order passed under this section—2 Weir 669

Destruction of libellous and other matter.

521. (1) On a conviction under the Indian Penal Code Section 292, Section 293, Section 501 or Section 502, the Court may order the destruction of all the copies of the thing in respect of which the conviction was had and which are in the custody of the Court or remain in the possession or power of the person convicted.

(2) The Court may, in like manner, on a conviction under the Indian Penal Code, Section 272, Section 273, Section 274 or Section 275, order the food, drink, drug or medical preparation in respect of which the conviction was had, to be destroyed.

Power to restore po-

perty, the Court may, if it thinks fit, when convicting such person or at any time within one month from the date of the conviction, order the person dispossessed to be restored to the possession of the same.

(2) No such order shall prejudice any right or interest to or in such immmoveable property which any person may be able to establish in a civil suit.

(3) An order under this section may be made by any Court of appeal, confirmation, reference or revision,

Change :—The italicised words and sub-section (3) have been added by section 143 of the Cr P C. Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923 "This amendment provides for the order of restoration being passed within one month from the date of conviction; secondly, it extends the scope of the section to ouster from possession by show of criminal force or criminal intimidation, and thirdly, it gives power to an Appellate Court or to the High Court in revision to pass such an order"—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914)

1355. Scope of section :—Section 522 which enables a Magistrate to deprive a wrong-doer of possession, is limited only to cases in which possession has been obtained by criminal force attending an offence and the wrong-doer has been convicted of such offence—2 Weir 98.

An order under this section should not be made where the accused person has not been convicted of an offence attended by criminal force—12 C. W N 269 37 All 654 Thus, no order can be passed under this section where the trespass which the accused was alleged to have committed was not a criminal trespass but merely a civil one—12 C W N 269 If the conviction is set aside in appeal or revision the order under sec 522 resulting from the conviction must also be set aside—24 Cr L J 493

1356 Criminal force —To justify an order under this section, the Court must find that the offence of which the accused is convicted was attended with criminal force as defined in Sec 350 of the I P Code and therefore where a person was convicted of criminal trespass in which no criminal force was used the Magistrate could not make an order under this section—Churaman v Ramlal 25 All 341 Chunni v Baldeo 21 A L J 593 Ishan v Deno Nath 27 Cal 174 3 L B R 20 Balram v Chamru 2 P L T 120 1919 P R 16 1906 P R 12 23 W R 54 24 O C 352 (1922) M W N 356 If the accused armed with sticks and lathis rushed at the complainant and used threats whereupon the complainant was obliged to run away from his field held that there was criminal force as defined in secs 349 and 350 I P C although actual physical force was not used and an order under this section was justified—Emp v Ashiq Hussain 45 All 25 (26)

But the words attended by criminal force do not mean an offence of which criminal force is an ingredient to hold such view is to put a narrow construction on the general words—26 Mad 49 31 Cal 691 Contra—5 Cal 434 23 W R 54 12 L W 227 and 4 P L W 329 where the words were interpreted to mean an offence in which criminal force formed an ingredient

The word force means force to a person as defined in section 349 I P C and not force to property Thus where the accused dispossessed the complainant of his garden by breaking open the padlock of the gate but used no force or violence to any person it was held that the case did not fall under this section—Sheonandan v Bholanath 18 C W N 1146 Where the accused committed rioting and used violence to the complainant's fencing but not to any person it was held that this section did not apply—18 C W N 1150 This section does not apply to a case of criminal trespass and dispossession of the complainant unless it is found that the trespass was attended with use of criminal force on the person of the complainant—2 P L T 120 Where trespass was committed in the absence of the complainant an order for restoration cannot be passed—Margi Ram v Emp 6 P L R 500

1357 Show of force —An order may now be passed under this section even if the offence is attended with mere show of force On this point there was a conflict of opinion prior to the present amendment. In some cases it was held that there must be actual criminal force and not mere show of criminal force Thus it was held that the offence of being members of an unlawful assembly was one in the composition of which the use of criminal force did not enter though the show of criminal force might exist and therefore an order under this section could not be passed on conviction for being members of an unlawful assembly— 5 Cal 434 5

tion in this section, and the former set of cases must be deemed as over ruled And thus it has been held under the amended Code that where the accused succeeded in taking possession of the complainant s house by means of criminal trespass threatening to use force to the complainant and his men, the accused s act clearly came within this section and an order for restoration of the house to the complainant was just and proper—Rameshar v K E 4 Pat 438 27 Cr L J 137, A I R 1925 Pat 689

1358 Dispossession.—To justify an order under this section it must be shown that a party has been dispossessed by criminal force Where there is no evidence of such dispossession an order under this section cannot be sustained—2 Weir 674 1917 P W R 38 There should be an express finding that the person in whose favour the order was made had been dispossessed by the use of criminal force—23 W R 54 Where the accused was convicted of rioting and an order was passed under this section to the effect that one of the witnesses be put in possession of certain land until ousted by a Court of competent jurisdiction held that as there was no evidence that the witness had been dispossessed by criminal force the order of the Magistrate was bad—2 Weir 674 If the Magistrate purported to act under section 145 he should have instituted separate proceedings

Where it is found that neither party is in actual possession an order under this section cannot be made—2 Weir 675

Order affecting possession of third person —The object of the provisions of this section is to enable the criminal Court by a summary order to restore the state of things which existed at the time of the dispossession to actual possession which he held of the house at the time of his dispossession that the tenant had no right to any possession and that he should seek his remedy in the Civil Court—5 C W N 374

An order under this section can only be binding between the parties to the order and can have no finality in favour of one who was not a party to the order and does not claim under any party—Adinarayana v Suravva 48 M L J 372

1359 Order when can be made.—An order under this section although it can be made only on the conviction of an offence is an independent order and need not be made simultaneously with the conv...

tion—23 Bom 494 It is not essential in law that an order restoring possession should find a place in the actual judgment. But it must be immediate, that is, directly arising out of the judgment of the Court convicting in the case, and without any fresh materials having in the meantime been produced—14 Cr L J 172 (Cal), see also 16 A L J 489 It is proper if it is made within a reasonable time from the date of conviction —U B R (1918) 3rd Qr 111, 20 Cr L J 115 (Bur) It is not necessary for the Magistrate to pass an order under this section simultaneously with the conviction and there is no illegality if he passes the order at any time after the conviction, if the cause of delay in applying for the order is fully explained to his satisfaction and the complainant moves the Court promptly after the cause of delay has ceased—Ghulam Muhammad v Karan Singh, 1914 P R 15 In this case, there was 20 months delay owing to the filing of a civil suit by the accused and the Court excused the delay, since the complainant applied for restoration immediately after the civil suit had terminated in his favour It should be noted that the present section as now amended gives only one month s time

In 4 C W N 308, however it has been held that an order under this section must be made simultaneously with the order of conviction of the accused, and cannot be made subsequently But this ruling is no longer good law in view of the words ' or at any time within one month" newly added in this section We do not think that an order of restoration need be made simultaneously with the conviction but we think that any application for such an order should be made promptly and that one month is sufficient time to allow for this purpose' —Report of the Select Committee of 1916

1360. Notice to party —Since an order under this section is to be immediate that, is directly arising out of the judgment of the Court convicting the accused and without any fresh materials having in the meantime been produced, it is not necessary that any notice should go to the accused before the order is passed—14 Cr L J 172 (Cal) But the Magistrate should give the party an opportunity to show casue as a matter of due exercise of judicial discretion—3 L B R 20 Where an order under this section was made in respect of a house on a conviction of rioting and hurt and the Sessions Judge on appeal set aside the conviction but directed the order under section 522 to be in abeyance pending a reference to the High Court, and subsequently in the absence of the complainant declared the order to be void, it was held that the Sessions Judge's order should not have been made behind the back of the party affected by it—23 C W N 862

Sub-section (2):—Limitation for civil suit —See Art 47 of the Indian Limitation Act, which provides a period of three years from the date of the order.

1361. Sub-section (3):—This sub-section has been newly added. Prior to this amendment it was held that an Appellate Court had no pov to pass an order under this section where the convicting Magistrate not passed any order hereunder—Bhagabat v Sadiq Ostagar, 39 Mahammad Din v Crown, 1919 P. R. 14; Aziz Ahmad v. Budh

553 (554) These rulings are no longer correct. Under the present amendment, the High Court acting in reference or revision has power to pass the order even though no such order might have been made by the trial or appellate Court—Lachman v Emp, 21 A L J 871

An order under this section may be passed by the Court of appeal or revision at any time howsoever long after the conviction by the Magistrate, and not necessarily within one month from the date of conviction—Rameshwar v K E, 4 Pat 438, A I R 1925 Pat 689

1362. Appeal or Revision :—Since an Appellate Court can pass an incidental or consequential order under section 423 (d), an order under this section (which is in the nature of an incidental or consequential order) is also subject to appeal and is similarly subject to the revisional powers of the High Court under section 439—29 Cal 724 The ruling in 25 Cal. 630 is not correct in view of section 423 (d) An Appellate Court may set aside and order under this section, while affirming the conviction—19 C W. N 990 The High Court has full power to interfere with an order passed by a Magistrate under this section, although this section is not mentioned in section 520—36 Cal 44 Where the Magistrate ordered that a property which the accused had taken possession by force should be restored to the complainant, but on the application of the accused the High Court set aside the order of restoration, held that the order of the High Court amounted to an order of restoration of the property to the accused—Sheonandan v Bhola Nath, 18 C W N 1147, 15 Cr. L J. 222

Procedure by Police upon seizure of property taken under Section 51 or stolen.

523. (1) The seizure by any police officer of property taken under Section 51 or alleged or suspected to have been stolen, or found under circumstances which create suspicion of the commission of any offence, shall be forthwith reported to a Magistrate, who shall make such order as he thinks fit respecting the disposal of such property or the delivery of such property to the person entitled to the possession thereof, or, if such person cannot be ascertained, respecting the custody and production of such property.

Procedure where owner of property seized unknown.

(2) If the person so entitled is known, the Magistrate may order the property to be delivered to him on such conditions (if any) as the Magistrate thinks fit. If [illegible] articles of which such property consists, and requiring any person who may have a claim thereto, to appear before him and establish his claim within six months from the date of such proclamation.

Sections 517 and 523 —Section 517 applies only when an inquiry or trial in a Criminal Court is concluded But section 523 applies even though there has been no inquiry or trial, as in a case where a complaint has been dismissed under sec 203—24 M L J 1

1363 Scope of Section —This section does not apply where the property was not taken possession of by the Police under sec 51 or 54 i e where it was not seized by the police under the suspicion of its being stolen property nor had the petitioner committed any offence in respect to the property This section does not apply where the police obtained possession of the property in question in the course of an investigation into an offence which is in no way related to the property—Chuni Lal v Ishar Das 4 Lah 38 (42 43) This section applies only to property seized by the Police of their own motion in the exercise of the powers conferred on them i e under sections 51 54 165 and 166 Such property should be disposed of by the Magistrate under this section But property seized by the Police under a search warrant issued by the Magistrate during the course of an inquiry or trial comes under section 517 and not under this section—17 Bom 748 So also this section does not apply where the property is seized by the Police on the complaint of certain persons claiming as owners thereof—29 Mad 375 (377) Contra—26 Bom 55? where it has been held that the words seized by the Police apply equally whether the seizure was under a warrant of the Magistrate or without such warrant and the Magistrate has power under this section to dispose of the property seized under a search warrant

Property —Standing crops do not come under the provisions of this section—23 Bom 494

1364 Order under this section —Under this section the Magistrate may make such order as he thinks fit The discretion given by these words should be properly exercised If there is no evidence as to the ownership of the property it should be delivered to the person from whose possession it was taken—5 Bom L R 23 17 Bom L R 19 4 L B R 13 8 S I R 141 A Magistrate is also competent to order the property seized by the Police to be made over to the complainant if the Magistrate finds on the materials before him that the complainant is entitled to the property—1. Bom L R 232 But if the property is alleged or suspected to have been stolen or found under circumstances which create suspicion of the commission of any offence the Magistrate can pass order that the property should be at the disposal of the Government even though the complainant may be entitled thereto—24 M L J 1 So also if neither party succeeds in establishing his title to possession the property would be at the disposal of the Government—Ibid

Conditional order regarding property —The Magistrate cannot demand security either under this section or under sec 517 from the person in whose possession the articles are for their production if required—7 C W N 522 (see the case cited under section 517) But if before the inquiry or trial it becomes necessary to pass an immediate order to save the property from possible loss or decay the Magistrate can order the prop to be delivered to one of the parties on certain terms—5 C W N 41

1365 Inquiry —It has been pointed out in a Bombay case that the provisions of this section are wider than those of the corresponding section of the Code of 1872, and the Magistrate, instead of delivering the property to the person from whom it was taken, may now hold an inquiry and then deliver it to the person legally entitled—8 Bom 338 In another case it has been held that the Magistrate is bound to make a proper inquiry before making an order concerning the right of possession of property under this section—In re Ratanlal, 17 Bom 748 See also 26 Bom 552. But the Madras High Court rightly holds that from a study of the section it appears that there is no obligation on the Magistrate to hold an inquiry for the purpose of determining as to which of the contending parties is entitled to the property It does not appear that it is authorised to usurp the functions of a Civil Court and convert the trial of an accused person into an inquiry in regard to property'—29 Mad. 375 (378) In another Bombay case also it is laid down that the Magistrate need not hold an inquiry but may proceed on such evidence as is available and pass an order under this section He can base his order on a mere statement made by the accused to the Police that the property was stolen by him from the adjudged owner —Q E v Tribhovan, 9 Bom 131 The Magistrate is not bound to make a judicial inquiry by examination of witnesses on oath before making an order under this section All that the law requires is that he should have materials before him to satisfy himself as to who is entitled to possession —Ma Thein v Ma The, 12 Bur L T. 266, 21 Cr L J 561, Chuni Lal v Ishar Das 4 Lah 38 (42) An order under this section can be passed on police reports and papers alone without any independent inquiry on oath with regard to the question of ownership—Chuni Lal v Ishar Das, 4 Lah 38 (42) If there is no question that the property was taken out of the complainant s possession, the Magistrate can return the property to the complainant without making any inquiry—Ratanlal 365

When the Magistrate has issued a proclamation under sub-section (2), he is not bound to make any inquiry till after the expiry of the six months from the date of the proclamation—22 Cal 761

Question of title —The Magistrate deciding a case under this section should not decide any question of title but must be confined only to the question of possession—Husansha v Mashaksha, 12 Bom L R 232 The order under this section does not conclude the right of any person The real owner may proceed in the civil Court against the holder of the articles for damages—9 Bom 131

1366 Proclamation —When the person legally entitled to the property is known, the Magistrate need not make a proclamation nor wait for six months before delivering the property to him He may deliver the property to the person entitled, whether he has issued a proclamation or not If he has issued a proclamation that fact will not invalidate an order for immediate delivery of the property to such a known person—3 L B R 197.

1367. Revision —On a proper case being made out, the High Court in revision has jurisdiction to examine an order passed under this section—Chuni Lal v Ishar Das, 4 Lah 38 (42) The High Court has power in revision not only to set aside a Magistrate s order for the disposal of property passed under this section but also to order restitution of the property to the person entitled thereto—Ma Thein v Ma The, 12 Bur L T 266 21 Cr L J 561

Review.—Orders under this section cannot be reviewed When once a Magistrate has passed an order restoring possession of the property, he cannot reconsider it and pass another order subsequently—4 Bom L R 12.

524 • If no person within such period establishes his claim to such property, and if the person in whose possession such property was found is unable to show that it was legally acquired by him, such property shall be at the disposal of Government, and may be sold under the orders of the Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate or Sub divisional Magistrate, or a Magistrate of the first class empowered by the Local Government in this behalf

Procedure where no claimant appears within six months

(2) In the case of every order passed under this section, an appeal shall lie to the Court to which appeals against sentences of the Court passing such order would lie

1367A Unable to show that ... him —When the proclamation has been issued under sec 523 and the six months have expired then the provisions of sec 524 come in and the person in whose possession the property was found can come up and prove his title to the property —2 Cal 761 If he is unable to show that the property is his own it may be forfeited to Government But the words unable to show that it was legally acquired by him do not reverse the presumption laid down in Sec 110 of the Evidence Act i e it should be presumed that the accused is the owner of the property in the absence of any proof to the contrary Where the police seized certain property from the accused and no claimant came forward to claim the same though a proclamation was issued, and several items of the property bore the name of the accused but the Magistrate said that the evidence produced by the accused was suspicious though no evidence was elicited to show clearly that the accused s claim was false it was held that under the circumstances the proper and safest course is to follow the presumption laid down in Sec 110 of the Evidence Act—8 S L R 141 Where no offence is found to have been committed, the property should be returned to the accused and not be confiscated to the Government—17 Bom L R 79

Property shall be at the disposal of Government —The C Court can make arrangements for the custody and protection of perty while in the possession of Government and can make a the property to such person as it thinks proper—Secretary of State v Lown Karan, 5 P. L J 321 (324)

The words 'at the disposal of the Government' may reasonably be interpreted as meaning that the Government shall be free to sell the property or to hold it as a trustee for the true owner, who will be entitled to bring a suit for possession of the property—Ibid (at p 327)

1368. Appeal :—The appeal allowed by sub section (2) is an appeal in the full sense of Chapter XXXI, and the provisions of that chapter must be fully complied with Where an appeal to the Court of Session from an order of the District Magistrate was treated as a sort of miscellaneous application and decided ex parte without a notice to the other party, and none of the procedure of Chapter XXXI was followed, the order of the Sessions Judge was set aside—1881 A W N 150

Civil suit :—In one case the Bombay High Court has expressed the opinion that as this section allows an appeal from an order under this section, it is doubtful whether the law contemplates a remedy by suit—Secretary of State v Wakhul, 19 Bom 668 But in another case the Bombay High Court has laid down that the Magistrate s order under this section is not conclusive as to title, and the owner is entitled to bring a civil suit for possession—Q E v Tribhuvan, 9 Bom 131 See also Wasappa v Secretary of State, 40 Bom 200 These two cases have been followed in Secretary of State v Lown Karan, 5 P L J 321 (326)

Power to sell perishable property.

525. If the person entitled to the possession of such property is unknown or absent and the property is subject to speedy and natural decay, or if the Magistrate to whom its seizure is reported is of opinion that its sale would be for the benefit of the owner or that the value of such property is less than ten rupees, the Magistrate may at any time direct it to be sold; and the provisions of Sections 523 and 524 shall, as nearly as may be practicable, apply to the nett proceeds of such sale.

CHAPTER XLIV.

OF THE TRANSFER OF CRIMINAL CASES.

High Court may transfer case or itself try it

526. (1) Whenever it is made to appear to the High Court—

(a) that a fair and impartial inquiry or trial cannot be had in any Criminal Court subordinate thereto, or

(b) that some question of law of unusual difficulty is likely to arise, or

(c) that a view of the place in or near which any offence has been committed, may be required for the satisfactory inquiry into or trial of the same, or

(d) that an order under this section will tend to the general convenience of the parties or witnesses, or

(e) that such an order is expedient for the ends of justice, or is required by any provision of this Code,

it may order—

(i) that any offence be inquired into or tried by any Court not empowered under sections 177 to 184 (both inclusive) but in other respects competent to inquire into or try such offence,

(ii) that any particular * * * case or appeal, or class of cases or appeals, be transferred from a Criminal Court subordinate to its authority to any other such Criminal Court of equal or superior jurisdiction,

(iii) that any particular * * * case or appeal be transferred to and tried before itself, or

(iv) that an accused person be committed for trial to itself or to a Court of Session

(2) When the High Court withdraws for trial before itself any case from any Court other than the Court of a Presidency Magistrate, it shall, except as provided in Section 267, observe in such trial the same procedure which that Court would have observed if the case had not been so withdrawn

(3) The High Court may act either on the report of the lower Court, or on the application of a party interested, or on its own initiative

(4) Every application for the exercise of the pow[er] conferred by this section shall be made by motion, w[hich]

shall, except when the applicant is the Advocate General be supported by affidavit or affirmation

(5) When an accused person makes an application under this section, the High Court may direct him to execute a bond, with or without sureties, conditioned that he will, if so ordered, pay any amount which the High Court has power under this section to award by way of costs to the person opposing the application

Notice to Public Prosecutor of application under this section

(6) Every accused person making any such application shall give to the Public Prosecutor notice in writing of the application, together with a copy of the grounds on which it is made and no order shall be made on the merits of the application unless at least twenty four hours have elapsed between the giving of such notice and the hearing of the application

(6A) Where any application for the exercise of the power conferred by this section is dismissed the High Court may, if it is of opinion that the application was frivolous or vexatious, order the applicant to pay by way of costs to any person who has opposed the application any expenses reasonably incurred by such person in consequence of the application

(7) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to affect any order made under Section 197

Adjournment on application under this section

(8) If, in any criminal case or appeal, before the commencement of the hearing, the Public Prosecutor, the complainant or the accused notifies to the Court before which the case or appeal is pending, his intention to make an application under this section in respect of the case, the Court shall exercise the powers of postponement or adjournment given

Adjournment on application under this section

(8) If, in the course of any inquiry or trial or before the commencement of the hearing of any appeal, the Public Prosecutor, the complainant or the accused notifies to the Court before which the case or appeal is pending his intention to make an application under this section in respect of such case or appeal, the Court shall adjourn the case

by Section 344 in such a manner as will afford a reasonable time for the application being made and an order being obtained thereon, before the accused is called on for his defence, or, in the case of an appeal, before the hearing of the appeal	or postpone the appeal for such a period as will afford a reasonable time for the application to be made and an order to be obtained thereon

(9) Notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, a Judge presiding in a Court of Session shall not be requir- s of opinion 'g an appli- opportunity of making such an application and has failed without sufficient cause to take advantage of it

Change —This section has been amended by section 145 of the Cr P C Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 In clauses (ii) and (iii) the word criminal has been omitted in sub section (5) the words any amount application have been substituted for the words the costs of the prosecutor sub-sections (6A) and (9) have been newly added and sub section (8) has been materially altered as shown in parallel columns The reasons are stated below in their proper places

Sections 526 and 269 —Section 269 in no way limits the powers of transfer conferred on the High Court by this section The High Court has power to transfer a case from a jury district to a non jury district—10 S L R 154 (cited under sec 269)

1369 Conditions precedent —Before an application is made to the High Court for transfer the District Magistrate must be moved first The High Court will not ordinarily entertain an application for transfer when the applicant can under the law move the District Magistrate for the same relief but has not done so The High Court will interfere only in the last resort—Rati Chandra v Sundar 26 Cr L J 960 (All) 6 Bom I R 480 24 Cr L J 466 (Lah) The case to be transferred must be a case pending before a competent Court The High Court cannot under this section transfer a case which is not properly before a Subordinate Court of competent jurisdiction to receive and try it—10 Bom 274 9 All 191 9 Mad 356 In re Sikka 17 I W 69 6 Cal 30 7 Bom L R 104 3 Bom L R 121 If the complaint has been made to a Magistrate who is not competent to take cognizance of the case he shall return complaint for presentation to the proper Court with an endorsement to effect (see section 201) The application for transfer must be made the disposal of the case A case cannot be transferred after a

This Section contemplates interference by the High Court by way of transfer, when a person is aggrieved or injured by any order of the Magistrate before the disposal of the case It is not intended to give power to interfere in order to set aside an acquittal or discharge—2 Cal 290, 1 Bom L R 782

1370. Cases which can be transferred :—In clauses (i) and (ii) of the old section, the Legislature used the words 'criminal case' and so the word criminal led to a divergence of views in several cases Thus as regards cases under Chapter VIII, it was held in 28 Cal 709 41 Cal 719, 32 All 642, 12 A L J 262, 1913 P R 1 and 1 S L R 98 that such cases were criminal cases and were therefore covered by this section, but in 1914 P R 5 and 1916 P L R 78 it was held that those cases not being criminal cases could not be transferred from one Court to another So also, as regards cases under Chapter XII, in 2 C L J 614 26 Mad 188, 34 All. 533 and 11 O C 61, it was held that proceedings under section 145, being criminal proceedings, could be transferred from one Court to another, whereas the contrary view was taken in 25 Bom 179 and 8 S L R 215 The Legislature has now wisely omitted the word 'criminal,' so that all cases inquired into and tried in any criminal Court can now be transferred under this section "The word criminal has been omitted to make it clear that the powers of a High Court to transfer criminal cases extend to the transfer of miscellaneous proceedings under the Code'— Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914) Proceedings under Sec 14 of the Legal Practitioners Act are neither civil nor criminal, but as they are held in criminal Courts, they can be transferred from one Court to another under this section. The contrary view held in 1888 P R 41 is no longer correct

This section applies to proceedings pending in Courts subordinate to the High Court Panchayet Courts established under the U P Act VI of 1920 are not subordinate to the High Court, and the power under this section cannot be exercised to transfer a proceeding pending in one panchayet Court to another—Sat Narain v Sarju, 46 All 167 (168, 169) In this case, Kanhaiya Lal J is of opinion that the High Court cannot transfer a case from one village Panchayet to another under the provisions of this section, but it can do so under sec 22 of the Letters Patent—Ibid (p 170)

Future cases cannot be transferred —The High Court can transfer actual cases only, i e cases actually pending before a Court, it cannot direct that cases that may be filed in future should, when filed, not be heard by the authority to which they are presented but should be transferred to some other Court—Ratanlal 973

Inquiry —An inquiry under the Workmen s Breach of Contract Act is an inquiry contemplated by this section and can be transferred from one Court to another—Bansi v. Lakshmi, 45 All 700 (701)

1371. Clause (a)—Reasonable apprehension of not having a fair trial :—The basis of all applications for transfer of criminal cases must be that the accused must have a reasonable apprehension that he will not receive a fair trial—1 P. L. J. 399 When there are circumstances existing to create a reasonable apprehension in the mind of the accused that he will not receive a fair and unprejudiced trial a transfer should be directed though there is really no bias in the mind of the Court from which the transfer is sought and though the circumstances may be capable of explanation—2 Weir 678 28 Cal 297 23 Cal 495 Kali Churn v Emp 33 Cal 1183 18 Cal 247 19 All 64 25 Bom 179 3 Lah 443 15 C P L R 192 1 P L T 552 2 P L T 297 Benode Belari v Emp 5 P L T 63 25 Cr L J 590 20 Cr L J 566 (Pat) 25 Cr L J 693 (Lah) Confidence in the administration of justice is an essential element of good Government and reasonable apprehension of failure of justice in the mind of the accused person should therefore be taken into serious consideration on an application for transfer—Kali Churn v Emp 33 Cal 1183 10 C W N 793 Sardari Lal v Emp 3 Lah 443

When a transfer is asked for it is not sufficient merely to allege that the applicant would not get an impartial trial but he must place before the Court the facts which give rise to this belief in his mind—Amar Singh v Sadhu Singh 6 Lah 396 7 Lah L J 241 26 Cr L J 853

When sufficient grounds are made out for a transfer the High Court is bound to act under this section It is precluded from considering the possible effect which the transfer may have on the reputation or authority of the Magistrate concerned—10 C W N 441 One of the most important duties of the High Court is to create and maintain confidence in the administration of justice and this can be done by giving to every citizen an assurance that so far as practicable he will never be forced to undergo a trial by a Judge or Magistrate when he has reasonable apprehension that a fair and impartial trial cannot be obtained from that Judge or Magistrate —1 S I R 8 In transferring a case from one Magistrate to another the High Court ought not to be guided by the impressions produced in its own mind as to the impartiality of the Magistrate but must look to the effect likely to be produced in the minds of the parties and their witnesses by the selection of a Magistrate whose personal antecedents or circumstances have however unavoidably connected him with either one party or the other—25 Bom 1 0

It is the duty of the Magistrate not only to conduct the case impartially but also to conduct himself in such a manner that the parties may have absolute confidence in him that only full justice will be dealt out to them If the Magistrate though not actually biased still conducts himself in such a manner and utters such words as to impair the confidence of any of the parties then there is good ground for the transfer of the case from his file to that of some other Magistrate—35 Cal 727 28 Cal 709 Ali Akbar v Emp 47 All 88 23 A L J 133 Judicial officers should be careful to avoid the opportunity of having imputations made Where a Magistrate offers a seat on the dais to a gentleman not necessarily having any connection with the case, while he is hearing it receives visits from the complainant and the defendant during the hearing of the proceedings thereby laying himself open to an imputation accepts a lift in the complainant s car and sits in it with the complainant s brother, it is advisable to transfer the hearing of the case—Ganj

Koshalendra 30 O W N 245 27 Cr L J 498 Magistrates should not fail to remember that it is their duty no less to preserve an outward appearance of impartiality than to maintain the internal freedom from basis which is incumbent on all judicial officers and that if they allow their executive zeal to appear to outrun their judicial discretion their action is certain to induce the party to make an application to the High Court for transfer—1 S I R 8

What is a reasonable apprehension should be decided according to the incidents of the case and in reference to the special circumstances It is difficult to lay down any hard and fast rule under which a transfer should be made for the circumstances in one case might differ from those of the other—33 Cal 1183 5 P L T 63 36 Cal 904 1 P I T 494 It is not sufficient if the accused merely alleges that a fair and impartial trial cannot be had He should also place before the Court the facts and circumstances from which he is led to entertain such belief and if these will reasonably give rise to that belief a transfer will be made—10 O C 165 1917 P W R 13 The allegation by the accused that he distrusts the tribunal and that he believes that he will not get a fair trial must be examined and found true before it can be accepted otherwise the accused person has only to say that he distrusts the Magistrate in order to get the case transferred and he will go on doing so indefinitely—Abdulla v Emp 22 N L R 99 27 Cr L J 835 It is not every kind of apprehension that will entitle an accused person to get a transfer of the case the apprehension of the accused must be shown to be reasonable—1 P I T 494 Pulin v Asutosh 39 C L J 330 The High Court will not order a transfer merely in deference to the susceptibilities of the accused when there is no reasonable ground for the apprehension—10 C W N 441 What is a reasonable apprehension must of course depend on the degree of intelligence of the accused—Ahmad Din v Emp 25 Cr L J 638 Sardari v Emp 3 Lah 443 In determining whether an application is reasonable it is the duty of the High Court to place itself in the position of the accused and to consider the facts and circumstances attending his position Abstract reasonableness ought to be the standard—33 Cal 1183 15 Cal 455 8 C W N 77 29 Cal 211 Pulin v Asutosh 39 C I J 330 The Nagpur Court however goes further and holds that if an accused person does in fact believe that he will not have a fair and impartial trial in a certain tribunal it is inexpedient that he should be tried by it however high the certainty of impartiality of that tribunal may be in the minds of all right thinking men The question is not whether the belief is reasonable or unreasonable but whether it exists or not though the only way of deciding whether it exists or not is to see whether it might reasonably be expected to exist in a person of the standard of intelligence and honesty common in the class to which the accused belongs—Abdulla v Emp 22 N L R 99 [illegible]

have been led to think about it—10 S L R 183 But this would be putting a wrong construction on the section See 25 Bom 179 cited above For it has been rightly observed that the law of transfer of cases is based not so much upon the motives which might be supposed to bias the Judge as upon the susceptibilities of the litigant parties One important object at all events is to clear away everything which might engender suspicion and distrust of the tribunal and so to promote the feeling of confidence in the administration of justice which is so essential to social order and security —2 P L T 198 following Serjeant v Dale 2 Q B D 558 (567) Anant v Emp 7 N L J 155 Mochal v Matru 10 N L R 15 15 Cr L J 106

1372 Instances of reasonable apprehension —When the District Magistrate and the Sessions Judge expressed an opinion that an impartial jury could not be obtained if the case was tried in the district it was held that the expression of such belief was sufficient to shake the confidence of the public and of the parties in the fairness and impartiality of the jury, and to create in their minds a reasonable apprehension that a fair and impartial trial could not be had if the case was tried there and therefore an order for transfer was expedient for the ends of justice under this section—25 Cal 727 When in a case of petty theft the Magistrate issued non bailable warrants against the accused in the first instance and exacted very heavy bail from them there was a sufficient ground for apprehension that a fair trial could not be had from him and therefore a transfer should be directed—8 C W N 589 Where in a summons case the Magistrate had issued a warrant without any apparent reason and there was reason to believe that in other proceedings connected with the case the Magistrate had formed an opinion unfavourable to the accused there ought to be a transfer of the case—18 Cal 247 The issue of a warrant for the arrest of a complainant who has not appeared is not justifiable and this action on the part of the Magistrate is a sufficient ground for transfer of the case from his file—Fazal Ahmad v Abdulla 26 P L R 701 7 Lah L J 571 Where it appeared that during the course of an inquiry preliminary to commitment some entries in the order sheet were not made by the Magistrate daily as required by the rules of the High Court and certain orders were not recorded either on the particular day or possibly even on the following day and in one instance the Magistrate did not record the order with reference to the order of proceedings before him and it further appeared that the Magistrate even after the receipt of the order of the High Court staying all further proceedings in the case proceeded to record the evidence of a medical officer held that the Magistrate had acted with impropriety and the case should be transferred to another Magistrate—2 C W N 639 Where a Magistrate acquitted the accused on a consideration of the complainant s statement alone and without examining his witnesses it showed that the Magistrate had formed a decided opinion before hearing the evidence for the prosecution, the High Court set aside the order of acquittal and directed the transfer of the case to another Magistrate— 0 Mad 388 Where the Magistrate makes inordinate delay in examining the complainant or disregards the preliminaries prescribed by this Code for dealing with c

plaints, or awaits the consideration of the evidence in another case with which the accused has no concern, in order to decide whether any action should be taken upon the complaint, these may give rise to a reasonable apprehension that a fair trial cannot be had, and the case should be transferred—1 P L T 494 Where the complainant made a verbal statement in chambers before the District Magistrate who at once arrested the accused before making any inquiry, and there was a likelihood of the Magistrates of the district figuring as witnesses in the case, held that the case should be transferred to a different district altogether—1 P L T 522 Where after the application of the accused for adjournment of the case to enable them to move the High Court for transfer, the Magistrate raised the amount of bail of some of the accused from Rs 100 to Rs 250, and cancelled the bail bonds of others, it was held that the action of the Magistrate might be absolutely bona fide, but it was sufficient to create a reasonable apprehension in the minds of the accused that they would not have a fair trial before him—1 P L T. 652 Where the Magistrate exhibits haste in recording the statement of an accused person before all the evidence for the prosecution is concluded, this fact may create an apprehension in the mind of the accused that he will not get a fair trial, and entitles him to a transfer of the case—18 A L J 1145 Where in a proceeding under sec 107, the persons against whom the proceeding was taken were appointed special constables, it might raise a reasonable apprehension that they would not have a fair and impartial trial, and a transfer ought to be allowed—11 C W N 121, 10 C W N 82 Where it was alleged by the accused that the District Magistrate had cancelled his license for arms and refused to see him when he called to pay his respects, it was held that these incidents were likely to lead the accused to believe that [illegible]

plainant in a case because in his view the complainant had been fully cross examined for one hour, it was held that the act of the Magistrate was indiscreet and might reasonably lead the accused to believe that they would not get a fair trial at his hands, and the case should therefore be transferred to another Magistrate—20 Cr L J. 559 (Pat) Where there was an order of the Superintendent of Police that the accused was to be allowed facilities for instructing legal advisers only on application to him, it was held that there might be a reasonable apprehension in the mind of the accused that his movements were unduly restricted by that order, and the High Court therefore allowed a transfer of the case to another place—23 C W N 481, see also 23 C W N 479 Where the Magistrate refused to dispense with the personal appearance of pardanashin ladies belonging to respectable families, and repeatedly insisted on their appearance in Court, the High Court transferred the case from that Magistrate—17 C W N 1248 A complaint of murder had been preferred against the accused before the Subdivisional Magistrate During the pendency of the complaint the Deputy Commissioner of the District made a speech in the presence of all the Magistrates of the District, including the Subdivisional Magistrate in quest

tion that the rumours were baseless that the accused was innocent and that baseless charges had been imputed from malicious motives Held that under the circumstances the apprehension on the part of the complainant that he would not get justice at the hands of the Magistrate was reasonable and that there was a sufficient ground for transferring the case from the file of the subdivisional Magistrate—Rup Narain v Abdul Hamid 11 O L J 657 25 Cr L J 1374

The applicant who wants the transfer of the case on the ground of bias in the mind of the Magistrate must show the very clearest grounds for believing that the Magistrate is likely to be prejudiced or influenced by an improper motive in the decision of the case In the absence of such ground it is highly improper to transfer a case from his Court and thus to throw a gratuitous slight upon the Magistrate—6 B H C R 69 Ratanlal 323 1887 A W N 139

The transfer of a criminal case should not be necessarily ordered simply because an accused person thinks that he would not get an impartial trial but the real question to be considered is whether on the facts disclosed in the application for transfer there arises a reasonable inference that the Magistrate who is seized of the case may be prejudiced willingly or unwillingly against the accused—12 A L J 33 Moreover to justify a transfer it must be shown that the Magistrate possessed such a substantial interest in the result of the case as would justify a conclusion that he had a real bias in the matter—Ratanlal 685

For a transfer of a case on the ground of bias on the part of the Magistrate it is rarely possible for an accused person to prove actual bias it is sufficient to show circumstances which may raise a reasonable apprehension in the mind of an accused person that he will not have a fair and impartial trial although the circumstances may be susceptible of explanation and may have happened without any real bias in the mind of the Magistrate—2 Weir 6 8 18 Cal 24 23 Cal 495 5 Cal 727 28 Cal 709 8 Cal 29 33 Cal 1183 19 All 96 25 Bom 179 1 P L T 522 20 Cr L J 360 (Pat) Amar Singh v Sadhu Singh 7 Lah L J 241 26 P L R 273 15 C P L R 192 The grounds of transfer need not show actual bias but it is sufficient if there are grounds alleged for suspecting bias But if false charges of bribery and corruption are trumped up against the Magistrate no transfer will be ordered even when there are sufficient grounds for suspecting bias— L B R 220

Although each of the circumstances alleged may not be by itself sufficient to show that there was a bias on the part of the Magistrate a transfer would nevertheless be justified where having regard to all the circumstances taken together the accused might reasonably apprehend that he would not have a fair trial—9 C W N 619 1 P L T 652 1 P L T 522

1381 Clause (d) —Convenience of parties —When all the acts constituting the offence took place in Bombay but the complainant chose to lodge his complaint in the Ratnagiri Sessions Court and the accused also wished to be tried there the High Court ordered the trial to proceed before the Sessions Judge of Ratnagiri—2 Bom L R 394 In transferring a case no consideration should be had to the fact that by the transfer to a particular district the accused will have the benefit of a trial by a jury where previously he had none The real question is that of convenience of parties—8 C L J 59 The convenience of defence witnesses when they are numerous will outweigh the convenience of the prosecution witnesses especially when they are few and a transfer will be directed to suit the convenience of the former—Ratanlal 927 The convenience of the accused has to be considered rather than that of the complainant for transferring a case—Sohan Lal v Gopal 27 Cr L J 563 A transfer will be allowed from one Court to another where the accused are residents within the jurisdiction of the latter Court and all the witnesses belong to the same place so that it will be conducive to the convenience of parties if the case is inquired into in the latter place—Bansi v Lakshmi 45 All 700 (701)

The transfer must be to a Court of competent authority and of equal or superior jurisdiction Where the High Court directed the District Magistrate to transfer a case (under Sec 107) to another Magistrate, and the District Magistrate transferred the case to a Second Class Magistrate, the transfer was illegal because the Second Class Magistrate was not competent to hear the case under section 107, and also because he was of inferior jurisdiction to the District Magistrate—37 All 20 The transfer should have been made to a First Class Magistrate as in 24 All 151

In selecting a Court to which the case is to be transferred regard must be had to the gravity of the offence Where a case under section 211 I P C was transferred from the Court of a Joint Magistrate to that of an Honorary Magistrate with first class powers, where the case remained pending for four months, it was held that the case, being of a serious nature ought to have been transferred to the Court of Session or to the Court of a more experienced Magistrate—16 A L J 294

Power of the Court to which case is transferred—See 19 All 243 and 1917 P R 30 cited in Note 606 under sec 192

Crown, the accused and the parties engaged in conducting certain proceedings within the meaning of this Code The Code does not recognise a private prosecutor, who is a complainant as a party to the case and he consequently is not competent to apply for a transfer as a party inter ested—Jamuna v Rudra Kumar 4 P L J 656, 20 Cr L J 648 (per Mullick J) But Jwala Prasad J held in this case that the person at whose instance a criminal case is lodged, (i e, the complainant) is a person interested in the prosecution and is entitled to apply for transfer but his rights are subordinate to those of the Crown that is, if the Public Prosecutor or the person who is conducting the case on behalf of the Crown is unwilling to have the case transferred the private prosecutor has no right to get the case transferred The opinion of Jwala Prasad J has been followed in a recent case of the Patna High Court in Sheodhan v Jhingur, 7 P L T 49 26 Cr L J 1249 and by the Lahore High Court in Bagh Ali v Mad Din 6 Lah 541 27 P L R 80 27 Cr L J 411

A person alleging himself to be the complainant but who in fact is not the complainant and from whose hands the prosecution has been taken away by the order of the Magistrate is not a party interested within the meaning of this sub-section—5 Bom L R 869

1386 Sub-section (4) —Mode of making an application for transfer —An application for transfer should be made by motion supported by affidavit or affirmation and not by a letter addressed by the Sessions Judge to the High Court—1 Cal 219 8 Cal 63 1894 A W N 154 An application for transfer should not be made by a mere written statement prepared by Counsel but should be made by an application supported by affidavit or by a properly verified petition—1891 A W N 37

Affidavit —When the transfer is asked for on the ground that the appellant wishes to call the Magistrate as a witness the application must be supported by an affidavit showing that the evidence required from the Magistrate is relevant and material—1886 A W N 257

The Madras High Court holds that an application for the transfer of a criminal case by the accused is a criminal proceeding within the meaning of section 5 of the Indian Oaths Act and no oath can be administered to the accused Therefore no affidavit can be put in by the accused person If any affidavit is put in it is a nullity and the accused cannot be convicted for any false statement contained therein—1 Weir 176 This is also the view of the Allahabad High Court see In re Barkat 19 All 200, Emp v Bindeshri 28 All 331 and Emp v Matan 33 All 163 But in 3 Lah 46 it has been held that the affidavit is not a nullity the provision in section 342 (4) that no oath can be administered to an accused has reference only to the statement made by him during his examination under that section it does not preclude him from making an affidavit in support of his application under sec 526

Counter affidavit by District Magistrate —When an application for transfer is made on the ground of partiality of the Magistrate before whom the case is pending it is highly improper for the District Magistrate to make an affidavit swearing as to the impartiality of that Magistrate—25 Bom 179

Sub-section (5) :—Costs .—When the case is transferred at the instance of the accused he will be ordered to pay all the complainant costs incurred before the Magistrate from whose file the tran ordered—8 C W N 589 In 8 C W N 75, the Crown bore all the expenses of the complainant's witnesses

Sub-section (6A.) :—"We have found section 526 somewhat difficult to deal with One class of opinion presses for greater safeguards against frivolous, vexatious or dilatory applications for transfer Another class deprecates any measure which makes a transfer more difficult to obtain We think it is unavoidable to retain in the Code some provisions for the compulsory adjournment of a case when an intention to apply for a transfer has been notified But we recognise that the provisions of the section as they stand, have lent themselves to gross abuse, and therefore we feel that greater safeguards are necessary For these reasons, in the first place we maintain the principle of the new sub-section (6A) which enables the High Court to award costs in dismissing an application We have however, modified it to this extent, that it will enable the High Court in cases where it is of opinion that the application was frivolous or vexatious, to award such amount by way of reasonable costs in the High Court and Court below as it thinks fit —Report of the Joint Committee (1922)

1387. Sub-section (8) —Under the old section, an application for adjournment had to be made before the commencement of the hearing —29 Cal 211, 8 C W N 77 and therefore an application for adjournment made after the charge had been read and explained to the accused was not an application made 'before the commencement of the hearing and could not therefore be granted—35 Mad 701 The present section lays down that in case of an inquiry or trial the application may be made at any time during its course, even when the case has been completely heard on both sides and the Magistrate has only to write his judgment

In case of appeal the application for adjournment must be made before the commencement of the hearing, in this respect the law is the same as before

The word ' inquiry or trial ' in this sub-section do not apply to a transfer-application pending before the Magistrate, but are only intended to apply to inquiries or trials which are specially referred to in the earlier portion of the Code—Muhammad Sharif v Hari Prasad, 5 Pat 229, 27 Cr L J 1214

This clause does not apply to proceedings under section 145 As this clause directs that the application to the trial Court is to be made by the Public Prosecutor or the complainant or the accused, and as in a proceeding under section 145 there is no complainant or accused or Public Prosecutor, the parties in a proceeding under section 145 cannot take advantage of this clause Probably the Legislature thought that proceedings which are quasi civil in their nature, such as inquiries into the possession of land do not require the exercise of the very summary powers which clause (8) confers—Loka Mahton v Kali Singh, 6 Pat 553, 28 Cr L J. 1035

Court, whether bound to adjourn —Under the old section there was a difference of opinion as to whether the Court was bound to adjourn the trial on an application for adjournment In 15 Cal 455 8 C W N 77, 2 Weir 685, 33 Cal 1183, and 1 S L R 35 it was held that the words of this section were obligatory and the Court was bound to adjourn But in 19 Mad 375 6 C W N 717 18 A L J 1145 and 31 Cal 715 it was held that the Court was not bound to grant an adjournment if there was sufficient time between the date of the application for adjournment and the date fixed for the hearing of the case to have moved the High Court for transfer and to have obtained its order thereon

The words of the present sub-section have been made more imperative by omitting certain words which occurred at the end of the old sub section and which took away the force of the word shall The Joint Committee remarks Our amendment provides for a compulsory adjournment at any stage of the case except that a Sessions Court may refuse to adjourn (sub section 9) when it is of opinion that the application has been unreasonably delayed See Sartaj Singh v Emp 22 A L J 430 26 Cr L J 139 (decided under the amended Code)

The postponement should be for a reasonable time to allow the party to move the High Court for transfer A postponement for too short a time is useless—19 Mad 375 An adjournment for six days is not a reasonable time within which to move the High Court—2 Weir 686

1388 Magistrate proceeding with the case after issue of rule for transfer —When an application was made under sub-section (8) and the Magistrate without passing any orders thereon proceeded with the case and even though a telegram to the effect that a rule nisi by the High Court staying proceedings had been issued was shown to the Magistrate he examined some more witnesses for the prosecution and committed the accused it was held that the action on the part of the Magistrate was enough to show a bias and consequently a transfer was necessary—11 C W N 507 5 C W N 110 2 C W N 498 16 C W N 1031 If the Court entertains any doubt about the truth of the telegram it should have satisfied itself by telegraphing to the Registrar of the High Court —5 C W N 110 2 C W N 498 Where upon the High Court having issued a rule staying further proceedings the petitioner sent a telegram which was laid before the trying Magistrate but the petitioner having failed to appear on the date previously fixed the Magistrate issued a warrant upon the petitioner it was held that the sending of the telegram did not in any way absolve the petitioner from the obligation to appear before the Court on the date fixed and the issue of the warrant upon the petitioner was no ground for transfer of the case—17 C W N 536 But where further proceedings having been stayed by the High Court s order one of the complainants appeared before the Magistrate on the date fixed for hearing and apprised him of that order but the Magistrate instead of staying further proceedings issued a warrant for the arrest of the complainant who had not appeared held that the Magistrate s action was unjust and hostile to the complainants and the case must be transferred—Fazil Ahmad v Abdulla 7 Lah L J 571 26 P L R ,01, 27 Cr L J 104

Where the High Court granted a transfer on the 26th and on the 27th a telegram to that effect was shown to the Magistrate and the Magistrate adjourned proceedings till the 30th so that the order of the High Court might reach him and on the 30th the Magistrate proce the case and convicted the accused and on the 31st the order of the High Court reached the Magistrate it was held that the Magistrate's action though not illegal was indiscreet in as much as he did not wait sufficiently for the order of the High Court to reach him—Ratanlal 46

Sub-section (9) —Under this sub-section the Sessions Court may refuse to adjourn when it is of opinion that the application has been unreasonably delayed The reason is that the calendars of Sessions Courts involving the convenience of jurors assessors and parties are peculiarly liable to be upset by the postponement of cases —Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914)

To whom cases may be transferred —The District Magistrate, after withdrawing a case can refer it to any subordinate Magistrate An Additional District Magistrate is now subordinate to the District Magistrate under the express provision of Section 10 (3) and the latter can transfer cases to the former The contrary ruling in 34 Cal 918 is no longer good law When a Magistrate is gazetted to the office of the Chairman of the Municipal Board and takes charge of that office he is thereby divested of his office as Magistrate He ceases to be subordinate to the District Magistrate and the latter cannot transfer any criminal case to him for trial—36 All 513 Moreover the case must be transferred to a Magistrate competent to try the case A District Magistrate cannot transfer a case under Sec 107 to a Second class Magistrate—37 All 20 or to a Magistrate who has no local jurisdiction over the matter—Konda Reddy v K E, 41 Mad 246

When personal allegations are made against a Magistrate as grounds of transfer, the District Magistrate must require strict proof of the allegations—Ratanlal 590 To move a case from one Magistrate to another on grounds personal to such Magistrate is tantamount to a severe censure on such officer, and the very clearest grounds must exist before a transfer can be allowed—6 B H C R 69, and moreover the Magistrate must be given an opportunity of answering the allegations made against him by the applicant—5 Bom L R 28

Where a Magistrate in the course of an investigation held a prolonged inquiry during which he made a number of notes and collected a large amount of information which by reason of the way in which it was acquir

he could not properly or legally consider in arriving at a judicial determination and the notes made by the Magistrate were of such a nature that he ought to be examined as a witness in respect thereto it was held that in such a case the Magistrate ought not to try the case but that it must be transferred to some other Magistrate—21 Cal 920 20 W R 46 The fact that a Magistrate before whom a case is pending is also the Treasury Officer and has very little time at his disposal by virtue of his duties as a Treasury Officer is not a sufficient ground for directing a transfer of a case from his Court —30 Cr L J 402 (Pat) Where a Magistrate tried and convicted an accused in a case and expressed an opinion that the evidence of the accused was not believable it was held that the expressed opinion in itself was no ground for a transfer of another case against the same accused by a different complainant under a different set of facts—4 P L W 21 The fact that the trial of a case before a Magistrate extended for a long time (e g 3 months) is not a vital ground for withdrawing the case from the file of the Magistrate—19 Cr L J 119 (Pat)

1392 Recording reasons —See sub-section (5) The reasons for transfer of a case from one Magistrate to another must be recorded—Ratanlal 590 5 L th L J 230 16 Cr L J 626 (Mad) and omission to record reasons renders the order of transfer liable to be set aside—In re Venkata Reddi 1924 M W N 873 26 Cr L J 221 But the Calcutta and Patna High Courts are of opinion that a failure to record the reasons will not vitiate the proceedings unless it has prejudiced the accused —34 Cal 918 Mahomed Sharif v Hari Prasad 5 Pat 229 27 Cr L J 1214 Where by virtue of a Government order the District Magistrate had been directed to withdraw all cases in which complaints had been made against a police officer the omission to record reasons therefor was a mere irregularity and did not vitiate the subsequent proceedings —28 All 421

1393. Notice —An order of transfer ought not to be made ex parte, i e on the allegations of the complainant or accused only and without giving notice to the opposite party—Ratanlal 460 Ratanlal 474 Ratanlal 655 Ratanlal 877 39 M L J 714 Where a case is transferred to another Magistrate notice of transfer should be given to the complainant as well as to the accused —Umrao v Fakir 3 All 749 Teaoi v Ameer Majee 8 Cal 393 7 C W N 114 In re Nageshwar 1 Bom L R 347 Vedu v Bhaguandas 5 Bom L R 28 Imp v Sadashi 2 Bom 549 Bahsha v Taklu 1902 P R 28 14 C P L R 190 U B R (1897—1901) 392 Although the section does not provide for the giving of a notice to the opposite party still on general principles notice should be given to the party affected before an order for transfer is made—7 C W N 114 Sardara v Emp 5 Lah L J 230 Where a transfer is made at a late stage of the trial e g when all the prosecution witnesses have been examined the Magistrate does not exercise a sound discretion in not giving notice to the accused—6 M L T 14 1887 A W N 53 Ratanlal 590 Where at the instance of the complainant a Sub-divisional Magistrate after hearing the parties has transferred a case from the file of one Sub-Magistrate to that of another it is not open to the District

Magistrate to re transfer the case at the instance of the accused without notice to the complainant—39 M L J 714.

But in several other cases it has been held that the issue of a notice is not mandatory, and the want of notice does not amount to illegality but to impropriety The question of propriety is one to be decided on the facts of each case—In re Hanaji, 21 Bom L R 276, 20 Cr. L. J. 320, In re Virji, 6 Bom L R 856 The question is general in its terms, and although as a rule of practice it is desirable that notice should be issued, still it cannot be said that the omission to issue notice is in itself a reason for setting aside the order of transfer—Gobinda v King Emp, 2 Pat 333, A I R 1923 Pat 228, Bagh Ali v Md Din 6 Lah 511, 27 Cr L J 411 If the opposite party acquiesces in the transfer he cannot complain on the ground of absence of notice—7 N L R 97 When the District Magistrate transferred a case suo motu on administrative grounds, no notice was held to be necessary—1910 P R 3 When the order of transfer was made at the request of the trying Magistrate, no notice need be given to either party—24 Mad 317 Where there was great delay in disposing of a petty case, an order of transfer could be made without notice to the accused to shew cause against the order—2 Weir 692 When by virtue of a Government order the District Magistrate was directed to withdraw all cases in which complaints had been made against a police officer, no notice to the complainant was necessary before making a transfer—In re Dukhi, 28 All 421

1394. Power of District Magistrate after transfer :—The District Magistrate after he has transferred the case to a subordinate Magistrate has no jurisdiction relating to the case, so long as the transfer subsists But he can again withdraw the case to his own file if he thinks fit—11 W R 53 When a District Magistrate makes an order of transfer the case is out of his hands, and the District Magistrate has no jurisdiction to make any order in the case when it is properly seized of by a subordinate Magistrate—32 Cal 783 He cannot dismiss the complaint, much less prosecute the complainant—3 C W N 490 nor can he issue process for the apprehension of the absconding accused—27 Cal 979 He can make no order in the case except such order as may be made by him by way of revision—30 Cal 449

Powers and duties of Magistrate to whom case is transferred —When a case has been transferred after process has been issued to the accused, the Magistrate to whom the case has been transferred should proceed from the state in which the proceedings were left He cannot go back and dismiss the complaint under sec 203—19 W R 28

The Magistrate to whom a case is transferred can act upon the evidence already recorded by the Magistrate from whom the case is withdrawn See notes under sub-section (3) of sec 350

The Magistrate to whom a case is transferred cannot further transfer the case to some other Magistrate subordinate to him—36 All. 166, 12 A L J. 277.

1394A. Sub-section (6) :—This sub-section supersedes 15 Mad. 94 (decided under the 1882 Code) in which it was held that the village H man not being a Magistrate, no case from his file could be transferred to the file of another Magistrate.

Prior to its present amendment, this sub-section applied only to village Headmen appointed under Madras Regulation IV of 1821; and therefore a District Magistrate was not competent to transfer a case from a village Headman appointed under any other Regulation (e g, Reg I of 1816)—26 Mad. 394. This case is now overruled as the present sub-section expressly mentions the Regulation of 1816

1395. Revision :—The High Court will not interfere in revision with an order of the District Magistrate dismissing an application under section 528 for the transfer of a case The High Court's powers of revision are in express terms limited to those conferred by certain sections mentioned in section 439, section 526 is not one of those The Letters Patent does not confer any power of transfer over and above that conferred by section 526 The remedy of the applicant is to make an independent petition for transfer under section 526 supported by affidavit or affirmation—Ashu v. Maung Po Kha, 1 Rang 632

CHAPTER XLIVA.

SUPPLEMENTARY PROVISIONS RELATING TO EUROPEAN AND INDIAN BRITISH SUBJECTS AND OTHERS.

This Chapter has been added by section 33 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, XII of 1923.

Procedure on claim of a person to be dealt with as European or Indian British subject, or as European or American.

528A. (1) Where, in any case to which the provisions of Chapter XXXIII do not apply, any person claims to be dealt with as an European or Indian British subject, or where any person claims to be dealt with as an European (other than an European Britis

the grounds of s

he is brought fo

such Magistrate

m

w

Whether he is or is not an European

Indian British subject, or an European or an American, as the case may be, and shall deal with him accordingly.

(2) When any such claim is rejected by the Magistrate and the person by whom it was made is committed by the Magistrate for trial before the Court of Session, and such person repeats the claim before such Court, such Court shall, after such further inquiry, if any, as it thinks fit, decide the claim, and shall deal with such person accordingly

(3) When any Court before which any person is tried rejects any such claim as aforesaid, the decision shall form a ground of appeal from the sentence or order passed in such trial

This is the old section 453 with certain alterations

1396. Analysis of section —(a) An Indian British subject claiming to be dealt with as such must put in his claim before the Magistrate before whom he is brought for the purpose of inquiry or trial according to the provisions of sub section (1) This sub section applies to Presidency Magistrates as well as Magistrates in the mufassal (b) If the Magistrate rejects the claim and tries him the decision shall form a ground of appeal from the sentence or order passed in such appeal See sub section (3) This sub-section applies to Presidency Magistrates as well as to Magistrates in the mufassal (c) If the Magistrate rejects the claim and commits the accused to the Court of Session he may repeat the claim before the latter Court See sub-section (2) It should be noted that under sub-section (2) such repetition may only be made before a Court of Session (in the mufassal) and not before the High Court Sessions (d) If the Court of Session rejects the claim and tries the accused the decision shall form a ground of appeal from the sentence or order passed in such trial (e) If a claim is made before a Presidency Magistrate and rejected by him and the accused is committed to the High Court there is no provision for repetition of the claim before the High Court and the accused will not be entitled to put in under sec 273 of the Code before the High Court a further claim for being tried by a jury the majority of whom should be Indians But the decision of the Presidency Magistrate rejecting the claim is not final and is subject to revision by the High Court—Emp v Harendra Chandra 51 Cal 980 (989 990) 29 C W N 381 26 Cr L J 385

1397. Claim as to status —Evidence —The plea that the accused is an European British subject must be substantiated by ample evidence Where the prisoner pleaded that he was an European British subject but the evidence as to his nationality was incomplete it was held that the plea was not made out—6 M H C R 7 So also a mere statement by the prisoner that he is an European British subject cannot be acted upon—5 W R 53 The Judge may be satisfied by the appearance of the prisoner and the circumstances brought forward at the time that plea is true but if he is not so satisfied, and the plea is persisted must be substantiated by sufficient evidence—6 M H C R 7

Opportunity to plead must be given.—The Magistrate trying the prisoner ought to give him an opportunity of pleading that he is an European British subject—5 W. R. 53.

Time for making claim.—A claim on the ground of status may be put forward before a committing Magistrate at any time up till the time when the commitment is made—Emp. v. Harendra, 51 Cal. 980 (991).

528B. If in any such case an European or Indian British subject or an European (other than an European British subject) or an American does not claim to be dealt with as such by the Magistrate before whom he is tried or by whom he is committed, or if, when such claim has been made before and rejected by the committing Magistrate, it is not repeated before the Court to which such person is committed, he shall be held to have relinquished his right to be dealt with as an European British subject or an Indian British subject, or an European or an American, as the case may be, and shall not assert it in any subsequent stage of the case.

Failure to plead status a waiver.

This is the old section 454 with certain alterations.

1398. Waiver:—An European British subject can relinquish his rights. The provisions of this Code give certain rights and privileges to the European British Subjects, which rights they are at liberty to give up—6 Cal. 83. Failure to make a claim amounts to a relinquishment of rights—1912 P. R. 6. Where the Magistrate explained to the accused his rights under this Code and then asked him if he claimed to be dealt with as such, and the accused stated that he did not claim the rights, it was held that he had relinquished the rights—Barindra Kumar Ghosh, 37 Cal. 467. If no claim is put forward before the committing Presidency Magistrate, the accused will not be allowed to assert before the High Court any claim to be tried by a jury the majority of whom should belong to his own nationality—Emp. v. Harendra, 51 Cal. 980 (991), 29 C. W. N. 384. But the omission of the accused to avail himself of his right to claim the benefit of section 528A does not conclude the matter and he is not debarred from urging that the conditions mentioned in clause (a) or (b) of sec. 443 exist—Martindale v. Emp., 52 Cal. 317, 29 C. W. N. 417, 26 Cr. L. J. 501.

The expression "any subsequent stage of the case" includes the stages of appeal and revision—Jeremiah v. Johnson, 15 M. L. J. 500.

Magistrate whether bound to inform accused of his rights.—The Calcutta High Court holds that before an European British subject can be considered to have waived the privileges conferred upon him by this Code it must appear that his rights were distinctly made known to him to enable him to exercise his choice and judgment whether he would or would not claim these rights—6 Cal. 83. Where this was not done, the conviction was set aside—18 C W, N 385 and the records were returned to the Magistrate with a direction that he should explain to the accused all the privileges he was entitled to as an European British subject and definitely ascertain from him whether he waived his claims—7 N L R 93 But the Punjab Chief Court holds that it is not the duty of the Magistrate to ask categorically whether the accused claims his right as an European British subject much less his duty to explain his right to him as such subject The Legislature appears to presume that a person entitled to a privilege knows of its existence and that if he desires to assert it he will assert it—1885 P R 5

Revocation of waiver —The waiver is not irrevocable If the withdrawal of the waiver is made promptly and shortly after the waiver had been made, and if substantially nothing had been done in the interval on the waiver, the withdrawal should be allowed —1908 P R 1 1878 P R 17

Trial of person as belonging to class to which he does not belong

528C. Where a person, not being an European British subject, is dealt with as an European British subject or not being an Indian British subject is dealt with as an Indian British subject, or, not being an European (other than an European British subject) or American, is dealt with as an European or American, and such person does not object, the inquiry, commitment, trial or sentence, as the case may be, shall not by reason of such dealing, be invalid

This is the old section 455 with certain alterations

Application of Acts conferring jurisdiction on Magistrates or Courts of Session

528D (1) Unless there is something repugnant in the context all enactments made by the Governor General in Council or the Indian Legislature which confer on Magistrates or on the Court of Session jurisdiction over offences shall be deemed to apply to European British subjects although such persons are not expressly referred to therein

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to authorise any Court to exceed the limits prescribed by this Code as to the amount of punishment which it may inflict on an European British subject or to confer jurisdiction on any Magistrate of the second or third class for the trial of such subjects

CHAPTER XLV.

Of Irregular Proceedings.

Irregularities which do not vitiate proceedings

529. If any Magistrate not empowered by law to do any of the following things, namely :—

(a) to issue a search-warrant under section 98 ;

(b) to order, under section 155, the police to investigate an offence ;

(c) to hold an inquest under section 176 ;

(d) to issue process, under section 186, for the apprehension of a person within the local limits of his jurisdiction who has committed an offence outside such limits ;

(e) to take cognizance of an offence under section 190, sub-section (1) clause (a) or clause (b) ;

(f) to transfer a case under section 192 ;

(g) to tender a pardon under section 337 or section 338 ;

(h) to sell property under section 524 or section 525 ; or

(i) to withdraw a case and try it himself under section 528 ;

erroneously in good faith does that thing, his proceedings shall not be set aside merely on the ground of his not being so empowered.

1399. Scope of Section:—Clause (f) —'A case' includes cases under Chapter VIII or XII See notes under section 192 The irregularity of transfer under sec 192 by a Magistrate not empowered is cured by this section—36 Cal. 869, 36 Cal 370

Clause (g) —See 20 All. 40 cited under sec 337

Prejudice to accused —Having regard to the provisions of this section read with sec 531, it must be shown that the proceedings wrongly held in a case have in fact occasioned a failure of justice before they can be set aside—39 Cal. 119.

Irregularities which vitiate proceedings

530. If any Magistrate, not being empowered by law in this behalf, does any of the following things, namely :—

(a) attaches and sells property under section 88 ;

(b) issues a search-warrant for a letter, parcel or other thing in the Post Office, or a telegram in the Telegraph Department,

(c) demands security to keep the peace,

(d) demands security for good behaviour;

(e) discharges a person lawfully bound to be of good behaviour,

(f) cancels a bond to keep the peace,

(g) makes an order under section 133 as to a local nuisance,

(h) prohibits, under section 143, the repetition or continuance of a public nuisance,

(i) issues an order under section 144;

(j) makes an order under Chapter XII,

(k) takes cognizance, under section 190, sub section (1) clause (c), of an offence,

(l) passes a sentence under section 349, on proceedings recorded by another Magistrate,

(m) calls, under section 435 for proceedings

(n) makes an order for maintenance,

(o) revises, under S 515, an order passed under S 514,

(p) tries an offender,

(q) tries an offender summarily, or

(r) decides an appeal,

his proceedings shall be void

1400 Clause (j) —This clause refers only to a case where a Magistrate is not competent by virtue of the position he holds or the powers vested in him to try a case of the character mentioned in sec 145 But where a Magistrate is competent to try a case under sec 145 the fact that he has no local jurisdiction over the matter will not make the trial void—5 C W N 686

Clause (p) —If a Third Class Magistrate not being specially empowered by the Local Government tries an offender under sec. 2 of the Bombay Public Conveyances Act (IV of 1863) the trial is void—Ratanlal 921 If a Second Class Magistrate tries an accused who has actually committed an offence under sec 405 I P C as though for an offence under section 406 I P C the trial and conviction are void—1 Bom L R 27 But where the offence consists of circumstances of aggravation which make it triable by a higher Court and a 2nd Class Magistrate tries it ignoring those aggravating circumstances the proceedings are not void ab initio under this section—Q L v Gundya 13 Bom. 50 See also 4 Bom L R 267 K E v Iyyan 4 Mad 675 and Dawson v K 2 Rang 455 26 Cr L J 1108

Where a trial is void under this section, sec. 403 does not bar a retrial —8 Bom. 307; 1910 P R. 7; 29 Cal 412.

Clause (q):—Where a Magistrate deliberately disregards the offence actually complained of, viz, an offence not triable summarily, and tries it summarily, his proceedings are absolutely void—5 C. W N 232, 29 Cal 409; 1907 P L. R 21; 4 Cal 18; Emp. v. Ram Narain, 46 All 446

Clause (r) —The word 'Magistrate' in this section includes a Sessions Judge, therefore if a Sessions Judge hears an appeal which ought to have been presented to the High Court, the proceedings before the Sessions Judge are absolutely void—In re Abdulla, 2 Rang 386 (387), 26 Cr. L. J 293, A I R 1925 Rang 39

531. No finding, sentence or order of any Criminal Court shall be set aside merely on the ground that the inquiry, trial or other proceeding in the course of which it was arrived at or passed, took place in a wrong sessions division, district, sub-division or other local area, unless it appears that such error has in fact occasioned a failure of justice.

Proceedings in wrong place.

1401 Object and scope of section —The policy of this Code as shown by sections 531-538 is to uphold in most cases orders passed by a Criminal Court which was lacking in local jurisdiction or which has committed illegalities or irregularities, unless failure of justice has been occasioned or is likely to be occasioned through such want of jurisdiction or such illegalities or irregularities—42 Mad. 791.

This section only refers to districts, sub-division and local areas governed by this Code, and not to tributary Mahals like Keonjhar or Mourbhanj to which the Code does not extend—16 Cal 667; 8 Cal 985

The 'order' under this section includes an order of committal—Bhagwantia v. K E, 3 Pat. 417 (421), 26 Cr L. J 49

Offence in one place, trial or commitment in another —See Note 549 under section 177 See also 17 Mad 402, cited under sec 532

Commitment to wrong Sessions —See Note 549 under sec. 177

Trial at a place outside jurisdiction —Where a criminal appeal was presented to a Sessior heard and disposed of criminal jurisdiction, the procedure was an irregularity, but no failure of justice being occasioned thereby, the trial was not a nullity—17 All 36

Jurisdiction of Court to order forfeiture —This section applies only to proceedings in a wrong place and cures defects as to local jurisdiction But it cannot cure a defect where a bond of appearance taken from the accused by one Magistrate is forfeited by another Magistrate, for it is a defect not of local jurisdiction but of personal jurisdiction—10 Bom L R 84 (cited under sec 514).

Failure of justice.—Where no objection was taken in the Lower

Court, and the petitioner failed to show in the High Court that he had been prejudiced the High Court declined to interfere—21 W R 88 Even the fact that the objection to jurisdiction was taken at a comparatively early stage of the proceedings was not a conclusive proof that the accused was prejudiced by the irregularity—34 C L J 200

When irregular commitments may be validated

532 (1) If any Magistrate or other authority purporting to exercise powers duly conferred, which were not so conferred, commits an accused person for trial before a Court of Session or High Court the Court to which the commitment is made may, after perusal of the proceedings, accept the commitment if it considers that the accused has not been injured thereby, unless during the inquiry and before the order of commitment, objection was made on behalf either of the accused or of the prosecution to the jurisdiction of such Magistrate or other authority

(2) If such Court considers that the accused was injured, or if such objection was so made, it shall quash the commitment and direct a fresh inquiry by a competent Magistrate

1402 Scope of Section —Sec 531 must be read as complete in itself and not as in any way cut down or limited by the proviso contained in the latter part of section 532 Section 531 applies only to cases in which there is no jurisdiction by reason of the inquiry, trial or other proceeding being held in a wrong local area Section 532 seems to refer to cases in which the Magistrate is competent to deal with the offence as having taken place within the local limits of his jurisdiction but has no power to commit to the Sessions either because he is a Second Class Magistrate or for some reasons other than that of want of local jurisdiction —16 Bom 200

This section applies only to cases where the Magistrate or other authority who has assumed to commit has not been duly invested with the powers under which he has assumed to make the commitment i e when the defect is one personal to the committing authority and there is no defect in his proceeding—1890 P R 16 This section does not deal with cases in which the defect in the committal order arises from want of territorial jurisdiction—16 Bom 200 20 Cr L J 416 (Mad) It does not apply where the commitment is bad owing to a disqualification of the Magistrate under section 556—2 L B R 209 It has no application to commitments made by Magistrates acting under sec 346—12 C W N 136 But this section applies where the commitment is irregular by reason of want of sanction under section 196 or 197—Q E v B G Tilak 22 B 112 Q E v Morton, 9 Bom 288 It also applies where the commitment of the approver (who has broken the conditions of pardon) is by reason of want of the certificate of Public Prosecutor required under sec 339—Nga Wa v Emp, 3 Rang 55, 4 Bur L J 23

Objection to commitment —If a Magistrate, being empowered to commit to the Sessions but having no territorial jurisdiction over the place of offence, commits a case to the Sessions the commitment is valid under section 531, and it cannot be set aside under section 532 although the objection to such commitment was taken before the commitment—Q E v Reddy, 17 Mad 402

Where objection to the want of jurisdiction of the Magistrate to commit is not taken before the Magistrate, the High Court can accept the commitment under this section, if it considers that the accused has not been prejudiced thereby—22 Bom 112

533. (1) If any Court, before which a confession or other statement of an accused person recorded or purporting to be recorded under Section 164 or Section 364 is tendered or has been received in evidence, finds that any of the provisions of either of such sections have not been complied with by the Magistrate recording the statement, it shall take evidence that such person duly made the statement recorded; and, notwithstanding anything contained in the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, S. 91, such statement shall be admitted if the error has not injured the accused as to his defence on the merits.

Non-compliance with provisions of S 164 or 364

(2) The provisions of this section apply to Courts of Appeal, Reference and Revision

1403. Scope of Section —What this section means is this that where a confession or other statement of an accused person is duly made, but in recording it the provisions of the law have not been complied with oral evidence is admissible to prove that the confession or the statement was duly made The defect which this section intends to cure is one not of substance, but of form only, as for instance when the Magistrate has omitted to sign the certificate, or has omitted to state in the certificate that the statement was taken in his hearing—2 C W N 702 1915 P R 17, or where the Magistrate has omitted to record that the required warning was given to the accused under sec 164—Partab Singh v Emp 6 Lah 415, 7 Lah L J 182, Ramai v Emp, 3 Pat 872, Khema v Emp, 6 Lah 58, 26 Cr L J 1074, Bowa Singh v Emp, 7 Lah L J 25, 26 Cr L J 1458 But this section will not render a confession admissible when the provisions of the law have been totally disregarded as for instance where a statement has been neither signed by the accused nor certified by the Magistrate—9 Mad 224, 17 Cal 862, or where no warning was given at all under sec 164—Partap v Emp, 6 Lah 415 A I R 1925 Lah 605 This section has no application where no record whatsoever has been made of a confession—35 All 260 But in 23 B... 211 and 21 Bom 495 it has been held that this section applies to omissions to comply with the law as well as to infractions of the law i e, to defects not only of form but of substance also

Irregularity in record of confession —See Notes 1037 1038 and 1042 under sec 364

Omission to sign the record —See Note 1040 under sec 364

Want of memorandum or certificate —See Note 519 under sec 164 and Note 1041 under sec 364

Irregularity in recording confession —See Note 516 under sec 164

534 Omission to give information under section 447 An omission to inform under S 417 any person of his rights under Chapter XXXIII shall not affect the validity of any proceeding

This section has been amended by section 34 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act XII of 1923

535 Effect of omission to prepare charge (1) No finding or sentence pronounced or passed shall be deemed invalid merely on the ground that no charge was framed, unless, in the opinion of the Court of appeal or revision, a failure of justice has in fact been occasioned thereby

(2) If the Court of appeal or revision thinks that a failure of justice has been occasioned by an omission to frame a charge, it shall order that a charge be framed, and that the trial be recommenced from the point immediately after the framing of the charge

1404 Omission to frame charge —An omission to frame a charge does not invalidate an order of acquittal and render it equivalent to an order of discharge such order is a bar to a retrial of the same offence—3 All 129 Mere omission to frame a charge will not justify a reversal of the order of the lower Court unless a failure of justice has been occasioned especially where at the close of the prosecution evidence in chief the Magistrate laid down the charge—Madhab v Emp 53 Cal 738 27 Cr L J 1295

Where a charge was framed under sec 147 I P C but the accused was convicted of an offence under sec 323 I P C it was held that the conviction was illegal on account of the absence of a charge under sec 323 I P C and section 535 of this Code did not cure the defect The words merely on the ground that no charge was framed in this section must mean a case where the offence being a petty one and the evidence being fairly taken the Court framed no charge at all But where a charge has been framed (in this case a charge under section 147 I P C was framed) this section does not apply and it cannot be said that the conviction shall not be deemed invalid merely on the ground that no c was framed' and the persons charged under sec 147 I P C., for rioting with the common object of causing hurt to the complainant cannot be convicted under section 323 I P C of causing hurt to another person—40 Cal 168. But in a recent case the same High Court has laid down that this section is not confined to cases where no charge at all has been framed, but also applies to cases in which no charge was framed of the particular offence of which the accused has been convicted (though a charge of another offence was framed)—Abdul Rahim v K E 41 C L J 474, 26 Cr L J 1279

Where a Magistrate framed a charge under section 19 (c) and (f) of the Arms Act, and then submitted the record to the District Magistrate for his sanction and the District Magistrate sanctioned the institution of proceedings, whereupon the trial proceeded and the accused was convicted it was held that the omission to frame a charge afresh after sanction was cured by this section—4 L B R 247

536. (1) If an offence triable with the aid of assessors is tried by a jury, the trial shall not on that ground only be invalid.

Trial by jury of offence triable with assessors.

(2) If an offence triable by a jury is tried with the aid of assessors, the trial shall not on that ground only be invalid, unless the objection is taken before the Court records its finding

Trial with assessors of offence triable by jury.

1405. Sub-section (1) —The difference between a trial by jury and a trial with the aid of assessors lies in the summing up of the case and the manner in which the verdict of the jury and the opinions of the assessors are taken It is at this latter point that there is a departure of ways and if the accused does not put any objection at the crucial point he cannot afterwards be heard to complain Where no objection was taken at the trial, it was too late to take objection on appeal—33 Bom 423

Sub section (2) —Where a case was triable by jury but was tried with the aid of assessors and no objection was taken at the trial it was held that the trial was not invalid, even though the accused was materially injured, by reason of the fact that the Judge differed from the opinions of the assessors and convicted the accused—23 Mad 632 The objection must be taken at the trial and cannot be taken in appeal—Ibid

537. Subject to the provisions hereinbefore contained, no finding, sentence or order passed by a Court of competent jurisdiction shall be reversed or altered under Chapter XXVII or on appeal or revision on account—

Finding or sentence when reversible by reason of error or omission in charge or proceedings

(a) of any error, omission or irregularity in the complaint, summons, warrant, charge, proclamation, order, judgment or other proceedings before or during trial or in any inquiry or other proceedings under this Code, or

(b) (Omitted)

(c) of the omission to revise any list of jurors or assessors in accordance with Section 324, or

(d) of any misdirection in any charge to a jury, unless such error, omission, irregularity or misdirection has in fact occasioned a failure of justice

Explanation —In determining whether any error, omission or irregularity in any proceedings under this Code has occasioned a failure of justice, the Court shall have regard to the fact whether the objection could and should have been raised at an earlier stage in the proceedings

Change —Clause (b) (which referred to want of or irregularity in any sanction required by section 195 or any irregularity in proceeding taken under sec 476) and the Illustration have been omitted by sec 148 of the Cr P C Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 The Illustration ran as follows — A Magistrate being required by law to sign a document signs it in initials only This is purely an irregularity and does not affect the validity of the proceeding This illustration was given to show the class of irregularity contemplated by this section as distinguished from substantial departures from law—4 Lah 3 6 (at p 380) But as this Code nowhere lays down that the Magistrate must sign his name in full and not in initials the illustration was thought to be inappropriate and has been omitted by the Select Committee of 1916

1406 Scope of Section —This section applies to mere errors of procedure arising out of mere inadvertence and not to substantive errors of law—8 Bom 200 11 B H C R 237 12 W R (P C) 3. It does not apply to cases of disregard or disobedience of the whole of some mandatory provisions of the Code but applies only to cases of failure to comply with some part of such provisions in the course of a general compliance with the whole—Gangadhar v Bhangi 5 Cr L J 1152 (Nag) When a trial is contrary to law it is no trial at all and a disobedience to an express provision of law as to the mode of the trial is not an irregularity which can be cured by this section, but is an illegality wh vitiates the whole trial This section has not the effect of curing mate irregularities and absolute illegalities The errors which can be by this section are formal defects of procedure and not substantiv of law—Subramanya Ayyar v Emp 25 Mad 61 (P C) 5 P L J 61 This section does not apply to an infringement of statutory requirements It only applies to errors omissions and irregularities of a technical nature which may occur by accident or oversight in the course of proceedings conducted in the mode prescribed by statute If in conducting a trial the Judge adopts a procedure which is a departure from the authorised procedure it would amount to a violation of the law which cannot be cured by section 537—Allu v Crown 4 Lah 376 Lyme v Crown 4 Lah 38 (386) Thus where two cross cases were at first tried by the Judge separately but were afterwards tried jointly the evidence for the prosecution in one case was treated at the request of the accused as the defence evidence in the cross case, only one set of findings was recorded in respect of both cases and finally one composite judgment was delivered held that the procedure adopted by the Judge was a serious departure from the usual and proper course and was not only irregular but grossly illegal Section 537 could not apply to the case—Allu v Crown 4 Lah 376 The test to be applied in considering whether a particular infringement of the provisions of the Code does or does not fall within the purview of section 537 appears to be this Does the error go to the whole root of the trial ? Does it in effect vitiate the proceedings ? Has the Court assumed an authority which it does not possess ? Has it broken the vital rules of procedure ? If the error is of such a nature then the proceedings are vitiated in their very inception and section 537 has no application , but the mere fact that a certain provision of the Code is imperative does not in itself indicate that a breach of the provision vitiates the whole proceeding—Emp v Bechu Chaube 45 All 124 (127) 20 A L J 874, 24 Cr L J 67 A distinction should be made between a positive enactment by the Code that a certain trial shall not take place and a positive enactment that in the course of such a trial certain detailed procedure should be followed Both are imperative provisions But still the one is a different thing from the other In the former case an infringement of the enactment amounts to an assumption of jurisdiction and vitiates the trial from the very beginning In the latter case an infringement merely amounts to an error omission or irregularity in the procedure adopted in the course of the trial This section aims at curing infringements of the latter type—Aga Hla U v K E 3 Rang 139 26 Cr L J 1336 A I R 1925 Rang 258

Subject to provisions hereinbefore contained —These words do not refer to the provisions of the entire Code preceding this section but only to the provisions of this chapter (i e secs 529 to 536)—19 C W N 9 2 (per Sharfuddin and Beachcroft JJ) Contra—42 Cal 1,6 23 Cal 983 19 C W N 972 (per Fletcher J)

Court of competent jurisdiction — —This means a Court of competent jurisdiction in respect of the particular offence charged—10 Bom 319 If a Magistrate in consequence of a personal disqualification (i e under section 556) is forbidden by law to try a particular case, though he may be authorised generally to try cases of the same class, he cannot be said to be a Court of competent jurisdiction with respect to that par ticular case—23 Cal 328 Thus a Magistrate who takes cognizance of a case under sec 190 (1) (c) is not competent to try the case, if the accused objects to it and if in spite of such objection he proceeds to try the same himself, he cannot be said to be a Court of competent jurisdiction in respect of that case—13 All 345 If a District Magistrate transfers to a subordinate Magistrate a case which the latter is not competent to try a trial by the latter of that case is a defect which cannot be cured by this section as the trial is not held by a Court of competent jurisdiction—23 Cal 442

1407. Failure of justice —The test in case of errors omissions or irregularities and other matters of like nature referred to in this section is not whether the Court had acted illegally (for in one sense every error or irregularity in so far as it contravenes the provisions of the Code is illegal) but whether there had been a failure of justice—27 Cal 839 Moreover the test (i.e. whether the error or irregularity has occasioned a failure of justice) is one which can be properly applied only after the final result of the case is known Where an objection is taken on the ground of there being a material error before a case is finally disposed of and while there is time to correct the same it would be unreasonable to hold that the section intends the error to be allowed to remain uncorrected To hold that would be to give this section the effect not only of curing mere formal defects of procedure when discovered too late but of practically subverting all procedure—23 Cal 983 If, however the inquiry has proceeded far enough to enable the test required by this section to be applied this section may be called in to cure the error or irregularity—12 Cr L J 320 (Sind)

In fact —The words in fact have been introduced into the Code of 1898 apparently in order to emphasize the duty of the Court to go into the merits before interfering in consequence of misdirection or other error —26 Mad 1

1408 Error omission or irregularity —Error or irregularity in summons or warrant —See 8 All 293 in Note 143 under sec 68 38 Mad 1088 and 18 A L J 1149 in Note 182 under sec 90 and Note 285 under sec 115 The error of a Magistrate in proceeding by warrant instead of by summons furnishes no ground for quashing the proceedings—1 W R 16

A search warrant issued illegally under section 96 (1) cannot, by the operation of this section be taken to have been validly issued under sec 98 This section cannot give legal effect to a defective warrant—35 Cal 1076

Issue of fresh summons —Where on an information a summons was issued to the accused and owing to its disclosing no offence a fresh summons was issued without any fresh or supplemental information the error omission or irregularity in the fresh summons was not sufficient to upset the finding and sentence unless it had occasioned a failure of just —31 Bom 611

Irregularity in arrest —Where certain arrests were made wi substance of the warrants being notified to the persons arrested the omission was cured by this section—18 Cr L J 666 (All)

Absence of complaint —The absence of a complaint of Court required by sec 195 of this Code goes to the root of the case and vitiates the whole trial—Girdhari Lal v Emp, 29 O C 1, 12 O L J 194, 26 Cr L J 9..), Ameraj v Emp. 23 A L J 35, 26 Cr L J 751

Error or omission in the charge —An omission to set out the guilty intention of the accused in a charge will be cured by this section unless it is shown that the omission has occasioned a failure of justice—22 Cal 391 Where the law and section of the law were mentioned in the charge the omission of the words 'unlawfully and maliciously' in the charge was not so material as to prejudice the accused—42 Cal 957 The omission of the word 'dishonestly' in a charge under sec 411 I P C is not a ground of reversing the conviction and sentence, where the accused person fully understood the nature of the offence with which he was charged and has not been prejudiced by the omission—10 B H C R 373 Where there is ample evidence to show the common object of an assembly, the omission to mention the common object can be cured by this section—2 P L J 541, 18 Cr L J 328 (Pat), 21 Cal 827 But where the charge is defective and the common object of the unlawful assembly is not very precisely set out therein and moreover the charge does not specify the property the taking possession of which is supposed to be the common object of the assembly, the defect in the charge cannot be cured by this section—33 Cal 295

Errors in frame and contents of charge —See Note 730 under sec 225

Irregularity in proclamation —See 1917 P. R 39 in Note 165 under sec. 87.

Error or omission in judgment —See Note 1051 under sec 367, under sub-heading 'Defective Appellate judgements'

Attachment not illegal nor distrainer a trespasser for defect or want of form in proceedings

538. No attachment made under this Code shall be deemed unlawful nor shall any person making the same be deemed a trespasser, on account of any defect or want of form in the summons, conviction, writ of attachment or other proceedings relating thereto.

The word 'attachment' has been substituted for the word 'distress' by sec 149 of the Cr P C Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923 A similar amendment has been made in sections 386 and 387

MISCELLANEOUS

Courts and persons before whom affidavits may be sworn

539. Affidavits and affirmations to be used before any High Court or any officer of such Court may be sworn and affirmed before such Court or the Clerk of the Crown, or any Commissioner or other person appointed by such Court for that purpose, or any Judge, or any Commissioner for taking affidavits in any Court of Record in British India, or any Commissioner to administer oaths in England or Ireland, or any Magistrate authorized to take affidavits or affirmations in Scotland

An affidavit must contain nothing but bare facts known to the person who makes the affidavit either personally or upon information from a source which he believes to be a correct source and one on which reliance can be placed As human beings are liable to make mistakes in reciting facts the law requires that the contents of affidavits should be carefully read over to the deponents in a language which they understand and should be vouched by them to be correct—36 All 13

Affidavit in proof of conduct of public servant

539A. (1) When any application is made to any Court in the course of any inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this Code, and allegations are made therein respecting any public servant, the applicant may give evidence of the facts alleged in the application by affidavit, and the Court may, if it thinks fit, order th evidence relating to such facts be so given.

An affidavit to be used before any Court other than a High Court under this section may be sworn or affirmed in the manner prescribed in Section 539, or before any Magistrate.

Affidavits under this section shall be confined to, and shall state separately, such facts as the deponent is able to prove from his own knowledge and such facts as he has reasonable grounds to believe to be true, and, in the latter case, the deponent shall clearly state the grounds of such belief.

(2) The Court may order any scandalous and irrelevant matter in an affidavit to be struck out or amended.

This section and the next have been added by section 150 of the Cr P. C Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923 "This new section is intended to discourage the making of false and scandalous statements in petitions filed before the Courts, if such petition seeks to impugn the action of subordinate authorities"—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914). "We think that the provisions of this section should apply to all criminal proceedings, including appeals We would allow the applicant to give evidence by affidavit, and would leave the Court a discretion to require this to be done in any case"—Report of the Select Committee of 1916

539B. (1) Any Judge or Magistrate may, at any stage of any inquiry, trial or other proceeding, after due notice to the parties, visit and inspect any place in which an offence is alleged to have been committed, or any other place which it is in his opinion necessary to view for the purpose of properly appreciating the evidence given at such inquiry or trial, and shall without unnecessary delay record a memorandum of any relevant facts observed at such inspection.

Local inspection

(2) Such memorandum shall form part of the record of the case. If the Public Prosecutor, complainant or accused so desires, a copy of the memorandum shall be furnished to him free of cost:

During the trial of the accused persons one of whom had made a confession the Sessions Judge went himself to the scene of the crime accompanied by the assessors and the confessing accused, who showed him the ground and made certain additional statements by way of comment or illustration of his confession, and the Judge made note of them.

Held that the law does not recognize a procedure of this kind and that the Judge was clearly wrong in allowing the accused to make the additional statements and in recording them—Kesha Singh v K. E., 20 O C 136.

When a Magistrate makes a local inspection, he should without unnecessary delay record the result thereof. Where after the Magistrate had made a local inspection, he gave judgment convicting the accused and then after delivering judgment he made a note of the result of such inspection in the order sheet, held that the procedure was irregular; but as the Magistrate's judgment in this case was mainly based on the documents on the record and on the oral evidence before him, and he used the local inspection only to confirm the evidence which he had already before him, the judgment of the Magistrate should not be set aside as the accused was not prejudiced by such irregularity—Bhola Nath v Kedar, 25 Cr L J 705, A. I R 1925 Cal 353. But in another Calcutta case it has been held that the provisions of sub-section (2) are mandatory, and therefore where the Magistrate made a local inspection and drew up a diagram and made an inspection-note thereon but the note did not form part of the record of the case, the procedure was illegal and not merely irregular, and the defect could not be cured even though there was no prejudice to the accused—Hriday Gobinda v K. E., 52 Cal. 148, 40 C L J 14, 25 Cr L J. 1375 In a very recent case, however, where the local inquiry was made in the presence of both parties, and the Magistrate made no memorandum of the inspection, but the petitioners' pleader who was present at the time did not ask the Magistrate to record a memorandum or to attach a memorandum to the record or to give him a copy, and was content to go on to judgment without seeing the memorandum or even ascertaining whether one was made, it was held that the petitioners could not be allowed to say that for this formal defect the proceedings should be set aside, unless they could show that the Magistrate's omission had caused them prejudice—Forbes v. Md. Ali Haidar, 53 Cal 46, 42 C. L J 131, 26 Cr. L J. 1524 (dissenting from Hriday Gobind v K E, supra) According to the Bombay High Court, the failure to make a memorandum of the facts observed at the inspection is not an illegality vitiating the trial but is only an irregularity covered by sec 537, where no prejudice has been caused—Khushal Jeram v. Emp, 50 Bom 680, 27 Cr L J 1151 (following 53 Cal 46).

As to the circumstances under which a Magistrate making a local inspection is incompetent to try the case, see Note 1374 under section 526, and notes under sec. 556.

Power to summon material witnesses or examine person present.

540. Any Court may, at any stage of any inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this Code, summon any person as a witness, or examine any person in attendance, though not summoned, as a witness, or recall and re-examine any person already examined; and the Court shall summon and examine or recall and re-examine any such person if his evidence appears to it essential to the just decision of the case.

1411 Examination of Court witnesses—This section confers very wide powers upon a Court in the matter of summoning witnesses but the wider the powers, the greater is the exercise of discretion required of the Magistrate It was not intended by this section that the Magistrate should exercise his powers at the bidding of any person, but the powers are given to prevent any danger or miscarriage of justice owing to some particular witness not having been called—12 A L J 15 This section is a supplementary provision enabling the Court to examine, and in certain circumstances imposing on it the duty of examining, a material witness who would not otherwise be brought before the Court But a Magistrate misuses this power if he uses it to anticipate the defence of an accused to his prejudice or if he uses it after satisfying him self that the accused has a good defence to discharge the accused instead of acquitting him A Magistrate cannot resort to this section in order to avoid the responsibility of making up his mind as to the value of the prosecution evidence—1886 P R 11

The first part of this section is an enabling provision whereby a Court in the exercise of its discretion is empowered, at any time before it actually pronounces judgment, to take further evidence either for the prosecution or for the defence and for that purpose it may adjourn the hearing of a case in order to procure the attendance of the proper persons In many instances it happens that a new light is thrown on the case by witnesses for the defence and it then becomes desirable sometimes in the interests of the accused himself, that fresh evidence should be called for The second part of this section is imperative If the new evidence appears to the Court essential to the just decision of the case, the Court has no choice but to take such evidence The new witnesses should be examined cross examined and re examined Where the defence case could not have been anticipated by the prosecution, and it is said that witnesses are available to prove the falsity of the defence case the Court should allow such witnesses to be examined The accused should be given liberty to examine any further witnesses whom he wishes to examine to meet the evidence of the fresh witnesses for the prosecution—Maung Po Hmyin v K E 1 Rang 308 25 Cr L J 217

Where the Magistrate visited the scene of occurrence without notice to the parties in contravention of the provisions of sec 539B, and made certain inquires in the course of inspection and then as a result of the inquiry, summoned several persons as witnesses, purporting to do so under sec 540 held that the action of the Magistrate could not be justified under section 540 This section merely provides that a Magistrate may summon any witness whose evidence appears to be necessary, and the most common way of knowing whether the evidence of such a witness is necessary is through the evidence of other witnesses in [illegible] But this section does not contemplate that the [illegible] should [illegible] knowledge by going into the highw[illegible] [illegible]s and for further evidence, and the power [illegible] d[illegible]

means imply a power to discover such witness by personal inquiry out of Court—Fakir Muhammad v Emp, 4 Rang 106 27 Cr L J 1084

Who can summon witnesses —No Magistrate other than the one who is seized of the case can summon witnesses under this section—36 All 13

'May summon —It is entirely in the discretion of the Court to call and examine witnesses and the Public Prosecutor cannot demand as a matter of right to call and examine any witness not examined before the committing Magistrate—14 All 212

At any stage' —Although it is true that proper discretion has to be exercised under sec 540, still the terms of this section are extremely wide, and any Court may at any stage of any inquiry trial or other proceeding summon any person as a witness, if his evidence appears to it essential to the just decision of the case This power can be exercised even after the close of the case for the prosecution and the defence—In re Chellaperumal, 46 M L J 325 25 Cr L J 354 A Magistrate can under this section, receive fresh evidence after the evidence on both sides has been taken and the case adjourned for judgment, in as much as the case is still pending when such evidence is being taken—24 Cal 167 Where in a criminal trial after the evidence for the defence was closed the Magistrate examined certain witnesses for the prosecution giving at the same time full liberty to the accused to cross examine them the High Court declined to interfere in revision—21 O C 95 But although a Magistrate has discretion to admit evidence on behalf of either side at any stage of the inquiry or trial, still he ought not to admit further evidence for the prosecution after the prosecution has closed its case and the accused has entered upon his defence, unless there be valid reasons which must be recorded—Ganga v K E, 10 A L J 383 Magistrates should exercise their discretion under this section very cautiously Where arguments were heard and the case posted for judgment for a certain day the examination of any further prosecution witnesses under this section cannot be justified—Natabar v Adyanath 17 C W N 673 When the trial has been concluded so far that no witnesses remain to be examined on either side and the assessors have given their opinions it is not open to the Sessions Judge to fish for witnesses under this section or to order for further inquiry to be made by the committing Magistrate—1892 P R 4

1412. Who may be examined :—Under this section the Court is bound to summon and examine any witnesses whose evidence seems to be essential to the just decision of the case—6 C W N 98 The Court would not be bound to issue summons to witnesses under this section unless it is satisfied that their evidence will be very material—19 All 502 When the committing Magistrate refuses to examine any witnesses mentioned in the list submitted to him under Sec 211, the Sessions Judge can under this section direct those witnesses to be summoned and examined—8 All 668, 14 All 212

Magistrates are at liberty to summon witnesses who are resident outside the limits of their own districts—3 M. H C. R. App. 5

The Magistrate may summon and examine any person as a witness The power to summon a witness is not limited to the witnesses cited for the prosecution or the defence—1886 P R 11 A person who had been suspected and charged with an offence but was afterwards discharged by the Magistrate for want of evidence may be examined afterwards as a witness for the prosecution—7 W R 44 Where the prosecution declines to examine any witnesses the Court may on its own initiative cause them to be produced and examine them under this section—Emp v Satyendra, 37 C L J 173 Where the defence is based on Section 84 I P C the Sessions Judge may under this section ascertain the behaviour of the prisoner during the years previous to the homicide and if he has been kept in a lunatic asylum record medical evidence of the facts observed there—Ratanlal 279

But this section does not enable the Court to examine the accused as a witness even in appeal for an appeal is but the continuation of the original case—12 Mad 451

1413 Right of parties to cross examine —When a Judge thinks it necessary to examine a witness under this section and does so, the accused as well as the complainant ought to be allowed an opportunity of cross examining the witness—5 Cal 614 24 Cal 288 Pila v K E 47 All 147 When a witness is called by the Court under this section both the prosecution and the accused are entitled to cross examine him on matters relevant to the inquiry and they are not restricted to the points on which the witness has been examined by the Court—35 Cal 243 Where a witness was at first called for the defence but afterwards the accused declined to examine him whereupon he was examined as a witness by the Court it was held that the accused would not be deprived of his right to cross examine the witness—29 Cal 387 It is not a proper cross examination if the defence counsel is merely allowed to suggest certain questions to the Magistrate and the Magistrate puts those questions to the witness—Pila v K E 47 All 147 6 Cr L J 575

(2) If the accused in any such case is not represented by a pleader, or if the Judge or Magistrate considers his personal attendance necessary, he may, if he thinks and for reasons to be recorded by him, either adjourn such inquiry or trial, or order that the case of such accused be taken up for trial separately.

This section has been added by section 151 of the Cr. P. C Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923. "This section is designed to meet a practical difficulty which is occasionally experienced in trials involving a large number of accused persons when one or more of them is incapable of remaining at the bar '—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914) ' Sub-section (1) provides for the case of an accused who is represented by a pleader, and whose personal attendance can be dispensed with Sub-section (2) provides for the case of an accused who is not so represented, or whose continued personal attendance may be necessary, and allows the Court in such a case either to adjourn the trial of all the accused, or to order the particular accused to be tried separately. Power to appoint place of imprisonment.

541. (1) Unless when otherwise provided by any law for the time being in force, the Local Government may direct in what place any person liable to be imprisoned or committed to custody under this Code shall be confined.

Removal to criminal jail of accused or convicted persons who are in confinement in civil jail, and their return to the civil jail

(2) If any person liable to be imprisoned or committed to custody under this Code is in confinement in a civil jail, the Court or Magistrate ordering the imprisonment or committal may direct that the person be removed to a criminal jail.

(3) When a person is removed to a criminal jail under sub-section (2), he shall, on being released therefrom, be sent back to the civil jail, unless either—

(a) three years have elapsed since he was removed to the criminal jail, in which case he shall be deemed to have been discharged from the civil jail under Section 342 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, or

(b) the Court which ordered his imprisonment in the civil jail has certified to the officer in charge of the criminal jail that he is entitled to be discharged under Section 341 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882.

In sub-section (3) the words sub-section (2) have been substituted for sub section (1) by the Repealing and Amending Act VII of 1924 to correct a clerical error

1414 Jail —The term prison and jail do not include a police lock up A Magistrate has no power to sentence an accused to suffer imprisonment in a police lock up—7 L B R 62

Dividing imprisonment in different jails —A Criminal Court passing a sentence of imprisonment cannot divide the imprisonment in different jails From this section and section 63 (1) of Act IX of 1894 and the Prisoners Act of 18 1 it is clear that the power of directing imprisonment to be undergone in different jails belongs to the Local Government and the Inspector General of Prisons and not to the Court passing the sentence —Ratanlal 82-

542 (1) Notwithstanding anything contained in the Prisoner's Testimony Act, 1869, any Presidency Magistrate desirous of examining, as a witness or an accused person, in any case pending before him any person confined in any jail within the local limits of his jurisdiction, may issue an order to the officer in charge of the said jail requiring him to bring such prisoner in proper custody, at a time to be therein named, to the Magistrate for examination

Interpreter to be bound to interpret truthfully

1415 It is not necessary to administer oath to an interpreter—16 W R 61 The omission to administer oath to an interpreter under section 5 (b) of the Oaths Act (X of 1873) renders it necessary for the prosecution to prove that the interpretation of the deposition was made accurately but omission to do so does not make the deposition inadmissible in evidence—36 Cal 808

witness attending for the purposes of any inquiry, trial or other proceeding before such Court under this Code.

Section 544, and the Rules framed by the Local Government under this section, give a discretion to the Magistrate in the matter of expenses of complainants and witnesses, but such discretion should be exercised not arbitrarily but on sound judicial principles—9 Bom L R 353

This section empowers the Court to order that the expenses of the complainant and his witness should be paid by the Government under proper circumstances But it does not empower the Court trying a complaint to order that the diet money of a witness produced before it should be paid by the complainant That power is vested in the Court under the general rules of the High Court If the Court orders such payment in accordance with such rules, the amount cannot be recovered under the provision of sec 547 as if it were a fine but can be recovered by a suit in the Civil Court—Kamal v Paramasukh, 29 C W N 1033

Bengal Rules :— 1 The Criminal Courts are authorised to pay by these rates the expenses (a) of complainants or witnesses whether for the prosecution or for the defence (i) in cases in which the prosecution is instituted or carried on by or under the orders or with the sanction of the Government, or of any Judge, Magistrate or other public officer, or in which it shall appear to the presiding officer to be directly in furtherance of the interests of the public service, and (ii) in all cases entered in column 5 of the Schedule II appended to the Criminal Procedure Code as not bailable and (b) of witnesses in all cases in which they are compelled by the Magistrate of his own motion to attend under the provisions of Section 540 of the Code

2 If a witness is summoned at the instance of the complainant or accused under section 244 of the Code, his expenses shall not be withheld from him except on the ground of failure to do his duty as a witness when summoned

3 (1) For the purpose of computing the expenses which the Criminal Courts are authorised to pay under these rules, complainants and witnesses shall be divided into two classes, namely —

(a) labourers and ordinary cultivators and other persons of similar class, and

(b) persons of better position, and the allowances shall ordinarily be a diet allowance, which may be paid to persons coming under class (b) on demand by them and to persons in class (a) as a general rule appears —

		Class (a) per diem	Class (b) per diem
I	Courts in the districts of Nadia Murshidabad, Jessore, Khulna and Midnapore	7 annas	Rs 5

II Courts in the rest of the districts in the Presidency . . . 8 annas Rs 5

Explanation —The rates fixed in this rule are maxima, and are intended to meet the cost of meals for one day In every case therefore, the Court should consider the circumstances of the individual and local conditions and grant a reduced allowance in circumstances and localities where the actual expenses fall short of the maximum rate In cases where no meal is taken away from home or where only one meal is taken, no allowance or a reduced allowance, as the case may be should be granted

4 (1) Complainants and witnesses performing the journey or part of the journey by rail steamer or tram may be allowed their actual fares each way according to the class by which persons of their rank and station in life would ordinarily travel In determining the class by which a person would ordinarily travel regard should be had to the standard laid down in Section V of the Travelling Allowance Rules published in the Calcutta Gazette Extraordinary December 23 1921

(2) Charges for toll at ferries will be allowed at the authorized rates to the extent to which they have been actually incurred

(3) Other travelling expenses will be given only when the journey could not have been performed on foot or in the case of persons whose age position and habits of life render it impossible for them to walk In such cases in addition to the allowance permitted by the preceding rules travelling allowance shall be given at the following rates —

(a) When the journey is by any kind of conveyance by road the actual reasonable conveyance charge up to a maximum limit of 4 annas a mile

(b) In the Districts where the usual mode of travelling is by water the actual expenses incurred for boat hire up to a maximum of Rs 2 per diem

(4) In hill districts where it is customary for respectable persons to be accompanied by a man carrying their baggage when such a person is summoned from a distance of more than five miles he may be allowed the actual cost incurred for the hire of one coolie

5 If the Court is of opinion that any person following any trade or profession or engaged in any commercial undertaking has suffered substantial loss by reason of his attendance as a witness or complainant he may be allowed in addition to the diet money and travelling expenses permissible under the preceding rules compensation according to circumstances

6 Notwithstanding anything contained in these rules Government servants when summoned to give evidence in their public capacity shall receive no payment from the Court on account of travelling or halting allowance but shall be entitled to draw such allowance under the Civil Service Regulations on producing a certificate of attendance granted by the Court Provided that—

(i) when a Government servant is required to give evidence in his private capacity at a Court situated not more than five miles from his headquarters, the Court shall be autho-where it considers it necessary, and notwithstanding anything contained in this rule, to pay the actual travelling expenses incurred.

(ii) when the salary of the Government servant as summoned does not exceed Rs 10 per mensem, he shall be paid his expenses by the Court

7 Notwithstanding anything contained in rules 3 and 4, whenever the Court requires the expenses of a Government officer, summoned as witness in his official capacity, to be deposited in advance the term "expenses" shall be interpreted to mean the travelling and halting allowance admissible under the Civil Service Regulations

8 Government servants when summoned to give evidence in their private capacity shall be paid by the Court such travelling allowance as is paid to persons of similar status under rules 3 and 4, but they shall not be entitled to any diet allowance, nor shall they receive any travelling allowance under the Civil Service Regulations

9 Officers will be held responsible that parties of witnesses are brought to Court together as far as possible, so as to save expense The hire of more than one boat shall not be allowed in one case unless the presiding officer is satisfied that the witnesses could not have arranged to come together.

10 The number of days for which diet allowance should be granted will be determined by the officer ordering payment in each case

11 For this purpose and for regulating the reimbursement of tolls paid, a table shall be prepared and kept in each Court, showing the distance of each thana from the sudder station and subordinate stations the number of intermediate ferries to be crossed, and authorised rates of charges for tolls at each of these ferries, the existence or absence of roads or waterways being also noted in the table—Calcutta Gazette, 1922, Part I, August 9, pp 1522 1524.

Power of Court to pay expenses or compensation out of fine

545. (1) Whenever under any law in force for the time being a Criminal Court imposes a fine or confirms in appeal, revision or otherwise a sentence of fine, or a sentence of which fine forms a part, the Court may, when passing judgment, order the whole or any part of the fine recovered to be applied—

(a) in defraying expenses properly incurred in the prosecution;

(b) in the payment to any person of compensation for any loss or injury caused by the offence, when substantial compensation is, in the opinion of the Court, recoverable by such person in a Civil Court; and

(c) when any person is convicted of any offence which includes theft, criminal misappropriation, criminal

breach of trust, or cheating, or of having dishonestly received or retained, or of having voluntarily assisted in disposing of, stolen property knowing or having reason to believe the same to be stolen, in compensating any bona fide purchaser of such property for the loss of the same if such property is restored to the possession of the person entitled thereto

(2) If the fine is imposed in a case which is subject to appeal, no such payment shall be made before the period allowed for presenting the appeal has elapsed, or, if an appeal be presented, before the decision of the appeal.

Change.—Clause (b) has been slightly amended and clause (c) newly added by section 152 of the Cr. P. C. Amendment Act XVIII of 1923. Clause (b) makes it clear that compensation under section 545 may be paid to any person by whom it would be recoverable in a Civil Court. The payment of compensation to an innocent purchaser of stolen property is provided for in clause (c) when the property is restored to the possession of the person entitled thereto.—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914).

Criminal Court.—A Police Patel's Court is not a criminal Court and he cannot make an order under this section.—Ratanlal 317.

1416. Order when can be made.—An order of compensation can be made under this section when the Court imposes a fine. If the accused is discharged or acquitted and no fine is imposed, no order under this section can be passed.—2 Bom. 1; Ratanlal 407. If the accused is convicted of theft and sentenced to imprisonment but no fine is imposed on him, the Court cannot order payment of compensation to the person whose property was stolen.—Bhiru v. Emp., 26 Cr. L. J. 1495 (Nag.). Where a person is dealt with under section 562 and no fine is imposed on him, the Court has no power to direct him to pay compensation to the other party.—Munney Mirza v. K. E., 25 Cr. L. J. 1116 (Oudh). In a proceeding under section 107, an order directing the accused to pay the costs of the complainant is ultra vires.—Sheo Prasad v. Malango, 25 Cr. L. J. 76; A. I. R. 1924 All. 604. Where the Magistrate does not impose any fine but orders the sale of the boat of the accused and directs the compensation to be paid out of the sale proceeds, the order is illegal.—Ratanlal 688. Similarly, a compensation cannot be ordered to be paid out of the rents and profits of the property forfeited.—Ratanlal 146. A Magistrate cannot, without imposing a substantive sentence of fine, order payment of compensation to the complainant.—Weir 715. The proper course is to impose a fine, and out of the fine realised direct payment to the complainant of such amount as the Court thinks fit, having regard to the provisions of this section.—3 C. L. R. 404.

Order cannot be made after judgment.—The award of compensation should be a part of the sentence and order made upon a conviction of offence and should be founded upon a statement of the loss damage or expenses ascertained at the trial—11 W R 53 The order should be made when passing judgment after the judgment is passed the Court becomes functus officio and has no further power to make any order under this section—U B R (1892 96) 80

1417 Clause (a)—Expenses of the prosecution :—The award of costs should not exceed the actual costs of the complainant out of pocket —3 C L R 405

Expenses under this section do not include such expenses as are incurred in bringing the person of the offender before the Magistrate—Ratanlal 608 Where fine is imposed on a person for destroying land marks a portion of the fine so imposed cannot be ordered to be paid to the Amin for the purpose of paying the expenses of his deputation to restore the land marks destroyed—6 W R 93 such expenses are not expenses incurred in the prosecution Subsistence allowances and cart hire for prosecution witness cannot be ordered to be paid by the accused—U B R (1892 96) 7 Court fees and process fees are now provided for in Sec 546A

Expenses under this section should be directed to be paid out of the amount of the fine imposed and a separate order for such expenses is improper—Ratanlal 341 4 Bom L R 877 An order for expenses to be paid in addition to the fine is illegal—24 Mad 305 5 Bom L R 1 6 Ratanlal 196 But the expenses mentioned in sec 546A may be awarded in addition to fine

1418. Clause (b)—Compensation —Amount of compensation —When compensation is awarded under this section the distinction between clauses (a) and (b) of the section should be borne in mind and the order should show whether it is made to defray the expenses of the prosecution or as compensation for injury caused by the offence committed —U B R (1892 96) 290 In awarding compensation no sum in excess of the loss actually suffered by the complainant should be ordered to be paid Where the accused was convicted of illegally demanding money and was fined three times the amount of the illegal receipt and the whole of the fine was ordered to be paid to the complainant the order was held to be improper—5 L B R 50 In a theft case it is illegal to award compensation to the complainant in excess of the price of the property stolen from him—1913 P W R 40

Where a complainant cannot recover substantial compensation in a Civil Court compensation cannot be awarded to him under clause (b) but a sum may be awarded to him under clause (a) to defray the expenses of the prosecution—15 Cr L J 555 (Bur) Therefore a Magistrate convicting a person under section 193 I P C can only order the expenses properly incurred in the prosecution to be defrayed out of the fine but has no power to award compensation because substantial compensation is not recoverable by a civil suit for perjury—14 N L R 131

Compensations which are improper —(1) Where in a petty case no pecuniary loss has been sustained by the complainant it is improper for the Court to award compensation—1 Bur S R 538, but see 2 Weir 717

where it has been held that compensation should be awarded where there is substantial cause for it even though the case be frivolous

(2) Where the accused was convicted and fined for being drunk on a public road no compensation could be awarded to the constable who in arresting the accused had to struggle with him and in so doing lost his whistle and Rs 5 because such compensation is not for injury caused by the offence committed—U B R (1892 96) 79 A Court cannot award compensation for alleged offences other than those which form the subject of the inquiry in the case in which the order is made—Ratanlal 407

(3) Where the accused took his sister who was suffering from plague into a town without informing the authorities and was thereupon convicted for an offence under section 188 I P C no compensation could be awarded to the Municipality on account of the expenses incurred by it in disinfecting the house into which the accused brought the case of plague —Ratanlal 958

(4) Where the offence is under the I P C no compensation can be awarded under any other special law Thus where the accused was fined under sec 379 I P C for cutting trees in a field and out of the fine recovered a reward of Rs 5 was ordered to be paid to the complainant (under the Forest Act) for detecting the offence it was held that the order of reward was illegal since the offence was under the I P C and not under the Forest Act—Ratanlal 873 See also Ratanlal 241

1419 Who is entitled to compensation —Heirs of the deceased — Under the Code of 1861 compensation could be awarded to the person injured and therefore it could not be paid to the heirs of the person who had been killed—10 W R 39 Under the Code of 1872 also the law was practically the same but in the 1882 Code the language of the section has been changed and no mention is specifically made of the person who is entitled to compensation Still in 12 Mad 352 and 21 Mad 74 the Judges clung to the old view and held that compensation awarded to the widow of the deceased was illegal In 36 Cal 302 and 1898 P R 17 it has been held that the heirs of the deceased are entitled to compensation The present amendment now makes it clear that compensation can be awarded to any person by whom it can be recovered in a Civil Court

In awarding compensation to the heirs of the person killed the names of the heirs should be mentioned An order of compensation to the nearest heirs without specifying who those heirs may be is bad in law —1913 P R 18

Husband of woman enticed away —Where a person is convicted of enticing away a married woman compensation may be awarded to the husband for injury done to his honour—1878 P R 14

Compensation for injury caused to another —Where the accused was charged with causing hurt to two persons, but was fined for causing injuries to one of them only compensation out of the fine cannot be awarded to the other person—2 Weir 718

Refund of compensation —Where a conviction is set aside on appeal and a refund of the fine levied is ordered and the party who has

ceived a portion of the money as compensation refuses to refund it the only remedy lies in a Civil Court—2 Weir 717 But in 19 All 112, and other cases it has been held that the amount may be recovered by a process under section 547 and not necessarily by a suit in a Civil Court See Note 1422 under sec 547

1420. Clause (c)—Bona fide purchaser of stolen property —This clause has been newly added Under the old law, it was held that when a person was convicted of theft, an order awarding compensation, out of the fine imposed, to the innocent purchaser of the stolen property was not authorised by this section—6 Mad 286, because the injury to the purchaser was not the consequence of the theft but of the invalid sale—2 Weir 716 On a conviction of theft, the stolen property should be returned to the owner, but it was illegal to impose a condition that a portion of the fine imposed on the accused should be paid to the innocent purchaser. No such condition could be imposed on the return of the property to the owner—3 Bom L R 449 When theft was proved, the stolen property was ordered to be restored to the rightful owner and not to the bona fide purchaser The rule of English law protecting bona fide purchasers for value in market overt does not apply in India, and on conviction of the accused the property with respect to which the theft was committed should be delivered to the original owner—20 W R 38, 1908 P R 2 See also 1893 A W N 61 In 1878 P R 21 it was held however that when stolen property was in the hands of a bona fide purchaser, the proper order to be made was to leave it in his hands, and the remedy of the complainant was to secure possession of the property in a Civil Court

Under the present law, as provided by this clause, compensation will be awarded to the innocent purchaser

The clause applies only to a purchaser and not to a mortgagee or pledgee; an innocent mortgagee or pledgee who has advanced money on the security of the stolen property will not be entitled to any compensation—Ratanlal 631, 46 Bom. 893

546. At the time of awarding compensation in any subsequent civil suit relating to the same matter, the Court shall take into account any sum paid or recovered as compensation under Section 545.

Payment to be taken into account in subsequent suit

'Take into account' —This expression does not mean that in a subsequent civil suit, at the time of awarding damages, the amount of compensation recovered under section 545 is to be deducted from the damages awarded in the suit—22 W R. 336 (Civil)

(2) An order under this section may also be made by an Appellate Court or by the High Court when exercising its powers of revision

This section has been added by section 153 of the Cr P C Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 It embodies the provisions of section 31 of the Court Fees Act in order that greater prominence may be given to them —Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914) The provision as to imprisonment in default of payment and sub section (2) did not occur in the Court Fees Act Section 31 of the Court Fees Act has now been repealed by section 163 of the Cr P C Amendment Act XVIII of 1923

Copies of proceedings

Provided that he pays for the same, unless the Court, for some special reason, thinks fit to furnish it free of cost

1423. Affected by judgment order etc —A complainant whose complaint is dismissed is a person affected by the order of dismissal and therefore he is entitled to ask for a copy of the Magistrate's order of discharge—Ratanlal 305, 8 Cal 166 But a charge is not an order of a Criminal Court by which an accused person can be said to be affected within the meaning of this section, so as to entitle him to copies of deposi tion where the trial has not proceeded beyond the frame of charge and the examination of the prosecution witnesses—189' A W N 140

Accused entitled to copies —A prisoner is entitled to copies of all documents for which he applies and which he thinks necessary for his defence and a Magistrate will be acting contrary to law in determining whether such copies are necessary or not—14 W R 77

549 (1) The Governor General in Council may make rules, consistent with this Code and the Army Act and the Air Force Act or any similar law for the time being in force, as to the cases in which persons subject to military or air force law shall be tried by a Court to which this Code applies, or by Court martial and when any person is brought before a Magistrate and charged with an offence for which he is liable, under the Army Act section 41 or under the Air Force Act, section 41, to be tried by a Court martial, such Magistrate shall have regard to such rules, and shall in proper cases deliver him, together with a statement of the offence of which he is accused, to the commanding officer of the regiment, corps or detachment to which he belongs, or to the commanding officer of the nearest military or air force station as the case may be, for the purpose of being tried by Court-martial

Delivery to military authorities of persons liable to be tried by Court martial

(2) Every Magistrate shall on receiving a written application for that purpose by the commanding officer of any body of troops stationed or employed at any such place, use his utmost endeavours to apprehend and secure any person accused of such offence

Apprehension of such persons

The italicised words have been added by the Repealing and Amending Act X of 1927

550 Any police officer may seize any property which may be alleged or suspected to have been stolen, or which may be found under circumstances which create suspicion of the commission of any offence. Such police officer, if subordinate to the officer in charge of a police station shall forthwith report the seizure to that officer

Powers to Police to seize property suspected to be stolen.

1424 If a Police officer has reason to suspect certain property to be stolen he must himself seize the property He cannot order any other person to detain the same—16 O C 371

This section gives the Police officer power to seize only the property suspected to be stolen, but it does not empower him to seize any other property which is mixed with the stolen one—1909 P W R 14

551. Police-officers superior in rank to an officer in charge of a police-station may exercise the same powers, throughout the local areas to which they are appointed, as may be exercised by such officer within the limits of his station

Powers of superior officers of Police.

552. Upon complaint made to a Presidency Magistrate or District Magistrate on oath of the abduction or unlawful detention of a woman, or of a female child under the age of sixteen years, for any unlawful purpose, he may make an order for the immediate restoration of such woman to her liberty, or of such female child to her husband, parent, guardian or other person having the lawful charge of such child, and may compel compliance with such order, using such force as may be necessary

Power to compel restoration of abducted females.

Change —The word sixteen has been substituted for fourteen by the Criminal Law Amendment Act XVIII of 1924, for the purpose of affording greater protection to girls By the same Act the age limit has been raised from sixteen to eighteen in sections 372 and 373 of the Indian Penal Code

1425 Unlawful detention —The detention of a child in a missionary school against the will of her parent or guardian with a view that she should be brought up in a religion which such parent or child disapproved of and the adoption of which would not only involve a total change in the child s mode of life, but would also deprive the parent or guardian of any control in the education or bringing up of the child would amount to unlawful detention—16 Cal 487

The detention of a girl by the father in his house against the will of her husband does not amount to unlawful detention unless it is shown that the detention was contrary to the wish of the girl—15 Cr L J 71 (Cal) If a woman is residing with her relative who are aiding her in endeavouring to procure a divorce, such detention is not unlawful—2 W R 724

Unlawful purpose —A Magistrate can act under this section when both the detention and the purpose are unlawful In 16 Cal 487 cited above the detention was held to be unlawful but the purpose was not

Unlawful purpose means immoral purpose This section applies to female children only and not to children generally this shows that the purpose has some special reference to the sex of the person against whom it is entertained In other words the section has reference to adultery concubinage prostitution deflowering or other similar purposes But it certainly does not include the detention of a Hindu girl in a Christian Institution in order that she may be a Christian or the detention of a Christian child in a Muhammadan Institution in order that she may be a Mahomedan —16 Cal 487 see also 4 Bom L R 609

1426. Procedure It is the District Magistrate who alone has jurisdiction to entertain a complaint and make an order under this section He has no power to transfer such a case to a Sub-Magistrate and that Magistrate would have no jurisdiction therein—Ratanlal 963

An application under this section does not necessarily allege the commission of an offence and is not a complaint consequently the provisions of sections 200 and 203 do not apply to proceedings under this section—4 Bom L R 609

Where a Magistrate has reason to believe that a woman is unlawfully detained but cannot find who so detains her the proper course is for the Magistrate to issue an order to have the woman brought before him and to examine her it would be illegal for the Magistrate in such a case to order the restoration of the woman to liberty without any finding that she was unlawfully detained by any one and without ordering any one to restore her to liberty—Weir [illegible]

An application to get back a girl from her father's custody on the allegation that she is the wife of the applicant must be made to a Civil Court and not to the Magistrate under this section—10 C W N lxxx

553 (1) Whenever any person causes a police officer to arrest another person in a presidency town if it appears to the Magistrate by whom the case is heard that there was no sufficient ground for causing such arrest the Magistrate may award such compensation not exceeding fifty rupees to be paid by the person so causing the arrest to the person so arrested for his loss of time and expenses in the matter, as the Magistrate thinks fit

Compensation to persons groundlessly given in charge in Presidency-town

(2) In such cases if more persons than one are arrested the Magistrate may in like manner award to each of them such compensation not exceeding fifty rupees, as such Magistrate thinks fit

(3) All compensation awarded under this section may be recovered as if it were a fine, and if it cannot so recovered the person by whom it is payable shal sentenced to simple imprisonment for such term not exceeding thirty days as the Magistrate directs, unless such sum is sooner paid.

Power of chartered High Courts to make rules for inspection of records of subordinate Courts.

554. (1) With the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, the High Court at Fort William, and with the previous sanction of the Local Government, any other High Court established by Royal Charter may, from time to time, make rules for the inspection of the records of subordinate Courts.

Power of other High Courts to make rules for other purposes.

(2) Every High Court not established by Royal Charter may, from time to time, and with the previous sanction of the Local Government,—

(a) make rules for keeping all books, entries and accounts to be kept in all Criminal Courts subordinate to it, and for the preparation and transmission of any returns or statements to be prepared and submitted by such Courts;

(b) frame forms for every proceeding in the said Courts for which it thinks that a form should be provided;

(c) makes rules for regulating its own practice and proceedings and the practice and proceedings of all Criminal Courts subordinate to it; and

(d) make rules for regulating the execution of warrants issued under this Code for the levy of fines:

Provided that the rules and forms made and framed under this section shall not be inconsistent with this Code or any other law in force for the time being.

(3) All rules made under this section shall be published in the local official Gazette.

Forms.

555. Subject to the power conferred by S. 554, and by S. 107 of the Government of India Act, 1915, the forms set forth in the fifth schedule, with such variation as the circumstances of each case require, may be used for the respective purposes therein mentioned, and if used shall be sufficient.

1427. With such variation' —There being no prescribed form of warrant under section 100, a Magistrate who had to issue one under that section adapted a form under section 96 to the provision of section 100 by altering the figures and by drawing up the warrant in terms required by section 100 It was held that the warrant was perfectly legal—45 Cal 905 See also Note 205 under sec 100

556 No Judge or Magistrate shall, except with the permission of the Court to which an appeal lies from his Court, try or commit for trial any case to or in which he is a party or personally interested, and no Judge or Magistrate shall hear an appeal from any judgment or order passed or made by himself.

Case in which Judge or Magistrate is personally interested

Explanation —A Judge or Magistrate shall not be deemed a party, or personally interested, within the meaning of this section, to or in any case by reason only that he is a Municipal Commissioner or otherwise concerned therein in a public capacity, or by reason only that he has viewed the place in which an offence is alleged to have been committed or any other place in which any other transaction material to the case is alleged to have occurred and made an inquiry in connection with the case

A as Collector upon consideration of information furnished to him, directs the prosecution of B for a breach of the Excise Laws A is disqualified from trying this case as a Magistrate

1428 Principle and scope of section .—It is one of the oldest and plainest rules of justice and common sense that no man shall sit as a Judge in a case in which he has a distinct and substantial interest—2 Cal 23 The law in laying down the strict rule that if a Judge has any legal interest in the decision of the case, he is disqualified from trying it however small that interest may be had regard not so much to the motives which might be supposed to bias the Judge as to the susceptibilities of the litigant parties One important object, at all event is to clear away everything which might engender suspicion and d in the tribunal and to promote the feelings of confidence in the adminis tration of justice which is so essential to social order and security — Serjeant v Dale, 2 Q B D 558 20 Cal 857

A Magistrate who is disqualified under this section to try a case is not a Court of competent jurisdiction in respect to that case and if he tries that case the defect is not cured by sec 537—23 Cal 328 Nor will the defect be cured by any consent or waiver on the part of the accused—. Cal -3 32 All 635 9 N L R 81 7 N L J 749 1 S L R 98 4 Lah L J 452

Try or commit any case —The expression try any case is wide enough to include any stage of a judicial proceeding in which the guilt or innocence of the accused is finally adjudicated upon—, S L R 11 Thus he cannot hear an appeal in the case The word try is compre hensive enough to include the hearing of an appeal—23 Cal 44 17 C W N xii 1899 A W N 74 4 Lah L J 45 9 N L R 81 1 S L R 98 He is also debarred from interfering in revision in the case —1905 U B R (Cr P C) 37 He cannot direct further inquiry under sec 436—5 S L R 137 (Contra—.7 All -5)

But a Magistrate can initiate proceedings even though he is personally interested in the case— Cal 23 Though a Magistrate is disqualified under this section from trying a case on account of personal interest he is not on that account debarred from granting a permission to another Magistrate to proceed with the case—.o All 181 The Magistrate is not debarred from taking cognizance of the case even though he has taken some part in the initiation of the proceedings—Ozullah v Beni Madhab 50 Cal 135

If a Magistrate considers that he is disqualified from trying a case and the case is of a petty nature he ought not to commit it to the Sessions but should move the District Magistrate to transfer it to some other Magistrate—Emp v Ram Jatan 21 A L J 470, 25 Cr L J 605, A I R 19 4 All 185

In which he is a party —Where a Magistrate while travelling in a railway carriage requested the accused who were his fellow passengers to desist from smoking and on their contemptuously refusing to do so arrested and subsequently tried and convicted them it was held that the Magistrate was legally and morally disqualified from exercising his judicial functions in relation to the offences imputed—Ratanlal 337 So also a Magistrate who was one of the persons obstructed by the accused driving on the wrong side of the road could not himself try the accused for offences under sections 28 and 29 of the Bombay Act VII of 1867—Ratanlal 321

1429 Personally interested —The words personally interested do not imply mere intellectual interest but something of the nature of an expectation of advantage to be gained or of a loss or some disadvantage to be avoided by the person who is said to be interested in the case—8 Bom L R 917 Thus a police officer whose duty it is to see that the law is obeyed cannot merely by reason of that duty be said to be personally interested in the prosecution and trial of an offender

—15 All 192 The words, personally interested cannot refer to any remote interest in the matter but must refer to some particular and immediate personal interest in the case and its result—15 All 192 The law does not measure the amount of interest which a Judge possesses If he has any legal interest in the decision of the question one way he is disqualified no matter how small the interest may be—Serjeant v Dale, 2 Q B D 558 14 N L R 14

Instances —(1) Taking part in arrest of accused and Police proceedings —Where the Magistrate took an active part in dispersing the unlawful assembly and pursuing the members and arrested them and subsequently he initiated proceedings against the accused and himself tried and convicted them it was held that the Magistrate should not have tried the case himself as he had initiated and directed the whole proceedings and could be said to have been personally interested in them—20 Cal 857 Where the investigation of the Police at the preliminary inquiry was directed by a Magistrate to a considerable degree and where the Magistrate himself traced some of the accused and ordered their arrest he was disqualified from trying the case—23 Cal 328 A Magistrate who takes more than a formal part in a police investigation should not try the case—Nga Pe v Emp 4 Bur L J 65 6 Cr L J 1317 2 L B R 209

( ) Magistrate being a witness —A Magistrate cannot in a case in which he is the sole Judge of law and fact be a competent witness The trial and conviction by a Magistrate of an accused in a case wherein he (the Magistrate) is himself a witness is illegal— Cal 405 0 Cr L J 45 (Pat) 1904 P L R 21 A Magistrate cannot import matters (e g personal knowledge) into his judgment not stated on oath before the Court in the presence of the accused If he does so he makes himself a witness in the case and renders himself incompetent to try it — 0 Cr L J 45 (Pat) 20 Cal 857 A Magistrate who becomes aware of some of the facts in connection with a case by his taking some part or at any rate by being present at a search made by the police during the investigation should not try the case but transfer it to some other Magistrate—5 C W N 864 An officer should not try an offence under sec 174 I P C in his capacity as a Magistrate when the offence has been committed before him in his capacity as a Settlement Officer—2 All 405 But if during the course of the trial the Magistrate himself made a statement on oath which he recorded and permitted himself to be cross examined and re examined it was held that he was not incompetent to try the case—27 All 33

(3) Pecuniary interest —A Magistrate who is a shareholder of the company which is the complainant in the case is disqualified from trying the case In such cases it is not necessary to inquire whether there was any real or substantial ground for suspecting bias on his part—20 Bom 502 See also 2 Cal 23 A Magistrate should not entertain a criminal case in which persons indebted to him are concerned either as complainant or as accused—C P Cr Cir Part II, No 59

(4) Magistrate being servant of complainant —A Magistrate who is servant of the corporation is deemed to have such an interest in the

of a prosecution by the corporation as to disqualify him from trying the case—7 Cal 322 10 Cal 194

(5) Magistrate being master of complainant —The mere fact that the Magistrate is the master of the complainant who is complaining on his own account merely does not deprive the Magistrate of his jurisdiction though in such a case it should generally be expedient for him to refer the complainant to some other Magistrate—9 Bom 17 But where the complainant was the servant of the Magistrate and it appeared that the Magistrate s wife was driving in the dog cart for passing which the accused was charged with rash and negligent driving the Magistrate was held to be personally interested and ought not to try the case—14 Bom 5

(6) Magistrate being Agent of Court of Wards —The mere fact that the District Magistrate is in his capacity as Collector concerned in the management of an estate under the Court of Wards does not disqualify him from trying a case of theft arising out of a dispute between the land lord and tenant in an estate under the management of the Court of Wards —46 Cal 854 28 Cal 297 But where the manager of an estate under the Court of Wards who was also appointed the Sub-divisional Officer drew up proceeding under sec 145 against one who disputed the possession of a piece of land in which the estate claimed an interest and the Magistrate refused an application for transfer of the case it was held that the Magistrate showed a lack of appreciation of ordinary principles which should guide judicial officers in matters of this kind—9 C W N ccxxvi

1430 Sanctioning or directing the prosecution —See notes under section 487 A Magistrate who takes a mere formal part in the prosecution cannot be said to direct the prosecution and is not therefore deprived of his jurisdiction in the case Thus a Magistrate who simply issued process as officer in charge of the Sudder sub-division is not precluded from hearing an appeal in the case—36 Cal 869 10 Bur L T 150 Where a Magistrate under the Excise Act lays before the Inspector of Police certain information regarding the conduct of the accused in his dealings in opium and directs the said Inspector to make an inquiry on the basis of that information and a prosecution is subsequently instituted in the ordinary course by the investigating Police Officer held that the Magistrate cannot be said to have such connection with the proceedings antecedent to the prosecution as would debar him from trying the accused —11 A L J 652 Where a Deputy Tahsildar made a report to the Tahsildar about certain offences and the Tahsildar in his turn reported the matter to the Deputy Magistrate who authorised the Tahsildar to prosecute the accused and the Tahsildar then lodged a complaint before the Deputy Magistrate who tried the case held that the Deputy Magistrate was not disqualified since he merely authorised the prosecution and not directed it A distinction should be drawn between authorisation and direction of prosecution—24 Mad 238 Where a prosecution is by a Town Committee the mere fact that the Magistrate had as the President of the Town Committee sanctioned the prosecution cannot be said to give the Magistrate any personal interest in the proceedings and the Magistrate is competent to try the case himself But nevertheless it is not desirable that he should try the case when other Magistrates are available—Gopi Chand v K. E, 1 Rang 517 A Sessions Judge is not prohibited in law from hearing an appeal from a conviction in a case in which, as an Insolvency Judge on the application of a creditor he had allowed the prosecution to proceed—Srikrishna v Emp 21 A L J 90 But where a District Magistrate who as Inspector of factories ordered an inquiry to be made and in the same capacity directed the prosecution of the accused for an offence under the Factories Act he was disqualified from trying the case—1 Lah 35 Where a Cantonment Magistrate in his capacity as secretary of the Cantonment Committee ordered the prosecution of the accused in respect of an alleged building in contravention of the cantonment rules and proceeds to try the case held that the case ought to be transferred to another Magistrate—Hira Lal v Emp 20 A L J 911 A Magistrate who upon information furnished to him directs the issue of a warrant under sec 6 of the Gambling Act is disqualified from trying the case—13 Bur L T 154 Where after the close of a trial the trying Magistrate orders the Police to send up a charge sheet in respect of a witness for the prosecution and upon the Police doing so tries that person and convicts him held that the Magistrate having directed the prosecution is not competent to hold the trial—23 Bom L R 842

1431. Explanation —Under the Explanation a Magistrate is not deemed to be a party or personally interested in any case by reason of the fact that he is a Municipal Commissioner or otherwise concerned therein in a public capacity But if in addition to a connection of that sort, he directs the prosecution of a person for an offence he is disqualified from trying the case not by reason of the fact that he is a Municipal Commissioner or publicly connected with the case but by reason of the further fact that he has constituted himself the prosecutor—5 S L R 137 1899 A W N 34 3 Bom L R 842 Thus the mere fact that the Magistrate might happen to be a Municipal Commissioner does not necessarily disqualify him from holding a trial in which some Municipal matter was involved But it is a very different matter when it is found that the Magistrate is practically one of the prosecutors and the Judge—10 Cal 1030 A Municipal Commissioner in his capacity as such Commissioner had invited the attention of the Executive Officer of the Municipality to the manner in which a certain Bye law of the Municipality was being disregarded by the accused The Executive Officer called the attention of the Health officer to the matter and the Health officer instituted the prosecution after satisfying himself that there were good prima facie grounds for believing that the Bye law was being broken and that the interests of the public health required its enforcement The case was tried by a Bench of Honorary Magistrates of which the Municipal Commissioner was a member, and ended in a conviction. Held that the trial and conviction were not illegal because the Municipal Commissioner was not a party to the prosecution nor did he cause it to be instituted—Nanoo v Emp, 24 Cr. L J 135 (All) The mere fact the Magistrate is the Vice-President of the Municipality and Cl

the Managing Committee does not disqualify him from trying an offence against the Municipality But if he has taken any part in promoting the prosecution as for instance by concurring in sanctioning it at a meeting of the Managing Committee or otherwise he would be disqualified—18 Bom 442 1896 P R 5 So also if the Magistrate is the Vice President of a Municipal Committee and was present at the meeting in which the resolution was passed for the disobedience of which the accused is prosecuted the Magistrate is debarred from trying the case—3 Cr L J 704 (Lah) A Magistrate does not by reason of his being a member of a sub-committee of a Municipal Board become personally interested so as to be disentitled to try the accused for an offence against the Municipal Board—27 All 75 But if he presides at a meeting of the Municipal Board which directs the prosecution of the accused he becomes disqualified—14 N L R 14 5 S L R 137 20 Cr L J 744 (Nag) It may be that he did not speak or vote at the meeting but the fact remains that he attended the meeting where the question was debated and the prosecution ordered and he has therefore placed himself personally to some extent in the position of a prosecutor—5 S L R 137 Where the Municipal Committee resolved to institute criminal proceedings against the accused and directed the Secretary to take necessary steps and the Secretary forwarded a copy of the resolution to the Joint Magistrate (who was no other than the Secretary himself) who took proceedings and tried the accused it was held that the trial was not only illegal but a mere show—1883 A W N 181 The District Magistrate is not disqualified from hearing the appeal merely because he happens to be the Chairman of the Municipal Board—1899 A W N 74 Contra— 3 Cal 44 and 15 Mad 83 where it was held that the very fact that the Chairman of the Municipality was the Magistrate disqualified him from trying the offence and the Explanation did not apply to his case

In 10 Cal 194 a distinction has been drawn between a salaried officer of a Corporation and an Honorary Officer and it has been held that the Explanation does not apply to a salaried officer A salaried officer of the Corporation is by reason of the very fact that he is a servant of the Corporation precluded from trying any Municipal case as a Magistrate But a gentleman who without remuneration is merely discharging a public and honorary office and who has no personal interest in the proceedings of the Municipality may well be supposed to be free from that bias which the jealousy of the law presumes in other persons more immediately interested

Concerned therein in a public capacity —A Magistrate in charge of opium and excise administration of a district is not personally interested in the observation of the provisions of the Opium Act merely because it is his duty to see the law relating to sale of opium enforced and maintained in his district He is therefore not precluded from exercising jurisdiction in respect of offences against the said Act—15 All 10 5 A L J 357 A District Magistrate is not precluded under this section from trying an offence under the Police Act merely because he is the head of the Police—2 All 310 The fact that the District Magistrate is also the D[illegible]

Superintendent of Police does not of itself disqualify him from trying or inquiring into cases investigated by the Police of his district—2 L B R 209 But if the Magistrate in his public capacity directs the prosecution, he is disqualified Thus where the Magistrate as president of the octroi sub-committee directed the prosecution of an accused for evading the payment of octroi the Magistrate was debarred from trying the case even though the accused had consented to be so tried—32 All 635

1432 Local inspection —Under the Code of 1882 it was held that a Magistrate making a personal inspection of the locus in quo where the offence was committed made himself a witness in the case and thereby rendered himself incompetent to try the case—Q E v Manikam 19 Mad 263 Grish Chunder v Q E 20 Cal 857 Hari Kishore v Abdul 21 Cal 920 But now the law has been changed by the addition of the latter part of the Explanation

A Magistrate is competent to inspect personally a locality in order to test the connection of the evidence and the plans of the locality submitted in the case Such an inspection would not disqualify him from trying the case—1901 P R 13 Babbon v K E 37 Cal 340 (355) Where the Magistrate inspected the locus in quo and stated in his judgment what he saw when he inspected he was not disqualified—2 Weir 728 Where a Magistrate made a local inspection in the presence of both the parties and the pleaders and stated in his judgment some facts which he then observed it was held that the Magistrate was competent to convict the accused persons—2 Weir 727 Where the Judge personally visited the scene of offence with the prosecution witnesses and the vakil for the accused and acting under the powers vested in him under section 540 recalled some of the prosecution witnesses and examined them in such a way as to put on record the most important points observed at the inspection and the accused were given full opportunity of cross examining those witnesses with reference to the facts relating to the personal inspection held that it was open to the Judge to make the inspection and that he did not act illegally or with material irregularity in using the results of his inspection in his disposal of the case—In re Thachroth Hydross 45 M L J 279 It is not only not objectionable but in many cases highly advisable that a Magistrate trying a criminal case should view the place in order to understand fully the bearing of the evidence given in Court But if he does so he should be careful not to allow any one on either side to say anything to him which might prejudice his mind one way or the other—Attar Rai v Emperor 30 Cal 476 A local inspection should only be made for the purpose of enabling the Magistrate to understand better the evidence adduced before him (see sec 539B) and it must be strictly confined to that—Q E v Manikam 19 Mad 263 (266) Krishna v Sergodi 2 Weir 727 When the law allows a view of the locality every possible precaution should be taken that such a view should be nothing but a view of the local features Where the Magistrate did much more than viewing the place for the purpose of understanding and testing the evidence and imported into his judgment matters of opinion and inference based upon circumstances not on the record held that was an error of procedure necessitating a retrial before another Magistrate —Babbon Sheikh v Emp, 37 Cal. 340 (357) Where a Magistrate in visiting the scene of occurrence not merely noted the various features of importance but imported into his judgment what he could not have possibly noted from the locality or from anything connected therewith (e g, the position of the accused and of other men at the time of the alleged occurrence) he exceeded the proper limits of his discretion in making the inspection and thus disqualified himself from trying the case—3 C. As to whether the holding of an inquiry under sec 202 disqualifies the Magistrate from trying the case, see Note 670 under sec 202

559 All powers conferred by this Code on the Governor General in Council or on the Local Government may be exercised from time to time as occasion requires

But this section was unnecessary because its provisions are covered by section 14 of the General Clauses Act The old section has therefore been omitted and an entirely different section has been framed in its place A new section is intended to be inserted providing for the powers of Judge and Magistrates being exercised by their successors in office and the determination by the Chief Presidency or District Magistrate of the person to be deemed the successor in office of a Subordinate Magistrate in cases of doubt —Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914)

(2) And notwithstanding anything in this Code, if a Chief Presidency Magistrate or District Magistrate deems it necessary to direct an investigation by a police-officer, with respect to such an offence as is referred to in sub-section (1), no police-officer of a rank below that of police-inspector shall be employed either to make or to take part in, the investigation.

Clause (a) —Where the offence referred to in this clause was taken cognizance of by the District Magistrate, the fact that the investigation into the offence had been conducted by a subordinate Police officer was not a material irregularity which would vitiate the proceedings—1895 A W N. 9

561-A. Nothing in this Code shall be deemed to limit or affect the inherent power of the High Court to make such orders as may be necessary to give effect to any order under this Code, or to prevent abuse of the process of any Court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice.

Saving of inherent power of High Court.

1433A. This section has been added by section 156 of the Cr P C Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923 By this section it is proposed to give statutory recognition to the inherent powers of the High Court—a principle which is already well recognized —Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914).

"Or otherwise to secure the ends of justice" — We have slightly elaborated the provisions of this clause We understand that a High Court has recently held [44 All 401] that it had no power to direct the expunging of objectionable matter from a record We think it desirable that it should be made clear that this clause is intended to meet such a case —Report of the Joint Committee (1922) See Note 1214 under section 437 and Panchanan v. Opendra 49 All 254, 27 Cr L J 1407

In the exercise of its inherent powers under this section, the High Court cannot pass any order which would conflict with the provisions of the Code. Thus, the High Court has no jurisdiction to make an order for the restoration of attached property, where the application is made beyond the period prescribed in sec 89—In re Gurunath 46 Bom L R 719, 25 Cr L J 1293

The powers conferred on the High Court under this section are powers which must be found within the Crim Pro Code This section confers no new powers on the High Court, because the Court cannot, by invoking its inherent powers, extend the powers given to it by statute Thus the High Court has no power to appoint a receiver pending the disposal of a revision petition against an order passed under section 145—Varadaiya v. Shanmuga Sundara, 49 M L J 503 See this case cited in Note 441 under sec. 145

This section does not confer on a High Court the power to review

its own judgment—Vazar Mohd v Hara Singh 26 P L R 616, 27 Cr L J 23 Md Sadiq v Emp 7 Lah L J 108 26 Cr L J 1169

But the inherent power of the High Court under this section can be exercised to stay a criminal proceeding till the disposal of a civil suit pending in a Civil Court relating to the same dispute—Kanhaiyalal v Bhagwan Das 48 All 60 23 A L J 956 26 Cr L J 1485

Under this section the High Court has the power to order restitution of property—Shwe Wa v C I Mehta 5 Rang 553, 28 Cr L J 932

The High Court has inherent jurisdiction to grant bail to an accused pending appeal to the Privy Council—Ram Saroop v Emp 49 All 247, 27 Cr. L J 1377

First offenders

562 In any case in which a person is convicted of theft, theft in a building dishonest misappropriation, cheating or any other offence under the Indian Penal Code punishable with not more than two year's imprisonment before any Court, and no previous conviction is proved against him if it appears to the Court before whom he is so convicted that regard being had to the youth character and antecedents of the offender to the trivial nature of the offence and to any extenuating circumstances under which the offence was committed it is expedient that the offender should be released on probation of good conduct the Court may, instead of sentencing him at once to any	562 (1) When any person not under twenty-one years of age is convicted of an offence punishable with imprisonment for not more than seven years or when any person under twenty one years of age or any woman is convicted of an offence not punishable with death or transportation for life and no previous conviction is proved against the offender if it appears to the Court before which he is convicted regard being had to the age character or antecedents of the offender, * * * and to the circumstances in which the offence was committed that it is expedient that the offender should be released on probation of good conduct, the Court may, in

Power of Court to release upon probation of good conduct instead of sentencing to punishment

Power of Court to release certain convicted offenders on probation of good conduct instead of sentencing to punishment

(3) When an order has been made under this section in respect of any offender, the High Court may, on appeal when there is a right of appeal to such Court, or when exercising its powers of revision, set aside such order, and in lieu thereof pass sentence on such offender according to law

Provided that the High Court shall not under this sub section inflict a greater punishment than might have been inflicted by the Court by which the offender was convicted

(4) The provisions of Sections 122, 126A and 406A shall, so far as may be apply in the case of sureties offered in pursuance of the provisions of this section

Change —Sub section (1) has been substantially amended and sub sections (2) to (4) have been newly added by section 15, of the Cr P C Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 The main changes are the following — First this section extends the list of offences on conviction for which a person may be released upon probation secondly it is made clear that section 562 does not apply merely to the case of youthful offenders but applies to a wider class of persons thirdly the word trivial has been omitted fourthly the period for which an offender may be released under this section has been extended from one to three years fifthly power has been conferred on an Appellate Court or upon a High Court in the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction to make an order under section 562 and finally the High Court has been empowered either on appeal or in revision to inflict sentence of imprisonment in lieu of an order under this section —Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914) Sub-section (1A) has been added by the Cr P C Second Amendment Act XXXVII of 1923 This amendment has been made on the recommendation of the Jail Committee

1434 Scope and application of section —Under this section the first offender need not necessarily be a youth its operations are not limited to juvenile offenders It applies to persons of advanced age—2 Bom L R 817 1910 P R 11 18 Cr L J 469 (Mad) - L B R 314 The intention of the law is not to make it essential that the offender must be young or that the offence must be trivial in its nature etc but merely to indicate the lines on which the discretion of the Court should be exercised—2 L B R 65 6 C W N cclı

To enable a Magistrate to apply this section the first essential is that the accused is a first offender and if he is one the extenuating circumstances which entitle him to the indulgence of the Court are his age character and antecedents—2 Bom L R 817 In order to give a Court jurisdiction to release an offender under this section there must exist two conditions viz there should be no previous conviction and the offence must be one of those specified in the section 14

conditions are fulfilled the Court has jurisdiction in the exercise of its discretion to act under the section But in exercising the discretion the Court must have regard to the points specified in the section namely the age character and antecedents of the offender and to the circumstances under which the offence was committed—2 I B R 65 This section is intended to apply to offenders (especially youthful offenders) who without being persons of depraved character may on occasions succumb to sudden temptation and the legislature very humanely and very properly allows the Magistrate in such cases to give the young man a chance and to deal with him leniently under this section But where an offence implies a good deal of preparation (e g, the offence of illicit manufacture of liquor) it cannot be said that it is done in consequence of succumbing to a sudden temptation and the section should not be applied to such a case—Crown v Sujan Singh 1916 P R 19 Emp v Piara Singh 7 Lah 32 27 P L R 221

This section may be a very valuable section if properly applied and it may very often happen that a juvenile offender who is sentenced to jail for a short period of imprisonment for a trivial offence may be practically ruined for life, whereas he would be saved by the due application of section 562 But in passing a sentence at least two things are necessary to guard against, viz, danger to the public and danger to the accused himself The public must not be led to suppose that all juvenile offenders may commit any crimes that they like without any fear of punishment because that would be an incentive to criminal parents to initiate their children into a life of crime And even children themselves being immune from the fear of punishment might be tempted to go astray from the unpleasant paths of virtue into the paths of crime It is obvious therefore that before applying this section one must consider whether there is a good cause for its application or not If the offence is by no means a simple crime such as is committed by children out of mere thoughtlessness rather than of criminality but it shows a singular combination of design and ingratitude and a general character of craft and deceit it would call for a severe punishment indeed and resort should not be had to the provisions of this section—Daryalal v Emp 185 L R 61, 25 Cr L J 1224 Magistrates should be every careful in applying this section and should not allow themselves to be misled into the use of this section by misplaced leniency and sympathy—Emp v Matho 7 Cr L J 209 (Sind)

Petty squabbles of young persons should be dealt with under this section—12 Cr L J 242 (Bur) Where the offender is a person of good position in life he should rather be dealt with under this section than sentenced to whipping—1907 P W R 9 Where the accused was a widow of over 45 and it appeared that in committing the offence (forgery, false personation) she was a puppet in the hands of the other accused held that this was a case in which the Court instead of sentencing her to imprisonment should release her on her entering into a bond—K L v Hasan Bala 43 C L J 79 30 C W N 373 27 Cr L J 399

This section applies when no previous conviction is proved against the offender A previous conviction is a technical bar to an order under this section but if no such conviction is proved at the trial and an order under this section is passed a subsequent discovery of a previous conviction is no ground for interference in revision—Emp v Partab Narain, 2 O W N 593 26 Cr L J 1278

Section does not apply when sentence has been passed —This section cannot be applied to a case in which the Magistrate has not only convicted the accused person but sentenced him as well to imprisonment and fine—17 A L J 426 The words in the section are instead of sentencing him'

1435. Sub-section (1) —Under the old law this sub-section applied only where the offender was convicted of one of certain offences under the Penal Code and not of an offence under any other law e g an offence under the Indian Railways Act—1 N L R 139 or an offence under the Excise Act—1916 P R 19 This restriction has now been removed

The old sub-section (1) could not apply where the offender was punishable with more than 2 years imprisonment Thus it could not apply where the accused was convicted of criminal breach of trust—7 Bur L R 14 or of receiving stolen property—2 Bom L R 343 or of lurking house trespass—15 C P L R 11 or of using as genuine a forged document—17 Bom L R 921 or of house breaking—18 Cr L J 469 (Mad) or of voluntarily causing grievous hurt—4 L B R 150 or of aggravated form of cheating under sec 420 I P C—3 L B R 95 1 Lah 612 41 Mad 533 or to an offence under sec 381 I P C—4 N L R 18 All these cases will now fall under the present sub-section (1)

No order can be made under this section where the accused has been convicted in the trial of an offence not falling under this section as well as of an offence falling under this section—2 Weir 731

Who can pass order —An order under this section can be passed not only by the Court which convicted the accused but also by the Appellate Court as well as by the High Court in revision—24 All 306 29 Mad 567 25 C W N 720 This is now expressly provided in the new sub-section (2)

1436. Bond —The bond to be taken should be not only to keep the peace and to be of good behaviour but to appear and receive sentence when called upon and in the meantime to keep the peace and be of good behaviour—2 Bom L R 112 But it is not competent to a Magistrate to direct the accused to appear in Court on a fixed day to receive sentence all he can do is to release the accused on probation of good conduct for a certain period and to direct him to appear and receive sentence when called upon during such period if he does not observe the conditions of the bond—2 Bom L R 70.

Bond by minor —It was held that the third proviso to section 118 providing for bond of minors to be executed by their sureties applied only to bonds under that section and did not apply to bonds of first offenders released under this section A bond under this section had to be executed by the minor himself and not by his sureties (Cf the w on his entering into a bond)—4 L B R 12 (overruling 2 L B R But this is no longer good law in view of the new section 514B

Failure to furnish security.—If an accused person is ordered to give security under this section and he fails to do so, he should not be [illegible] in prison till the expiration of the period for which security should be [illegible] nished; but the proper course is for the Magistrate, before passing an order under this section, to ascertain whether the accused will be able to give security immediately or within a reasonable time. If he fails to give security within a reasonable time, the Magistrate should pass a sentence which should be only nominal—5 L. R. R. [illegible] Nga [illegible] v. K. E., 2 Rang. 500 (501) : 26 Cr. L. J. 255. The Magistrate should not [illegible] prison the accused under section 123, on failure to give security under section 562. Section 123 specifically applies only to sections 106 and 118 and not to section 562.—Nga [illegible] v. K. E., 2 Rang. 500 (501).

1437. Proviso :— Power of Second or Third Class Magistrates [illegible] no open to a Second Class Magistrate who has not been specially empowered to exercise jurisdiction under sub-section (1) of the section to take proceedings under that sub-section, although he was invested by a notification issued under the 1898 Code with all the powers specified in the fourth schedule of that Code.—2 Weir 751. If a Second Class Magistrate not empowered under this section is of opinion that the [illegible] is a fit one for the exercise of the powers conferred by sub-section (1) of section 562, he should record his opinion to that effect and submit the case to a First Class Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate for [illegible] Jamal, 5 Lah. [illegible] 25 Cr. L. J. 1124. The same [illegible] to third class Magistrates.

Power of the Magistrate to whom [illegible] under section 380.

Joint trial of young and aged offenders.—Where the first accused [illegible] nearly 50 and the second accused a boy of 12, were charged [illegible] a Second Class Magistrate, and the Magistrate sent the case of both the accused to a First Class Magistrate so that the second accused might be dealt with under section 562, it was held that the Second Class Magistrate should have disposed of the case of the first accused [illegible] without submitting the case to the First Class Magistrate, and that he should have submitted the case of the second accused only.—[illegible] L. R. 112. Under the present law, the case of the second [illegible] also falls [illegible] this section.

1438. Sub-section (1A) :— The [illegible] mentioned in this sub-section are the same as those mentioned in the old section. [illegible] restricted to offences under the Indian Penal Code, and does not [illegible] an offence under any other law, e.g. an offence under the [illegible] ways Act—1 N. L. R. 129, or an offence under the [illegible] P. R. 10.

Again, the benefit of this sub-section is not extended to [illegible] [illegible] forms of the offences mentioned therein. Thus when [illegible] section speaks of theft, dishonest misappropriation or cheating, [illegible] be construed to mean theft, [illegible] in its simple form, [illegible] [illegible] under sections 379, 403 and 417 I. P. C., and does not [illegible]

aggravated forms of those offences The offence of cheating means simple cheating and not the aggravated form of it under sec 420 I P C —3 L B R 95 41 Mad 533 1 Lah 612 The word theft can only mean simple theft, otherwise it would not have been followed by the words theft in a building as well A servant found guilty of theft and convicted under section 381 I P C is not entitled to the benefit of this clause, as theft by servant is not one of the offences specified herein It is an evasion of law to treat an aggravated form of offence as an ordinary offence and thus introduce a different jurisdiction or a lower scale of punishment—4 N L R 18 But the Allahabad High Court holds that the words dishonest misappropriation and cheating apply to and cover those offences in all their forms thus cheating covers secs 418, 419 and 420 I P C and criminal misappropriation includes offences under sections 404 and 405 I P C otherwise the words are a mere surplusage, because these offences are not punishable with more than two years imprisonment The words of a Statute should be given an extended meaning of which they are reasonably susceptible when a restricted meaning would reduce those words to a mere surplusage—12 A L J 465 The Nagpur Court holds the same view in Emp v Jai Lal 8 N L J 97 24 Cr L J 251

This sub section also speaks of any other offence punishable with not more than two years imprisonment In applying this sub-section to those offences the term of imprisonment and not the nature of the offences is the test If the offence is punishable with not more than two years imprisonment the clause may be applied even though the offence be a serious one Thus a boy of 18 years who attempted to cause hurt with a dangerous weapon may be dealt with under this sub-section because the attempt to cause hurt is punishable with 18 months though the offence of causing hurt itself is punishable with 3 years—3 L B R 30

The words the Court before whom he is so convicted occurring in sub-section (1A) should not be read as controlled by the proviso to sub-section (1) so that it is not necessary that the Magistrate passing an order under sub-section (1A) should be a first class Magistrate or a second class Magistrate specially empowered Therefore an ordinary Magistrate of the second class who has convicted an accused under section 279 I P Code can order his release after due admonition—Murlidhar v Mahboob Khan 47 All 353 26 Cr L J 624 A I R 1925 All 644 But the Bombay High Court holds that the proviso to sub-section (1) governs the whole section, and is therefore applicable to sub-section (1A) so that a 3rd class Magistrate is not competent to release an offender after due admonition under sub-section (1A)—Emp v Karchhod 27 Bom L R 1019, 26 Cr L J 1401 A I R 1925 Bom 479

Distinct conviction must be recorded —Where the charge is in the alternative either of theft or of retaining stolen property and the Magistrate while convicting the accused does not say of which of those offences he convicts the accused held that in the absence of a conviction for theft the Magistrate is not competent to pass an order this sub-section—1 Bom L R 857

Sub-section (2) —Under sub-section (2), an appellate Court can pass an order releasing the accused on probation of good conduct Where the High Court on an appeal from a conviction and sentence by the Presidency Magistrate, ordered that the accused be released on entering into a bond, but the accused failed to execute the bond the punishment originally awarded by the Presidency Magistrate would not stand (because that sentence had been already cancelled by the High Court) but the Presidency Magistrate should treat the accused as a person who was convicted but not sentenced to punishment and is again produced before his Court for the purpose of a suitable punishment being awarded—In re Badsha, 21 L W 40 26 Cr L J 683, A I R 1925 Mad 496

1439 Appeal and revision —An appeal lies from an order under this section releasing a convict on his entering into a bond—Emp v Manohar, 1904 P R 24 Bahadur v Ismail 29 C W N 151, 52 Cal 463, 26 Cr L J 455 And the appeal may be preferred even after the expiry of the period of the bond—Hayata v Emp, 1917 P R 20, 18 Cr L J 401 An appeal will lie to the Sessions Judge from an order of a Magistrate of the first class passed under this section in a summary trial—Emp v Hira Lal, 46 All 828 (see this case cited under section 414) So also, the High Court in revision can set aside the conviction and the order demanding security, even though the convicts have not moved the High Court to exercise that power—1912 P W R 7, 1914 P W R 12

But unless the order passed by the Magistrate under this section is clearly mistaken or injudicious or amounts to a failure of justice the High Court will not interfere in revision—Murlidhar v Mahboob 47 All 353, 26 Cr L J 624

It was held under the old law that in setting aside in revision the order under this section the High Court could not substitute in its place a sentence of imprisonment, because no sentence' has been passed by the Lower Court (the order under section 562 not being a sentence), and the provisions of section 439 as to enhancement of sentence did not apply—Emp v Bhastie, 37 All 31, 12 A L J 1244, 16 Cr L J 43 If the Appellate or Revisional Court considered that any sentence should be passed upon the accused, it could order a retrial—1911 P R 16, 37 All 31 But the new sub section (3) now empowers the High Court, in appeal or in revision to pass sentence on the accused after setting aside the order as to security—Emp v Kesar 24 A L J 228, 27 Cr L J 303

563. (1) If the Court which convicted the offender, or a Court which could have dealt with the offender in respect of his original offence, is satisfied that the offender has failed to observe any of the conditions of his recognizance, it may issue a warrant for his apprehension

Provision in case of offender failing to observe conditions of his recognizance

(2) An offender, when apprehended on any such warrant shall be brought forthwith before the Court issuing the warrant and such Court may either remand him in custody until the case is heard or admit him to bail with a sufficient surety conditioned on his appearing for sentence Such Court may, after hearing the case, pass sentence

Conditions as to abode of offender

564 (1) The Court before directing the release of an offender under Section 562 sub section (1) shall be satisfied that the offender or his surety (if any) has a fixed place of abode or regular occupation in the place for which the Court acts or in which the offender is likely to live during the period named for the observance of the conditions

(2) Nothing in this section or in sections 562 and 563 shall affect the provisions of Section 31 of the Reformatory Schools Act 1897

The words sub-section (1) have been added by the Repealing and Amending Act VII of 1924 This is intended to make it clear that section 564 (1) does not relate to the release of an offender under sub-section (1A) of section 562 —Gazette of India 1924 Part V page 59

Order for notifying address of previously convicted offender

565 (1) When any person having been convicted

(a) by a Court in British India of an offence punishable under Section 215 Section 489A, Section 489B Section 489C or Section 489D of the Indian Penal Code or of any offence punishable under Chapter XII or Chapter XVII of that Code with imprisonment of either description for a term of three years or upwards or

(b) by a Court or Tribunal in the territories of any Prince or State in India acting under the general or special authority of the Governor General in Council or of any Local Government of any offence which would if committed in British India have been punishable under any of the aforesaid sections or Chapters of the Indian Penal Code with imprisonment for a like term, is again convicted of any offence punishable under any of those sections or Chapters with imprisonment for a term of three years or upwards by a High Court, Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, Sub divisional Magistrate, or Magistrate of the first class * * * such Court or Magistrate may, if it or he thinks fit, at the time of passing sentence of transportation or imprisonment on such person, also order that his residence and any change of or absence from such residence after release be notified as hereinafter provided for a term not exceeding five years from the date of the expiration of such sentence

(2) If such conviction is set aside on appeal or otherwise, such order shall become void

(3) The Local Government may make rules to carry out the provisions of this section relating to the notification of residence or change of or absence from residence by released convicts.

(4) An order under this section may also be made by an Appellate Court or by the High Court when exercising its powers of revision

(5) Any person against whom an order has been made under this section and who refuses or neglects to comply with any rule so made shall be deemed within the meaning of section 176 of the Indian Penal Code to have omitted to give a notice required for the purpose of preventing the commission of an offence

(6) Any person charged with a breach of any such rule may be tried by a Magistrate of competent jurisdiction in the district in which the place last notified by him as his place of residence is situated

Change —This section has been almost redrafted by section 158 of the Cr P C Amendment Act XVIII of 1923 The main changes introduced are the following — Firstly it extends the list of offences after a conviction for which a person may be required to notify his residence and subsequent changes of residence secondly on the analogy of section 75 of the Penal Code as amended in 1910 provision has been made for previous convictions before tribunals of Native States which exercise their jurisdiction under the general or special authority of the Government of India or the Local Government thirdly all first class Magistrates, in place of those specially empowered have been authorised to pass orders

under this section fourthly, the rule making power has been extended to cover the provision of this section relating to the notification of residence, or change of residence or absence from residence of released convicts, fifthly the punishment of a breach of the rules made under this section has been enhanced and lastly Courts of Appeal or revision have been empowered to pass orders under this section —Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914)

1440. Application of section :—This section applies when the accused has been previously convicted the passing of an order under this section on a first offender is illegal—8 M L T 352

This section does not apply where either the previous or the subsequent conviction is for an attempt to commit the offences under Chap XII or XVII of the I P C —1907 P R 17

This section does not apply where the accused upon the subsequent conviction is sentenced to whipping—35 Bom 137 An order under this section can be passed only when the accused is sentenced to transportation or imprisonment

This section does not apply where the subsequent conviction is a technical one Where a person is found only technically guilty of theft it is absurd to make his conviction for such a trifling offence the occasion for a long period of Police supervision under this section—1914 P W R 3

Where the previous conviction of the accused is set aside on appeal, though on technical grounds the accused cannot be called an old offender and an order of restriction cannot be passed under this section on a subsequent conviction—Nga Po v K E 3 Rang 156 26 Cr L J 1341

Under the old law this section did not apply where the previous conviction had been in a Native State even though the law of that States was identical in terms with the Indian Penal Code—1 N I R 137 But now this section does apply to such a case See clause (b) which has been newly added

Under the old law a first class Magistrate could not pass orders under this section unless he was specially authorised by the Local Government to do so—8 S I R 340 Under the present law all first class Magistrates can pass orders under this section

Previous conviction need not be specified in charge —An order under this section is not such punishment as is meant by the words of sec 221 Therefore the provisions of se 1 ( ) do not apply to an order under this section and such an order can be legally passed without the previous conviction on which it is based having been mentioned in the charge The omission is a mere irregularity cured by sec 537—9 N I R 88

1441 Notification of residence —Change of residence —As long as a man retains his residence in the same place his temporary absence from home for a day or two does not require notification Whether he retains his residence must always be a question of fact but provided a man leaves his family and household effects in the house in which he was residing he would ordinarily be considered to retain his residence there Where all that was proved was that the accused absent from the notified residence for a single night held th

[illegible] But under the present law absence from residence must also be notified

1442. Power of appellate Court :—Under the old law, it was held that an Appellate Court could not pass an order under this section, where the original Court did not or could not do so—8 S L R 340 But now sub-section (4) gives such power to the Appellate Court and to the High Court in revision

1443. Punishment :—Under the old law it was held that any person refusing or neglecting to comply with the rules made under sub-section (3) was punishable as if he had committed an offence under the first part (and not second part) of section 176 I P C—1 N L R 133 31 Mad 548 Under the present sub-section (5), the use of the words "notice required for the prevention of commission of an offence" show that the punishment will henceforth be under the second part of sec 176 I P C In other words, the punishment has been enhanced under the present section
